A horrible holocaust occurred Saturday last just over the line in Garrett county, when the handsome residence of Hon. William H. Jacobs, near Lonaconing, was completely destroyed by fire, and a little grandson, aged 2 years and 10 months, was burned almost to ashes. No one else was in the house when the fire occurred, so far as can be learned, and definite particulars as to the origin and progress of the fire can not be obtained with accuracy, many theories having been advanced. It seems that Mr. Stanley Jacobs, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Jacobs, has been making his home with his parents, living there with his five children, all sons, since the death of his wife several years ago. Saturday W. H. Jacobs came to town in the heavy wagon, and Mrs. Jacobs in the buggy, accompanied by the third of Stanley's sons. Stanley Jacobs, with the second oldest of his sons, was with the farm hands some three or four miles from the house at a sawmill, doing some work. This left the baby, nearly 3 years old, and the oldest son, 10 years of age, at home with a domestic, Miss Lottie Miller, of Detmold, Lonaconing, who had been living with the Jacobs'.

About 3:55 p. m. the fire broke out. At the time, the baby was asleep on a couch in the dining room, and the older boy was out playing. Just where Miss Miller was cannot be learned, as she has been unable to explain clearly where she was or what she was doing when the fire started in the kitchen. The flames made rapid headway and the building was soon doomed. The older boy, on discovering that the home was on fire, ran for help and found several neighbors digging the grave for the late Miss Ruby Weir, who had died, in Hansell's cemetery, not far away. They quickly ran to the scene of the fire but could do nothing to save either the house or its contents and devoted their time to tearing down fences and outbuildings to prevent the flames from spreading to the barn and other farm structures and milk houses.

No one had said anything about the sleeping baby, and although the domestic was on the scene, outside, when the fire fighters appeared, she was too excited to give any information. Mrs. Jacobs, finishing her shopping, proceeded homeward by the Weirj road, and was informed en route by Mr. Charles Green, one of the men in the cemetery who had gone to the rescue, of the fire. She hurried on, and it was upon her arrival that the baby was missed and after a search the charred remains were found directly where the couch was on which it lay peacefully asleep when the fire fiend swept through the house.

Mr. Jacobs had completed his business in town a little later, and proceeded home via the Moscow road, and Mr. Stanley Jacobs, walking home from the sawmill, did not know of the sad death of his little one or the destruction of the home until he arrived on the scene late in the evening.

News of the conflagration came to town promptly and the greatest sympathy was expressed for Mr. and Mrs. Jacobs at the loss of their comfortable home, and for Mr. Stanley Jacobs for the loss of his little son under so sad and unfortunate circumstances. Many Lonaconing friends at once tendered their assistance to the temporarily homeless family, and a number visited the scene of the conflagration Saturday evening and Sunday. The remains of the little one were interred Monday in Hansell's cemetery from the home of Mr. Charles Green, with services held at the grave. Revs. Hobbs, of Lonaconing, and Groves, of Barton, officiated, after which they proceeded to the Weir residence, to officiate at the late Miss Ruby Weir's funeral. Undertaker Eichhorn was in charge and a large number from Lonaconing attended the funeral. It was a very sad occasion.

Mr. Jacobs, who is one of the most prosperous and estimable farmers of this section, was a member of the Maryland House of Delegates from Garrett county in 1898. His home, "Oak Springs," was a fine old residence beautifully furnished. The loss was complete. Mr. Jacobs, it is understood, estimates his loss at $15,000. This includes the loss of considerable money, gold, silver and bills, jewelry, checks, negotiable securities, a piano and all the household furniture and effects, which were of the best obtainable, the Jacobs residence at "Oak Springs" being one of the best furnished homes in Allegany and Garrett counties. The full amount of insurance carried is not known. The Jacobs family are among the most estimable people of Allegany and Garrett counties and have many warm and sincere friends in town and county.

General sympathy at their dual misfortune has been expressed on all sides. —Lonaconing Star.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Regular $5.00 Taffeta Silk Petticoats at $3.95.

Made of a fine quality Taffeta Silk, in black and two-tone effects, double flounce, with under dust ruffle. Exceptional value.

Regular $10.00 Taffeta Silk Petticoats at $5.95.

Navy Blue, Rose and Champagne colored, handsome Dresden printed warp silk. Beautiful flounce trimmed with tucks and gathers. Under dust ruffle.

The IMPERIAL
CUMBERLAND - - - MD.
64-66-68 BALTIMORE STREET.

R. & G. Corsets at $1.

We carry a complete stock of these corsets in batiste and coutil. The following numbers in all sizes always here: A-43, A-45, A-67.

Royal Worcester Corsets at $1.00.

We have the exclusive agency of these famous and popular corsets and our stock is always complete in all sizes in the following numbers: 460, 450, 413, 411, 416, 459 and 401.

SALE EXTRAORDINARY.
Advance Mid-Summer Waists at 97c.
DECIDEDLY GOOD $1.50 to $1.75 VALUES.

The Most Interesting Waist Sale: because it is the only event of its kind in Cumberland.

A Sale That Brings fine mid-summer designs within reach of all—because of its popular price.

Each Waist is a New Mid-Summer Fashion, is made of fine material, is original in design and of high class workmanship—embodying all of the characteristics which "Imperial" styles possess.

Space Permits of Only a Few Illustrations—and but a few descriptions—there are many more styles, each with some dainty new suggestions of mid-summer fashion.

An Exceptional Display of these dainty wearables has been arranged in our large main window, and but one glimpse is necessary to interest the woman of refined taste.

Another Great Sale of Women's Trimmed Hats at $2.95, $3.95 and $5.00.

We have taken two hundred hats from our regular stock and arranged three large tables on which these beautiful hats are exhibited. We've never offered such splendid values at these prices. Many are hand made hats with flower trimmings. There are dozens of different effects in small, medium and large rolling brim, as well as turban styles.

Every desirable color is represented and the fact that there is but one of a kind lends that assured air of exclusiveness which is so greatly desired by most women. To give a truthful comparative value we can unhesitatingly say that these lots compare with values as follows:

Regular $5 and $6 hats in lot No. 1 at $2.95.
Regular $7 and $8 hats in lot No. 2 at $3.95.
Regular $10 and $12 hats in lot No. 3 at $5.00.

Sheer Lingerie Waists, elaborately trimmed with panels of blind embroidery, German Val Lace insertion. Tucks and plaits. Collar and sleeves trimmed with Val lace.
Special at 97c.

Pretty Dimity Waists.
Strictly tailored styles, with stiff laundered collars and cuffs, front fashioned with deep plaits. Some have pockets.
Special at 97c.

Handsome Lingerie Waists square or V Dutch necks. Open work embroidery, Val or imitation Irish crochet laces. Three-quarter sleeves trimmed to match. Fine sheer material.
Special at 97c.

Cob-Web Cloth Waists, square Dutch neck. Body exquisitely trimmed with Venice Lace insertion, three-quarter length sleeves, with lace edge. Back plaited and tucked.
Special at 97c.

Dressy "Middy" Waists.
Plain blouse effects, with regulation middy shaped collar, made of fancy All-over embroidery, three-quarter sleeve with pocket and jabot similarly trimmed.
Special at 97c.

SENSATIONAL SALE PRICES OF THE NEWEST OF SUMMER ARRIVALS.

These embody not only the newest Summer Fashions, but the smartest representations of designing and tailoring; and more than that, the sale prices for these handsome suits and dressed are little short of sensational. This is your opportunity to buy a Summer outfit. You can either save substantially on what you intended to spend for your Summer suit, or dress, or you can secure much better and smarter garments for the same amount.

Pongee Suits at $18.50.
Are shown in these distinct modes for present and summer wear, in natural color, Helio, and navy blue. Some trimmed with black satin collars and button holes, with tunic or plaited skirts.

Stunning Linen Suits at $4.95.
New style touches not displayed before are evidenced in these new mannish walking suits, which come in a bewildering assortment of styles, including the two and three button effects. Other equally attractive assortments up to $15.00.

Beautiful Foulard Dresses at $14.95.
Several distinct models, handsomely trimmed and draped in a most chick effect. Cool colorings in keeping with the season and fashion's newest eccentricities. Other exquisite models up to $29.75.

Lingerie Dresses at $5.95.
A most enticing assortment of new effects, daintily trimmed. Simple ones, elaborate ones, exquisitely adorned with laces, tucks, plaits, motifs, etc. Many to choose from at $6.95, $7.50, $9.75 up to $35.00.

A Swell Assortment of Walking Skirts at $1.95.
Repp Linen and Union Cloth tailor-made walking skirts, in plaited, gored, tunic and hand embroidered effects, here in endless numbers. Complete assortment at the following prices: $2.95, $3.95, $5.75, $6.50 up to $11.95.

Last News of Tailor-Made Cloth Suits.
But few words can tell of the terrific price reductions which have been made to effect the final clearance of all cloth tailor-made suits, which are left from our enormous Spring stock. It is sufficient to say that we are selling all our tailor-made suits at corresponding reductions to the one given here. $17.00 CLOTH SUITS AT $7.50.

MURDERED AT MORGANTOWN

Robert Hesen, Brother of Miss Alice Hesen, Killed Instantly.

Robert Hesen, of Grafton, aged thirty-five years, a brother of Miss Alice Hesen and also of Mrs. Mollie Bell, of Oakland, was murdered at Morgantown, W. Va., Monday by a fellow workman named Stewart. The two men were engaged as workmen in a carriage factory, the former as a painter and the latter as an upholsterer. Stewart fired three shots into the body of the murdered man, one taking effect in his heart and the other two passing through his adomen.

The news of the tragedy was telephoned to Miss Hesen shortly after the occurrence and she in company with her sister left immediately for Grafton, to which point the remains of their brother were shipped Monday evening and the funeral occurred yesterday.

Mr. Hesen was unmarried and had been employed in Morgantown for three years. His marriage to a young lady at Morgantown was to have occurred within a month. The man who did the shooting was aged about sixty-five years. No cause for the murder has been assigned except that Stewart is believed to have been temporarily insane at the time.

Appointment Confirmed.

The appointment of Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, as Surveyor of the Port of Baltimore, which was announced some time ago by President Taft, was confirmed by the Senate in executive session a few days ago and Dr. Ravenscroft has entered upon his third term as surveyor. His appointment to succeed himself in this very important office is gratifying to his many friends in Garrett county, who will wish him a successful administration of its affairs.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

We are informed by the preliminary program now being sent out by the thousands, that many of the Chautauqua favorites will be on this season's program, prominent among whom we note Rev. Jahu DeWitt Miller, Hon. John Temple Graves and Prof. P. M. Pearson. Among the new names we note Rev. Dr. Frank DeWitt Talmage and Hon. Gifford Pinchot. These gentlemen should have great audiences. The date of the Chautauqua is August 2-24.

"Flower Day" will be observed in the M. E. church Sunday, May 29th, the service being at 8.00 o'clock in the evening, when the pastor, Rev. P. Z. Musgrave will preach an appropriate sermon and special music will be rendered. All old soldiers, both those who wore the blue and the gray, are especially invited to be present, as also their wives, children and grand children, and they and all others are requested to wear a flower on that occasion.

Lieut. E. S. West, the hustling real estate agent of Oakland, has rented the room formerly occupied by Dr. Hinebaugh in the Association office building in the Park and will open a real estate office about June 1st. We can heartily recommend Lieut. West to all desiring an agent to handle their property.

Natural gas now seems assured for Mountain Lake Park. The all-year residents have signed contracts already and cottage owners living at a distance are sending in their contracts by every mail.

Mrs. Creed Collins and daughter are here.

Miss Della Callis, who has been here with friends for a week or ten days, left yesterday for her home at Hoyes, this county.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinkle opened their cottage here this week.

Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Gough and children are still here with Mrs. Gough's mother, Mrs. Virginia Pierce.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Allen and son are in the Allen cottage on F street for the summer.

Mrs. Henry May, of Hagerstown, is spending a few days here among her host of friends.

Misses Blanche and Abbie Chance returned from their eastern pleasure trip Monday.

Miss Edna Chance, who has been with relatives in New Jersey since last fall, expects to return to her home here about the 1st of June.

Preaching in the M. E. church Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

BITTINGER.

For several hours on Saturday, May 14th, snow fell in this section, but it melted as it fell and the untimely storm was followed by a stinging frost at night.

Thomas H. Brenneman has finished sawing lumber for his new barn, and on last Saturday the mill was taken up and removed to Grantsville.

While at work on his farm at this place a few days ago, Oliver Beachy severely injured his back and as a result he is confined to his bed at this writing.

Mrs. Fannie Weitzell and son George, of Avilton, spent last Sunday with relatives here.

Messrs. Noah and Leonard Stark, of Chaffee, W. Va., spent last Sunday and Monday with their parents at this place.

Henry Bittinger has rented the Melchor Hetrick dwelling house and it will be occupied by his family during the summer.

P. F. Mellinger, of Beckman, was in this village last Sunday.

Robert Reckner, of North Glade, spent last Sunday with friends in this neighborhood.

The members of the Lutheran congregation at this place treated their pastor, Rev. Alvin Yugel, and his good wife to a surprise party on Thursday evening of last week, and a pleasant social evening was spent at the parsonage.

Conference Notes.

Rev. E. Manges, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church, who is attending the conference of that church at Fairmont this week, sends the following under date of the 17th:

"Yesterday at 8 p. m. Rev. E. G. Hay, of Clarksburg, W. Va., preached the opening sermon of conference, his topic being 'The Beauty of Zion.' A large audience was present and the choir rendered most excellent music. At 9:30 a. m. today Conference met and organized by electing Rev. A. F. Richardson, of Grafton, president; Rev. W. Edgar Pierce, of St. John's, Cumberland, secretary and treasurer, and Dr. L. K. Probst, of Fairmont, vice president. We had several good reports today on the Young Lutheran and several on the missions of our territory. Conference is meeting in the beautiful new Lutheran church which was dedicated last Sabbath. Dr. John Brubaker will preath this evening."

Held for Stealing Coat.

A strange negro, who gave his name as Taylor Morgan and Weaternport, Allegany county, as his last place of residence, was taken into custody last Saturday on the charge of stealing a coat from an outbuilding on the Nally property, and upon the evidence of a number of men working for Mr. Nally, the prisoner was held for the action of the grand jury and is now in jail.

Dora Holt, son of Dan Holt, was also taken into custody as being implicated in the theft, but was released as no evidence was produced tending to connect him with the crime.

Teachers' Examination.

The annual examination for teachers will begin Tuesday, June 7th, and continue during the Training School.

By order of the board.

2t ED. A. BROWNING; Secy.

Marriage Licensss Galore.

Monday of this week was the banner day for issuing marriage licenses at the office of Clerk Tower when six couples were granted the privilege of contracting marriage under the laws of the State of Maryland. Five couples were from West Virginia and one native Garrett countians.

FOR RENT—After May 1st, a 6-room cottage, with stable on lot. Kitchen and one bedroom furnished if desired; apply at this office.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., May 19, 1910.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Monday, June 6, 1910,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, MAY 26 1910. NUMBER 13

BOTH ARMS SEVERED BY SAW ON MILL.

Horrible Accident to a Young Man Residing In Friendsville.

Last Friday one of the most distressing accidents that could befal one happened to Playford Bowling, aged seventeen years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel I. Bowling, of Friendsville, when the young man had both arms severed by the saw on a mill upon which he was employed as setter.

From what could be learned of the accident young Bowling was at work on the carriage of the mill when his cap blew off his head and attempting to recover it he threw out his right arm which was caught by the saw and severed between the elbow and shoulder. Intuitively he threw out his left arm and this also was caught by the saw and cut off just above the wrist. The severance of both members was done in a twinkling of an eye.

As soon as possible the injured boy was taken to Friendsville where Dr. Mason dressed his injuries and from last reports he is well on toward recovery.

MORE TONNAGE HAULED

B. & O. Shows Increase of 33 1-3 Per Cent. in Three Months.

For the three months ended March 31st, according to a report just issued by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, that company hauled 8,138,811 tons of coal and coke, as compared with 6,013,202 tons for the same period of 1909, and 6,314,450 tons for the same period in 1908. This is an increase of about 33 1-3 per cent.

Of the 8,138,811 tons shipped for the three months ended March 31st, 6,704,767 were bituminous coal, 258,493 were anthracite and 1,175,551 were coke.

The officials of the company are pleased with this excellent showing and anticipate a continuance of the same for the remainder of the year.

This increased tonnage is due in a great measure to the large number of cars which the company has been placing in service from time to time, which have been able to take care of all the business offered the road. Heretofore, the company has had to refuse a great deal of freight because it did not have adequate facilities. Hundreds of new cars have been sent to the West Virginia coal regions, where the tonnage is large, and delays in shipping which were met with in that locality have been eliminated.

Call for Your Letters.

Mr. John Becker (2). Miss Carrie Johnson, Mr. David Mossey, Miss Maude Nester, Mr. Vincenzo Di Stefano.

WHITE SLAVE FOES ARRANGE PROGRAM

Dr. O. E. Janney and Miss Laura Garrett Will Be Principal Speakers.

The program for the special white slave conference, which will be held at Mountain Lake Park July 19, 20 and 21, under the auspices of the National Vigilance Committee for the United States and the American Purity Alliance, has just been completed. Miss Laura B. Garrett, field secretary of the Maryland Society of Social Hygiene, will be one of the principal speakers, as will also Dr. O. Edward Janney, chairman of the National Vigilance Committee for the Suppression and Prevention of the White Slave Traffic.

The conference will open Tuesday morning, July 19, at 10 o'clock, with an address by Dr. Janney on "The White Slave Traffic." At 11 o'clock Miss Garrett will speak on "Mother Love as Shown by Plants and Animals." At 8 p. m. of the same day Henry W. Wilbur, of the American Purity Alliance will deliver an address on "The Vice Problem of the City."

Wednesday morning, Dr. Janney will again address the conference, his subject being "The Sources of the White White Traffic," and Miss Garrett will follow with a talk on "Life's Relay Race." In the evening Clifford G. Roe of the Chicago Alliance, will speak on "Vice and the Police."

Thursday morning will also be devoted to Dr. Janney and Miss Garrett, the former speaking on "The Suppression and Prevention of Traffic in Women," and the latter on "Safeguards for the Young." At 8 p. m. Robert N. Wilson, author of "The American Boy and the Social Evil," will speak on "The Teaching of the Young." Each afternoon during the conference will be devoted to group meetings.

Reducing the Size of the Bank Note.

A committee of Treasury officials, appointed to investigate and recommend reforms, has agreed to favor a reduction in the size of bank bills, making them about three-fourths as large as they are now. The argument for for the smaller bill is that it is more convenient for handling and less expensive to make. The Government has had some experience in the matter, as the Philippine bill is considerably smaller than the American bill, and it has proved satisfactory.

There seems no good reason why the paper bill should be as large as is now the case. The proposed reduction would still leave it large enough to avoid danger of loss through carelessness, while it would make it more suitable for everyday use. However, there has been no serious fault found with the dollar bill. The only objection to it is that it doesn't go far enough. If the committee could add something to its purchasing power it would oblige a long-suffering public.

DIXON & KELSO

The WOOL SEASON
IS NOW ON.

We will be in a position to pay the HIGHEST MARKET PRICE on the day of delivery. Prices have been so unsettled that it is not possible to name the price for a week in advance of date of delivery. Today we could pay 24c.

Rubber and Felt Roofing.

We recently purchased a car of the above goods and can name a very low price on your roofing supplies.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

DEMOCRATS ARE HIT HARD BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Opinion on the Primary Election Law Hurts.

Attorney General Isaac Lobe Straus Monday completed the draft of his opinion that a direct primary is mandatory under the Lee law enacted by the last General Assembly in the nomination of candidates for Congress. The opinion will be handed to Chairman Murray Vandiver, of the Democratic State Central Committee and will be read to the committee at its meeting today.

The opinion may or may not compel the Republican State Central Committee to reassemble and rearrange its primaries. The committee at its meeting in April proceeded on the theory that the law did not demand direct primaries in the nomination of congressional candidates. This interpretation was placed upon it by Senator Lee, its author.

It really makes but little difference whether the candidates for Congress are nominated by direct voting or by the aid of the delegate-convention plan, since the qualifications of membership of Congress are not determined by a state law, but by Congress itself, and that body would not pay much attention to the method of the nomination of the successful candidate. Thus last year the Republicans paid no attention to the state law relative to the selection of a candidate for the United States Senate. The Republicans knew that if they elected a majority of the General Assembly on joint ballot and a Republican was elected to the United States Senate that body would not turn him down because a state method of choosing a preliminary candidate had not been followed.

It is a question for future determination, therefore, whether the Republicans will reassemble their state committee. Mr. Thomas Parran, who was nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Fifth District yesterday at Chesapeake Beach has not been voted for at direct primaries. The old delegate convention plan was followed.

There is a prospect, however, that the Democrats will be hit harder by the Attorney General's opinion than the Republicans, that is, if the Democratic State Central Committee decides to accept the Attorney General's opinion and it is by no means certain that it will. In fact developments point to a spirited fight in the committee against the adoption of Mr. Straus' opinion and if the fight does come, there will be a line up earlier than was expected between the Crothers-Straus combination and the Smith-Gorman-Vandiver forces.

At the outstart it would look as though Mr. Straus possessed a strategetic point. Opinions by the Attorney General are generally construed as having full force of law until reversed by the courts. It may be possible, therefore, that a decision of the courts will be sought before the primary is held in accordance with Mr. Straus' views.

The clause of the Primary Election Law submitting the referendum in the several counties is as follows:

"* * * at the first primary election held under the provisions of this act in each of the said named counties (Howard, Washington, Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester), the official ballots of the respective political parties participating therein shall contain squares, properly designated, in which the voters of such parties may by such cross-mark in such squares indicate their preference for or against primaries in their respective parties by direct vote for candidates for county offices, for the State Senate and for Members of the House of Delegates; and provided further that if the majority of votes cast by either of such parties in any such county so excepted shall indicate a preference for direct primaries, then and in that event, each county in which by such direct vote a preference has been so expressed for direct primaries shall ever thereafter be removed from the class of excepted counties in this section specifically mentioned."

It is apparent that if the Straus opinion is sustained and if these counties show a preference at the next primary for the direct system of voting, that system will be employed next year in voting for all candidates for state offices.

In his opinion Attorney General Straus goes into detail to sustain his point of view that the congressional candidates must be named at direct primaries.

"The point in question" says Mr. Straus, "is by no means free from difficulty, because the act does not in express and literal terms mention congressional nominations. In spite of this circumstance, however, I conclude from its general language and expressions that nominations of candidates for Congress are included with in its purview. The title of the act is strongly indicative that it intends to relate to and cover the nomination of all candidates for public office within the state. The title declares that under the act new sections of Article 32 of the Code of Public General Laws, entitled 'Elections,' are to be enacted under the subtitle 'Primary Election,' regulating primary elections in the State of Maryland for all candidates for public offices of certain political parties in and for Baltimore and the several counties of the state."

Attorney General Straus then proceeded to quote several clauses of the new law which, he says, sustained his views that the law is effective this year.

"If the act does not affect and cover nominations of candidates for Congress," says the Attorney General in conclusion, "then there is no law whatever which does, and such nominations must be made in outlaw primaries without any legal sanction or any legal guide or restraint. There would be no public official to conduct them; there would be no penalties for maladministering them.

"The whole scheme and arrangement would be entirely unofficial and outside the law and committed to the arbitrary uncontrolled discretion of each party organization."

If congressional nominations are not excepted in the primary election law, it is claimed that judicial nominations are also not excepted

THE DEATH RECORD.

BABY BRANT.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Brant died at McHenry Tuesday and was buried at that place yesterday.

JOHN RILEY.

John Riley, aged about sixty years, a resident of District No. 2, died at his home last Saturday and was buried in Blooming Rose cemetery at Blooming Rose M. E. church, near Friendsville.

JESSE J. ASHBY.

Jesse J. Ashby, one of the oldest residents of this section of Garrett county, died at the home of his niece near Crellin yesterday after a short illness due to extreme age. No arrangements have as yet been made for the funeral.

BABY BOND.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. George Bond died at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. DeWitt in Oakland Monday morning after a protracted illness. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon with interment in the Oakland cemetery.

MRS. HEZEKIAH SCOTT.

The wife of Dr. H. Scott, a former pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, of Oakland, dropped dead at the home of her daughter at Charleston, W. Va., last Friday as she was entering the house upon her return from the South where she and Dr. Scott spent the winter. Heart failure caused the lady's death.

MRS. JULIA PETERS.

Mrs. Julia D. Peters, widow of the late John A. Peters, remembered in Oakland as a tailor a number of years ago, died at the home of her niece, Mrs. Thomas J. Johnson, in District No. 9, Garrett county, Monday at noon at the age of seventy years. Mrs. Peters' death came as the result of a cerebral hemorrhage. Her funeral took place yesterday, the interment being made at Terra Alta, W. Va., to which place the remains of the deceased lady was accompanied by Mr. Johnson and his family on train No. 55 yesterday afternoon.

MRS. JOHN C. MAYER.

Mrs. Arabella Byrer Mayer, wife of John C. Mayer, died Monday morning at the Mayer home in Terra Alta after a long illness. The funeral was held yesterday at the Presbyterian church. The impressive services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. J. Bone.

Mrs. Mayer is survived by her husband, John C. Mayer, and four children, Mrs. W. R. Shaw, of Terra Alta, Mrs. Harland L. Jones, of Oakland, and Frederick B. Mayer and Virginia Mayer, at home. Another child, John C. Mayer, Jr., died in 1904.

When a child Mrs. Mayer joined the Methodist church, of which she was a devoted member until her marriage, when she became a member of the Presbyterian church, the church of her husband, and was a faithful worker in that church to the time of her death. Mrs. Mayer was a woman of the highest Christian character and was loved by a wide circle of friends. She was most popular in Terra Alta and her home life was very beautiful and inspiring. She will be greatly missed here. The husband and children have the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community.—Terra Alta Republican.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON

Come Off On Schedule Time Monday Night.

The total eclipse of the moon by the the earth's shadow came duly on schedule time Monday night and was viewed with interest by many hundreds of the city residents, some of whom had been disappointed in not seeing Halley's comet and were therefore somewhat skeptical as to whether the moon and earth would perform the schedule stunt. But the moon did not disappoint; she was on time to the minute and promptly at 10:38 p. m., entered the shadow of the earth, the total eclipse beginning at 12:08 a. m., ending at 12:59, the moon leaving the shadow entirely at 2:21 a. m. The total time of eclipse was three hours and thirty-six minutes from start to finish. During this time the earth's satellite crossed the planet's shadow, which is about 5,700 miles in diameter. During the total eclipse, as usual, the night luminary was apparent though dimly obscured, being seen as an indistinct coppery disc. The sun at the time of the eclipse was back of the spectator, being at the opposite side of the earth.

A very good and clear view of the eclipse was obtained in Oakland.

It was reported that the comet could also be observed in the western sky but if Old Halley were present at that point of the heavens, he was there in very shadowy and indistinct form, undiscerned to the naked eye. The fallacy of reporting "seeing the comet" is due to the wish being father to the thought with many who are so anxious to see that celestial wanderer that they think the first bright star they see is the comet.

HIS LIBERTY BRIEF

Prisoner Who Escaped From Sheriff Was Quickly Overhauled.

A young man who gave his name as Worthington and Terra Alta as his home, was arrested Tuesday by Sheriff Andrew Shartzer on a warrant charging him with stealing $2.50 from a woman with whom he had been in company the night previous. Making an excuse to the officer that he needed the services of a physician to dress a cut on his lip he was taken to the office of Dr. McComas and while the prisoner and physician were in the private office of the latter the sheriff waited in the reception room. The work done Worthington told the physician that he desired to get away from a companion who was on the street in an intoxicated condition and left the office via the back window and started on a run across the lot in the rear of the building. About this time the sheriff became suspicious and when Dr. McComas appeared in the reception room without the patient inquiry developed the facts as above stated and the sheriff took up the chase which led up town for several blocks. Worthington secreted himself until the sheriff had passed his hiding place and then doubled on his tracks and returned down town where he was captured in an alley.

At the hearing yesterday Worthington was held for the action of the grand jury.

The Parcels Post and the Country Merchant.

Whenever the bill for the parcels post comes up in Congress there is a great outcry about the country merchant. A parcels post, it is said, will ruin the country merchant. The country merchants are not making the outcry. It is the express companies. They overcharge the country merchants and oppress them to the full extent of their opportunities and then get behind the country merchants to protect their monopoly.

The parcels post would not hurt the country merchant. On the contrary, it would enable him to do an order business for his patrons and to retail country products in the cities. A vast amount of food goes to waste on every farm at a time when people in the cities have to pay big prices for it. The cost of transportation and distribution is too great. A family in London makes an arrangement with a farmer to send a dozen eggs by mail every morning or two. Boxes for this purpose are made, and the cost of carrying a dozen eggs from any part of England to the front door of a house in London is 2½d., or 5 cents. The London family can get a pound of fresh butter this way, and other articles of food can be obtained in the city by this quick and inexpensive method. Both the consumer and the farmer in this country would profit enormously by this plan.

In England the postoffice seems to be conducted for the convenience of the people. In the United States one of the main objects seem to be the emolument of the railroads and the protection of the express company monoply.—Baltimore Sun.

LITTLE CHILD WAS DROWNED IN SPRING.

Fell Into Water and When Found It Was Dead.

Carroll, aged nearly two years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Irwin, residing on Mr. James S. Myers' farm near Friendsville, this county, was drowned in a spring near the house last Friday.

The child was a bright little boy and had unnoticed by the other members of the family gone to the spring. It was missed but a few minutes and upon search being made the lifeless body of the little one was found submerged in the water.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Natural gas will be in the Park on or before July 1st.

The Taney cottage has been leased for the season by J. C. Sheehy, Esq., of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. S. K. Welch will occupy her cottage, formerly the Maltsby cottage.

Mr. Thos. Barnard has rented one of the R. S. Jamison cottages on H street.

Miss Hattie Murphy has leased the Spitzer cottage, near the Hall of Philosophy, and will conduct a boarding house.

Rev. W. H. Faust preached in the Baptist church, Loch Lynn, Sunday afternoon to a large congregation.

Remember the special services in the M. E. church Sunday evening at eight o'clock. All old soldiers are especially invited to attend. All are asked to wear a flower. Special sermon and appropriate music.

Mrs. H. H. Pierce arrived Monday and will occupy her cottage as soon as the improvements are completed.

The Armstrong cottage is being put in order for early occupancy.

Mrs. M. M. Schrock was very seriously ill last week but is now rapidly recovering.

Mr. Thomas Harris is able to drive about the Park. He was very ill for two weeks.

Our town turned out en masse Monday night to see the double show furnished by the comet and the eclipse of the moon. The comet was a bit indistinct and did not show its tail to any great extent, but the eclipse was all that was advertized.

The electric light plant is being put in order and light will be turned on June 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T Yoder spent Sunday in the Park. They will soon return with their family and occupy their cottage on I street which will be extensively improved.

Miss Carrie Morrison is visiting friends here.

Mr. Leonard Schell will have charge of the ice cream department of Wilson & Bernard's store.

Mr. Willard Sperry has accepted a clerical position with a large coal company at Fairmont, W. Va.

The improvement to the Carr cottage is nearing completion. When completed this handsome property will be one of the most desirable in the Park.

We are pleased to hear of the continued improvement in the condition of Mrs. Sweet who is still a patient at the Hinebaugh Sanatorium.

Mr. Adam Long is engaged as carpenter at the railroad camp near here.

Mr. Benjamin Long is clerking at Wilson & Bernard's store.

Mrs. Mann and daughter Carrie expect to visit friends in Baltimore soon.

The Junior League will hold a fair and furnish refreshments in the Old Auditorium tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Winchell, who had been ill, has about regained her usual health.

Rev. H. E. Friend was here with relatives a few days ago.

Mr. M. M. Schrock has been making changes in Sup't. Davis' cottage.

The channel of Little Yough is being straightened from near the boardwalk to where that stream passes under the railroad.

More house painting has been done in the Park this spring than for many years.

Rev. Jacob Cuppett, of Wise, W. Va., was visiting relatives here this week.

Mr. Thomas Harris yesterday moved into one of the Jamison cottages near the M. E. church.

Mrs. J. L. Stratton, of New Castle, Pa., dropped off at the Park yesterday on her way home from Washington, D. C., where she had been attending the great Sunday School convention.

The Jarboe cottage on Baltimore avenue has been leased for the season by a family from Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for The Republican.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, MAY 26 1910. NUMBER 13

BOTH ARMS SEVERED BY SAW ON MILL.

Horrible Accident to a Young Man Residing In Friendsville.

Last Friday one of the most distressing accidents that could befal one happened to Playford Bowling, aged seventeen years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel I. Bowling, of Friendsville, when the young man had both arms severed by the saw on a mill upon which he was employed as setter.

From what could be learned of the accident young Bowling was at work on the carriage of the mill when his cap blew off his head and attempting to recover it he threw out his right arm which was caught by the saw and severed between the elbow and shoulder. Intuitively he threw out his left arm and this also was caught by the saw and cut off just above the wrist. The severance of both members was done in a twinkling of an eye.

As soon as possible the injured boy was taken to Friendsville where Dr. Mason dressed his injuries and from last reports he is well on toward recovery.

MORE TONNAGE HAULED

B. & O. Shows Increase of 33 1-3 Per Cent. in Three Months.

For the three months ended March 31st, according to a report just issued by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, that company hauled 8,138,811 tons of coal and coke, as compared with 6,013,202 tons for the same period of 1909, and 6,314,450 tons for the same period in 1908. This is an increase of about 33 1-3 per cent.

Of the 8,138,811 tons shipped for the three months ended March 31st, 6,704,767 were bituminous coal, 258,493 were anthracite and 1,175,551 were coke.

The officials of the company are pleased with this excellent showing and anticipate a continuance of the same for the remainder of the year.

This increased tonnage is due in a great measure to the large number of cars which the company has been placing in service from time to time, which have been able to take care of all the business offered the road. Heretofore, the company has had to refuse a great deal of freight because it did not have adequate facilities. Hundreds of new cars have been sent to the West Virginia coal regions, where the tonnage is large, and delays in shipping which were met with in that locality have been eliminated.

Call for Your Letters.

Mr. John Becker (2). Miss Carrie Johnson, Mr. David Mossey, Miss Maude Nester, Mr. Vincenzo Di Stefano.

WHITE SLAVE FOES ARRANGE PROGRAM

Dr. O. E. Janney and Miss Laura Garrett Will Be Principal Speakers.

The program for the special white slave conference, which will be held at Mountain Lake Park July 19, 20 and 21, under the auspices of the National Vigilance Committee for the United States and the American Purity Alliance, has just been completed. Miss Laura B. Garrett, field secretary of the Maryland Society of Social Hygiene, will be one of the principal speakers, as will also Dr. O. Edward Janney, chairman of the National Vigilance Committee for the Suppression and Prevention of the White Slave Traffic.

The conference will open Tuesday morning, July 19, at 10 o'clock, with an address by Dr. Janney on "The White Slave Traffic." At 11 o'clock Miss Garrett will speak on "Mother Love as Shown by Plants and Animals." At 8 p. m. of the same day Henry W. Wilbur, of the American Purity Alliance will deliver an address on "The Vice Problem of the City."

Wednesday morning, Dr. Janney will again address the conference, his subject being "The Sources of the White White Traffic," and Miss Garrett will follow with a talk on "Life's Relay Race." In the evening Clifford G. Roe of the Chicago Alliance, will speak on "Vice and the Police."

Thursday morning will also be devoted to Dr. Janney and Miss Garrett, the former speaking on "The Suppression and Prevention of Traffic in Women," and the latter on "Safeguards for the Young." At 8 p. m. Robert N. Wilson, author of "The American Boy and the Social Evil," will speak on "The Teaching of the Young." Each afternoon during the conference will be devoted to group meetings.

Reducing the Size of the Bank Note.

A committee of Treasury officials, appointed to investigate and recommend reforms, has agreed to favor a reduction in the size of bank bills, making them about three-fourths as large as they are now. The argument for for the smaller bill is that it is more convenient for handling and less expensive to make. The Government has had some experience in the matter, as the Philippine bill is considerably smaller than the American bill, and it has proved satisfactory.

There seems no good reason why the paper bill should be as large as is now the case. The proposed reduction would still leave it large enough to avoid danger of loss through carelessness, while it would make it more suitable for everyday use. However, there has been no serious fault found with the dollar bill. The only objection to it is that it doesn't go far enough. If the committee could add something to its purchasing power it would oblige a long-suffering public.

DIXON & KELSO

The WOOL SEASON
IS NOW ON.

We will be in a position to pay the HIGHEST MARKET PRICE on the day of delivery. Prices have been so unsettled that it is not possible to name the price for a week in advance of date of delivery. Today we could pay 24c.

Rubber and Felt Roofing.

We recently purchased a car of the above goods and can name a very low price on your roofing supplies.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

DEMOCRATS ARE HIT HARD BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Opinion on the Primary Election Law Hurts.

Attorney General Isaac Lobe Straus Monday completed the draft of his opinion that a direct primary is mandatory under the Lee law enacted by the last General Assembly in the nomination of candidates for Congress. The opinion will be handed to Chairman Murray Vandiver, of the Democratic State Central Committee and will be read to the committee at its meeting today.

The opinion may or may not compel the Republican State Central Committee to reassemble and rearrange its primaries. The committee at its meeting in April proceeded on the theory that the law did not demand direct primaries in the nomination of congressional candidates. This interpretation was placed upon it by Senator Lee, its author.

It really makes but little difference whether the candidates for Congress are nominated by direct voting or by the aid of the delegate-convention plan, since the qualifications of membership of Congress are not determined by a state law, but by Congress itself, and that body would not pay much attention to the method of the nomination of the successful candidate. Thus last year the Republicans paid no attention to the state law relative to the selection of a candidate for the United States Senate. The Republicans knew that if they elected a majority of the General Assembly on joint ballot and a Republican was elected to the United States Senate that body would not turn him down because a state method of choosing a preliminary candidate had not been followed.

It is a question for future determination, therefore, whether the Republicans will reassemble their state committee. Mr. Thomas Parran, who was nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Fifth District yesterday at Chesapeake Beach has not been voted for at direct primaries. The old delegate convention plan was followed.

There is a prospect, however, that the Democrats will be hit harder by the Attorney General's opinion than the Republicans, that is, if the Democratic State Central Committee decides to accept the Attorney General's opinion and it is by no means certain that it will. In fact developments point to a spirited fight in the committee against the adoption of Mr. Straus' opinion and if the fight does come, there will be a line up earlier than was expected between the Crothers-Straus combination and the Smith-Gorman-Vandiver forces.

At the outstart it would look as though Mr. Straus possessed a stragetic point. Opinions by the Attorney General are generally construed as having full force of law until reversed by the courts. It may be possible, therefore, that a decision of the courts will be sought before the primary is held in accordance with Mr. Straus' views.

The clause of the Primary Election Law submitting the referendum in the several counties is as follows:

"* * * at the first primary election held under the provisions of this act in each of the said named counties (Howard, Washington, Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester), the official ballots of the respective political parties participating therein shall contain squares, properly designated, in which the voters of such parties may by such cross-mark in such squares indicate their preference for or against primaries in their respective parties by direct vote for candidates for county offices, for the State Senate and for Members of the House of Delegates; and provided further that if the majority of votes cast by either of such parties in any such county so excepted shall indicate a preference for direct primaries, then and in that event, each county in which by such direct vote a preference has been so expressed for direct primaries shall ever thereafter be removed from the class of excepted counties in this section specifically mentioned."

It is apparent that if the Straus opinion is sustained and if these counties show a preference at the next primary for the direct system of voting, that system will be employed next year in voting for all candidates for state offices.

In his opinion Attorney General Straus goes into detail to sustain his point of view that the congressional candidates must be named at direct primaries.

"The point in question" says Mr. Straus, "is by no means free from difficulty, because the act does not in express and literal terms mention congressional nominations. In spite of this circumstance, however, I conclude from its general language and expressions that nominations of candidates for Congress are included with in its purview. The title of the act is strongly indicative that it intends to relate to and cover the nomination of all candidates for public office within the state. The title declares that under the act new sections of Article 32 of the Code of Public General Laws, entitled 'Elections,' are to be enacted under the subtitle 'Primary Election,' regulating primary elections in the State of Maryland for all candidates for public offices of certain political parties in and for Baltimore and the several counties of the state."

Attorney General Straus then proceeded to quote several clauses of the new law which, he says, sustained his views that the law is effective this year.

"If the act does not affect and cover nominations of candidates for Congress," says the Attorney General in conclusion, "then there is no law whatever which does, and such nominations must be made in outlaw primaries without any legal sanction or any legal guide or restraint. There would be no public official to conduct them; there would be no penalties for maladministering them.

"The whole scheme and arrangement would be entirely unofficial and outside the law and committed to the arbitrary uncontrolled discretion of each party organization."

If congressional nominations are not excepted in the primary election law, it is claimed that judicial nominations are also not excepted

THE DEATH RECORD.

BABY BRANT.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Brant died at McHenry Tuesday and was buried at that place yesterday.

JOHN RILEY.

John Riley, aged about sixty years, a resident of District No. 2, died at his home last Saturday and was buried in Blooming Rose cemetery at Blooming Rose M. E. church, near Friendsville.

JESSE J. ASHBY.

Jesse J. Ashby, one of the oldest residents of this section of Garrett county, died at the home of his niece near Crellin yesterday after a short illness due to extreme age. No arrangements have as yet been made for the funeral.

BABY BOND.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. George Bond died at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. DeWitt in Oakland Monday morning after a protracted illness. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon with interment in the Oakland cemetery.

MRS. HEZEKIAH SCOTT.

The wife of Dr. H. Scott, a former pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, of Oakland, dropped dead at the home of her daughter at Charleston, W. Va., last Friday as she was entering the house upon her return from the South where she and Dr. Scott spent the winter. Heart failure caused the lady's death.

MRS. JULIA PETERS.

Mrs. Julia D. Peters, widow of the late John A. Peters, remembered in Oakland as a tailor a number of years ago, died at the home of her niece, Mrs. Thomas J. Johnson, in District No. 9, Garrett county, Monday at noon at the age of seventy years. Mrs. Peters' death came as the result of a cerebral hemorrhage. Her funeral took place yesterday, the interment being made at Terra Alta, W. Va., to which place the remains of the deceased lady was accompanied by Mr. Johnson and his family on train No. 55 yesterday afternoon.

MRS. JOHN C. MAYER.

Mrs. Arabella Byrer Mayer, wife of John C. Mayer, died Monday morning at the Mayer home in Terra Alta after a long illness. The funeral was held yesterday at the Presbyterian church. The impressive services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. J. Bone.

Mrs. Mayer is survived by her husband, John C. Mayer, and four children, Mrs. W. R. Shaw, of Terra Alta, Mrs. Harland L. Jones, of Oakland, and Frederick B. Mayer and Virginia Mayer, at home. Another child, John C. Mayer, Jr., died in 1904.

When a child Mrs. Mayer joined the Methodist church, of which she was a devoted member until her marriage, when she became a member of the Presbyterian church, the church of her husband, and was a faithful worker in that church to the time of her death. Mrs. Mayer was a woman of the highest Christian character and was loved by a wide circle of friends. She was most popular in Terra Alta and her home life was very beautiful and inspiring. She will be greatly missed here. The husband and children have the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community.—Terra Alta Republican.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE MOON

Come Off On Schedule Time Monday Night.

The total eclipse of the moon by the the earth's shadow came duly on schedule time Monday night and was viewed with interest by many hundreds of the city residents, some of whom had been disappointed in not seeing Halley's comet and were therefore somewhat skeptical as to whether the moon and earth would perform the schedule stunt. But the moon did not disappoint; she was on time to the minute and promptly at 10:38 p. m., entered the shadow of the earth, the total eclipse beginning at 12:08 a. m., ending at 12:59, the moon leaving the shadow entirely at 2:21 a. m. The total time of eclipse was three hours and thirty-six minutes from start to finish. During this time the earth's satellite crossed the planet's shadow, which is about 5,700 miles in diameter. During the total eclipse, as usual, the night luminary was apparent though dimly obscured, being seen as an indistinct coppery disc. The sun at the time of the eclipse was back of the spectator, being at the opposite side of the earth.

A very good and clear view of the eclipse was obtained in Oakland.

It was reported that the comet could also be observed in the western sky but if Old Halley were present at that point of the heavens, he was there in very shadowy and indistinct form, undiscerned to the naked eye. The fallacy of reporting "seeing the comet" is due to the wish being father to the thought with many who are so anxious to see that celestial wanderer that they think the first bright star they see is the comet.

HIS LIBERTY BRIEF

Prisoner Who Escaped From Sheriff Was Quickly Overhauled.

A young man who gave his name as Worthington and Terra Alta as his home, was arrested Tuesday by Sheriff Andrew Shartzer on a warrant charging him with stealing $2.50 from a woman with whom he had been in company the night previous. Making an excuse to the officer that he needed the services of a physician to dress a cut on his lip he was taken to the office of Dr. McComas and while the prisoner and physician were in the private office of the latter the sheriff waited in the reception room. The work done Worthington told the physician that he desired to get away from a companion who was on the street in an intoxicated condition and left the office via the back window and started on a run across the lot in the rear of the building. About this time the sheriff became suspicious and when Dr. McComas appeared in the reception room without the patient inquiry developed the facts as above stated and the sheriff took up the chase which led up town for several blocks. Worthington secreted himself until the sheriff had passed his hiding place and then doubled on his tracks and returned down town where he was captured in an alley.

At the hearing yesterday Worthington was held for the action of the grand jury.

The Parcels Post and the Country Merchant.

Whenever the bill for the parcels post comes up in Congress there is a great outcry about the country merchant. A parcels post, it is said, will ruin the country merchant. The country merchants are not making the outcry. It is the express companies. They overcharge the country merchants and oppress them to the full extent of their opportunities and then get behind the country merchants to protect their monopoly.

The parcels post would not hurt the country merchant. On the contrary, it would enable him to do an order business for his patrons and to retail country products in the cities. A vast amount of food goes to waste on every farm at a time when people in the cities have to pay big prices for it. The cost of transportation and distribution is too great. A family in London makes an arrangement with a farmer to send a dozen eggs by mail every morning or two. Boxes for this purpose are made, and the cost of carrying a dozen eggs from any part of England to the front door of a house in London is 2½d., or 5 cents. The London family can get a pound of fresh butter this way, and other articles of food can be obtained in the city by this quick and inexpensive method. Both the consumer and the farmer in this country would profit enormously by this plan.

In England the postoffice seems to be conducted for the convenience of the people. In the United States one of the main objects seem to be the emolument of the railroads and the protection of the express company monopoly.—Baltimore Sun.

LITTLE CHILD WAS DROWNED IN SPRING.

Fell Into Water and When Found It Was Dead.

Carroll, aged nearly two years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Irwin, residing on Mr. James S. Myers' farm near Friendsville, this county, was drowned in a spring near the house last Friday.

The child was a bright little boy and had unnoticed by the other members of the family gone to the spring. It was missed but a few minutes and upon search being made the lifeless body of the little one was found submerged in the water.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Natural gas will be in the Park on or before July 1st.

The Taney cottage has been leased for the season by J. C. Sheehy, Esq., of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. S. K. Welch will occupy her cottage, formerly the Maltsby cottage.

Mr. Thos. Barnard has rented one of the R. S. Jamison cottages on H street.

Miss Hattie Murphy has leased the Spitzer cottage, near the Hall of Philosophy, and will conduct a boarding house.

Rev. W. H. Faust preached in the Baptist church, Loch Lynn, Sunday afternoon to a large congregation.

Remember the special services in the M. E. church Sunday evening at eight o'clock. All old soldiers are especially invited to attend. All are asked to wear a flower. Special sermon and appropriate music.

Mrs. H. H. Pierce arrived Monday and will occupy her cottage as soon as the improvements are completed.

The Armstrong cottage is being put in order for early occupancy.

Mrs. M. M. Schrock was very seriously ill last week but is now rapidly recovering.

Mr. Thomas Harris is able to drive about the Park. He was very ill for two weeks.

Our town turned out en masse Monday night to see the double show furnished by the comet and the eclipse of the moon. The comet was a bit indistinct and did not show its tail to any great extent, but the eclipse was all that was advertized.

The electric light plant is being put in order and light will be turned on June 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T Yoder spent Sunday in the Park. They will soon return with their family and occupy their cottage on I street which will be extensively improved.

Miss Carrie Morrison is visiting friends here.

Mr. Leonard Schell will have charge of the ice cream department of Wilson & Bernard's store.

Mr. Willard Sperry has accepted a clerical position with a large coal company at Fairmont, W. Va.

The improvement to the Carr cottage is nearing completion. When completed this handsome property will be one of the most desirable in the Park.

We are pleased to hear of the continued improvement in the condition of Mrs. Sweet who is still a patient at the Hinebaugh Sanatorium.

Mr. Adam Long is engaged as carpenter at the railroad camp near here.

Mr. Benjamin Long is clerking at Wilson & Bernard's store.

Mrs. Mann and daughter Carrie expect to visit friends in Baltimore soon.

The Junior League will hold a fair and furnish refreshments in the Old Auditorium tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Winchell, who had been ill, has about regained her usual health.

Rev. H. E. Friend was here with relatives a few days ago.

Mr. M. M. Schrock has been making changes in Sup't. Davis' cottage.

The channel of Little Yough is being straightened from near the boardwalk to where that stream passes under the railroad.

More house painting has been done in the Park this spring than for many years.

Rev. Jacob Cuppett, of Wise, W. Va., was visiting relatives here this week.

Mr. Thomas Harris yesterday moved into one of the Jamison cottages near the M. E. church.

Mrs. J. L. Stratton, of New Castle, Pa., dropped off at the Park yesterday on her way home from Washington, D. C., where she had been attending the great Sunday School convention.

The Jarboe cottage on Baltimore avenue has been leased for the season by a family from Washington, D. C.

Subscribe for The Republican.

THE BRIEF DEBUT OF TILDY.

How an Apology Ended a Restaurant Romance.

By O. HENRY.

[Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.]

If you do not know Bogle's chophouse and family restaurant it is your loss, for if you are one of the fortunate ones who dine expensively you should be interested to know how the other half consumes provisions. And if you belong to the half to whom waiters' checks are things of moment you should know Bogle's, for there you get your money's worth—in quantity at least.

Bogle's is situated in that highway of bourgeoisie, that boulevard of Brown-Jones-and-Robinson, Eighth avenue. There are two rows of tables in the room, six in each row. On each table is a caster stand containing cruets of condiments and seasons. From the pepper cruet you may shake a cloud of something tasteless and melancholy, like volcanic dust. From the salt cruet you may expect nothing.

At the cashier's desk sits Bogle, cold, sordid, slow, smoldering, and takes your money. Behind a mountain of toothpicks he makes your change, files your check and ejects at you, like a toad, a word about the weather. Beyond a corroboration of his meteorological statement you would better not venture. You are not Bogle's friend; you are a fed transient customer, and you and he may not meet again until the blowing of Gabriel's dinner horn. So take your change and go—to the devil if you like. There you have Bogle's sentiments.

ASKED HER TO GO TO "PARSIFAL" WITH HIM.

The needs of Bogle's customers were supplied by two waitresses and a voice. One of the waitresses was named Aileen. She was tall, beautiful, lively, gracious and learned in persiflage. Her other name? There was no more necessity for another name at Bogle's than there was for finger bowls.

The name of the other waitress was Tildy. Why do you suggest Matilda? Please listen this time—Tildy, Tildy! Tildy was dumpy, plain faced and too anxious to please to please. Repeat the last clause to yourself once or twice and make the acquaintance of the duplicate infinite.

The voice at Bogle's was invisible. It came from the kitchen and did not shine in the way of originality. It was a heathen voice and contented itself with vain repetitions of exclamations emitted by the waitress concerning food.

Will it tire you to be told again that Aileen was beautiful? Had she donned a few hundred dollars' worth of clothes and joined the Easter parade and had you seen her you would have hastened to say so yourself.

The customers at Bogle's were her slaves. Six tables full she could wait upon at once. They who were in a hurry restrained their impatience for the joy of merely gazing upon her swiftly moving, graceful figure. They who had finished eating ate more that they might continue in the light of her smiles. Every man there—and they were mostly men—tried to make his impression upon her.

Aileen could successfully exchange repartee against a dozen at once. And every smile that she sent forth lodged, like pellets from a scatter gun, in as many hearts, and all this while she would be performing astounding feats with orders of pork and beans, pot roasts, ham and sausage and the wheats and any quantity of things on the iron and in the pan and straight up and on the side. With all this feasting and flirting and merry exchange of wit Bogle's came mighty near being a salon, with Aileen for its Mme. Recamier.

If the transients were entranced by the fascinating Aileen the regulars were her adorers. There was much rivalry among many of the steady customers. Aileen could have had an engagement every evening. At least twice a week some one took her to a theater or to a dance. One stout gentleman whom she and Tildy had privately christened "the hog" presented her with a turquoise ring. Another one known as "freshy," who rode on the traction company's repair wagon, was going to give her a poodle as soon as his brother got the hauling contract in the Ninth. And the man who always ate spareribs and spinach and said he was a stockbroker asked her to go to "P'arsifal" with him.

"I don't know where this place is," said Aileen while talking it over with Tildy, "but the wedding ring's got to be on before I put a stitch into a traveling dress. Ain't that right? Well, I guess!"

But, Tildy!

In steaming, chattering, cabbage scented Bogle's there was almost a heart tragedy. Tildy, with the blunt nose, the hay colored hair, the freckled skin, the bag o' meal figure, had never had an admirer. Not a man followed her with his eyes when she went to and fro in the restaurant save now and then when men glared with the beast hunger for food. None of them bantered her gayly to coquettish interchanges of wit. None of them loudly jollied her of mornings as they did Aileen, accusing her, when the eggs were slow in coming, of late hours in the company of envied swains. No one had ever given her a turquoise ring or invited her upon a voyage to mysterious, distant "Parsifal."

Tildy was a good waitress, and the men tolerated her. They who sat at her tables spoke to her briefly with quotations from the bill of fare and then raised their voices in honeyed and otherwise flavored accents eloquently addressed to the fair Aileen. They writhed in their chairs to gaze around and over the impeding form of Tildy, that Aileen's pulchritude might season and make ambrosia of their bacon and eggs.

And Tildy was content to be the unwooed drudge if Aileen could receive the flattery and the homage. The blunt nose was loyal to the short Grecian. She was Aileen's friend, and she was glad to see her rule hearts and wean the attention of men from smoking potpie and lemon meringue. But deep below our freckles and hay colored hair the unhandsomest of us dream of a prince or a princess, not vicarious, but coming to us alone.

There was a morning when Aileen tripped in to work with a slightly bruised eye, and Tildy's solicitude was almost enough to heal any optic.

"Fresh guy," explained Aileen, "last night as I was going home at Twenty-third and Sixth, sashayed up, so he did, and made a break. I turned him down cold, and he made a sneak, but followed me down to Eighteenth and tried his hot air again. Gee, but I slapped him a good one side of the face! Then he give me that eye. Does it look real awful, Til? I should hate that Mr. Nicholson should see it when he comes in for his tea and toast at 10."

Tildy listened to the adventure with breathless admiration. No man had ever tried to follow her. She was safe abroad at any hour of the twenty-four. What bliss it must have been to have had a man follow one and black one's eye for love!

Among the customers at Bogle's was a young man named Seeders, who worked in a laundry office. Mr. Seeders was thin and had light hair and appeared to have been recently rough dried and starched. He was too diffident to aspire to Aileen's notice, so he usually sat at one of Tildy's tables, where he devoted himself to silence and boiled weakfish.

One day when Mr. Seeders came in to dinner he had been drinking beer. There were only two or three customers in the restaurant. When Mr. Seeders had finished his weakfish he got up, put his arm around Tildy's waist, kissed her loudly and impudently, walked out upon the street, snapped his fingers in the direction of the laundry and hied himself to play pennies in the slot machines at the amusement arcade.

KISSED HER LOUDLY AND IMPUDENTLY.

For a few moments Tildy stood petrified. Then she was aware of Aileen shaking at her an arch forefinger and saying:

"Why, Til, you naughty girl! Ain't you getting to be awful, Miss Slyboots! First thing I know you'll be stealing some of my fellows. I must keep an eye on you, my lady."

Another thing dawned upon Tildy's recovering wits. In a moment she had advanced from a hopeless, lowly admirer to be an Eve sister of the potent Aileen. She herself was now a man charmer, a mark for Cupid, a Sabine who must be coy when the Romans were at their banquet boards. Man had found her waist achievable and her lips desirable. The sudden and amatory Seeders had, as it were, performed for her a miraculous piece of one day laundry work. He had taken the sackcloth of her uncomeliness, had washed, dried, starched and ironed it and returned it to her sheer embroidered lawn—the robe of Venus herself.

The freckles on Tildy's cheeks merged into a rosy flush. Now both Circe and Psyche peeped from her brightened eyes. Not even Aileen herself had been publicly embraced and kissed in the restaurant.

Tildy could not keep the delightful secret. When trade was slack she went and stood at Bogle's desk. Her eyes were shining. She tried not to let her words sound proud and boastful.

"A gentleman insulted me today," she said. "He hugged me around the waist and kissed me."

"That so?" said Bogle, cracking open his business armor. "After this week you get a dollar a week more."

At the next regular meal when Tildy set food before customers with whom

"DON'T YOU FRET, TIL," SAID AILEEN.

she had acquaintance she said to each of them modestly, as one whose merit needed no bolstering:

"A gentleman insulted me today in the restaurant. He put his arm around my waist and kissed me."

The diners accepted the revelation in various ways, some incredulously, some with congratulations. Others turned upon her the stream of badinage that had hitherto been directed at Aileen alone. And Tildy's heart swelled in her bosom, for she saw at last the towers of romance rise above the horizon of the gray plain in which she had for so long traveled.

For two days Mr. Seeders came not again. During that time Tildy established herself firmly as a woman to be wooed. She bought ribbons and arranged her hair like Aileen's and tightened her waist two inches. She had a thrilling but delightful fear that Mr. Seeders would rush in suddenly and shoot her with a pistol. He must have loved her desperately, and impulsive lovers are always blindly jealous.

Even Aileen had not been shot at with a pistol. And then Tildy rather hoped that he would not shoot at her, for she was always loyal to Aileen, and she did not want to overshadow her friend.

At 4 o'clock on the afternoon of the third day Mr. Seeders came in. There were no customers at the tables. At the back end of the restaurant Tildy was refilling the mustard pots and Aileen was quartering pies. Mr. Seeders walked back to where they stood.

Tildy looked up and saw him, gasped and pressed the mustard spoon against her heart. A red hair bow was in her hair. She wore Venus' Eighth avenue badge, the blue bead necklace with the swinging silver symbolic heart.

Mr. Seeders was flushed and embarrassed. He plunged one hand into his hip pocket and the other into a fresh pumpkin pie.

"Miss Tildy," said he, "I want to apologize for what I done the other evenin'. Tell you the truth, I was pretty well tanked up or I wouldn't of done it. I wouldn't do no lady that a-way when I was sober. So I hope, Miss Tildy, you'll accept my 'pology and believe that I wouldn't of done it if I'd known what I was doin' and hadn't of been drunk."

With this handsome plea Mr. Seeders backed away and departed, feeling that reparation had been made.

But behind the convenient screen Tildy had thrown herself flat upon a table among the butter chips and the coffeecups and was sobbing her heart out—out and back again to the gray plain wherein travel they with blunt noses and hay colored hair. From her knot she had torn the red hair bow and cast it upon the floor. Seeders she despised utterly. She had but taken his kiss as that of a pioneer and prophetic prince who might have set the clocks going and the pages to running in fairyland. But the kiss had been maudlin and unmeant; the court had not stirred at the false alarm; she must forevermore remain the "sleeping beauty."

Yet not all was lost. Aileen's arm was around her, and Tildy's red hand groped among the butter chips till it found the warm clasp of her friend's.

"Don't you fret, Til," said Aileen, who did not understand entirely. "That turnip faced little clothespin of a Seeders ain't worth it. He ain't anything of a gentleman or he wouldn't ever of apologized."

...INTS FOR FARMERS

The Dairy Barn.

The floor of any cow barn should be of cement in order to be absolutely sanitary. Many authorities advocate covering the cement directly under the cow with wood so as to do away with the coldness of the cement, which is undoubtedly a liberal conductor of both heat and cold.

An excellent plan is to have a shed about thirty-seven feet wide, facing the cows outward. This width permits a five foot alleyway in front of each cow, with a cement manger or cement feeding floor two feet six inches and standing space of about four feet ten inches to five feet, with gutters fourteen to eighteen inches wide, the remaining space being left for a driveway or alley behind the cows. This gives plenty of room to drive a wagon through, if desired, or to run a litter carrier.

The width of your cow stall should be from three feet three inches to three feet nine inches, according to the size of your cows. One should bear in mind that in building a dairy barn the secret of sanitation is to eliminate everything possible in the barn which will take up dust, filth, odors and germs.—Kimball's Dairy Farmer.

Quality In Cattle.

High class animals always have the most quality. It is shown in a fine, silky coat of hair, in a mellow, elastic skin and in fine bones and neat joints. There is lots of difference in the coat of hair. One cow may have hair that is fine and soft and thick. There is a very fine and close undercoat and then longer, coarser hair. Such hair is a great protection in winter. Other animals, and they are the most common, have coarse, long hair. Their bones are also likely to be big and coarse. When an animal has plenty of quality you can easily take the skin in the hand between thumb and fingers and pull it out from the side of the body. It will be mellow and roll up somewhat in the hand. If the cow lacks quality her skin will be thick, tight and not easily taken in the hand. Fine quality as seen in the hair, skin and bone means with the beef animal that when killed there will be much less waste of the carcass than if the conditions show lack of quality. So also the dairy cow with plenty of quality is a better producer of milk than if the quality is lacking.—C. S. Plumb, Ohio.

Feeding Dairy Cows.

Of the mistakes made in feeding dairy cattle perhaps the one of underfeeding is the more common. It is a very serious mistake to feed a cow only that required to keep her body and then not feed her enough in addition to produce what milk she can. If a cow declines in weight while giving milk it shows that she is not receiving sufficient food, as a cow if not fed enough will produce milk for a time at the expense of her body—that is, she will take the surplus flesh from her body and convert it into milk and thereby will lose in live weight. On the other hand, when a cow is being overfed it may be detected in a short time by the fact that she will put on flesh. This condition may be corrected by giving her only the amount she needs and will use for milk production. This means feeding enough to maintain practically a uniform weight. —C. H. Eckles, University of Missouri.

Feeding Horses In Winter.

To raise horses from suckling colts keep them going ahead. Never allow them to get a setback, as the first year's growth goes far in determining what the animal will be at maturity. After weaning the colt should be kept in a well bedded box stall, with plenty of light and ventilation. It should be allowed to take plenty of exercise in favorable weather. A good ration consisting of three quarts of oats and one of bran mixed with water and a little salt and molasses or oilmeal cake should be fed three times a day. Oats are exceedingly fine for making bone, and a healthy ration for laying on fat is an occasional feed of boiled barley. A little corn may be fed at noon at odd times also. A good fodder feed is six or seven pounds of clover and timothy hay mixed. This should be fed mornings and evenings and as much as the colt will consume.

Repairing Farm Machinery.

Repairs should be made systematically and, as far as possible, at times when work is not rushing. It is necessary to have some system in looking after the machines in order that when a machine is to be used it will be ready and in good repair. In putting a machine away after a season's work it is suggested that a note be made of the repairs needed. These notes may be written on tags and attached to the machine. During the winter the tool may be taken into the shop, with which every farm should be provided, and the machine put in first class shape, ready to be used upon short notice. It is often an advantage not only in the choice of time, but also in being able to give the implement agent plenty of time in which to obtain necessary parts.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Filling Washy Places In Fields.

If there is no other trash on the farm for filling washy places in the fields, straw manure from stables is excellent. The straw will fill the places and catch and hold all of the soil that washes into them. The manure in the straw will help to make the ground more productive when it is again cultivated. Never plow in a gully with fresh dirt without some thrashy or brushy filling to hold it and catch more.

VALUE OF DRAGGING ROADS.

How Farmers Can Make Boulevards Out of Neglected Rural Highways.

The Mount Joy Star and News of Pennsylvania tells in one of its issues of how a farmer in that locality has been making good roads by his own individual effort. The newspaper item reads as follows:

Frank L. Nissley, a progressive farmer residing at Bamford, believes in having good roads and is so emphatic on the subject that he keeps nearly half a mile of new dirt road adjoining his farm in repair at his own expense for his satisfaction and to prove to the taxpayers how well it can be done with little expense.

To carry out his plans he set to work and constructed a double or split drag of the King style. This drag he made himself of logs and other material lying around the farm, so that really about the only thing that it cost him was a few hours of labor.

Every farmer has the material lying around his farm to build such a drag, and every farmer has enough mechanical ability to build it, as it requires no special skill and matters not how rough its construction is. Then, too, all the farmers have some spare time to make the drag if they apply the time to it.

After every rain that the road gets a little uneven Mr. Nissley hitches a horse to the drag, runs it over the road as far as his lands adjoin the road, and the result is that the road along his farm is always nice and smooth when the road along his neighbors' farms is rough and full of ruts.

The Nissley plan of improving the roads will go far toward establishing a good road system. He makes no big fuss about what he is going to do or what he is doing, but goes about it in a quiet manner and does it, and the results show for themselves. The fact that the road is better along his farm than any other place in the neighborhood is evident to all those who use the road, and doubtless in the near future some of his neighbors will follow his example.

This, however, we do not think is the right way to keep public roads in repair, as they should be maintained at the expense of the public and not individually by each landowner. Doubtless Mr. Nissley's progressive movement will enthuse the supervisors of East Hempfield township to a full realization of their real duties, and doubtless in the near future the township will have a drag which will be run over all the roads of the township whenever they get rough, and then all the roads of the district will practically be smooth all the time.

One man and two horses can in two days go over all the roads in a township, and such work might be necessary about a dozen times a year. The entire cost of this will not amount to $100 a year, but will do more good than a thousand dollars a year spent on the roads with a gang of fifty or more men, with plows and scoops, going over the township once a year, as is now the plan used by most supervisors.

There are a great many different kinds of systems advanced for improving our country roads. One of the simplest and one which every individual farmer can employ today without any money and with much benefit to his road is the system of dragging the dirt road by his farm by the split log road drag. Farmers can make such a drag in a few hours by simply splitting a log in half eight feet long. If the farmer takes these split pieces, the split surface facing to the front, and fasten them with stout staves three feet apart, according to the directions given by Mr. King of Maitland, Mo., the inventor of the drag, the farmer will have a simple road implement that will make a fine, smooth country boulevard out of the worst neglected dirt road in the community. The secret of successful road-making with the road drag will depend upon dragging the road after every rain, filling in the ruts, smoothing out the uneven places and building a high crown in the middle of the road, so that the water will run into the side ditches instead of standing in the middle, and, most of all—doing it. Talking does not keep a dirt road repaired. Neither does excuse finding. One hour of drag work immediately after a rain does the trick, nothing else.

GOOD SAND FOR ROADS.

Value of Waste Product From California Oil Wells.

Two hundred tons of rich black oil sand from the Sunset wells at Visalia, Cal., will be used on some of the roads of Tulare county, in California, this summer. Superintendent Twaddle, chairman of the county governing board, has been experimenting and found it satisfactory. The sand comes from the wells mixed with the oil. When this flows into the sump hole the sand sinks to the bottom and separates itself, the oil running off. Gradually the sand piles up around the derricks and at the mouth of the pipe and fills a large part of the sump. There are piles forty feet deep on the Adeline, Maricopa road, Oil and Gate City properties, which have accumulated in the course of four or five years. The sand coming with this heavy oil is different from that found with the light oils, even that with the Kern river product.

Those who have tried it say it is superior for roads to any common sand that may be mixed with oil. It has a binding quality that is lacking in artificial products. Before its adoption in Tulare county it was used quite a little on highways in the immediate vicinity of the oil fields, it being given to whoever would load and haul it away. A wide use of this byproduct by roadmakers will be a boom to the heavy oil producers of Sunset by ridding them of a nuisance and transforming it into a source of revenue.

Value of Good Roads to Farms.

It has been said that "good roads lead from good farms to good towns," and it seems a direct way of stating the fact. Wherever there are good roads leading into a town that town is invariably an active and up to date business community. Whenever good roads run through a farming region the farms are found well kept, the houses bright and in good repair, and the outbuildings show an air of snug comfort and prosperity.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

NEVER AGAIN.

On Greenland's icy mountains
The people wait around
And at their luck throw snowballs
Because the pole is found.
No longer will explorers
With toys and good advice
Go northward to employ them
To gambol on the ice.

The yearly summer outing
They can, with hopeful eye,
Look forward to no longer
Excitement to supply.
For learned men of science
They may no longer hope.
With gifts of grub and bracelets
And canned sardines and soap.

They will not have the pleasure
Of going on a dash
And winning fame for some one,
Besides a bunch of cash.
They will not have to journey
To where it never thaws,
Where ice is free and plenty
To aid a worthy cause.

The pole has been discovered,
Or so the claim is made.
This stops the hardy native
From working at his trade.
And on the ship's provisions
He may no longer feed.
The pole has been discovered.
It's sad for him indeed.

Made to Order.

Bishop Fallows of Chicago says it is the supreme duty of every man to be happy. Here is a case where duty wouldn't have to rap a man over the head with a stuffed club to wake him up if he only knew the combination.

Man has not yet arrived at a state where he can touch a button and be happy. He is willing all right, but he goes about it as an amateur.

In the morning of life he pursues the bright lights only to have his wings singed when he catches up with them. Then he tries other ways that are just as foolish, with similar results.

It is easy enough to point out his duty to him, but with the landlord coming round regularly and with the grocer and the butcher following in his wake how is the wayfaring man to get away with the made to order results?

Generally.

"Is he a good doctor?"

"I have never seen him misbehave."

"Smarty! I mean can he cure you?"

"He never has."

"Imbecile! What I want to know is if he is a successful physician."

"He is worth half a million."

"Do his patients recover?"

"Always unless death intervenes."

"Are you always affected with idiocy?"

"Usually when I come in contact with it."

Its Finish.

The hookworm is no friend of man
And must be brought to book,
For science plainly has decreed
That it must get the hook.

No longer can the lazy man
Have this as an excuse.
They'll send him to the hospital
And jar his hookworms loose.

No longer can he sit at ease
And take a summer nap,
And mighty sorry he will be
When he has lost his snap.

True Index.

"Does your watch keep good time?"

"In good times it does."

"But how about in bad times?"

"Then I have it in soak."

Correct.

"What is the first thing a man does after he gets fired?"

"Smokes, of course."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

A professional burglar has to take his choice between being pinched by cold and hunger or pinched by the police.

A luxury that isn't expensive has a hard time passing a civil service examination as a luxury.

A well trained memory is not one trained to fit the story to suit the occasion.

When the black sheep comes home with lots of wool the neighbors hasten to whitewash him.

When the good fellow decides that he must practice economy he usually finds his family where he can practice on it first.

The man who can't support a ton of dignity stands a mighty poor chance of being able to put up a bluff of respectable dimensions.

A reputation for doing things is worth while, after all, for those people who know are then bound to treat you kindly, for they will be afraid to do otherwise.

STORY OF TWO AMERICAN WOMEN IN GAY PAREE

Some of the Latest Happenings From the Capital of France.

Once again "the feminine," always "eternal." Two American women who have had the center of the stage for some days still retain it, and, what is more, will probably continue to do so for some time. They are the talk of Paris, and to such an extent that, together with the husband of one of them, they and their experiences are being portrayed and caricatured on the vaudeville stage of the French capital.

The case is that of Mrs. Charles Hamilton Payne, of Boston, and the Comte (?) and Comtesse (?) d'Aulby de Gatigny, the "Comtesse" being also a Bostonian before she graduated into the ranks of the (near) aristocracy. Talk of a cause for gossip and scandal! The now celebrated "picture fraud" affair in which Mrs. Payne is the victim is the talk of Paris, and promises to be so for some time.

Mrs. Payne, who is very wealthy, continues to occupy the magnificent former residence of the Stanislas-Castellanes, in the Avenue de Bois, has brought suit for $200,000 against the so-called Comte and Comtesse d'Aulby de Gatigny (who lay claim to even more imposing and high-sounding titles) charging that a number of paintings sold to her as genuine old masters are really nothing but clever modern reproductions. There are those, however, who say that the painting incident itself is not the entire cause of this beautiful scandal and court proceedings against those who, until a very short time ago, were intimate friends of the plaintiff. There are hints that the pseudo count cherished a strong feeling of admiration for the widow of the late Boston copper king whose chief aim, when in the flesh, seemed to be to provide the necessary financial sinews of war to carry on the storming of the doors of the social castle occupied by the Paris "Four Hundred."

The pseudo countess, like her former friend, is also from Boston where, it is said, she belongs to a plain-minded and simple family, who never entirely approved of her marriage. The possessor of a remarkably fine contralto voice, Frances Lunt had visions, before meeting the count, of an operatic career, she at that time being a member of the choir of a fashionable Boston church.

After the marriage, and bent on social success, the "Comte" and "Comtesse" went to England, but after an unprogressive stay in London they journeyed to Tours, France, and endeavored to acquire the accent in the ancient French city which is said to be the purest in all France. From a modest boarding-house they made their debut by means of a "stony" front in the select circle of the most exclusive French society of old Touraine. This former dwelling section of the old kings of France remains conservative to a degree, but the city of Tours proper is rather more progressive. Many of its residents love a good dinner, with equally good wine. Hence with this fact in view and the prestige of alleged American wealth (through the wife) the couple made considerable headway. All was not smooth sailing, however, for many of the doors of the most desirable houses remained closed to the strangers, whom none knew and who, although bearing a French name, spoke French with a delightful Cockney accent.

Enter Mrs. Charles Hamilton Payne, of Boston, U. S. A., with millions in her bank account, magnificent furs, priceless gowns of lace and cloth of gold. The acquaintance, which began when the two ladies sailed as fellow passengers from Boston to Europe, soon grew into closest friendship. What more natural than that the "Comtesse" should show her new found friend her chateau and likewise her titled friends of Tours? At the former the "Comte" displayed his treasures of the so-called art, and showed a willingness to oblige the Boston widow with an evidence of his taste and superior knowledge of "how things are done over here."

Hence when the rented furnished house occupied by Mrs. Payne was given up, it was the "Comte" who found one more suitable and incidentally much more expensive, and who assisted in supplying what he declared to be most essential, in the form of a picture gallery. "I, as a friend, will loan you mine for a mere trifle annually," he offered. "I will even consent to sell you a few of the best works at a friend's price," he added. Who could resist such an offer, and who would question the motive?

The French courts are now establishing the fact, little by little, that it would have been advisable for Mrs. Payne to have investigated, with genuine Yankee caution, before accepting the offer of the "Comte," but as the law in France is very strict about most things, no doubt Mrs. Payne will receive proper satisfaction in a financial way.

The wound to her pride, however, in finding that the titles of nobility claimed by her two friends are of the same character as the paintings she bought at exorbitant prices—that the husband is not a prince, not even a count, but just plain "Mister" Daulbey, of London, England, where, it is said, his father is a tailor—can never be entirely healed.

Yet, there is said to be balm in Gilead for Mrs. Payne's woes, for she finds a ready listener and a deeply sympathetic friend in the person of a bonafide duke (no mistake this time, even though he be but of the old Empire) well primed with an old-world knowledge of art. It is said that it was he who first discovered the fraud in the paintings, and was bold enough to proclaim the fact to Mrs. Payne.

And a tiny bird chirps that the real duke believed, too, that there would be less danger in the field if the pseudo count were removed as a possible rival. So there you are, with the "eternal feminine."

Meanwhile, Paris, ever ready to seize on a situation and turn it to ridicule, has already incorporated the facts in a "tableau," which is being given in a number of music hall "revues." Pleasant for Mrs. Payne? Well, how about the "Comtess?"

Rich and poor, high and low, young and old—every Frenchwoman has a pocket in her petticoat, and not a bit of false modesty is there about her when she lifts her dress skirt whether in the street or in a public conveyance, and exposes to the public gaze a petticoat of silk, moreen or unpretentious colored cotton, as the case may be, while she dives into her "inside" pocket and grabs her purse. When she has taken from it whatever cash she needs, she tucks it safely away again, together with her handkerchief, in the aforementioned pocket. Needless to say, that when an American, not used to up-to-date Paris ways, first sees this performance, she is often struck dumb with astonishment. And no wonder. Were such a thing to happen in public in any large American city, a small sized riot, probably followed by an arrest, would quite likely take place. As may be seen, "they do things differently over there."

Oh, these women's hats! They continue to grow weird, indeed. And the reversed flower-pot effect, with flowers springing out at a most curious angle, are among the weirdest. Worn by a saucy, rosy-cheeked young girl, they may be rather attractive, but when seen on a lady no longer youthful, the sight is one which may well make angels weep.

One great milliner, with a world wide reputation, is showing her art in the manipulation of the plateau hat, shaping them to suit the requirement of each individual customer. A mass of flowers, upon which the disk is raised from the hair is one style, while another is the brim crumpled and bent, with here and there quantities of the most natural looking birds peeping out from underneath,

Most of the newest models of evening gowns are quite devoid of the embroidery and other elaborate trimming that has prevailed for so long. Lace is much to the fore again, as veiling for the slips of Liberty. A smart gown I saw recently was of coral Liberty satin, draped with fine black spotted net, with a wide flounce of Chantilly forming the trimming around the bottom of the skirt. Foulards, tussah and cotton crepe are all employed for morning wear, and are made up on very simple lines. The ever-useful black taffeta is very popular, This year's make is very soft and pliable, and is often combined with a light weight cloth for rather more dressy tailor-made gowns.

INVENTED THE RICKSHAW

American Probably Responsible For Japanese Go-Cart

Twenty years ago when railways in Japan were yet few and moter cars undreamed of the common method of travel for natives and foreigners alike was the rickshaw.

Horses were scarce and of indifferent quality, the bicycle had hardly made its appearance in the far East, so practically the only means of getting about the country away from the main line of the railroad between Tokio and Hiogo was in the modified perambulator which is known all over the world as the rickshaw.

There are a number of versions of its invention and to whom credit should be given for it. The Japanese themselves claim it for a paralytic old gentleman of Kyoto, who some time before 1868, finding his palanquin uncomfortable, took a little cart instead. The usual foreign account adopted by Mr. Black, the author of "Young Japan," is that an American named Goble, half cobbler and half missionary, was the person to suggest the idea of a glorified go-cart some where about 1867.

The first official application to be allowed to manufacture rickshaws was, however, made in 1870. They were soon being turned out in hunrdeds and thousands, for the middle class Japanese found it a cheap and comfortable way of traveling long or short distances and there was an inexhaustible supply of men eager to turn themselves into beasts of burden in order to earn the high wages which the employment brought them. Curiously enough, elsewhere the thing is called a rickshaw, in Japan it generally goes by the name of jinriki.

Both are abbreviations of the real word, which is jin-rik-sha, meaning literally "man-power vehicle", that is, a cart pulled by a man. Sometimes you hear kuruma used as an equivalent, and that is a Japanning of the Chinese syllable sha. Karnma-ya is a rickshaw puller and you would call it out in Japan when you wanted a rickshaw, just as we call "hansom,, in the days when the hansom had not been driven off the ranks by the taxicab.

Teachers' Examination.

The annual examination for teachers will begin Tuesday, June 7th, and continue during the Training School.

By order of the board.

2t ED. A. BROWNING, Secy.

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars

Cameras and Photo Supplies

Saw Mill for Sale.

We have for sale at Jennings, Md., a

No. 2½ Farquhar Saw Mill.

cable feed; twenty-four feet carriage; fifty-five feet ways; three headblocks; 1 solid tooth saw.

Terms will be made to suit purchasers.

WILL SELL CHEAP.

Apply to

MASON BROS.,

14-2m.pd, Jennings, Md.

DETECTING BLOOD STAINS

Is Simple Matter With Modern Chemical Outfit.

People often wonder why it is that experts, when given evidence in court, can so confidently affirm that a certain substance removed from clothes, weapons, and so on consists of blood, although the suspected parties declare it to be rust or red paint. The determination of the truth is, however, a matter of simple preparation and microscopical observation which is absolutely infallible, for reasons which I will give.

The reader has probably learnt at school that all human blood consists of two kinds of densely-packed globules invisible to the naked eye, called corpuscles, white and red, floating or suspended in a liquid. I doubt whether one person in a million—aside from those who study such topics—has any real idea of the minuteness of these objects It is useless to say, for instance, that ten million of the red corpuscles will cover a square inch if laid out quite flat.

It is the function of the white corpuscles to consume the bacteria and bacilli that enter the blood, and they are actually alive. The red discs contain the iron of the blood. This much enables us to proceed with understanding.

I squeeze a mere drop from a needle prick in my finger on to a slide. At first all the globules and discs are fairly well defined, though it is usual to add a drop of water, or a chemical solution, to separate them and render them clearer. Slowly the drop stiffens, the firmness commencing at the edge, which is paler than elsewhere, and proceeding inwards. Within a short time it has wholly congealed. The edge is faintly frilled, while tuft-like darker lines, the fibrin, are observable near it. The lengths of the tufts increase toward the centre of the spot in the vicinity of which are comparatively large cracks dividing the film into plates like those on a tortoise's back. No beads are then present. This feature of itself affords a good clue to the cleverer analysis if the substance is not too old. I wait till the next day before making the tests.

The dried blood is eventually loosened with a thin, sharp knife blade, and comes away like a fleck of india rubber or leather, or similar resistant, yet pliable stuff. I detach all except the portion to be tested. Then I let fall a drop of glacial acetic acid onto the dried flake, and a tiny speck of common salt and gently warm the mixture. Upon replacing it beneath the microscope the liquid cools and evaporates, and there strangely springs into view a mass of red-brown crystals, or maybe scattered ones, having definite characteristic shapes. The chemical reactions have been of a very curious kind. Before the appearance of the crystals, bubbles of gas, etc., emerge from between the cracks separating the minute plates, and burst in due course. Then the edges of the plates become fainter and fainter until all red tint is absorbed, and the crystals commence to appear at various points.

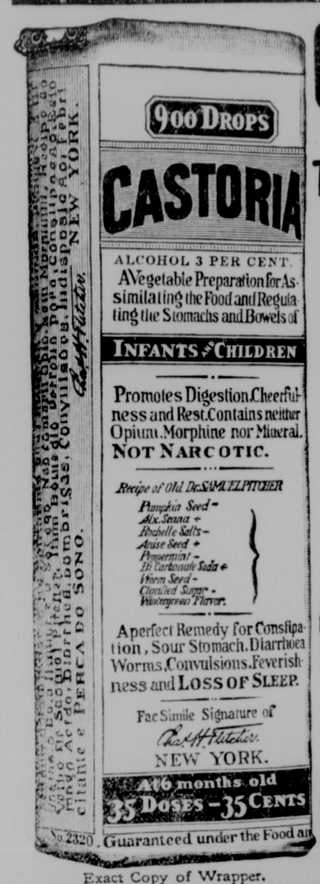
The substance forming these crystals, composed of chlorine from the salt and extractions from the blood combined, is known as haemin, or chloride of haematin. The crystals will undergo another change into brown irregular particles if another alkali, such as soda, is added.

It has not only to be determined whether a suspected substance is blood and not rust or paint, but it has to be learnt whether the blood is that of a human being or of a rabbit, fowl, or other creature. Fortunately, the shapes of the corpuscles differ, slightly or extremely.—Prof. Scott in Strand Magazine.

New Wall Paper Store.

Having purchased the wall paper stock of Messrs. Matthews & Helbig and added a large stock of new patterns, we are now open for business on the second floor of the Townshend building, Second street, and solicit the patronage of the public.

W. H. BARTLETT & Co.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on

2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.

2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.

2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see

THE Little Man

and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,

Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.

Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department

Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, U. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

Letter Heads
Statements
Bill Heads
Envelopes
Cards

Anything and everything in the way of high-grade commercial printing. Our assortment of job type is complete, our press facilities of the best, and our workmen true typographical artists. This tells all the story of our facilities for doing job printing of the right kind at the right prices.

Cards
Envelopes
Bill Heads
Statements
Letter Heads

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,

Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months.....75
One copy three months.....40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1910.

KING EDWARD'S OBSEQUIES.

At St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Friday the body of Edward VII, "of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the oversea Colonies, King, and Emperor of India," was laid at rest, under circumstances of such pomp and with such marks of respect from Emperors, Kings, Princes and Ambassadors of great republics as befitted the obsequies of the monarch of the greatest empire the world has ever seen. Gathered about the bier of the King and Emperor, the majesty of many states testified respect and affection for the personality of the dead, at the same time doing homage to the nation which he ruled.

The spectacle was impressive, evidencing as at did, the growing amity of peoples and royal houses and illustrating the increased sense of unity and sympathy pervading the world. Time was when war was the normal employment of kings and every country regarded every other country with suspicion, not to say animosity. War still preoccupies the minds of officials responsible for the public safety, but kings now cultivate rather the arts of peace, and the people begin to deprecate armed conflict as a belated barbarity. Peace is recognized as the greatest international interest. Edward VII was an exponent of peaceful methods of settling disputes and it is in his character of peacemaker that the world holds him in the greatest esteem. His life was lived in an exalted station, blest with every circumstance of wealth, grandeur and influence, but his death points the familiar moral, that we all—the rich and the poor alike—go the same journey, that one fate awaits us all, and that the only lasting title to the love and respect of those who survive us or come after us, is the good we have done during our little day.

The world has never seen an empire comparable in extent, population, intelligence, wealth, good administration, liberty and humanity with that which George V is called to rule. The Babylonian Empire was extensive, but it did not compare in extent with the 11,433,283 square miles of the British Empire or in population with the 400,000,000 people who look to George V as sovereign, and at best it was an expression of brute force merely. The Roman Empire compares best with the British, but it was of less area and population and in almost every other way inferior. China is equally populous, but greatly inferior in extent, in culture, in wealth, in power and other elements of greatness. Germany, more powerful from a military point of view, is inferior in extent, population, wealth and other factors. Even the United States, though of greater wealth, must take second place in population, area and other particulars. The British Empire, in fact, is the most remarkable state of which history gives us any account, being most remarkable, not for its size and numerical greatness, but rather for its love of liberty, its capacity for organization and administration, its genius for the development of political institutions and its generous founding of powerful self-governing colonies.

FOR A SANE FOURTH.

Several weeks ago we made a suggestion that the Town Council pass an ordinance prohibiting the firing of any explosive in the town on July 4th, and also prohibiting the sale of such articles in the town, with the provisions that a display of fireworks could be made under the supervision and by permission of the Mayor.

We want to again suggest that the Town Council pass this ordinance at the June meeting. Baltimore is making preparation for a big celebration on Independence Day, but is also providing that it shall be a safe and sane celebration, and prohibits the use of the deadly fire cracker, the toy pistol and the fire works. New York City is doing the same thing.

It is simply a question of time until all our people wake up to the fact that it is not necessary to kill and maim numbers of children each year in order to show a patriotic spirit, and there is no reason why Oakland should not be one of the first towns to adopt these sane measures.

Something new in Talcum Powder; Babcock's Corylopsis of Japan, the most popular Talcum on the market today. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

GENERAL ASSESSOR APPOINTED.

Mr. Daniel Yommer Given Place Made Vacant By Mr. Stanton's Resignation.

Governor Crothers on Tuesday announced the appointment of Mr. Daniel Yommer, of Grantsville dstrict, general assessor for Garrett county in place of Mr. Uriah M. Stanton, who was previously appointed by the Governor and who refused to qualify.

Mr. Yommer was a candidate on the Democratic ticket last fall for County Commissioner. He is a prominent farmer in his commuinty and his appointment is pleasing to the regulars of the Democratic party.

Anti-Saloon District Grows.

Montgomery county has been added to the Western district of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League. The Western district, which now comprises the counties of Garrett, Allegany, Washington, Frederick and Montgomery, is under the superintendency of Rev. Cyrus P. Keen, of Hagerstown, who announced he will put in considerable work in Montgomery, which is wholly "dry." Frederick county, territorially, is more than half "dry;" Garrett, outside of Oakland, is "dry," while Washington county has only a few "dry" spots.

The Anti-Saloon forces are quiet in Washington county for the present. Activity will begin next September, when the campaign will open with a series of Field Day meetings.

SWANTON.

What a town of amazing diversities is Swanton! Mr. Editor, were you ever there? Monday evening was a specialty in the drama of Swanton's capabilities. As a public entertainment in honor of the present influx in her population, she had in the west a modest little comet, looking like the white of an egg distributed the distance of a few yards over the beginning of the pathway of a star, and in the east Luna in full glory concealing her blushes in a total eclipse. All this exhibited from a star lit stage in the same hour.

In conformity with much published notices, Rev. Cyrus P. Keen, of Hagerstown, advocating the Anti-Saloon League in Maryland, arrived in Swanton Tuesday evening, May 17th, for an address in the M. E. church. As temperance was the propelling force a dry evening may have been devoutly wished. Notwithstanding the moving clouds and fluctuating showers, the spacious floor of the brightly lighted edifice was closely covered by an orderly and excellent audience. Mr. Keen looks as one still upon the youthful side of life's meridian; erect in bearing and of a personality calculated to command respect. The Rev. Mr. Brumbaugh, catching the fever of the time, ran down from Deer Park on the evening train, introduced the speaker and closed the meeting with exhortation and benediction. As Mr. Keen proceeded in his conservative and clearly directed address the fact seemed to appear that the dominant object was not so much an immediate application of temperance as the adoption of a system of revenues requisite to support the League as a factor in state elections for the exercise of a salutory influence in future legislation at Annapolis. After a close review of the growth and accomplishment of his order in this State, he called upon the people to subscribe, as indicated by a printed form, to the support of that order and apparently, a very liberal response was had. In an argument of one and a half hours, nothing of the sensational was indulged in, nothing of the clap-trap type, but a cool, deliberate presentation of existing conditions for the grasp and digestion of thoughtful voters. While this was true, the little man posing at Annapolis in fancied importance, trying to ride a horse in opposite directions at the same time, was held up to withering ridicule. Under the searchlight of legislative history, he paced out a puny gang as fit specimens of the "Artful Dodger" from the pen of Dickens. As has been stated, from start to finish, the argument was a good one, free from abuse and less of a demonstration of temperance need just now than a trumpet call to fill up the ranks and buckle on the armor of this League for the decisive battle in Maryland.

RELLIM.

MEMORIAL DAY AT FRIENDSVILLE

Annual Decoration of Graves of the Honored Dead.

Sherman Post No. 11, Grand Army of the Republic, desires that there be a general turnout of the citizens, public school children, Knights of Pythias and all other organized bodies of the town, and visitors from the surrounding country are also invited to participate with the Post on Memorial Day, Monday, May 30. The Post will form in front of the Lutheran church at 9:30 o'clock a. m. and march thence to the Methodist church where addresses by able speakers will be made.

Donations of flowers will be thankfully received and can be left at the M. E. church.

By order of the Post.

R. E. FRIEND,
Commander.

WM. H. H. FRIEND,
Adjutant.

MAY TEST NEW LAW

Disposition on the Part of Coal Operators To Ignore It.

An act which was passed at the recent session of the Maryland Legislature, making it compulsory for all corporations engaged in mining coal or other minerals in Garrett county to pay their laborers twice a month instead of monthly as formerly, may be tested by at least one corporation operating in this county, the coal company in question setting up the plea that the act is unconstitutional and will be so decided by the courts.

On the other hand, however, there is a disposition on the part of some operators to comply with the law without hesitancy or question.

HOYES.

The long looked for and wonderful Halley's comet has passed and is gradually disappearing and no one so far as we know was injured the least, unless some contracted colds by staying up until too late an hour of night.

The lecture on last Wednesday evening at the M. E. church by Rev. Cyrus Keene was well attended; also highly appreciated by all present, as he is a very interesting talker and we feel sure no one slept while he was speaking.

The total eclipse of the moon Monday evening was seen by a number of our citizens, who aroused from their sweet slumbers to gaze for a short time at this midnight curiosity.

Foster Glover spent Saturday evening and Sunday at his home at this place. He has been employed at Salisbury for several months past. He was accompanied by his mother, who was visiting her daughter at the above named place.

Miss Blanche Callis spent several days the past week in Oakland and Mt. Lake.

Misses Sadie and Sudie Friend were guests of Mrs. W. A. Smith last Sunday

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Brant of Deep Creek, was buried at the Catholic cemetery Tuesday.

Messrs. King Delawder and Horace DeWitt accompanied by their wives were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. DeWitt over Sunday.

Earl Fazenbaker, of Westernport, attended the Friend-Custer nuptials at this place last Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Bud Friend and children and Miss Mollie Friend of Elder, were visiting D. O. DeWitt and family Sunday.

Rev. H. E. Friend left Hoyes last Thursday morning for his son Willie's, near Mt. Lake, where he assisted in raising a fine large barn.

Quite a number of young people from this place attended preaching services at Flatwoods Sunday night.

Now last but not least is the wedding at our little town. The contracting parties were Miss Hallie Friend and Arthur Custer. They were married at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of the bride, the ceremony was performed by Rev. H. E. Friend in the presence of a few immediate relatives, with Miss Bertha Custer and Mr. Earl Fazenbaker as attendents. The couple are well known and highly respected by all. After a most delicious supper was served quite a crowd of serenaders, both ladies and gentlemen, gathered and gave an old fashioned belling, after which cake, lemonade and other refreshments were served. All wish this couple a long and pleasant journey through life.

BITTINGER.

Many of those who have been gazing skyward in search of the long heralded Halley's comet, expressed themselves as being disappointed at the smallness and dimness of the comet whose coming once in three-quarters of a century is heralded by such a big blow in the newspapers.

Mr. and Mrs. Joel Orendorf spent last Sunday and Monday visiting their daughter, Mrs. Lewis Maust, at Springs, Pa.

Lawrence Bittinger, of Grantsville, spent last Sunday with relatives in this village.

Amos H. Reckner, of North Glade, was a pleasant visitor in this section a day or two last week.

Sheriff Andrew Shartzer, of Oakland, came to this village last Saturday and disposed of the personal property on the J. T. Lohr farm, at public sale.

Peter Brininger, of Sunnyside, attended the sale of the Lohr property at this place on last Saturday and purchased a horse.

Rev. Alvin Yugel, who had been pastor of the Lutheran congregation at this place for the past two years, left here last Friday morning, to take up his duties as pastor of the Ellenville, N. Y., charge, to which place he had been recently called.

Mrs. K. A. Bittinger held a very successful festival and ice cream supper at her home in this village last Saturday evening.

Joel Orendorf visited Oakland one day last week, for the purpose of qualifying and receiving instructions as to his duties as assessor for this district.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Church Services.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.45 a. m., and 8 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE PARK M. E.

Class meeting at 10 a. m.
Preaching at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.
Sunday school at 2.30 p. m.
Epworth League at 7:00 p. m.

P. Z. MUSGRAVE, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 8 p. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Elder Hill—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Deep Creek—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Rev. W. H. Faust, of Georgia, will preach at these services.
Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

Write E. S. West, Oakland, Md., the only licensed real estate dealer in Garrett county, for booklet describing all kinds of real estate for sale in this vicinity. Also valuable farms, coal and timber lands in other States, Mexico and Canada. 11-4t.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not advertised here. For particulars address

M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

Near Bittinger, Garrett County, Maryland.

Under and by vitue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Jefferson Turner Lohr and Daisy Lohr, his wife, to Jane Roberts, dated the tenth day of January, 1909, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 57, folio 259, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having been made in the conditions of said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named in said mortgage hereby gives notice that they will on the 28th Day of May, 1910,

SATURDAY,

at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., of said day, in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer at public auction to the highest bidder all those pieces or parcels of land situate, lying and being in Garrett county and State of Maryland, near the town of Bittinger, and being a tract of land composed of four Military Lots, to-wit:

Military Lots Nos. 2413, 2414, 2415 and 2416, containing Fifty Acres each, save and except the part of said land lying on the East side of the South Fork of Castleman River containing about 25 acres, and containing for the whole 175 acres more or less, and being a part of the same land which was conveyed to the said Jefferson Lohr and Peter Young Lohr, as tenants in common, by deed from Peter P. Lohr and wife dated the 11th day of January, 1906, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 52, folio 107, one of the Land Records of said Garrett County, and being the same land conveyed by Peter Young Lohr to the said Jefferson Turner Lohr by deed dated the 28th day of September, 1908, and duly recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 58, folio 179, etc., one the Land Record of said Garrett county, by which said last mentioned deed the said Peter Young Lohr conveys his undivided one-half interest in and to the said land.

Said land is in a high state of cultivation, and is improved by a dwelling house, practically a new large barn, and other necessary outbuildings, contains an orchard, excellent sugar trees and camp, and is one of the most desirable farms in Garrett county.

TERMS OF SALE—Cash on day of sale or ratification thereof by the Court.

Conveyancing at the cost purchaser.

WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
J. C. RENNINGER,
Attorneys named in said Mortgage.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DU[illegible]A R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank

Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

D. E. BOLDEN'S Remodeling Sale

Contemplating extensive improvements to my store building, I offer my entire stock of Bed Room, Dining Room, Library and Parlor Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Pictures, Mattresses, Etc.

—AT—

10 Per Cent. Discount

For the Next 30 Days.

During the past few weeks the wholesale price on my lines have advanced ten per cent., but I am willing to give my customers the benefit of this advance in addition to the ten per cent. discount as above.

Some Rare Bargains will be included in this Special Sale

D. E. BOLDEN.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

School Board Meeting.

The Board of County School Commissioners will meet in their office in Oakland on

MONDAY, JUNE 6, 1910,

for the purpose of considering new buildings and repairs and such other business as may come before them.

By order of the Board.

E. A. BROWNING, Sec.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.

G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt — Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis — George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell — William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Circuit Court will convene on June 6th.

Mr. Charles W. Wolte, of Kingwood, spent Saturday in Oakland.

FOR RENT—Furnished room; three minutes walk from station. Apply at this office.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hilleary, of near Gorman, was in Oakland Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Stanhope Crane, of Kingwood, spent last Friday in Oakland with relatives and friends.

Mr. James Myers and little grandson, of near Sunnyside, paid this office a brief visit Tuesday.

Mr. John A. Wilt, of near Swantor, was in Oakland last Saturday when he made this office a call.

Fountain Syringes and Hot Water Bottles, household necessities, at prices ranging from 75c. to $1.50, at Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Mr. Leo Connell, of Cumberland, was here this week as the guest of his brother, Rev. J. E. Connell.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

Rev. G. R. Williamson, who attended the session of the World's Sunday School Convention in Washington, has returned to Oakland.

See the Gibson Family Reunion, which is to be presented in the opera house on June 9 for the benefit of St. Mark's Lutheran church.

Money to Loan—Secured by first mortgage on real estate. Terms easy. Renninger & Offutt. Attorneys Oakland, Md. 3t

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Offutt spent several days last and this week in Baltimore, going to and returning from that city to Cumberland in an automobile.

Messrs. A. D. Naylor & Co. have been [illegible] contract for the plumbing, heating and electrical work at Mr. N. U. Bond's new residence in Oakland.

Mr. Nathan C. Browning, of Sang Run, spent a few days this week in Oakland where he visited his daughters who are students in the Oakland Normal School.

Mr. Daniel Houck, ex-sheriff of Allegany county, who is now in the real estate department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was in Oakland on business connected with the operations of his company Monday and Tuesday.

Members of the Oakland band have arranged to hold a fete at the Oakland Hotel grounds Monday afternoon and at night dancing will be the attraction. All are invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Harland L. Jones have returned from Terra Alta where they were for several days this week owing to the death and funeral of Mrs. Jones' mother, Mrs. John C. Mayer.

Mr. J. E. Francis, the road contractor, has received an additional road roller which will be placed in commission on Hooppole road as soon as it can be taken to the point of operations.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

Mr. G. A. Fraley was at Kingwood last Thursday on business connected with the settlement of the estate of his recently deceased father, Mr. B. F. Fraley, of Terra Alta, W. Va.

Try one of our Long Life Batterie onyour telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mr. Charles J. Newman, who has been rural carrier on Route No. 1 running from the Oakland postoffice, has tendered his resignation to the Postoffice Department and upon its acceptance he will enter the employ of the Garrett Journal as foreman, succeeding Mr. J. F. Schroeder, who resigned as such last week.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawtont & Sons.

Mr. Edmund Manges arrived home from Gettysburg College Saturday and on Sunday night preached to a large audience in St. Mark's church. Last night he left for Detroit, Michigan, where he will be engaged in missionary work this summer and expects to return to college late in the fall to complete the theological course of study.

Mr. Ralph T. Thayer, who is a student at the Morgantown University, was accorded a great honor a few days ago by being one of the fifteen elected to become members of the Sphinx Society. The selection of new members, under the rules of the society, is made without solicitation on the part of the newly-elected and is an honor accorded fifteen members of the Senior class yearly.

CAPITAL 50.0 0.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

NO BIDS RECEIVED

The State Roads Commission Greatly Disappointed.

The State Road Commission received no bids Saturday for roads in Allegany and Garrett counties. The specifications will be readvertised this week. The commissioners were disappointed as they are anxions for work on the roads to begin immediately. If no bids are received after next advertisement it is believed the commission will adopt plans to work under their own supervision. The roads are as follows: Allegany, two miles on the old National pike between Cumberland and Frostburg; Garrett, 2¼ miles on National Road to Piney Grove.

Messrs. R. T. Browning and Charles A. Deffinbaugh, members of the Democratic State Committee from this county, went to Baltimore yesterday where they will attend a meeting of the committee to be held in that city today when dates will be set for Congressional conventions in the various districts of the State and plans mapped out for the fall campaign.

State Senator W. H. Berry and Rev. Dr. Collins, both of Indianola, Iowa, were guests Monday and Tuesday of Lieut. E. S. West and family near Oakland. Senator Berry is president of Simpson College at Indianola, where Lieut. West was stationed as Commandant previous to coming to Oakland. He and Dr. Collins were on their way home from a business trip to New York City.

Attend "At the Ferry," to be presented this evening by home talent for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's M. E. church. Fifty characters are to be in the play. The parts taken by the young people have been rehearsed every night for a week and they have been pronounced proficient by the trainer, Miss Bookwalter, of the Central Entertainment Bureau, who was sent here to stage the play.

Hon. S. A. Kendall arrived here from Crellin, Md., last Saturday morning, expecting to be joined here by Mrs. Kendall to remain over Sunday, but the latter sent word from Washington that their daughter, Miss Grace, was taken ill at Gettysburg, Pa., while returning from an automobile trip to Atlantic City, and returned to Washington by train. Mr. Kendall, accordingly, left for Washington Saturday afternoon to spend Sunday with his family.—Meyersdale Republican.

Let us fill your prescriptions. Lowest prices, quality considered. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

We take for granted that our fire company is perfectly familiar with the apparatus the town recently bought, and that the members can handle a fire like veterans when one occurs. We take this for granted because they have not had one practice since the company was organized, and if they were not perfectly familiar with the coupling of hose, getting out the reels, etc., in good time and working together as a unit, they would certainly have some practice together before a fire occurs.

Messrs. Hamill & Gonder, the new druggists, have installed in their store room on Second street, one of the handsomest soda water fountains it is possible to manufacture, the new addition to their equipment having arrived from the factory on Thursday and was erected Friday by a mechanic sent here for that purpose. The fountain is equipped with all the modern improvements, the carburator being automatic in action, which is both a labor and time saver. From a sanitary standpoint the entire equipment is as near perfect as it is possible to make it.

Dr. Henry W. McComas was called to Grantsville last Friday to attend Mr. Daniel Baker, who was seriously injured in a runaway accident a few days previous when he and his son were both thrown from the vehicle. Mr. Baker had several ribs broken and suffered internally while his son was even less fortunate, the latter's leg being so badly crushed that amputation of that member as a means of saving his life was at first thought necessary. He was taken to the University Hospital in Baltimore on Tuesday where he is being attended. The senior Mr. Baker is at the home of Mr. C. C. Miller, near the scene of the accident.

In order to boom a place it is not only necessary to write and talk about it, but endeavors must also be made to beautify it and make it attractive. This can be done to a certain extent by making street improvements. Every man is not expected to build a palatial mansion, nor individually start a factory, but you can speak kindly of your neighbors. Make strangers feel at home when they come to your town, and sustain public improvements, even if they do not benefit you at the present. Repair your sidewalks and your fences, trim your trees and paint your houses. The great thing is to employ some one to do something, if it only be to clean up around your dwelling, dig or plant gardens, plant trees; all these are attractive and enticing to the stranger. It is the duty of every citizen to assist in the building up of the town in which he lives. A steady and harmonious pull by all the citizens is what makes villages, towns and cites.

Subscribe for the Republican.

MINER SUFFERED INJURIES.

Adam Elliott Has Both Legs, One Arm and Two Ribs Broken.

Adam Elliott, aged about fifty years a miner living at Bloomington, this county, was caught by a fall of roof coal or rock in the mine in which he was employed last Friday and barely escaped instant death.

As it was Mr. Elliott was seriously, perhaps fatally, injured, but hopes for his recovery are entertained by his family and friends. He is now a patient in the Western Maryland Hospital at Cumberland where he is suffering from two broken legs, two fracture ribs and a broken arm, besides numerous cuts and bruises extending from his head to the soles of his feet.

MEMORIAL DAY IN OAKLAND.

Annual Decoration of the Graves of the Honored Dead.

Crook Post No. 35, Grand Army of the Republic, desires that there be a general turnout of the citizens, public school children, Knights of Pythias and all other organized bodies of the town, and visitors from the surrounding country are also invited to participate with the Post on Memorial Day, Monday, May 30th, in decorating the graves of the noble dead who have answered the last roll call and are now resting in our cemeteries.

Crook Post will assemble at Sturgiss' drug store at 10 o'clock a. m., and at 10.30 proceed to the cemetery where the beautiful ritual of the order will be carried out.

Donations of flowers will be thankfully received and can be left at Sturgiss' drug store.

By order of the Post,
A. G. STURGISS,
Commander.

J. A. HAYDEN,
Adjutant.

Memorial Services.

Memorial services will be held in the M. E. church Sunday morning, May 29, at 10:45 o'clock, to which all old soldiers are cordially invited. An appropriate sermon will be preached by the pastor and special music will be rendered by the choir.

Mrs R. A. Ravenscroft Ill.

Mrs. Jennie Ravenscroft, wife of Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, of Baltimore, was taken violently ill last Monday at her home in Baltimore and upon the advice of her physicians she was at once removed to the Maryland University Hospital where she is being attended by several physicians. For some years the lady has been an invalid and the sudden turn in her condition has caused her family and friends grave concern.

Returned from Hospital.

Mr. Urshel Taylor, who was so badly injured a number of months ago when he with other trackmen were run down by passenger train No. 55 at a point two miles west of Oakland, returned here yesterday afternoon from Miners' Hospital at Fairmont, West Va., where he has been ever since the accident occurred. Mr. Taylor's injuries as a result of the accident consisted of both legs being broken and his shoulder dislocated. At present he can walk with the aid of crutches. His return to his home in Oakland was celebrated by the Mountain City Band, of Mr. Taylor is a member, last night, when that organization serenaded him at his home on Ponnington street.

Had Arm Badly Crushed.

A young man named Mellott, residing at Hutton, was seriously injured last Saturday at Sang Run when a stallion he was leading reared, threw Mellot off his feet and he fell directly beneath the horse which trampled his left arm so badly that serious results are feared.

Artery Severed.

Mr. Harrison, who has been employed for some months in Mr. L. J. Brown's shop as a blacksmith, met with a serious accident Monday when a piece of steel he was working broke and punctured his forearm, severing the large artery. Mr. Harrison's arm bled profusely and it required the skill of a surgeon to staunch the flow of blood and close the wound.

Painfully Injured.

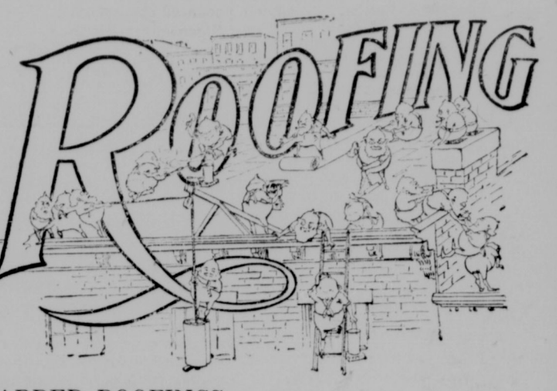
Joseph McKenzie, 21 years old, son of John McKenzie, of Garrett county, while cutting prop-timber in the woods above Midlothian Thursday had the tendons of one of his feet severely lacerated by a slip of the axe. He made a valiant effort to get to town for surgical aid, but fell by the wayside from weakness due to loss of blood. Dolph Dennison, a miner employed at Carlos, coming home in his buggy, found McKenzie in his weak and weakening condition, placed him in the buggy and took him home, where Dr. T. F. DeNaouley gave the needed surgical relief.—Frostburg Journal.

Property to Be Condemned.

A jury for the purpose of condemning a right of way through property owned by Messrs. Carney & Pendergast at Hutton which is wanted by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company for track purposes, is being summoned by Sheriff Shartzer to meet on the premses Tuesday of next week.

ESTABLISHED 1984.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have a variety of kinds and at any price.



TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

Summer Shopping

Remember how you loathed it when the thermometer was hovering around 90° last August—and don't forget that a hot summer is predicted for this year.

Use The Bell

If you haven't Bell Telephone service, subscribe at once.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company

D. P. DAVIS, Agent,
Keyser, W. Va.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be make to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 2, beginning for the same at a point about forty rods west of the McDermott house on the upper farm and running thence through the lands of James McDermott, William Umbel, Joseph Thomas and M. M. Thomas, a distance of about one and a quarter miles, to intersect the county road at the Pennsylvania State line near the gatehouse.

JOSEPH THOMAS,
W. M. UMBEL,
M. M. THOMAS, and 35 others.
6-4t

NOTICE CONCERNING WATER AND SEWER TAPS.

All persons are hereby notified not to make any tap to the water or sewer lines of the town of Oakland without first obtaining permission from the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland.

The ordinances of the town prohibit such interference with water and sewer lines and all persons violating the same will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Permission to tap both water and sewer pipes may be obtained from J. C. Dunham, clerk, upon application and payment of the proper charges.

By order,
6-3t The Mayor and Council of Oakland.

A COMPARISON.

"Some years ago I used

DAVIS 100 PER CENT PURE PAINT

on my home; at the same time several other houses near me were painted with OTHER paints. There is a big contrast between the appearance of my house and the others in favor of Davis.

J. H. PRUITT,
Chincoteague, Va."

For sale by J. M. Davis & Sons,
Oakland, Md.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, letters of administration on the estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof duly authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of October, 1910; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

MARY V. SPIKER,

Given under my hand this 12th day of April, 1910.

J. M. SPIKER,
Administrator,
Piedmont, W. Va.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof duly authenticated to the subscriber, on or before th 28th day of October, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

ELLA DAVIS,

Given under my hand this 28th day of April, 1910.

ANNIE WARNICK,
Administratrix,
Chaffee W. Va.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said road commencing at or near the mouth of Crabtree Creek on Savage River by crossing said river from West to East side and passing through the lands of the Lonaconing Coal & Iron Company, Oss Brothers and others to intersect the County Road near Bloomington, a distance of about four and one-half miles, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of June, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said locating of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

P. P. MCANDREWS
P. H. RODEHEAVER
GEO. W. BROADWATER
Examiners.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S DISCOURSE

The Overthrow of Satan's Empire

London, Eng., May 22.—Albert Memorial Hall was again crowded to hear Pastor Russell. The discourse, on "The Overthrow of Satan's Empire," was in the nature of a religious lecture. It was marked throughout by deepest reverence for the Bible, many of the passages of which shone out with a new meaning under the searchlight of his message. He asserted, and seemed to prove, the personality of Satan. But according to his showing it is a great mistake to suppose the Archenemy of mankind to be afar off stoking furnaces and torturing the dead. Instead, he is the cunning Deceiver who for centuries has been hoodwinking humanity, including the Church—putting darkness for light and light for darkness. God did not create him a devil. He became such by self-perversion through ambition. Originally his name was Lucifer—Morning Star. He beheld our first parents in Eden, noted their power to produce a race in their own likeness and coveted an empire with them as his subjects.

For six thousand years God has permitted Satan to exercise a measure of deceptive power over the race and to display to both angels and men the terrible results of sin, as exemplified in what the Apostle terms the "reign of sin and death," and the mental, moral and physical degradation resulting.

Satan has not been alone. Not only is he "the Prince of this world" or age, but additionally he is the "Prince of devils"—demons. The speaker showed from the Scriptures (Genesis vi; Jude 6) how these subordinate demons had once been holy angels, too—and when and where they sinned, and how.

"The Apostle Peter gives the key to the real solution of the matter when, in reciting the events connected with the flood, he tells us of the fall of the angels at that time, who 'in the days of Noah' 'kept not their first estate' (I Peter iii, 19, 20). Those angels who were permitted to have a measure of control of the fallen race, with a view to helping them as much as they might be able, and who, for the purpose of rendering such assistance to mankind, were permitted to appear in human form, became enamored of the human female, and preferred the human form to their own state as spirit beings. They thus left their original estate, as Jude also explains (Jude 6). These angels are the ones denominated 'the sons of God,' none of the human family being given that name after the fall. The angels who fell from their noble work and condition, and became groveling and sensual, manifested clearly in their own course the downward tendency of all transgressions of the divine law.

"The Apostles Peter and Jude clearly mark out the punishment visited upon those 'sons of God' who thus betrayed their trust and fell into sin, 'leaving their own habitation,' their own nature, and affiliating with the human nature. Their punishment has been their deprivation of all such liberties, and their separation from God and from the holy angels; and this restraint is called, by the Apostle, 'chains of darkness,' while the restrained ones themselves, instead of being recognized as 'sons of God,' or angels of light, were thenceforth known as 'angels of darkness,' 'demons,' 'wicked spirits.' Incidentally we remark that these are the 'spirits in prison' mentioned by Peter (I Peter iii, 19), and that although restricted as respects their powers of fellowship with the holy angels, and with mankind, being no longer privileged to appear as men, they still seek human fellowship, endeavoring to gain possession of human beings who yield up their wills, and who are then said to be possessed of devils or 'obsessed.' It is but a preliminary step toward thus getting possession of the individual that these wicked spirits appeal to humanity to become their mediums (spirit mediums), through whom they to some extent communicate. And they personate dead human beings, because they know well that humanity would shun them and fear them if their real identity were discovered.

"Satan and his subordinates have maintained a system of human deception," the speaker declared, and it must be confessed that he gave Biblical proofs for his every claim. He asserted that the communications believed by Spiritualists—Dr. Funk, Prof. Hyslop, Editor Stead and others—to be communications from the dead, are really deceptive communications from these fallen angels. So far from claiming that these professors and mediums practice deception, his claim is that they themselves are deceived and are unintentionally leading others onward into a terrible Spiritualistic maelstrom, which, he declares, we are nearing, according to the Bible. He warned against hypnotism, mind cures, etc., practiced by well-meaning but deceived physicians, ministers and others. He declared that all these tended to break down the human will, the God-given barrier and defense of mankind against the encroachments of these fallen angels, who seek continually to intrude themselves into the mind, thoughts and will of men. He warned all against occult influences of every kind, urging that the human will should be preserved and should be submitted only to the Almighty, and to him only—intelligently in accordance with his instructions in the Bible.

Overthrow of Satan's Empire.

"Satan, through false doctrines—'doctrines of devils,' has entrenched himself in the superstitions and prejudices, not only of the heathen, but also of the civilized. The creeds of the Dark Ages evidenced the fact that he had much to do with their formulation. His false doctrines, antagonistic to the Bible, have been palmed off upon us as veritable Bible truths—just as Satan endeavored to twist and misapply the Bible to Jesus in his wilderness temptation (Mark i, 13). Thus Satan has caused gross darkness to cover the heathen and considerable darkness to cover the civilized earth. But we are in the morning of the New Dispensation, which is to bring so much blessing to the world of mankind in the opening of the eyes of man's understanding, and in physical blessings and comforts. As a result we have the wonderful conveniences and appliances of steam and electricity, the printing press and the electric light, as instead of the tallow candle and quill pen of the past. 'Whatsoever doth make manifest is light;' and special light is due also at this time to God's consecrated people. The illumination now granted to the eyes of our understanding as Christians, through Bible study helps, is intended to be for the Christian what the arc-light is in nature.

"Man's subserviency to Satan is an unwilling captivity. Even those who realize their bondage do not generally recognize by whom they have been enslaved. But gradually the bonds are breaking as we near the time of Satan's overthrow. According to the Bible our Lord at his Second Advent will bind the Adversary for a thousand years that he may deceive mankind no more. Meantime all the blessed influences of light and Truth and grace will be let loose in the world and as a result, 'the knowledge of the glory of God shall fill the whole earth.' Instead of the darkness of the night of sin and death there will be the 'morning of joy,' and gladness and restitution and blessing. 'The sun of righteousness will arise with healing in his beams.' Of that glorious day Saint Peter spoke, saying, 'Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send Jesus Christ, who before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must retain until the Times of Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began' (Acts iii, 19-21). Satan's destruction, according to the Bible, will not be consummated until after the MILLENNIAL KINGDOM OF CHRIST shall have accomplished its glorious work of uplifting humanity out of sin and death conditions to full human perfection and the image of God. All the unwilling and disobedient will be counted as servants of Satan and will, with him, be destroyed in the Second Death—extinction—from which there will be no redemption or recovery.

Great Missionary Work.

"The missionary work of blessing and uplifting 'all the families of the earth' is appointed of God for the Millennial Kingdom—and, thank God, the evidences are that it is very near, yea, in a sense, already beginning. Its blessings are intimated by the wonderful progress of our day. Everything waits until the predetermined number of Missionaries shall have been called and schooled and tested and found worthy of the great and honorable work. The qualification is that each must be a 'copy of God's dear Son'—so far as heart intention is concerned. Then these Missionaries will be glorified like their Lord, on the spirit plane and with him they will constitute the 'Kingdom of God's dear Son,' which for a thousand years will bless the world and bring to pass all that the Lord our God has spoken, and more than we could have asked or thought.

"Christian people have no need to upbraid themselves on the score that the missionary efforts of eighteen centuries have accomplished comparatively little. They have no need to be discouraged with the fact that the census returns show that in the past century of the greatest missionary endeavor the proportionate numbers of the heathen have doubled (six hundred millions a century ago—twelve hundred millions today). This is all as God foreknew and intended. God did not purpose the conversion of the heathen during this age, but commissioned his people to preach his Gospel to every nation for a witness, that the Elect Missionaries for the future work might be gathered from every country, people and tongue. God's will has been done. The Adversary temporarily misled the Church into a misunderstanding of her mission. He sought to have us lower our standard of saintship, in order to increase the Church far and near. He sought to oppose the Divine will by lowering the standards of saintship so as to include the masses of mankind. He thus worked against Divine arrangements. But he has not succeeded. God has merely allowed him to prove, test, separate and manifest the saints—the 'very elect.'

A Great Time of Trouble.

"The coming of the light, the loosing of the fetters of ignorance and superstition from the minds that are not submitted to God, the Scriptures show us, will result in a great time of trouble, in which the passions of men but partially enlightened will do great violence to the entire social fabric. We see the preliminary steps already being taken, and, in the light of the Scriptures, we see the awful catastrophe which will result. The world is rapidly resolving itself into two mighty powers, selfishly and with semi-enlightenment, preparing for a headlong collision which will mean wreck and ruin, tribulation and anguish, to practically the whole world. The Bible, in calling attention to this great time of trouble, warns the people of God, so far as possible to avoid both sides of the controversy, saying, 'Seek meekness; seek righteousness, it may be that ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger' (Zephaniah ii, 3). With the wreck of present institutions comes the end of Satan's regime. So terrible will be the heat of passion and strife engendered at that time that the Scriptures declare that if it were not for the 'Elect' there would be no flesh saved (Mark xiii, 20). The interposition of the Elect as the Kingdom of God under Jesus, the great King and Head of the Elect, is the silver lining to that dark cloud. The moment of man's extremity will become the moment of God's opportunity.

"So terrible will be that time of trouble that the Scriptures symbolically represent it as a whirlwind; as a flood; and as a fire. Some have mis-interpreted these Scriptures and are expecting a literal burning of the earth, but the Lord denominates it the 'fire of his jealousy,' which will devour Society. And then he tells us that following the fire of trouble he 'will turn to the people a pure message that they may all call upon the name of the Lord to serve him with one consent' (Zephaniah iii, 9). Satan has had much to do with corrupting the message originally given to the Church by Jesus and the Apostles. The jarring creeds have made discordant sounds which have driven many noble and logical hearts away from the Bible. God's assurance is that the completion of the Church is near; that her change to the heavenly glory in 'the First Resurrection' will soon be accomplished and that then the reign of SIN and DEATH will end under the Kingdom of Jesus. Then the bondage of the world to ignorance, superstition, etc., will terminate; then 'all the blind eyes will be opened and all the deaf ears will be unstopped' and the Lord's pure message of Divine Justice, Divine Love, Divine Wisdom and Divine Power exerted on man's behalf shall be made known to every creature.

"Fellow-Christians, what an incentive to become more and more loyal and earnest as the servants of so great and gracious a Sovereignty—that of our Father and our Redeemer! And what an incentive we have to seek first, in preference to all earthly interests, a share with our Savior in his Millennial Kingdom and its gracious work of human uplift—from the depths of sin and degradation to the heights of earthly perfection and eternal life! Let us, as the Apostle exhorts, 'lay aside every weight, and the sin that does so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race set before us' (Hebrews xii, 1). This race is for the 'crown of glory,' as members of the Elect Missionary Church and for the glorious opportunities then to be afforded for the realization of the most glorious dreams of service for the King of kings and Lord of lords.

"We cannot suppose that Satan's Empire is entirely satisfactory to himself. Undoubtedly his original thought was the organization of a realm resembling that of the Almighty. But the course of sin is ever downward. To obtain control of our first parents they were misled into steps of disobedience—sin—and the Adversary himself, having started upon the wrong course, can maintain his own standing and kingdom only by determined opposition to Jehovah. This is the significance of the name given him in the Scriptures—'Adversary.'

"The Scriptures set forth that all humanity must, either now or some time, come to the point of decision between obedience to God and disobedience. The obedient will be guided back to ultimate harmony with the Creator and obtain the reward of life eternal. On the contrary, the disobedient, the wilfully rebellious against God and his righteous arrangement, taking the course of Satan, will ultimately share his fate—destruction.

"Responsibility and the decision as to life eternal and death eternal, come to each member of Adam's race as soon as he is brought into a clear knowledge of the Truth. This privilege of coming to a knowledge of the Truth, the opportunity of eternal salvation, is secured to all the families of the earth, to Adam and every member of his race, through the great Redeemer's sacrifice finished at Calvary. While thanking God for the length and breadth and height and depth of his glorious provision for the world in general, we who now hear this message and heed it have the special blessing and opportunity of joint-heirship with Jesus the Redeemer in his great work of the Millennial Age. Let us not only accept the Divine favor, but let us run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and the one who shall be the Finisher of our faith, seeking for needed aid to make our calling and election sure!"

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson IX.—Second Quarter, For May 29, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xiv, 13-21; xv, 29-39—Memory Verses, 19, 20. Golden Text, John vi, 35—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

In this lesson we are asked to consider two great miracles, which our Lord speaks of as "the five loaves of the 5,000 and the seven loaves of the 4,000" (Matt. xvi, 9, 10) on one occasion when He rebuked the disciples for their lack of faith. The former is recorded by each of the four evangelists and is the only miracle recorded by the four, while the latter is recorded only by Matthew and Mark. In each case Jesus had compassion upon the multitudes because of their hunger, and He abundantly supplied their need by miraculously increasing a very small quantity of food. When we consider who it was who did this and how He had fed millions for many years with bread from heaven and had brought water from a rock for them, how He had cared for Elijah by the ravens and multiplied the widow's meal and oil and made twenty loaves suffice for 100 men, there is nothing remarkable in His doing this great thing, for His very name is "Wonderful." If we consider the first miracle, the 5,000 fed, we shall, I think, cover the other also. The apostles had gathered to Jesus and had told Him all that they had done and taught, and He had taken them aside to rest awhile, for there were so many coming and going that they had no leisure even to eat. (I am considering the lesson with a harmony of the gospels before me. The student of the lesson should do the same.)

It is said by John that the multitudes followed Him because they saw His miracles which He did on them that were diseased. Whatever their motive was, He took advantage of their gathering to speak to them of the kingdom of God and to heal them that had need of healing (John vi, 2; Luke, ix, 11).

He was ever speaking of the kingdom and setting forth by word and deed the nature of it. If we were more like Him in this respect it would be better. When the day was far spent His disciples urged Him to send the multitudes away that they might go into the villages roundabout and buy themselves bread, but He said what must have sounded very strange, "They need not depart; give ye them to eat." I believe that is still His message to all who have the bread of life. There is in church work today an Andrew and Philip brotherhood, and if they are doing as Andrew and Philip did in John i, bringing men to Jesus, it is well, but in John vi, in connection with our lesson, we need to take warning and not example from Philip and Andrew, for the first figured as to how he thought the thousands might be fed, and Andrew seems almost to ask pardon for mentioning such a trifle as the presence of a lad with five loaves and two small fishes. They both seemed utterly to forget who Jesus was. They remind us of the mountain, or the day of small things, of Zach. iv, 7, 10, forgetting verse 6 and its teaching, that in the work of the Lord all must be accomplished not by might nor power of man, but by the Spirit of the Lord.

When Jesus heard of the lad's loaves and fishes He said, "Bring them hither to Me." Now, that is the one only thing to do always—put ourselves and just what we are or have wholly and unreservedly into His hands, remembering that He always knows what He will do, and when His time comes to act we may hear Him say, "Now shalt thou see what I will do" (John vi, 6; Ex. vi, 1). It is never a question of who we are or what we have or can do, but only who is He, and what can He do. To say or think "Can God do this?" is to speak against Him.

Jesus took the loaves and fishes and gave thanks, looking up to heaven, and, having blessed the food, He brake it and gave it to the disciples, and by them to the multitude, and all did eat as much as they would and were filled, and there remained over and above all that was needed twelve baskets full of the fragments, one for each of the twelve apostles, and the 5,000 men, besides women and children, had been filled, a multitude satisfied and the laborers twelve baskets richer than when they started. Which was better—to send them away or give them to eat? The disciples had nothing to start with, but see the abundance they had at the close. Some one has said that this particular miracle was the result of one little boy's giving all he had to Jesus. What a story that lad would have to tell his mother when he returned home of the wonders wrought by Jesus with her loaves and fishes, and how strangely joyful he must have felt to see such a multitude so fed and filled with what he had given up! Surely he must have become a devoted follower of Jesus. How we would like to know the rest of his story! I believe I am greatly indebted to him for the way the Lord has graciously used me in Bible class and missions for over twenty years. Although I had then and have now a very small church, with a comparatively small salary, when you study this lesson I shall have received and passed on to missions in twenty-one years over half a million of dollars without personal solicitation from any one. It is the Lord's doing.

PUBLIC WILL BEAR BURDEN

Experts Figure On What People Will Lose.

Some of the experts of the Interstate Commerce Commission tried recently to figure out how much the railroads are going to "soak" the public by the increased rates on passengers and freight of which notice has been given and which the roads declare to be necessary because of the "increased wages they are paying their men and the higher cost of materials."

Beyond reaching the general conclusion that the roads will fully reimburse themselves with a wide margin of increased profit, making the public bear the burden, the experts were unable to reach a definite decision.

The complexity of the question is so great, with the multitudinous rates involved by the uncertainty as to the amount of traffic that may be expected to proceed at any one figure, it is impossible to arrive at an accurate estimate. It has been calculated by the railroads themselves that their payrolls will be increased by advances already promised by $50,000,000 a year. Other contemplated increases, it is said, will bring the total up to about $90,000,000.

The increased freight rates announced range from 30 to 8 per cent., the larger advances being made upon the higher classes of goods and luxuries.

The gross earnings for the year ended June 30, 1907, of the three great routes of railroads operating in the territory east of the Indiana and Illinois state lines and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers, amounted to $1,107,437,168.

On this basis if the increases in rates only amount to 10 per cent. on the average, the roads, after paying out $90,000,000 in increased wages, would still have a margin of $17,000,000 to meet other increased expenses and the cost of living.

FOR RENT—After May 1st, a 6-room cottage, with stable on lot. Kitchen and one bedroom furnished if desired; apply at this office.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

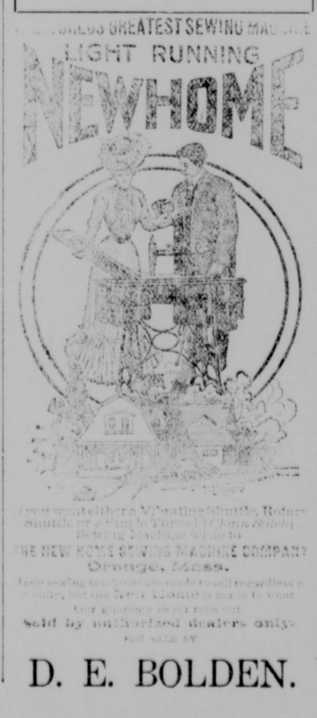
Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out. The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building.
Oakland, Maryland.



D. E. BOLDEN.

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m.

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST,
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-ly.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

* Daily. † Daily except Sunday. § Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m., Arrive *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p. m., *11.54 p. m.

For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.

For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.

For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.

For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.33 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.

For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m.

For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST. LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.33 p. m., *10.26 p.m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p m

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS!

This is to notify the taxpayers of Garrett county that the Annual Levy for 1910 has been made and published, and to call their attention to the following abstract Section 45, Chapter 566, Acts of 1880, relating to the discount to be allowed and the interest to be charged on all tax bills.

"All county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of the levy thereof, and on all county taxes paid on or before the 1st day of September a discount of 3 per cent. will be allowed and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the tax bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt given for taxes so paid. But the discount shall not be allowed unless the whole amount of state and county taxes are paid when same is made.

R. L. FRIES, Treasurer.

Notice to The Public.

I have taken charge of the Fresh Meat Department of Creutzburg's store where I can furnish my trade with the best Fresh Meats at all times, and solicit a share of your patronage. Everything clean and up-to-date.

Farmers, bring your calves, mutton, lambs and beef and get the highest cash prices for them.

Yours to please,
HENRY SMOUSE.
The Up-to-Date Market.

Thirty Reasons For Using Electric Light

1 Safe
2 Clean
3 Bright
4 Odorless
5 Dirtless
6 Greaseless
7 Sootless
8 Fumeless
9 Flameless
10 Matchless
11 Healthful
12 Convenient
13 Explosionless
14 Draws Trade
15 Helps Advertise
16 Signifies Success
17 White Light
18 Steady Light
19 Always Ready
20 Makes Home Attractive
21 Welcomes Friends
22 Frightens Thieves
23 Brightens Everything
24 Can Be Used Anywhere
25 Saves Labor
26 Permits Better Work
27 Consumes No Oxygen
28 Is a Cheap Luxury
29 Is Better Than Ever
30 Is Cheaper Than Ever

The Oakland Electric Company

WATCH OAKLAND GROW.

A Modern City on the Crest of the Alleghany Mountains.

Oakland, the county seat of Garrett county, Maryland, is situated in a magnificent farming country. Agriculture being the true basis of all continued prosperity, this industry alone could support a city or several thousand people, where most crops of the temperate zone are produced and where total failures are wholly unknown. In addition to the staple crops of wheat, oats, corn, rye, potatoes, buckwheat, maple sugar, hay, etc., this section is a great apple country, and many varieties of fruits, berries and vegetables grow with little attention.

Yet, these are by no means all the advantages nature has so prodigally bestowed upon this community. Right at our doors are rich deposits of coal, kaolin, pure glass sand, fire and potters' clay, an inexhaustible supply of brick and tile shale, abundant supply of natural gas for lighting, heating and manufacturing purposes, the purest water on earth, a great supply of water power only waiting harness to illuminate this mountain top, and supply factories and electric railways with power.

Oakland is situated in the center of a plateau twenty by sixty miles in extent, two thousand eight hundred feet above the sea, where it is never too hot for comfort and never too cold for convenience; America's ideal summer resort; America's greatest health resort; where we sleep under two or more blankets all summer long and you, who reside in the lowlands or large centers of population, are sweltering with the heat and breathing humid, unhealthy and poisoned air. Here the drives are grand in prospect and glorious in nature's garb; where some new scene greets the vision at every turn of the road. $238,000.00 is being spent on State highways radiating from Oakland.

Come to Western Maryland, young man, and grow up with the country. If you prefer to invest in agricultural lands or fruit lands, you will find prices ranging from five to fifty dollars per acre, depending upon location and improvements. These are attractive investments without risk of loss. We also invite factories and industries of all kinds, and believe that this location offers the best advantages on account of the abundance of raw material, cheap fuel and accessibility to market.

When you consider that right here, within six hours of the Nation's capital, is a country with almost unbounded resources, with a variety of everything: Water Works, Sewerage, Natural Gas, a healthy climate, where hay fever and many ills to which the human race is heir in less favored climes, is entirely unknown; a land of pure and abundant water, a land of churches and schools, without any race or other vexatious problems, and where the small investor along with the man of more pretentious capital has opportunities commensurate with his pluck, intelligence and energy, of an equal start in life, then you will readily concede the importance and correctness of the advice given herein.

"The Creator is still making people, but no more land." "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, if taken at the flood, leads on to fortune and fame."

Don't miss the opportunity of a lifetime and regret it for years to come. "A word to the wise is sufficient." Oakland is on the boom, and you should get on the band wagon if you wish to be in the procession.

For further information, call on the Secretary of the Board of Trade, Oakland, Md.

OPERA HOUSE

School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,

Opera House. OAKLAND, MD.

Creutzsburg's

MARKET

Go to the only up-to-date

Grocery and Meat Market

in Garrett county for Staple and Fancy Groceries, leading brands of Canned Fruits and Vegetables, fresh Fruits and Vegetables of all kinds.

All kinds of FRESH and CURED MEATS, Western and Domestic, at the lowest possible prices for first-class goods—the only kind we handle.

Our refrigerator is always sanitary and ready for your inspection.

Farmers, bring your BEEF, SHEEP, LAMBS, VEAL, and get the highest spot cash prices for them.

H. CREUTZBURG, Prop'r.

THE SPORTING WORLD

Wolgast a Hard Nut.

When Bat Nelson tackles Ad Wolgast in Los Angeles Feb. 22 he will have the hardest battle on his hands he has had since he fought Joe Gans. In fact, in many quarters Wolgast is picked to put the finishing touches on the Dane. "The Milwaukee Whirlwind" is a walloper from Wallopville and is clever to a certain extent. His recent easy victory over Lew Powell, the Pacific coast champion, gained him a number of new admirers. Wolgast is at the beginning of his career, while Nelson undoubtedly is losing much of his power. He cannot go on forever, and it is natural that the turning point will come soon. In a young opponent of the strength and skill of Wolgast the Dane may meet his master.

AD WOLGAST.

Jockey Taral Gives Promise.

"A chip of the old block"—that in every way describes Johnny Taral, one of the newest crop of jockeys now riding at the Moncrief park track at Jacksonville, Fla. When the boy's name is posted on the jockey board old timers must recall the days when his father, Fred Taral, was winning stake after stake and running into the reputation of being one of the best riders this country ever produced.

When Fred retired after more than a score of years in the saddle it was thought that the name of Taral would be lost to the turf for all time. There was but one who could bid to uphold the name, and that was Johnny. True, the boy had already done some riding, but his father desired to have him quit it.

He tried to set the boy studying law, and Johnny was an obedient lad for awhile. He got along fairly well for a time, but when the truth of that old saying "What's bred in the bone will come out in the flesh" asserted itself back to the ponies went Master Johnny. He hit the trail for Jacksonville, and there he is now trying to start a record that will compare favorably with that of his daddy.

Safeguard Hammer Throw.

Officers of the Amateur Athletic union have announced the adoption of a new rule in relation to the official hammer throwing events. The rule is designed to make the event less dangerous and is as follows: The head shall be a metal sphere, and the handle shall be made of wire. Such wire must be of best grade spring steel wire not less than one-eighth of an inch in diameter. If a loose grip is used it must be of rigid construction. The length of the complete implement shall not be more than four feet and its weight not less than sixteen pounds.

Lunghi Wants to Break Records.

That Emilio Lunghi, the great Italian middle distance runner, is a man of contradictions is evident from the fact that Lunghi has written an Italian friend in New York that he has no intention of joining the Italian army, but will continue "his studies" in Genoa. Lunghi has an idea that he can smash the existing world's record for 400 meters and will train from now until next March in preparation for the attempt. After that Lunghi will run handicaps to keep himself in trim until the international games to be held in Turin, Italy, early in 1911.

Football Pays Wolverenes.

According to the financial report made at the meeting of the Michigan Athletic association, football during the last season netted a profit of approximately $22,000, being the only major sport which paid for itself.

Baseball lost nearly $1,000, while the track showed a deficit of more than double that amount. Owing to the financially successful football season the athletic association treasury now contains a balance of $21,541.11.

English Polo Players Coming.

Hugh Drury of the New Haven (Conn.) Polo club is securing ponies to be used by the English polo players who are coming to this country to play at Lakewood, N. Y., early in March. These contests will be preliminary to the international championship games to be played in this country next summer. The American team will be chosen from many well known players to meet the Englishmen at Lakewood.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Worcestershire Sauce.

Measure a quart of the best white wine vinegar, add six ounces sugar and stand over the fire, stirring occasionally until dissolved. Take from the fire and add four tablespoonfuls each Indian soy and walnut catchup, two teaspoonfuls cayenne pepper, one tablespoonful salt, two nutmegs broken into bits, two dozen cloves, a teaspoonful ground ginger, the peel of a lemon and six cloves of garlic. Pour in a wide mouthed bottle and let stand a month, shaking it well every morning. At the end of the month pour off the sauce and gently strain it through a piece of cheesecloth. Pour into small bottles and seal.

Cucumber Catchup.

Peel and chop fine three dozen cucumbers and four large onions. Add three-fourths of a cup of salt and after mixing turn into a cloth spread over a colander and let stand overnight to drain. In the morning add to the vegetables a half cupful of black mustard seed and two tablespoonfuls of black peppercorns. Mix thoroughly and pack into jars, filling half full. Turn over the pickle enough vinegar that has been boiled and cooled to fill the jars, stirring so that the vinegar penetrates to every portion. Cover tightly and keep in a cool, dark place.

Lemon Ginger Punch.

Plain lemonade may be metamorphosed into lemon ginger punch by adding to each quart of lemonade an equal amount of ginger ale. Have ready also a number of sprays of fresh mint and bruise the lower leaves and stems between the fingers so as to bring out the mint flavor. Put these into the punch a half hour before serving. This is particularly popular at afternoon teas, piazza or roof parties or any social function where men are represented.

Macaroni and Oysters.

Boil the macaroni in salted water till very tender; arrange in a shallow dish one layer an inch thick; season with salt and pepper; add half a pint of small drained oysters; make a cup of thick white sauce, using the oyster liquor for part, and pour over half of this; put on a second thin layer of macaroni and seasoning and spread the white sauce over the top; sprinkle with sifted breadcrumbs and dot with butter and bake brown.

Improved Steam Cooker.

By a very simple improvement in the familiar cooker it is claimed that the preparation of food is greatly facilitated. The cooker consists of two pans, one nested within the other, and the improvement referred to lies simply in the making of a number of perforations along the edge of the inner receptacle, which is the one designed to contain the food to be treated. The lid fits over both pans in such a way that the steam from the water in the lower receptacle passes up to the interior of the chamber containing the food. Because of the additional heat the cooking is accomplished in less time, and the moisture supplied by the steam prevents the food from becoming too dry.

FOOD IS COOKED BY STEAM.

Baked Bread and Cheese.

Butter well a pudding dish, put in small, rather thin slices of bread to cover the bottom and add very thin slices to cover this of soft American cheese; sprinkle with a good deal of salt, a pinch of cayenne and a pinch of baking soda and repeat till the dish is full; pour on milk to barely cover and set in a hot oven for about half an hour, when it will be puffy and brown. Serve at once.

To Scent Bed Linen.

Dried lavender placed in the pillowcases gives a pleasing scent to the linen. Lavender leaves may be used for many months, because the fragrance is lasting, and if one prefers a faint odor the leaves may be placed on the shelves or in the drawers of the linen press. Broken orris root is more satisfactory than the powdered when the contents of trunks or drawers are to be scented.

Waterproof Cloth.

Take half a pound of sugar of lead (poison) and half a pound of alum. Stir at intervals till it is clear. Pour off in another pail and put in garment and let it stay for twenty-four hours. Take out garment and hang on line without wringing.

To Bleach Ivory.

Wash ivory in soap and water, pour cold water over the pieces and place them in the hot sunshine, as it tends to bleach it.

CARE OF SHOWCASES.

How to Prevent Breakage and Clean the Plate Glass.

The position of a showcase has sometimes a great deal to do with breakage, and cases must always be set level or there is an uneven strain on some part of the case, which is liable to cause a break at any time, and when the case is not setting on a level foundation the doors will not close properly and tightly.

Particularly is this the case with the all glass showcase now so deservedly popular, although there is one style now made that is fastened together with patent corner clamps without holes in the glass that is practically unbreakable through this cause, as the corners permit of a certain amount of movement when the case is not level, but it is a general rule that all cases must set perfectly level.

Again, beware of the all glass case that is fastened together by metal bolts through holes in the glass, as if it is placed near a radiator or register it is almost sure to break through any sudden heat or cold owing to the unequal expansion of the glass, which brings the bolt in contact with it and precipitates a crack. Here again the corner clamp is better, as it allows a certain amount of movement, as stated before.

If a crack does happen in plate glass from whatever cause it is possible to prevent its spreading in some cases by cutting a small, short scratch with a glazier's diamond directly at right angles to the crack.

Glass should always be handled with care, and when shelves of plate glass are taken from a showcase to clean they should always be carried on edge and rested against a wall in the same manner.

To clean plate glass use the old familiar mixture of liquid ammonia, one ounce; alcohol, one ounce; whiting, one ounce, and water to make one pint. Rub on glass with a sponge, and when dry rub off and polish with a soft cloth or chamois.

STOPPING A MOTORCAR.

How to Do It Safely and Without Straining the Machine.

"Never do anything suddenly with an automobile," writes an experienced driver. "Only so can wear and tear on the car be minimized, not to mention accidents. Suppose you are confronted with the necessity for a sudden stop. Your amateur impulse will be to jam down the clutch pedal, grip the emergency brake lever and clamp the wheels into cessation of their revolution.

"The motor, thus relieved of its load, will begin to race, the fly wheel will spin around with increasing velocity, and you are lucky if, especially on wet asphalt, your car does not skid around like a top, hit the curb and turn turtle with you underneath. The wear of this sort of stop on the tires should be a sufficient consideration for you to refrain from cultivating it.

"If, on the other hand, you first close the throttle, then throw out the clutch and apply the brake just hard enough to allow the wheels barely to revolve, your car will come to a safer, speedier stop without strain. The motions to accomplish this must of course be practically simultaneous, but they are no more difficult than those required for the wrong sort of stop. Once at rest, you open the throttle instantly and advance the spark if necessary to start the engine. The clutch can then be thrown in gradually when you wish to advance."—Outing Magazine.

How to Take Care of a Piano.

Temperature is one of the most important points to be considered in keeping a piano in good condition. Extreme heat or cold or drafts are as fatal to the health of the piano as to that of a human being, therefore it should never be placed too near a fire or a window. The best place to choose is a part of the room which is out of a draft and where a fairly even temperature is maintained. The piano should always be kept closed, to prevent dust from entering, and even then it ought to be covered up while the room is being swept. To clean the case never use furniture polish. A wash leather wrung out in warm water is the best thing. The keys should never be washed, as that discolors the ivory. If they are stained rub the stains out with a little lemon juice and salt. It spoils the keys to lift them up when dusting.

How to Protect Hardwood Floors.

When the sewing machine casters are of metal they will make a mark on matting and sometimes on hardwood floors, but this may easily be obviated by making small bags of canton flannel—a dark color is less noticeable—which can be sewed over the casters, leaving room enough for them to roll easily and still protect the matting from the usual unsightly marks. The bags should be neatly made and caught firmly to the legs of the machine.

How to Make an Excellent Liniment.

A liniment that is excellent to keep on hand for sprains, bruises and colds can be easily made at home. Mix two ounces each of chloroform, ammonia, spirits of camphor and sweet oil. Shake it well and bottle, corking tightly. After rubbing the liniment well into the skin wrap the affected parts with flannel.

How to Save Scorched Food.

When food has been scorched remove the pan from the fire and set into a pan of cold water. Lay a dish towel over the pan. The towel will absorb all the scorch taste sent up by the steam, and the family need never know it was burned.

A STRANGE CONTEST.

How a Mother Prevented Her Son From Being Killed In a Duel.

By LEONARD MULLOY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

In Louisiana about the middle of the last century there lived on a plantation left her by her husband a Mrs. Stewart with one son. She had been married at sixteen, and at thirty-six, when this boy, Fitz Hugh Stewart, was nineteen years old, she was a very young looking and still handsome woman. Indeed, the boy appeared more like her younger brother than her son. The two were devoted to each other.

One day there appeared in the parish where the Stewarts lived Pinkton Forshay, a man about forty years old, who gave out that he was intending to settle there for the purpose of practicing law. Forshay was a typical southerner of antebellum days—long hair, sombrero, tight trousers and a flowing skirt to his coat. He purported to have sprung from one of the oldest and best families of South Carolina and was quite free in small expenditures, such as wines, liquors, cigars, etc. Nevertheless he had little or no means, and it was his object to acquire a foothold in the community by making a profitable marriage.

Forshay and Fitz Hugh Stewart met at the house of a planter, and Fitz Hugh invited him to visit at the Stewart home. Forshay called and at once determined to make every effort to marry the widow. Expecting that the son would oppose his mother marrying a second time, he was very adroit about his courtship, concealing his intention from Fitz Hugh.

FORSHAY RECOGNIZED HER.

He proposed to Mrs. Stewart and was rejected. He proposed again and again received a refusal. Determined to force his way into the Stewart family and an interest in their possessions, he persisted in his proposals till he was at last treated by the widow with the severity he merited.

Mrs. Stewart, fearing to make trouble between her son and her suitor, kept the matter of his proposals to herself. Young Stewart noticed that Forshay came no more to the house, but thought little of his remaining away. Mrs. Stewart seldom joined in the social affairs in vogue among her neighbors, but her son did and was constantly meeting Forshay. But Fitz Hugh noticed that Forshay's manner toward him had changed. What had been an effusive friendliness had become a marked antagonism.

One evening at a social gathering of men Stewart made a remark which brought a sneer from Forshay. This was followed up by other overt acts plain to every one present. Stewart, fancying that his mother might have something to do with this treatment and dreading to have her name discussed, bore all patiently till Forshay made a remark to him that was positively insulting, when he replied in kind. Forshay slapped his face. The boy did not proceed further with the matter at the time, but when he went home apprised his mother of what had occurred.

This was at a time when the code duello was in vogue in Louisiana. Mrs. Stewart saw that a great misfortune had befallen herself and her son. If Fitz Hugh did not challenge Forshay he would be cut by all his acquaintances. If he did challenge him Forshay would doubtless kill him. In fact, the widow saw in this treatment of her son a spirit of revenge that was directed toward herself. She lay awake all night thinking over the matter and in the morning told Fitz Hugh that he must challenge Forshay.

A friend of the Stewart family, Walter Langstaff, was called in and requested to act as Fitz Hugh's second. He gave the information that Forshay had fought several duels and was a dead shot. Mrs. Stewart did not wince at this, maintaining her position that her son must send the challenge. Before Langstaff went with it to Forshay the mother instructed him as to the terms he should insist upon. The meeting must take place in some secluded spot, only a second for each principal and a surgeon should be present and Fitz Hugh Stewart should be permitted to fight masked.

If Langstaff were to be required to give a reason for this singular provision he should say that Stewart was heir to property which he would forfeit if it could be proved that he had fought a duel. And the reason for this singular bequest was that the testator, Fitz Hugh's aunt, had lost her husband on the field of honor. Whether this were a trumped up reason or not never came out.

Langstaff bore the challenge and, returning, reported that Forshay only objected to his antagonist fighting masked. Langstaff had told him that if he did not consent to this he would call the affair off and make public the reason. Upon this Forshay gave way, and, having the right as the challenged party to choose the weapons, he chose pistols. Langstaff was sent back to say that the distance must be five paces. Forshay, thinking this was a bluff, consented. He doubtless expected after this to receive an apology. If this were so he was to be disappointed.

Fitz Hugh was not a party to these details, they having been attended to by Langstaff under instructions from Mrs. Stewart. The youngster had got an inkling as to the real cause underlying the affair, and his southern blood was hot for the meeting. His mother remained tranquil, neither attempting to encourage nor quiet him.

The night before the duel was to come off Mrs. Forshay after her son was in bed went into his room to bid him goodby.

"Why, mother," he said, "won't you be up when I leave in the morning?"

"Yes, dear boy; I'll be up before you, but I prefer to say goodby to you in case we are separated by this villain now. But first I wish you to take something to give you a good night's sleep. All depends on a steady nerve, and since you were a little boy loss of sleep has made you nervous the following day."

After much persuasion Fitz Hugh took the dose she offered him. She held him a long while in her arms, then, giving him the farewell kiss, left him.

At 3 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Stewart arose, went into her son's room and put on the clothes he had laid out to wear in the duel—all black. Then she kissed him—she did not fear to awaken him, for she had given him an opiate—and went to the door to meet Langstaff, who was riding up to the house. Entering the carriage, she was driven to the field where Forshay and his second, with a surgeon, stood waiting.

Instead of a mask Mrs. Stewart wore a blue veil, covering her face to the chin and tied behind, so as to conceal her long hair. Langstaff, who was desirous to save one whom he supposed to be his young friend, Fitz Hugh, approached Forshay's second with a proposition for settlement that would clear all parties from any stigma. Forshay declined to accept it.

"Very well," said Langstaff; "if you are determined to kill this boy I promise you that you will have to go back to the state you came from, for you will not be welcome here."

When Forshay was convinced that the five paces which were to separate the combatants was not a bluff he made a protest through his second, insisting that fighting at such a distance was murder or suicide. Langstaff reported the matter to his principal, who said firmly that they would fight at five paces or not at all. Forshay reluctantly consented—indeed, he must either consent or be branded as a coward. This close range was intended by Mrs. Stewart to prevent the meeting if that were possible, but if Forshay was not thus to be driven off the field she had no idea of the contest being given up and had another motive in being close to her antagonist.

The two seconds stood together on one side and equidistant from the principals, Langstaff holding a handkerchief. He raised it and held it suspended for a few seconds prior to giving the signal by dropping it. During this brief interval Mrs. Stewart raised her left hand and lifted her veil, exposing her face on that side which was farthest from the seconds. Forshay recognized her and changed color. Before he could determine what action if any to take the handkerchief floated down from Langstaff's hand. Forshay sprang up on his toes and fell dead with a bullet in his heart.

Mrs. Stewart walked with a firm step to her carriage and was driven toward her home, Walter Langstaff beside her. For a few minutes she lay back in the corner of the carriage, then, turning her face toward Langstaff, raised her veil.

"Great heavens!"

There was silence between the two for a time; then Langstaff asked:

"Why did you do this?"

"It was the only way to save my boy."

"But was it necessary to kill your enemy?"

"Yes; after my expedient of insisting on close range failed I must kill him."

"Why?"

"If I had not the affair would have gone on till one of the two had killed the other, and my son would have been the one to die. As it is he will consider himself demeaned that his mother should have done the work which should have fallen to him."

Langstaff was silent for a moment, then said sadly:

"If I had known that you were to fight this battle I should have insisted on taking it upon myself."

When Fitz Hugh Stewart awoke the sun stood high. His mother approached his bed. He started up.

"Lie down, my boy; it's all over."

And she told him what she had done.

To this day no one in that section knows that it was a woman instead of a boy that gave Forshay his death wound. I got the story from that boy when he was a man of sixty.

PRESERVING THE HAIR.

How to Treat a Scalp When the Weather Is Cold.

If women would remember that cold weather dries the hair and makes it unmanageable they might be able to treat the scalp so the tresses would be healthy and could be coiled into pretty coiffures. Water sometimes does more harm than good by increasing the stiffness of the hair as the liquid dries out. As a matter of fact, when each hair seems possessed to stand on end only brushing and the application of some mixture that contains oil is effective.

Oils, besides neutralizing the condition of dryness and making the hair easier to handle, have the added virtue of tonic properties and if massaged into the scalp the benefit after some weeks is pronounced.

A tonic of this kind that has been used for several generations by one family is made from sixteen ounces of pure cologne and two ounces of castor oil. Far from being greasy or unpleasant, this mixture is easily put on and has an agreeable odor. Containing less oil, but stronger in tonic properties, is a combination of four ounces of cologne, half an ounce of tincture of cantharides, a quarter of a dram each of oils of lavender and rosemary. The best way of applying either of these is to make many parts close together on the scalp and rub the liquid into each, using either the finger tips or a small brush.

If the hair is extremely dry the application may be used every day, but in many cases every other day is sufficient. Too much of the tonic will make the hair heavy with grease and altogether unmanageable.

When the hair is falling and is dry and hard in texture a stimulating mixture to use may be made from one and one-half ounces of cocoanut oil, two and a quarter drams of tincture of nux vomica, one ounce of bay rum and twenty drops of oil of bergamot. This tonic should be thoroughly rubbed with the finger tips into divisions made along the scalp. To apply it every other night is sufficient, and on alternate nights there may be used another formula composed of one dram of alcoholic tincture of cantharides, half a dram of tincture of capsicum, two drams of tincture of nux vomica, three-quarters of an ounce of cocoa oil and two and one-half ounces of cologne.

Nothing will so quickly cause the hair to turn gray as an absence of nourishing oils, and it is for this reason that tonics containing such ingredients are invaluable. When there is a decided tendency to whiteness a formula that has been found useful, if massaged nightly into the head, is one dram each of terebene, borax and sulphur and six ounces of lavender water.

Subscribe for The Republican.

MY work is like play because I refresh myself with Jersey-Creme It's sure all to the Jersey

WHAT?

JERSEY-CREME

PERFECT

is the purest summer beverage known. You can never miss-take any other for JERSEY-CREME—the perfect drink—once you have tried it.

By the bottle or case —Ask your dealer or phone us.

OAKLAND BOTTLING WORKS

The IMPERIAL

CUMBERLAND - - - MD.

FREE! FREE! FREE!

Despite the fact that we are conducting special sales in our women's ready-to-wear department, OUR FREE VALET SERVICE is extended to all the patrons of The Imperial. Your suit, skirt or coat pressed FREE OF CHARGE for a period of one year.

EXTRA SPECIAL!

Most Extraordinary Reduction Sale Women's High-Class Suits Ever Held

$15

NO MAIL or Telephone Orders will be filled. No Suits will be sent C. O. D. Alterations will be made, if necessary, and the Suits delivered in time to be worn on Decoration Day.

135 Tailored Suits Formerly Priced As High As $35.00

There are dozens of plain tailored suits that reveal every detail of high class designing and execution in smart tailoring.

There are scores of suits so variedly and prettily trimmed that you will marvel at the ingenuity and fine taste displayed.

There are exact copies of imported suits—some of the most swagger models of the year. Every suit is perfect and carries with it the usual IMPERIAL guarantee—the coats all come beautifully lined with Peau-de-Soie Taffeta or some other soft lovely silk. The colors include black, navy blue, rose, reseda, champagne and endless shades of grey. The materials are mostly worsteds—some checks—some stripes—pepper and salt mixtures and solid color serges.

This is unquestionably the most radical reduction sale which we have ever offered and women knowing what a fine class of tailor made suits we carry, will be more than eager to share in this wonderful sale. There never was such a sale before, in any store, anywhere, at such a decided bona-fide reduction sale price.

You Simply Can Not Afford to Miss It.

Remember there will be none held in reserve. Every suit up to $35.00 will be sold during this sale at $15.00

TAFFETA SILK PETTICOATS AT SPECIAL PRICES.

Regular $5.00 Taffeta Silk Petticoats at $3.95.

Made of a fine quality Taffeta Silk, in black and two-tone effects, double flounce, with under dust ruffle. Exceptional value.

Regular $10.00 Taffeta Silk Petticoats at $5.95.

Navy Blue, Rose and Champagne colored, handsome Dresden printed warp silk. Beautiful flounce trimmed with tucks and gathers. Under dust ruffle.

CORSET TALK FROM CUMBERLAND'S LEADING CORSET DEPARTMENT.

R. & G. Corsets at $1.00.

We carry a complete stock of these corsets in batiste and coutil. The following numbers in all sizes always here: A-43, A-45, A-67.

Royal Worcester Corsets at $1.00.

We have the exclusive agency of these famous and popular corsets and our stock is always complete in all sizes in the following numbers: 460, 450, 415, 411, 416, 459 and 401.

Attention June Brides, Confirmants and Graduates.

Particular attention has been directed in the purchasing of dainty creations suitable and adaptable for the June bride, the confirmant and the graduate. Exquisite white lingerie dresses, beautifully trimmed with fine imported laces, motifs and ornaments, in such dainty conceits that it is almost impossible for us to even vaguely picture them to you with mere descriptions. However, we can safely say to you that our variety of these dainty white frocks is surely the greatest ever shown in Cumberland, and the assortment at prices which will appeal to all is so wide and varied that none should experience difficulty in making a happy selection. You can choose dresses for these important occasions from $4.95 to $50.00.

HOW TO GET RID OF HOUSE FLIES

Valuable Suggestions for the Housewife to Observe During Hot Weather.

Screen your windows and doors. Do it early before fly time.

Place either of these poisons in shallow dishes throughout the house.

(a) Two teaspoonfuls of formaledhyde to a pint of water, or

(b) One dram of bichromate of potash dissolved in two ounces of water, sweetened with plenty of sugar.

To quickly clear a room of flies, burn prethrum powder or blow powdered black flag into the air of the room with a powder blower. This causes flies to fall to the floor in a stunned condition. They must be gathered up and destroyed.

Screen all food, especially milk. Do not eat food that has come in contact with flies. Do not buy food stuffs where flies are tolerated.

Screen the baby's bed and keep flies away from the baby's bottle, the baby's food and the baby's "comforter."

Keep flies away from the sick, especially those ill with typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria and tuberculosis. Screen the patient's bed. Kill every fly that enters the sick room. Immediately disinfect and dispose of all discharges. Eliminate the breeding places of flies.

Sprinkle chloride of lime or kerosene over contents of privy vaults and garbage boxes. Keep garbage receptacles tightly covered, clean the cans every day, the boxes every week.

Keep the ground garbage boxes clean.

Sprinkle chloride of lime over manure piles, old paper, old straw and other refuse of like nature. Keep manure in screened pit or vault if possible. Manure should be removed at least every week.

Pour kerosene into drains. Keep sewerage system in good order, epair all leaks immediatelv. Clean cuspidors every day. Keep 5 per cent. solution of carbolic acid in these all the time.

STOYER.

Everything is booming since the mines opened. Mr. Thos. Melvin is superintendent and mine boss.

Mr. Edward Alderton is manager of the Branard store and postmaster.

The vacant houses are filling fast with people.

Mr. Brady of Fairmont, W. Va., has been here several days on business.

Mr. William Bucy, of near Morgantown, W. Va., has been visiting friends here the last few days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Shockey and family were visiting friends and relatives here last week.

Mr. Chas. Kidd was visiting his sisters at Mt. Lake and Deer Park the first of the week.

Mrs. Thos. Wilson and Mrs. William Shrout were calling in town the first of the week.

Mr. Albert Steyer was a business caller in town Saturday.

Miss Margarette Campbell, of Midland is visiting T. E. Melvin.

Mr. and Mrs. John McIntyre of Merrill, were calling on friends here last week.

Mrs. Norman Shillingburg spent Monday at Gorman.

Mrs. Geo. Farris has been ill for the last few days. Dr. W. G. Drinkwater is attending her.

Beckman Bros. are still shipping lumber from this place.

Lutheran Reunion July 21.

The twenty-fourth annual reunion of the Lutheran churches of Southern Pennsylvania, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia will be held at Pen Mar, Thursday, July 21. The general reunion committee, of which Dr. A. R. Steck, of York, Pa., is chairman, held a meeting at the Eagle Hotel, Gettysburg, several days ago and made arrangements for the gathering. The music will be of special character and the railroads will provide specialities for handling the large number of persons expected to attend.

Pony for Sale.

Shetland pony, harness and top buggy. Pony chestnut sorrell, 12 years old, thoroughly broken to harness and saddle; guaranteed safe and gentle. Price for outfit, $115. DR. G. C. KELLER, 13-2t Grantsville, Md.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

FOR RENT—After May 1st, a 6-room cottage, with stable on lot. Kitchen and one bedroom furnished if desired; apply at this office.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., May 19, 1910.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Monday, June 6, 1910,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board.
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JUNE 2 1910. NUMBER 14

LITTLE GIRL KILLED BY FAST FREIGHT TRAIN

At Corinth Late Sunday Afternoon. Her Body Being Hurled Fifty Feet.

Pearl, aged nearly ten years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Frankhouser, residing about a mile and a half from Corinth, six miles west of Oakland, was instantly killed Sunday afternoon between five and six o'clock at Corinth, by being struck by a fast freight train known as No. 97, and hurled a distance of more than fifty feet. Her death was instantaneous.

The saddest feature of the death of the little girl was that she met her horrible fate with he mother as an eyewitness. The mother and daughter had gone to Corinth from their home to spend the day and were returning. After having crossed the railroad track at that town the little girl remembered something that she had left at the house they had visited and turned back. An eastbound freight obstructed her vision of the opposite track and she was unaware of the approach of a train bound west. With the passage of the eastward train she stepped upon the other track and immediately in front of the westbound train which struck and killed her as above stated.

The funeral of the deceased occurred Monday, the services being conducted by Rev. E. Manges, of the Oakland Lutheran church in the presence of a large and sympathetic concourse of friends and relatives.

PLEASANT VALLEY.

The weather is still very cool and there has been much damage done by the frost.

Geo. Beckman lost a valuable mare and colt a few days ago.

Miss Hazel Friend, who has been sick with typhoid, is much better at this writing I am glad to say.

Miss Georgia Davis left Monday evening for West Virginia, where she will visit relatives and friends.

W. S. Friend, the hustling farmer, is building a new barn and will soon have it completed. Robert Gauer is boss carpenter.

W. H. Smouse and son Ralph were visiting relatives at Fairmont Saturday and Sunday last.

Preaching at Wesley Chapel Thursday and Friday evenings of this week. Quarterly meeting Saturday and Sunday; communion services 11 a. m. Sunday. All are cordially invited.

Something new in Talcum Powder; Babcock's Corylopsis of Japan, the most popular Talcum on the market today. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

WEATHER FOR JUNE

Peter R. Smith's Forecast for the Month of Roses.

The outlook for rain in northern central and the eastern States and also in some portions of the west and south is very flattering There are a number of causes which come to the front in June exciting the meteoriology, keeping it spasmodical much of the month in the change of direction of air currents and in cloud building. In some portions of the country wind in its normal and cyclonic forms will pay its usual June visits which will be mostly in the west and south. Hard storms will show up in a number of places. Much display of lightning will also prevail. On or touching the 30th of May the temperature will advance to much warmer, attended with threatening rain clouds, which will be in transit on the 1st of the month to the 3rd, with rain, wind and thunder. A change to cooler will follow the wave. On the 6th, 7th and 8th conditions denote rain, wind and much thunder, also hail at many places. The wave will be followed by cooler temperature. A high temperature will prevail in all sections of the country about the 10th. Conditions donate storms of wind, attended with much intensity, and will be developed in the south and southwest at this period which centers about the 13th, and also much electric display will show up in all sections. After the passage of these storms a cool wave will follow. On the 17th, 18th and 19th daily rains will be on passage. From the 22nd to the 26th denotes a period of violent storms, excessive rains, hail and phenomenal electric displays. The large central rivers will be at flood tide from the long and continued rains over much territory. On the 28th and 29th a renewal of storms will be in transit, which will visit many sections of the country. After these rains the temperature will be much cooler.

Call for Your Letters.

Mr. Greenway Albert (2), Mr. Walter Briscoe, Skyles Calhoun, Cook Bros. Lumber Co., Miss Elma Dewitt (2), Mr. Normal Gaiter, Mr. Benjamin Jackson, Mr. Harry Shahan, C. H. Snyder, Mr. F. L. Stun, Mr. William Wilson, Mr. E. F. Williams, Miss Addie Wolfe.

Appointed Teacher in Normal.

Miss Louella Roberts, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Roberts, of the First ward, has received the appointment of teacher in the primary training department of the Fairmont State Normal School, of which she was a graduate in 1909. Miss Roberts was one of the very efficient teachers of the First ward school during the past scholastic year, and her selection is quite a compliment to her ability as a teacher.—Grafton Leader.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

DIXON & KELSO

The WOOL SEASON
IS NOW ON.

We will be in a position to pay the HIGHEST MARKET PRICE on the day of delivery. Prices have been so unsettled that it is not possible to name the price for a week in advance of date of delivery. Today we could pay 24c.

Rubber and Felt Roofing.

We recently purchased a car of the above goods and can name a very low price on your roofing supplies.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

ACTION WAS RESCINDED BY REPUBLICANS TUESDAY

State Committee Conforms to Opinion Handed Down by Attorney General.

Members of the Republican State Central Committee gathered at the Hotel Rennert, Baltimore, at noon Tuesday and rescinded their action of last month when dates were set for congressional primaries and conventions. The action of the committee was made necessary by the opinion of Attorney General Straus that the Lee Primary Law, passed at the last session of the legislature, is applicable to congressional nominations. His decision will not, however, affect Mr. Thomas Parran, who has been named by the Republicans of the Fifth district as their candidate.

Mr. Hanna opened the meeting and explained his purpose.

A ripple of excitement was caused when T. K. C. Young, of Frederick county, arose and declared the meeting out of order. He said that the law provides that the call shall be ten days before the meeting, and that it shall be advertised five days previous. Mr. Hanna took exception, however, contending that when the meeting adjourned on April 27 last, it was subject to the call of the chairman. He asked the members to sustain him, and they did.

Mr. Henry M. McCullough offered a resolution which brought about the purpose for which the committee met. It was that the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth districts be instructed to revoke their action of April 27, and the chairman, Mr. Hanna, "is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to agree with the chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee for holding congressional primaries earlier than September 5."

That was the action which the committee met to take and the resolution was passed without a dissenting vote. The first four districts immediately revoked the former action, but the members of the committee from the Sixth district, in which there is a fight, held a conference before deciding upon what action they would take. Gist Blair arose and stated that there were only two counties opposed to a change in the present plans. An effort was later made to hold a conference of the Sixth district counties, but the members from Frederick and Washington counties refused to join a conference.

Three counties were represented at the Sixth district conference. They were Allegany, Garrett and Montgomery. Thomas C. Noyes made a motion that the former action of the district be reported and that Chairman Hanna be given authority to arrange for a date. As a majority of the district members were represented, the action stands.

It is likely that the date for the joint primaries will be on the first Monday in September, as the law provides in the event of the chairmen of the two committees failing to agree. Mr. Hanna stated before the meeting that the first Monday in September suits the Republicans as well as any other date, and unless there is some real reason to hold them earlier, he did not think it would be done.

B & O TRAINS SPRING SCHEDULE

Many Important Improvements In Service.

With the spring schedule which went into effect Sunday, May 29, the B & O. railroad has systematically placed in service the new equipment of engines, baggage cars and coaches it has been receiving for the past several months.

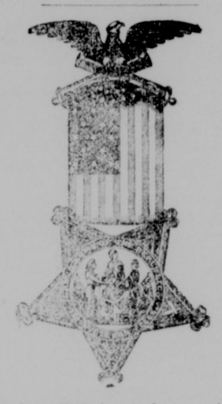
Trains 1 and 2, Cincinnati-St. Louis Limited, have been transformed into two beautiful electric-lighted trains with entirely new equipment from end to end, of baggage cars, coaches, sleeping cars, observation cars and dining cars. The coaches are of new design, with steel frame and trucks, cement floors, and are finished in polished mahogany, combining attractiveness with perfect sanitation, comfort and safety. The lavatories and toilets are separated on opposite sides of the aisle, the women's compartments being at one end, the men's at the other. The Pullman sleeping cars are provided with both upper and lower berth lights, and are equipped with electric fans.

Train No. 8, the Chicago-New York Special, leaving Chicago at 10 a. m., will arrive in Washington at 10:45 the next morning, two hours earlier than formerly, with a correspondidg reduction of the time of arrival in New York.

Subscribe for The Republican.

VETERANS MARCHED WITH BANNERS FLYING MONDAY

Living Honored the Dead When Graves Were Strewn With Sweet Garlands.



Monday a little band of men—nineteen in number, all that is left in this community of a mighty host that marched nearly half a century ago under the flag of the Union—gathered in front of G. A. R. headquarters in Oakland and under the same banner marched again. This time not as warriors but as peaceful citizens on a mission of love and in memory of that grand army of men who have passed away and lie buried in almost every hamlet, city and town of the country, commemorating the saddest and yet the most beautiful of all national holidays—Memorial Day.

These nineteen battle scarred veterans, some of whom were barely able to wend their way to the cemetery, were escorted by hundreds of children, the Knights of Pythias and the Mountain City Band leading the procession, where the graves of their deceased comrades were visited and strewn with flowers. The Post was under the command of Capt. J. M. Jarboe, the illness of Col. Sturgiss preventing him from assuming command.

While the weather bureau sent out a warning Sunday afternoon that Monday would be stormy, the day dawned beautifully and not until after the services were concluded at the cemetery and the hundreds of visitors to that point had returned to their homes did the predictions of the weather man come true, when rain descended and the afternoon was disagreeable to the utmost degree.

At the cemetery the usual ceremonies of the G. A. R. were carried out. That portion of the service wherein a mound representing the unknown dead was decorated and about which the crowds gathered, being the most impressive. Here the public exercises under the G. A. R. regulations were held, after which Rev. G. R. Williamson, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, addressed the assemblage.

Mr. Williamson's address was delivered extemporaneously and along original lines and was listened to attentively by all present. He dwelt with Memorial Day from the modern standpoint of a united country. He said the first Memorial Day occurred forty-two years ago, under an order issued by Gen. John A. Logan, then Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army. Then the marching columns going out to decorate the graves of their deceased comrades were composed of young men, or at the most men in the prime of life. Then the swing of the veterans was rhythmatic, the heart strong, the face serene; now the lines waver, the wrinkles in the faces of the surviving comrades show the ravages of time and thousands of those who were privileged to march in the first Memorial Day parade have bivouaced in Eternity, there to answer the last roll call.

The old guard is dying off at the rate of one every twelve minutes; five an hour, or more one hundred each day, and there are less than 575,000 of them left. Dying at the rate of 100 each day in less than fifteen years the Grand Army will be a thing of the past with a few comrades here and there to tell the story of their wonderful warfare. Continuing Mr. Williamson broached the feasibility of starting a movement looking to the erection of a monument on the court house square as a memorial to the soldiers of Garrett connty. His suggestion found hearty accord among hearers and within a short time a meeting will be held for the purpose of forming an association to carry out the plan.

The cemeteries in Oaklend never looked prettier than they did on Monday. Nearly every lot owner visited the plots wherein their loved ones are interred and had them put in excellent order. With this spirit kept alive the Oakland cemeteries will soon be what they should be—lovely resting places for our honored and revered dead.

In the afternoon the business men of Oakland closed their stores and offices the people generally visited the band lawn fete in the Oakland Hotel grounds, which was liberally patronized.

AT DEER PARK.

Every latch string in Deer Park was easily reached from the outside of every dwelling on Decoration Day, and everybody was bent on a perfect enjoyment of the day.

Mr. Thos. J. Peddicord, of the Oakland bar, made a beautiful address at the cemetery, and he was heartily applauded.

The resumption of exercises on the village green under the management of Dr. J. W. Laughlin and William Miller, was marked by two spirited addresses by Rev. C. W. Hudson, of the Baptist church, and Rev. J. A. Brumbaugh, pastor of the Methodist church. Both speakers advocated the inculcation in the home circle of love of country, fidelity and patriotism.

The Deer Park Cornet Band mustered a full complement of members, and under the baton of Leader Redeheaver, won new laurels. They played well. The rendition of "Dixie" and "Maryland, My Maryland" after the speeches of Messrs. Hudson and Brumbaugh, both southerners, was appropriate.

A tournament was held after the luncheon hour, and a game of ball before the day closed.

Union veterans of the Civil War, in the persons of Messrs. W. L. Shaffer, of the 15th W. Va, Volunteers; George Marley, 99th New York Volunteers; M. V. Flanagan, 12th W. Va. Volunteers; Jos. F. Frantz, 2nd Maryland Volunteers; J. W. Laughlin, 8th Penn. Volunteers, and Geo. W. Haulenbeek, 13th New Jersey, were assigned to seats on the platform.

THE NATION'S DEBT OF GRATITUDE

(The following is an extract from an oration delivered by J. Griffin Hall, of Baltimore, Md., at the Decoration Day exercises, held at the National Cemetery, Antietam Battlefield, May 30, 1903.)

"While the battle which was fought here, although considered to be the bloodiest one-day fight of the Civil War, will never rank in historical importance with the battle of Gettysburg, yet in view of the results accomplished here and the incidents connected therewith, this battlefield will ever be an object of true patriotic pride. While it is also true that nearly all the battles fought during the war were replete with important incidents and results, yet to my mind the battles of Gettysburg and Antietam will ever stand forth in the history of the great rebellion as two of the most important events in the final settlement of the great conflict. It was here at Antietam on the 17th day of September, 1862, that Lee's army was successfully stopped in its advance into the North, and it was at Gettysburg in July, 1863, that he was again defeated and compelled to recross the Potomac. Had the results of these two battles been different who can tell what the final outcome might have been? It was also at Gettysburg that our first martyred President—Lincoln—gave utterance to those immortal, prophetic words, 'The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.' It was here on this historical ground that the last of our martyred Chief Magistrates, William McKinley, received his first promotion for bravery. Gettysburg and Antietam! Lincoln and McKinley! What emotions of patriotism are awakened by mention of the places and these patriots?

"Oh! how we regret the untimely departure of these noble men at the hands of cowardly assassins, but thank God, in the words of the lamented Garfield, who by a strange coincidence, also met death in the same manner, 'God reigns and the Government still lives.' Still lives! Yes, but what a debt of gratitude we owe to the old veteran, both living and dead, for it was he who fought and died that we as a Nation might live.

"With grateful hearts today with the poet we can truthfully exclaim:

" 'Twas not in vain, O noble band,
Your blood imbued Columbia's sod,
United now her children stand—
One Flag, one Country and one God."

"Junior" Brown to Be Nominee.

Knowing persons in the politics of the Second West Virginia district say that the Democratic nominee for Congress will be William G. Brown, of Kingwood, known as a successful banker, business man and farmer. Mr. Brown was his party's nominee for the same office in 1896. He is known as a most congenial man, being a good "mixer." Ex-State Senator John J. Cornwell, it is stated, will not accept the nomination under any circumstances.

MARYLAND IN BOUNDARY DISPUTE LOST POINT

Supreme Court Decided Tuesday That Low Water Mark Is Maryland's Limit.

In the Supreme Court of the United States, to which body was referred several weeks ago by the attorneys representing Maryland and West Virginia in the boundary line dispute between the two states, the question whether or not the high or low water mark on the south bank of the Potomac river marked the limitations of the State of Maryland, was decided Tuesday adversely to this State, when the court held that the boundary between the Commonwealths was low water mark on the southern bank of the river.

The contention of Maryland was that the boundary should be fixed at high water mark, while West Virginia took the contrary position and held that low water mark was the true boundary.

The Court also held that the cost of making and marking the boundary line should be borne jointly by both states in equal proportions.

The opinion of the court was read by Mr. Justice Day, who pointed out that inasmuch as the "low-water mark" is already the boundary between Maryland and Virginia, the present ruling of the court "gives to Maryland a uniform southern boundary along both Virginia and West Virginia at low water mark on the south bank of the Potomac river to the intersection of the North and South line between Maryland and West Virginia established by the decree in the case. This conclusion," he adds, "is also consistent with the previous exercise of political jurisdiction by the two states."

The boundary dispute between the two states was practically decided by the Supreme Court on February 21, when the court instructed Attorney General Straus, of Maryland, and Attorney General Conley, of West Virginia, to draw up a decree in accordance with which commisioners were to run a line.

Messrs. Straus and Conley differed essentially on two points. Mr. Straus held that the "high water mark" should serve as the boundary and that the costs of the survey should be paid equally by both states. Mr. Conley stood for "low water mark" and that each state pay her own expenses and costs. The court held with Mr. Conley on the boundary line and with Mr Straus on the costs.

Both attorneys general agreed on the personnel of the commission which is to make the survey, which will be practically the old Deakin line.

The decree issued by the court declares "that the true boundary line between the States of Maryland and West Virginia is ascertained and established as follows: Beginning at the common corner of the States of Maryland and Virginia on the southern bank of the Potomac river at low water mark at or near the mouth of the Shenandoah river near Harpers Ferry, and running thence with the southern bank of the North Branch of the Potomac river at low-water mark to the point where the north and south line from the Fairfax Stone crosses the said North Branch of the Potomac, and thence running northerly, as near as maybe, with the said Deakin's or old state line to the line of the State of Pennsylvania.

Julius K. Monroe, William McCullough Brown and Samuel S. Gannett are appointed commissioners to locate and permanently mark with monuments the line.

The commissioners are directed to make their first report before January 1, 1911, but it is believed they will be ready to report next October. When actually engaged on the survey they will receive $15 a day for their services. Up to the present time Maryland has appropriated $28,500 and West Virginia only $8,835.13 for the work.

I. O. O. F. Memorial Service.

Oak Lodge No. 8, Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Loch Lynn Heights, will hold a memorial service in the Baptist church at Loch Lynn Heights at three o'clock Sunday, June 12th, when speakers of prominence will address the assemblage. All members and visiting brothers are cordially invited to be present.

Valuable Farm Sold.

Last Saturday Messrs. J. C. Renninger and W. R. Offutt, attorneys named in the mortgage, sold at public auction in front of the court house in Oakland, the J. Turner Lohr farm, located near Bittinger, to Mr. Frank Watts, cashier of the Citizens' National Bank of Frostburg, for $2610.

FOR RENT—Furnished room; three minutes walk from station. Apply at this office.

KISSING THE BLARNEY STONE.

A Love Affair That Began on the Famous Irish Castle.

By HARRIET BISHOP WATERS.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

It was on the top of Blarney castle, 150 feet from the ground, that the affair began. They say there are a thousand shades of green in Ireland, and Gertrude, reaching back to the iron bars of the blarney stone, grasping them in a vise of fear, thought when she looked down that all the shades were mingled in one mazy mass. She bent her head down, pursed her red lips and pressed them to the cold undersurface of the stone. Heavens! What a depth down! Her head swam, her heart beat madly, her hands began to cramp. She was loosing her grasp, she was falling. "Help!" Her stiffened lips managed to frame the appeal, and almost instantly she was lifted by strong arms and set squarely on her feet.

"I SHALL CERTAINLY SEE YOU SAFELY THROUGH THIS GAP."

Once erect, Gertrude was brave enough and ashamed that she had lost her courage at a critical moment. She looked curiously at her preserver. He was a fine muscular fellow. He must have been, of course, or he could not have lifted her 140 pounds of avoirdupois so easily.

Nevertheless she raged inwardly that she should have needed his help.

The idea of this cool, collected, rather supercilious Englishman laughing at her!

With an effort she collected herself and looked her preserver in the eyes.

"It is a foolish thing to do," the young man said as he touched his hat. "You know, or perhaps you do not know, that several persons have fallen from the top of Blarney castle while endeavoring to kiss the blarney stone. Of course you are an American. Only Americans kiss the blarney stone." And, with a smile of amusement, he again touched his hat and turned away.

Gertrude was furious. What right had he to be so impertinent even if he had saved her life? He was an odious Englishman, of course. She turned her back to his retreating form, but her sense of gratitude would not allow her to dismiss the subject in that way, and she called to him:

"Am I not to know to whom I am indebted for the saving of my life?"

"You put it altogether too strong," he replied, coming back at once. "I am not so sure that you would have fallen." And he handed her a bit of pasteboard on which was engraved, "Edward Harcourt, Hyde park, London."

"Just as I thought, a conceited Englishman; thinks no one but himself knows anything." Gertrude did not speak her thought; but, smiling her sweetest, she said:

"I am Gertrude Clinton, Mr. Harcourt, of New York. I certainly owe you my life. I was foolish; but, as you say, Americans do like to kiss the blarney stone. I am very grateful to you for your service."

"Pray do not mention it, Miss Clinton," responded Harcourt rather stiffly. "I feel sure you would not have fallen. It was only a temporary dizziness, which you would have overcome. However, I am glad you are safe." And, lifting his hat, he was gone.

"He is odious," muttered Gertrude, "perfectly odious." But she wished he had remained to go down the long flights of steep stone stairs with her. It was growing dark. The stairs were interminable, and there were many dark nooks and crannies. She thought of the tortured prisoners once contined in the dungeons and of all the dark tales told of the castle, and before she had reached the ground she had firmly made up her mind that it was not so pleasant, after all, to travel alone. Her adventure on the top of the castle was certainly not a pleasant thing to look back upon. She might have been lying a bruised, inert mass at the foot of the castle if it had not been for the young fellow who even as he rescued her had looked at her so supercilliously.

"I hate him," she thought, and she stamped her little foot viciously. "I hope I will never lay eyes on him again." But when she entered the steam tram for Cork she found the only other occupant of the tram was the Englishman. He looked at her with a smile as she entered, but she studiously avoided his glance, and after that he paid no attention to her. He was a handsome fellow, with broad shoulders and a strong, earnest face. Gertrude could not help but look at him, and before they reached Cork she had wished more than once that he would talk to her. Apparently, however, nothing was further from his intentions, and when they reached Cork he alighted without ever looking at her.

A few days after Gertrude started out to make a tour of the Killarney lakes. When at Ross castle she was assisted into a boat for a fifteen mile tour of the lakes. To her astonishment and disgust she found that her vis-a-vis was Harcourt. He acknowledged her presence with a nod and then, apparently forgetting she was there, applied himself with diligence to looking at the wild and mountainous scenery along the shores of the celebrated lakes. Very soon the treacherous Irish skies began to weep, and it was a bedraggled lot of passengers that disembarked preparatory to the horseback trip through the Gap o' Dunloe. Gertrude's mount was a great rawboned animal, and she looked at it with dismay. How on earth would she ever scale its slippery sides to the saddle. Harcourt, watching her out of the tail of his eye, stepped forward to assist her, but she turned her back on him, led her horse over to a fence and from that position of vantage mounted. After that she lost sight of the Englishman. In fact, it would have been difficult for her to keep anything in sight, for she had all she could do to remain on her horse. The beast stumbled and floundered in the mud of the gap, and finally when the shrill notes of a bugle split the air the horse ignominiously slipped and fell, throwing Gertrude prone into the mud. But that was not the worst of it, for the horse in struggling to regain its feet threatened to strike the frightened girl with its hoofs. Once again she felt herself set fairly on her feet, and once again she saw her preserver was the Englishman.

This time he laughed. "I see we are fated to meet, Miss Clinton," he said, his eyes twinkling with merriment, but Gertrude did not see the funny side, and when her horse was righted again she mounted it in silence and disgust.

"I am going to lead this horse of yours, Miss Clinton," said Harcourt. "I have noticed all the way that it is not at all safe." And, suiting the action to the word, he took the bridle with that of his own animal and stalked on toward Kate Kearney's cottage.

Humiliated and ashamed, the girl watched him, admiring the set of his broad shoulders and the poise of his well shaped head, but she could not and would not accept his services.

"I cannot allow you to walk in this mud," she said. "Please give me the bridle. I really must insist that you ride."

"My dear Miss Clinton," was the reply, given somewhat with an air of amusement which grated on Gertrude sorely, "I shall certainly see you safely through this gap. I am sorry if my company disturbs you. I will not talk to you, but I will lead your horse." And lead it he did until Kate Kearney's cottage was reached.

But during the coach ride back to Killarney village Gertrude was ashamed of her sulkiness. She and Harcourt sat side by side and became very chummy before the ride was over. Harcourt was cheerful and chatty, and Gertrude made up her mind that he was not so odious as she had first thought him. He was communicative, and she discovered that he was a man of leisure, traveling about for pleasure. He, in his turn, found that Gertrude was making her first trip abroad and was a teacher in a New York city school. He had never cared much for self supporting women. They had, in fact, not been common in his experience. He had always felt that they must be strong minded and obnoxious. But how pretty this girl was! What lovely brown eyes and hair and what a graceful figure! Harcourt, who thought himself a connoisseur in women, acknowledged that he was pleased with Gertrude.

They saw each other often in the next few weeks, for both were making the same tour of Ireland, and both were to go through the lake country of Scotland. They were soon numbered with a good sized touring party and were surrounded by a gay coterie of friends, who admired the stalwart young fellow and the lovely girl who was so often by his side. Their relations from being friendly grew to a warmth which ought to have opened their eyes wide to the direction in which they were traveling, but both were blissfully unconscious, taking the good the gods provided without questioning.

Gertrude, however, was destined to a rude awakening. One day when they were making a tour of Melrose abbey Harcourt was enthusiastically greeted by a party of friends, one of whom was a tall black eyed girl, who threw her arms about his neck, kissed him and called him "Edward."

With a sinking at her heart Gertrude watched the young Englishman.

She noted how oblivious he was to her presence, and, with the impetuosity which was so apt to characterize her actions, she left the abbey. Going rapidly back to her hotel and finding that she could leave Melrose at once, she packed her few belongings, made her way to the station, and when Harcourt returned and called for her she was gone. He was mystified enough. What had happened? He could not imagine. He had not knowingly hurt her in any way. How lonely it was without her! How he missed her bright, cheery ways, the sparkle of her brown eyes, her girlish laughter! "Can it be," thought the young fellow, "that I am in love?"

Before the next day he felt there could not be much doubt about it, for he had never spent a more miserable twenty-four hours. Then it was that he determined to follow her and tell her he loved her with all the ardor of a nature that had never frittered itself away in the love of many women. He traveled day after day, getting now and then a clew of the girl, but he never found her, and when he finally reached London he was almost discouraged. He could not remember the steamer she was to take back to America nor the port from which she was to sail, but he scanned passenger lists and haunted steamboat offices with a pertinacity that laid him open to criticism by his friends, who one and all declared the truth—that he was in love.

Gertrude, for her part, was miserable indeed. The thought of the black eyed beauty who had kissed the Englishman and called him Edward was torture, but the thought she had so tamely surrendered herself to a love which had been unasked and evidently undesired was far greater torture. By the time she had reached London she was a very weary girl indeed, and she waited impatiently for the time when she was to return to America. In a sort of aimless way she did Westminster abbey and the galleries, and during those days of waiting she took a fancy to the omnibuses, which are so great a feature of London life. Day after day she rode on the tops of the buses, looking at the sights of London, listening to the sounds, but for the most part thinking of the young fellow who had become so much to her. She was impatient with herself, but she felt a little sorry for herself also, and when one begins to pity oneself one is in bad condition.

One evening she felt so thoroughly blue and discouraged that she did that which she had never attempted before in the evening—took a bus ride. She was just homesick enough and out of sorts enough to want to lose herself for a time in London traffic. She went out to Trafalgar square, signaled a bus, mounted to its top and gave herself up to the contemplation of London streets in the evening from the top of a motor bus. She rode an hour or so until, finally arousing herself with a start, she saw that she was approaching her starting point. She started down the steep flight of little stairs to the ground. Just before she reached the bottom step the bus gave a lurch, and Gertrude was precipitated to the ground. It seemed as if thousands of vehicles were ready and waiting to pass over her body. There was shouting and oaths and shrill screams from women, but in the midst of it all she felt herself lifted by two strong arms, set on her feet and hurried to a place of safety. Trembling and shaken, she looked up to her preserver. Of course it could be none other than the Englishman. There was only one pair of strong arms like that in the world.

"Three times and out, my darling," said Harcourt. "You are not to be trusted alone ever any more. You are my little love, my wife that is to be. Never again will I trust you out of my sight."

SHE FELT HERSELF LIFTED BY TWO STRONG ARMS.

"But the black eyed girl who called you Edward and kissed you!" sobbed the thoroughly unnerved girl.

"Was that the reason?" almost shouted Harcourt. "You little goose, you blessed little goose, it just happened to be my sister; that is all. I will introduce you to her tomorrow."

Blissfully happy, yet with a little common sense mingled with her happiness, Gertrude persuaded her lover to curb his impatience for a hasty marriage, but it was only a few short weeks when over in America another alliance was made between England and America which made two hearts beat as one.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by
J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y.,
Press Correspondent New York State Grange

PROBLEM OF TAXES.

An Important Report Made to the National Grange.

It Outlines the Position Which the Grange Takes on the Question of Taxation—The Committee's Conclusions Summarized In Eleven Articles.

The report of the committee on taxation of the national grange was prepared and presented by T. C. Atkeson of West Virginia, chairman of the committee, and was an important document. We give the committee's conclusions, the report being adopted:

Since taxation is necessary for the enforcement of laws, for the protection of property, individual or corporate, therefore no property, either real or personal, which is protected by law should be exempt by the state constitution.

In order to secure equality in the distribution of the burdens of government, if personal property is to be exempt from taxation on account of the indebtedness of the owner thereof, then real estate should be entitled to the same exemption.

In the case of mortgages "by far the wisest system is to tax the mortgages on the amount of the mortgage and the mortgagor on the value of the property minus the mortgage," the mortgage to be considered as real estate and not as personal property and taxed in the locality where the mortgaged property lies.

There should be no exemption of any species of property, either real or personal, from taxation for local purposes except such as is exempt by the constitution.

It state and local revenues are to be raised from separate resources, the state revenues should be raised from corporation, charter fees, licenses on liquor, beer, tobacco, coal, oil, gas, telegraph, telephone, express, Pullman and other car companies, banks, trust companies, druggists, billiards, theaters, shows, plays, certain professions and pursuits, hotels, restaurants, fire and life insurance companies, bankers and pawnbrokers, bank deposits, collateral inheritance, sale of books, state seal, etc.

All corporation real estate and personal property to be taxed for local purposes, same as the same kind of property is taxed when owned by individuals.

The local tax of transportation property to be levied on a valuation equal to the market value of the capital stock plus the market value of the bonded debt, each taxation unit to receive such part of the tax as the mileage of the corporation in said unit is to the total mileage.

Every possible precaution should be taken to secure equality of assessment between individuals and between assessment districts.

We favor the denial of the right of action to the holders of notes, bonds, etc., which have not been listed for taxation and all such notes, bonds, etc., so listed shall be assessed at the same rate below face value as other personal property in the same locality is assessed below its actual cash value.

No city shall be permitted to make a separate assessment, and all property everywhere shall be uniformly assessed at its fair cash value or at a uniform per cent below cash value—say, 20 to 50 per cent below.

We favor the enactment of a law that will secure a fair and equitable taxation of all bank property, whether personal or real, upon the basis that other property is taxed, and we believe the market value of the capital stock plus the real estate would be the fairest and most easily ascertained method of valuation.

OHIO GRANGE AFFAIRS.

State Grange Has $23,000 In Treasury and 4,500 New Members.

State Master T. C. Laylin of Ohio reports that several new halls have been erected and dedicated to the use of the Order, indicating to some degree the permanency of the organization. Forty new subordinate granges have been organized since the last annual meeting and eleven reorganized. Two Pomona and two juvenile granges have also been organized. Four thousand five hundred new members have been added since one year ago. The proverbial rainy day is well provided against by a comfortable balance of $28,000 in the treasury. During a portion of the year two organizers have been kept in the field, the expense being shared equally by the state and national granges. This experiment has proved very satisfactory. The field meetings were largely attended and afforded an excellent means for getting a hearing upon the principles and work of the Order before the people of the state. These meetings have become so numerous that it has been found necessary to organize a speakers' bureau composed of the officers of the Ohio state grange, the secretary of the national grange and a half dozen other prominent Patrons of the state.

National Co-operation.

For the purpose of presenting to the next national grange meeting a plan for national co-operation such as would be fair and equitable to both producer and consumer it was voted to appoint a committee to consider the matter. This committee consists of Messrs. Raine of Missouri, Black of Kansas, Creasy of Pennsylvania, Wilson of Illinois, Jones of Indiana, Pettit of California and Stetson of Maine.

Dimitted Members.

Sometimes the question arises whether a dimitted member from another grange should be received in a new grange as a charter member. The only way in which it can be done is to have the demitted member pay the full charter membership fees. He may visit any grange so long as he holds his dimit card, but is not entitled to receive the new annual word.

The editor of this department was pleased to learn at the national grange meeting that extracts from this column were read at almost every meeting of one of the granges in Kansas.

CARPET AND RUG TREATMENT.

How They Can Be Cleaned and Made to Last Longer.

To spoil a carpet sweep it with a stiff, half worn broom, but to save a carpet dip your broom in clean, hot suds once a week, then shake it out and hang it up to dry.

Rugs should be beaten on the wrong side, then swept on the right side. Spots may be removed by the use of ox gall or ammonia and water, using a sponge or flannel. Slightly moistened bran is equally as good as salt in brightening rugs and carpets.

Vinegar will remove lime spots. Soot from an open chimney or the careless handling of stovepipes can be removed by covering thickly with salt, and this afterward can be brushed up quickly without injury to the carpets. Spirits of ammonia diluted with water, if applied with sponge or flannel to discolored spots, will often restore the color.

Remove ink stains with milk, and after soaking up all that seems possible either sprinkle thickly with salt or wash with a pure white soap, a clean brush and warm water.

For grease spots use powdered magnesia, fuller's earth or buckwheat flour. Sprinkle on spots and let it lie until grease is absorbed. Renew the flour or other absorbent material as often as necessary.

When carpet moths are discovered, after removing all artificial lights in the room saturate the cracks in the floor with benzine. Wash upper edge of the carpet with a solution containing sixty parts of poison to one part of alcohol. Be extremely careful about using this if there are children about.

For ingrain or three ply carpets wring a cloth out of hot water and lay it over the edges or binding and iron with an iron as hot as can be without scorching. This destroys the moth as well as the eggs. Wilton and the heavier carpets must be steamed on the underside.

A good solution to use in wiping up the floor before putting down the rugs or carpets is as follows: A quarter of a pound of red pepper steeped in a gallon of water, to which are added two drams of strychnia powder.

TREATING RHEUMATISM.

How to Secure Relief From a Very Painful Ailment.

To cure rheumatism it is necessary to rid the system of the excess of uric acid, and to do this a proper diet is even more important than the use of drugs, though in very severe cases the latter are not to be despised in conjunction with the dieting that is absolutely essential.

The Massachusetts General hospital of Boston allows the following diet for its rheumatic patients: Graham or brown bread, white bread (limited to one-half slice daily), corn, graham, rice, milk, eggs, flour, puddings, crackers, beans, peas, all kinds of vegetables except potatoes, tomatoes and asparagus, rhubarb, fresh fish, butter, cheese, buttermilk, cream, alkaline waters and toast. Avoid red meats, starch or potatoes, white bread and sugars.

The sensible use of water, both internally and externally, plays a large part in the prevention or cure of rheumatism. One or two glasses, either hot or cold, taken before breakfast every morning is excellent to start the organs of digestion for the day, and at least one glass should be taken between meals. Often the plain water will be enough to move a slightly constipated person, but if not a mild medicated water may be taken instead. It is very essential to keep the bowels open in cases of rheumatism.

Uric acid in the system is a poison, and it must not be forgotten that poisonous waste matter is also eliminated through the skin. The pores of the skin must be kept freely open and not allowed to become clogged if we hope to obtain the best results with rheumatic cases. A hot bath at bedtime is often very helpful.—Delineator.

How to Sew Lace to a Centerpiece.

A new way to put lace on a round centerpiece is to turn the material up on the right side. Just the tiniest edge is turned, and it may be necessary to slit it occasionally to make it lie flat. The thread of the lace is drawn for a gathering and the lace put around the centerpiece on top of the turned back edge. It must be held just full enough to lie flat, but not to ruffle. After the lace is basted on it may either be sewed firmly by machine or hand. Then outline the inner edge with a heavy cable stitch, using a twisted long thread cotton. This makes a smart finish and is much quicker than the usual buttonholed edge with lace sewed underneath.

How to Mend China.

The most successful way to mend broken china is the following formula: Powder a small quantity of lime and take the white of one egg and mix together to a paste. Apply this quickly to the china to be mended, place the broken pieces together firmly, and they will become set and strong. It is unusual when china breaks in the same place again after being mended with this paste.

How to Make a Turkey Feather Fan.

Get pasteboard fans, such as are used for advertising. Paint handles with black varnish paint. Cover the pasteboard with a layer of glue, on which arrange the down feathers so each row of feathers covers the stems of the last, as one circle after another narrows toward the center.

How to Cure Croup.

One teaspoonful of vaseline given internally about twice a day will give relief and effect a cure.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

MAYBE those who tell a lie when the truth would do as well feel that they have to keep in practice.

If the world owes a man a living the man also owes the world a run for his money.

When a man loses his temper he finds it again, but slightly damaged.

Love makes the world go round, but it sometimes appears flat to the onlooker.

Plenty of people have ambition enough, but their spark plug won't work.

More people would help themselves if the police did not so perniciously try to earn their pay.

Why should some men so persistently go about making enemies when enemies have no market value?

The Sum Total.

Work and worry—
That is life.
If you doubt it
Ask your wife.
Get a hustle,
Or you may
See your finish
Any day.

Up and at it;
Never stop,
Or you will not
Reach the top.
Keep a-bobbing
Here and there
In the mixup
For your share.

In the winning
Of success,
Coaxing it to
Your address,
You must double
Effort make,
Throw the throttle,
Lift the brake.

In a foot race
Or a fight,
On the job from
Morn till night;
Then it's but an Even break,
And you may not
Win the cake.

Exciting Pastime.

"The annual game will soon be with us."

"Football?"

"No."

"Coasting?"

"Not that."

"What, then?"

"Finding the cost mark on the Christmas present."

Not Proud of It.

"If those boys don't quit their racket I will kill a few of them."

"Have you forgotten that you were a boy once?"

"Suppose I was. Is that any reason you should throw it up to me? Haven't I been trying all of these years to live it down?"

And Can't Get Over It.

"Why don't these spirit rappers tell us something good?"

"They are rappers, you know."

"Sure; that's what I said."

"Well, probably they were knockers when they were on this side."

Sheer Necessity.

"Can you spare me about twenty?"

"I might, but"—

"Never mind the but."

"Do you really need it?"

"Need it! Man, I haven't had a joy ride for a month."

Not Taking Chances.

"He promised his wife he would never marry again."

"Doesn't she believe him?"

"Oh, yes, but she always hikes off to the doctor as soon as she gets the least bit sick."

Full Size.

The presidential chair, I trow,
Is something of a fit.
The man who occupies it now
Can't rattle round in it.
In fact, it would be no surprise
To hear two chairs were just his size.

Touchy Spot.

"I hear he met with an accident."

"Yes; he was injured in the rotunda."

"Too bad. I wonder if his old vests will fit him."

He Had To.

"Whenever I have anything to say to a man I say it to his teeth."

"You do, do you?"

"Well, I am a dentist."

Felt a Call.

"Miss Jenks knows a good thing when she sees it."

"That is the reason I am dodging."

Useless Attainment.

"He is older than he looks."

"Then he is wasting his time in not being a girl."

AN ENGLISHMAN'S VIEW OF THINGS IN AMERICA

Many Comparisons to the Detriment of Methods in This Country.

The fact that "Uncle" Joe Cannon, speaker of the House of Representatives of the United State, chews tobacco while that honorable body is in session, the jury system in America and numerous other Yankee methods of living and doing business are severely criticised by an Englishman who has spent considerable time in the states, in an article which he writes for a London daily, in which he tells of some things he thinks are done better in his native land than in America.

The article follows:

It irritates the average American to be told that his country does not "lick creation" in every respect. After five years residence in the states, I take this opportunity of submitting a number of "Things we do better at home."

In the first place, there is a lack of dignity in the conduct of public affairs that tends to bring their tribunals into contempt. Take, for instance, the meetings of Congress at Washington. The other day I saw "Uncle Joe," the speaker, open the proceedings. He entered the House smoking a cigar "a la Captain Kettle," after which he took a wad of tobacco from his vest pocket, placed it in his mouth and expectorated several times. I might add that each member of that august assembly is supplied with a desk, stationery and a spitton.

There is no denying the fact that the public have more confidence in the management of our financial institutions than the American people have in theirs. The expression, "safe as a bank," is meaningless in a country where they are always smashing. It is not unusual to find banks doing business out west on a capital of £500. They are trying to introduce our system of postal savings banks, by which, if successful, it is estimated that six hundred thousand dollars will be immediately forthcoming from the stockings of those who distrust the banks.

To watch the swearing in of a jury on an important case in America offers food for reflection, and one wonders how an intelligent community can put up with such a system. Over here a man is supposed to render his verdict after the important essential of listening to the evidence. Across the Atlantic, if a citizen wishes to escape serving on a jury, he comes into court and asserts that he has already made up his mind or is afflicted with a prejudice which would render it impossible for him to give a just vereict, no matter what evidence he might hear. The lawyers spend hours arguing as to his mental capabilities, with the result that it often takes a week to swear in a jury of twelve.

Vacations among business men are rarely taken advantage of. The proudest boast of an American merchant is that he has never missed a day at his desk for ten years. If you remonstrate with him he will tell you that he is out for the dollar and that is all there is in it, whatever that may signify.

On public holidays, such as the 4th of July, fire crackers and toy cannon exterminate small boys and their equally silly fathers by the thousand. In the seven bloodiest battles of the war against Great Britain 1,119 American soldiers were killed and wounded. During the last seven years the total of slain and maimed on the 4th of July reached 34,603. There is some talk of establishing a "saner Fourth" in the future. The worst that usually happens to an Englishman on the first Monday in August is a night in the lockup.

Police protection in America is a byword. If you want adequate guardianship of your goods you either employ one of Pinkerton's or form your own police force. While the members of the regular force may possess motor-cars and valuable house property, they do not catch criminals.

Ten thousand persons are murdered each year—shot, strangled, poisoned, stabbed, or beaten with a club. Only two out of every hundred murderers are punished. Chicago, with a population one-third that of London, had 118 murders in one year, as against 20 in three years in our capital. Seventy-five per cent. of the criminals who are arrested in New York for petty larceny and thieving are freed through the intervention of ward politicians.

We have been likened to a nation of shopkeepers—America is the happy hunting ground of the canvassers, and a considerable portion of your time is occupied in turning them down.

There is scarcely an article manufactured for common consumption for the sale of which the makers do not adopt special methods of exploitation. You are induced to buy more soap than you could possibly use in a lifetime by reason of the prospect that perchance "the Sungleam Girl" will call at your residence. This young lady is a species of good fairy with gold galore to distribute to sundry purchasers of "Sungleam Soap." Should she visit your domicile, and you are unable to produce the necessary number of soap wrappers, you go without the five-dollar gold piece.

At your office there enters a plausible gentleman who would fain persuade you to join a "suit club"—you pay so much a week with fifty equally gullible, and if the enterprise is in existence long enough you receive a suit of clothes. Possibly you evade this attack only to fall victim to the man who will politely infer that you are losing thousands of dollars by neglecting to take "Modern Methods." You might as well seek to suspend a cyclone as to stop the tide of his eloquence. The firm he represents has supplied him with a typewritten oration which he has to get out of his system.

On your return home you will be lucky if you find that the hired girl has not been bribed into permitting a sewing machine, mangle, go-cart and piano to be installed on trial during your absence. Our method of sell commodities may lack push, but it is more pleasing to the purchaser.

The tram-cars are only capable of seating half as many people as as ours by reason of having no outside accommodation. After six o'clock they are jammed with a seething mass of humanity, the majority of whom stands in the aisles and preserve their balance by hanging on to straps.

A football encounter between two arrival universities is an amusing contest to watch. Each side employs a brass band, and the cheering is indulged in volleys under the direction of a choirmaster. Every decision of the umpire is hotly disputed, and doctors with medical appliances are invariably in attendance.

A striking piece of play is punctuated by an appropriate selection on the brass band belonging to the side which secured it. The girl graduates wear the colors of the side which they favor, and fairly shriek themselves hoarse.

All said and done, we lead saner lives at home.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

New Wall Paper Store.

Having purchased the wall paper stock of Messrs. Matthews & Helbig and added a large stock of new patterns, we are now open for business on the second floor of the Townshend building, Second street, and solicit the patronage of the public.

W. H. BARTLETT & Co.

KANSAS' UNIQUE SCHEME

Children Ride to School in Closed and Heated Wagons.

One of the principal things that attracts the settler to a town is the school and then a means of getting there.

In many sections of Kansas the small boys and girls living on the farms have had to tramp from one to three miles through the mud and snow to school. Now the plan of combining small country districts about one graded school and providing comfortable transportation for the children is spreading rapidly.

The consolidated school is the dissolution of two or more districts and the formation of a large one with a graded school in the center. This makes the transportation problem an important one, and in all consolidated school districts the tax levy is made large enough to pay for hauling the children to school and back home. A wagon is often purchased by the district and a contract given to some farmer to do the hauling.

Sometimes the farmer takes a long time contract and buys his own wagon. It a farmer desires to haul his own children to school the district pays him a certain amount for doing it, or neighbors may club together and turn over this money to one boy, who drives the team each day and takes care of it and sees that the children get to school all right and safely home. But the most common plan is the use of a big covered and glass inclosed wagon with an oil heater inside.

Figures compiled by the state superintendent of instruction show that the children do better work and in less time than under the old methods. The statistics on file in the office also show that even with this great hauling expense the actual cost to the taxpayers is less in consolidated than in separate districts. Better teachers are employed and higher salaries paid, but there is a larger reduction in fuel, repairs and maintenance of the larger building than in several smaller structures.

CARS ELECTRICALLY LIGHTED

Baltimore and Ohio Keeping Pace with the Times.

In line with the improvement in passenger service on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the New York and Chicago Limited, Nos. 5 and 6, also the Pullman equipment in the St. Louis Limited, Nos. 1 and 2, are now electrically lighted, beginning with the new schedule which went into effect May 29th.

About three years ago the Royal Limited trains between New York and Washington were electrically lighted throughout, while the dining and official cars have been so lighted for many years. There are many advantages possessed by this method of lighting over any other, rendering it especially adapted for lighting railway equipment of all classes. Until recently, however, the art of electrically lighting passenger equipment in general was not sufficiently advanced and well established to warrant its general adoption except on the better classes of limited trains operated as a unit between terminals.

In the elecrically lighted service the Baltimore and Ohio has inaugurated a distinctive feature is the placing of berth lights in the upper as well as the lower berths of the Pulman cars. This feature will add much to the comfort of those desiring to read after retiring. The system of electric lighting used on the New York and Chicago Limited trains is known as the head-end system; electric generator being placed in the forward part of the baggage car and propelled by steam supplied from the engine.

Each car in the train is equipped with storage batteries, current for the lights and charging the storage batteries being supplied from the generator in the forward end of the baggage car. A distinctive feature of this system as applied to the New York and Chicago Limited trains is that each car in the train is equipped with a device there by fluctuations in the intensity of light so common in electrically lighted railway cars is entirely eliminated and the light furnished will therefore be as steady and as pleasing as that furnished from a fixed central station plant.

BREAD ON THE WATERS

Recompense, Just Like in the Stories and Plays.

A Cleveland paper tells of a tramp who came to the back door of a residence and begged for shoes. The mistress of the house gave him a good pair and said to him: "There, put these on, and if you want to show your graditude, just happen around here some morning after a snowstorm and clean off our sidewalk."

Some time after the lady was awakened early one morning by some one scraping the sidewalk in front of the house. Looking out, she found that there had been quite a heavy fall of snow, and there she beheld the tramp to whom she had given the shoes, clearing away the snow from the sidewalk with an old broken shovel. When he caught sight of his benefactress at the window he raised his tattered hat to her, and his self-imposed task finished, went away without saying a word or even asking for anything to eat. Three times the same thing happened during the winter, but the man never asked for compensation or food.

A New York woman once invited a ragged, dirty beggar into her house, and after he had had a comfortable meal and some clean clothing she sent him away with words of encouragement, telling him that he was made for something better than tramping; that it was a shame for a man of his apparent intelligence and good health to be getting a living in such a disgraceful way.

This lady became embarrassed financial and was in sore need of money. She asked a friend where she could borrow $500, but he could not accommodate her, nor did he know of any one who could. Next day, to her great astonishment, a man, total stranger, as she thought, called at her house and told her that he had heard she was pressed for money, and that he had come to lend her the amount she needed. With growing surprise she asked how it was that a complete stranger, whom she had never seen, was willing to trust her. The man then explained that he was the tramp whom, a year before, she had taken to her home and treated like a brother; that her kindness on that occasion had been the turning point in his career, had made a man of him again; that he had prospered beyond his deserts, and that ever since he had gotten on his feet he had been wishing for an opportunity to show his appreciation of what she had done for him.

Subscribe for The Republican.

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Saw Mill for Sale.

We have for sale at Jennings, Md., a No. 2½ Farquhar Saw Mill. cable feed; twenty-four feet carriage; fifty-five feet ways; three headblocks; 1 solid tooth saw.

Terms will be made to suit purchasers. WILL SELL CHEAP.

Apply to
MASON BROS.,
14-2m.pd, Jennings, Md.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see
THE Little Man
and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,
Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.
Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

Letter Heads
Statements
Bill Heads
Envelopes
Cards

Anything and everything in the way of high-grade commercial printing. Our assortment of job type is complete, our press facilities of the best, and our workmen true typographical artists. This tells all the story of our facilities for doing job printing of the right kind at the right prices.

Cards
Envelopes
Bill Heads
Statements
Letter Heads

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to

THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months 75
One copy three months 40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to
THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1910.

PATRIOTS AND THE PAST.

Decoration Day came with its recurrent interest of campfire memories and the recollection of campaigns fought by men who on this or the other side of the great divide have made records imperishable as the highest hopes of humanity. The patriotism of those whose memories were honored at the cemeteries of the land is the patriotism of the past. It is fragrant with the days when men whose high purpose it was to maintain the Union undivided and to advance the cause of human freedom went forth to engage in the inevitable conflict. Those days are happily over; the Union is without sections or sectionalism. The greatest nation of freemen the world has ever known is marching upon its course of destiny to the great things yet to be. It is well to take up the lesson of patriotic fervor and con the chapters of lofty history. It is well to refresh the mind with the things that thrill the heart. As long as there remain those who beneath the silent stars slept unmindful of the sure carnage of the dawning day, as long as they abide who when the shot was hottest and the conflict most desperate stood firm fronting the foe, there will remain living examples of heroism for the inspiration of the youth.

The patriotism of the past has been projected and widened in the passage of the years. It is now the patriotism of a united people. The nation feels the impulse of a common purpose, and it moves with the majesty of the mighty impact of a great people with the problems of a noble career. No one has ever undertaken to fully decipher the hand of God in the movements that are recalled in the sweet service of placing flowers upon the graves of the departed heroes. No one has undertaken to set forth the prophetic purpose of the conflict that brought to the fore the latent nationality of a loosely related people. No one has given adequate attention to the vast moral inheritance that came as a fruitage of that conflict.

Who can estimate the moral power of the United States among the nations of the earth without estimating at the same time the value placed by the world upon the remarkable instance of devotion to human liberty that led thousands to march out upon the green fields and mountain sides and bedew them with the blood of patriotism? The United States is great because it has risen above the level of national selfishness and rapacity. It is great because it has manifested signal power to use the free purpose of a republic of sovereigns to magnify and dignify the stature of manhood. The mere fact of the liberation of a multitude of human beings sinks into insignificance in comparison with the liberation of the vaster multitudes of men already free from the moral odium of perpetuating an institution that has never thriven except at the loss and destruction of the country where found. Here is the real genius of that crucial conflict. Here is the inherent nobility of the men who wore the colors of the nation—that they should have perceived that they were bent not only upon preventing a division of the nation, but in arresting the moral decay that was fast setting in. Happily, the entire land and nation rejoices with one breath in the established fact of the freedom of the United States from alliance with any form of social usage or institution that tends to degrade the manhood of the people.

A nation lives in its ideals. It progresses in the orbit of its destiny. No one can confine its ideals or define them. They are the intangible essence of a people's life. They are its inspiration. They constitute its manna in the wilderness in times of adversity. They frame the policies of government. They hold the fortunes of the land in the scales of their weighing. As long as a nation has ideals it grows, it lives, it survives. When these become degraded it dies. It would be impossible to estimate the service to America and the world of the men who made concrete the noblest ideals of a great nation. They found the framework of these ideals in the law of Almighty God, apart from which there are no ideals of the race worthy of cherishing. They made the Bible the law of American right. They gave to goodness a new dignity in the estimation of the American people. They wove into the fabric of the growing nation the sanctities of a divine purpose. Religion is potential and life is fair and fruitful because men dared and died for the cause of American liberty and the promotion of American ideals. The sacrifice in the spirit of brothers cemented the land.

There is much food for thought, much material for reflection in the sacred service of love for the memory of the dead soldiers of the republic. A nation honors itself when it reverences those who have served it well. The American people honor themselves and honor their God when they place their floral offerings upon the graves of the men who had their eyes turned toward the glowing dawn that shall be ushered in when the last roll call sounds. A noble class of noble men, born of a noble race, they are the sure pledges of the future as long as the ideals that flamed in their breasts remain.

THE UNMENDED FENCES.

This is the time the Congressman devotes to "mending his fences," to sowing the spring speeches in order to raise the fall crop of votes. He generally gets busy about the first of May, shaking hands with the voters, going to church, attending missionary societies, exhibiting himself in hotel lobbies, and "mixing around" generally. Though it is not so spectacular a stage of the campaign as the stump-speaking, babykissing period, the veteran statesman knows that it is no less important. None knows better than he that a hand shake and a little talk with the Bill Joneses and the Hank Smiths count in the ballot box. Wherefore, about the middle of April the Congressman who is held in Washington begins to get nervous. He hears about the activity of his opponents at home, he knows the folks are wondering if he has "got so high and mighty" in Washington that he is too good for them; he finds his enemies are sowing tares while he is away.

If Congress doesn't adjourn by the first of May he begins to perspire at the thought of the job he will have in explaining things to the home folks. But when the House and Senate go on and on, with interminable debates, with long investigations, with tangles that tie up the bills that must go through—when he learns that it may be the middle of July before he can get away and get to work in the home field, he is on the verge of despair. All he can do is to make speeches in the House and fire them by the ton at his constituents as public documents. The delay in adjournment is loading up the Congressional Record with yards of campaign speeches made, not for the benefit of fellow-members or the country, but for the voters in Mr. Anxious J. Congressman's district.

Howbeit, the cold pamphlet is a poor substitute for the warm grasp of the hand and the "Hello Bill!" of the campaigner. It is like love-making by correspondence or kissing by telephone.

Congress will probably not adjourn until after the middle of July. Meanwhile the fences must go unmended, the constituents ungreeted, the hands unshaken. The Congressman sits in his seat and hums that sad old tune, "Do They Miss Me At Home, Do They Miss Me?" And the clouds of gloom settle down over the House thick as the shades of defeat.

THE DEATH RECORD.

HENRY LEWIS.

Henry Lewis, aged more than eighty-two years, died at his home in Garrett county last Thursday of senile debility. The deceased served during the Civil War as a soldier in Company D, 3rd Md., P. H. B., and was a comrade of a number of Garrett county residents who served in the same command. His funeral took place on Saturday.

MRS. DAISY F. NINER.

Mrs. Daisy F. Niner, wife of Anthony Niner, died at her home in Wharton township, Fayette county, Pa., on Sunday, May 22, 1910, aged twenty-one years, three months and six days. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Fike, of Garrett county. The remains were interred in the Fike cemetery in District No. 2 on Tuesday following her death after impressive services conducted by Rev. George Van-Sickle in the Asher Glade church.

JOSHUA B. LIPSCOMB.

Joshua B. Lipscomb, one of the most highly respected residents of Garrett county, died at his home in Election District No. 10, near the Bethlehem U. B. church, on Tuesday evening at six o'clock, after an illness of four weeks of a complication of diseases. Mr. Lipscomb was aged 73 years; had been a member almost his entire life of the U. B. church, loved by his neighbors and revered by numerous friends. He leaves surviving him his wife, one son, P. T. Lipscomb, of Loch Lynn Heights, and the following daughters, Hulda, wife of William Schooley, of Ohio; Hettie, wife of Josiah T. Beckman; Almeda, wife of William Rodeheaver; Misses Dora E. and Minnie, at home. Another daughter preceded Mr. Lipscomb to the grave a number of years ago. The funeral of the deceased will occur this afternoon at two o'clock. The services will be held at the residence.

Let us fill your prescriptions. Lowest prices, quality considered. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

DEMOCRATS ARE PILING UP COSTS ON THE PEOPLE

Party in Power Making Elections Far Too Expensive.

One important effect of the ruling of Attorney General Straus that direct primary elections are required for the nomination of all candidates, congressional, judicial and others, is the addition of great costs to elections. These costs fall not only upon the taxpayers directly but also upon the candidates, and instead of paving the way for poor men to enter politics and to seek public office the direct primaries, involving double campaigns, are really impossible barriers to the ambitious man not abundantly supplied with capital.

For these additional costs incidental to elections and participation in politics, as well as for other expenses which have crept into local and state governments, the Democrats are primarily responsible. An opportunity awaits the real, genuine, sincere reformer, who will lead a crusade for abolition of useless offices and in the reduction of the number of members of topheavy boards and commissions. Under the Democratic regime there has been a steady increase in the offices. At the last session of the General Assembly the sum of over $85,000 annually was added to the appropriation list for the support of the public service commissioners, automobile commissioner and assistants, banking commissioner and assistant.

Goveruor Crothers brought before his cabinet the other dav the suggestion that it might be advisable to consider whether one police commissioner could discharge the duties now falling to the three commissioners. He mentioned the Police Board only to illustrate his point. He might have gone further and mentioned the Police Examiners, Road Commission, the Geological Survey, the Shellfish Commission, and later, perhaps, the Public Service Commission. He has already taken steps, by the creation of a central purchasing committee, to make possible in the future a reduction in the membership of the boards of directors of the several state-supported institutions, including the hospitals for the insane and the penal institutions.

The expense of the new primary election law as interpreted by the Attorney General and accepted unwillingly by the Democratic State Central Committee because it had no other course open to it imposes hardships on candidates, who are required to pay assessments before they can have their names printed on the ballots.

Here is the provision of the law imposing this assessment:

Each candidate for nomination for public office at a primary election shall pay the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) for each county or legislative district of Baltimore city in which his name appears upon the ballot; provided, that in any county where the salary of the office for which nomination is sought is three hundred dollars ($300) or less, such payment shall be ten dollars ($10); and if a candidate for Governor, Attorney General, Comptroller, or Clerk of the Court of Appeals of the state, then he shall pay the sum of ten dollars ($10) for each county or legislative district of Baltimore city, upon filing his respective certificates with the Board of Supervisors of Elections; and the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Baltimore City shall pay over the amount so received to the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, and the Board of Supervisors of Elections for each county shall pay over the amount so received to the County Commissioners of each county, respectively; and all of the expenses of each of said primary elections in Baltimore city shall be paid by the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore.

It is only with candidates for Congress with whom the law deals this year, though there is no specific mention of congressional or judicial candidates in the law. Thus, in Southern Maryland each candidate will be required to deposit with the election supervisors $25 in each of the six counties of the district. It will be a difficult, if not impossible task to determine the assessment upon each candidate in the three wards and in the five precincts of the Eighteenth ward of Baltimore, which are attached to the district. In Baltimore there will be a hard knot to disentangle in determining the assessments upon candidates in the Third and Fourth districts. The law makes provision for assessments according to legislative districts and wards, but not according to congressional districts. Thus, the Third district is composed of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Twenty-second wards, and four precincts of the Eighteenth ward. The First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth wards compose the First legislative district. The Seventh and Eighth wards are in the Second legislative district. The Twenty-second ward and the Eighteenth ward precincts are in the Fourth district.

How are candidates' assessments for their segregative sections of the district to be determined?

The same difficulty will be encountered in the Fourth congressional district, in which lie all of the wards of the Third legislative district and a part of the Fourth legislative district.

In the Second congressional district are two city wards, and an intricate arithmetical problem will arise in figuring out the amount of the assessments for these two wards.

These and other missing, inconsistent and intricate features of the law furnish conclusive and incontestable proof that the act was hastily drawn, and is one of the many inconsistent and costly results of hasty legislation.

Legislation which is deferred, as was the case of the Primary Election Law, until the closing hours of the session of the legislature, instead of being founded upon careful consideration and deliberate discussion.

A GREAT NATIONAL HIGHWAY.

Rehabilitation and Extension of National Road Projected.

A project is outlined by a writer in the Washington Post, which he says is neither chimerical nor Utopian but practical and probable and it is of especial interest to our section of the country. It is that a great national highway, 100 feet wide, be constructed from New York to San Francisco. It is suggested that some great American multimillionaire, like Mr. Rockefeller, construct it as a memorial with the proviso that it be kept up by the states through which it passes, but in the event that no man of wealth responds to the call, then the $75,000,000 necessary to construct the great thoroughfare shall be furnished by the national and state governments.

The project is of especial interest to us because, beginning at New York it runs to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cumberland and then follows the old pike, or Cumberland road, to St. Louis. Thence the proposed highway would be built on through Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, California to San Francisco. The only national highway ever constructrd in the United States was the Cumberland road. It was not such a highway as is being proposed, being only about one-third as wide, but it was a stimulus to trade and a great flood of traffic passed over it from the time of its completion to Wheeling in 1818 until it was abandoned. Few railroads do as much business as the old pike did in its palmy days. And if traffic was so great with the old time methods of transportation, what wonderful business, prosperity and pleasure the proposed new highway from coast to coast would bring! The Cumberland road cost from $9,745 to $13,000 per mile.

The article referred to contains some fine pictures of the old Cumberland road and in closing the author quotes Archer Butler Hurlbut in his work on American roads, "Historic Highways of America:

Mr. Hubert is an enthusiast upon the subject of the old days of "the road," and not only longs for, but really believes there will eventually be a revival of the glories that have departed. Here is what he says at the end of his volume dealing with the history of the Cumberland road:

"What of the future? The dawning of the era of country living is in sight. It is being hastened by the revolution in methods of locomotion. The bicycle and automobile presage an era of good roads, and of an unparalleled countryward movement of society. With this era is coming the revival of inn and tavern life, the rejuvenation of a thousand ancient highways and all the happy life that was ever known along their dusty stretches.

"By its position with reference to the National capital, and the military and commercial key of the central west, Pittsburg and the great cities of Ohio, the Cumberland road will become, perhaps, the foremost of the great roadways of America. The bed is capable of being made substantial at a comparatively small cost, as the grading is quite perfect. Its course measures the shortest possible route practicable for a roadway from tidewater to the Mississippi river. As a trunk line its location cannot be surpassed. Its historic associations will render the route of increasing interest to the thousands who, in other days, will travel, in the genuine sense of the word, over those portions of its length which long ago became hallowed ground.

"The 'Shades of Death' will again be filled with the echoing of the horn which heralded the arrival of the old-time coaches, and Winding Ridge again be crowded with the traffic of a nation. A hundred Cumberland road taverns will be opened, and bustling landlords welcome, as of yore, the travel-stained visitor. Merry parties will again fill those tavern halls, now long silent, with their laughter

"And all this will but mark a new and better era than its predecessor, an era of outdoor living, which must come, and come quickly, if as a nation we are to retain our present hold on the world's great affairs."

NOTICE CONCERNING WATER AND SEWER TAPS.

All persons are hereby notified not to make any tap to the water or sewer lines of the town of Oakland without first obtaining permission from the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland.

The ordinances of the town prohibit such interference with water and sewer lines and all persons violating the same will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Permission to tap both water and sewer pipes may be obtained from J. C. Dunham, clerk, upon application and payment of the proper charges.

By order,
6-3t The Mayor and Council of Oakland.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant.
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH.
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

D. E. BOLDEN'S Remodeling Sale

Contemplating extensive improvements to my store building, I offer my entire stock of Bed Room, Dining Room, Library and Parlor Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Pictures, Mattresses, Etc.

—AT—

10 Per Cent. Discount

For the Next 30 Days.

During the past few weeks the wholesale price on my lines have advanced ten per cent., but I am willing to give my customers the benefit of this advance in addition to the ten per cent. discount as above.

Some Rare Bargains will be included in this Special Sale

D. E. BOLDEN.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

School Board Meeting.

The Board of County School Commissioners will meet in their office in Oakland on

MONDAY, JUNE 6, 1910,

for the purpose of considering new buildings and repairs and such other business as may come before them.

By order of the Board,
E. A. BROWNING, Sec.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months 75
One copy three months 40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to
THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1910.

PATRIOTS AND THE PAST.

Decoration Day came with its recurrent interest of campfire memories and the recollection of campaigns fought by men who on this or the other side of the great divide have made records imperishable as the highest hopes of humanity. The patriotism of those whose memories were honored at the cemeteries of the land is the patriotism of the past. It is fragrant with the days when men whose high purpose it was to maintain the Union undivided and to advance the cause of human freedom went forth to engage in the inevitable conflict. Those days are happily over; the Union is without sections or sectionalism. The greatest nation of freemen the world has ever known is marching upon its course or destiny to the great things yet to be. It is well to take up the lesson of patriotic fervor and con the chapters of lofty history. It is well to refresh the mind with the things that thrill the heart. As long as there remain those who beneath the silent stars slept unmindful of the sure carnage of the dawning day, as long as they abide who when the shot was hottest and the conflict most desperate stood firm fronting the foe, there will remain living examples of heroism for the inspiration of the youth.

The patriotism of the past has been projected and widened in the passage of the years. It is now the patriotism of a united people. The nation feels the impulse of a common purpose, and it moves with the majesty of the mighty impact of a great people with the problems of a noble career. No one has ever undertaken to fully decipher the hand of God in the movements that are recalled in the sweet service of placing flowers upon the graves of the departed heroes. No one has undertaken to set forth the prophetic purpose of the conflict that brought to the fore the latent nationality of a loosely related people. No one has given adequate attention to the vast moral inheritance that came as a fruitage of that conflict.

Who can estimate the moral power of the United States among the nations of the earth without estimating at the same time the value placed by the world upon the remarkable instance of devotion to human liberty that led thousands to march out upon the green fields and mountain sides and bedew them with the blood of patriotism? The United States is great because it has risen above the level of national selfishness and rapacity. It is great because it has manifested signal power to use the free purpose of a republic of sovereigns to magnify and dignify the stature of manhood. The mere fact of the liberation of a multitude of human beings sinks into insignificance in comparison with the liberation of the vaster multitudes of men already free from the moral odium of perpetuating an institution that has never thriven except at the loss and destruction of the country where found. Here is the real genius of that crucial conflict. Here is the inherent nobility of the men who wore the colors of the nation—that they should have perceived that they were bent not only upon preventing a division of the nation, but in arresting the moral decay that was fast setting in. Happily, the entire land and nation rejoices with one breath in the established fact of the freedom of the United States from alliance with any form of social usage or institution that tends to degrade the manhood of the people.

A nation lives in its ideals. It progresses in the orbit of its destiny. No one can confine its ideals or define them. They are the intangible essence of a people's life. They are its inspiration. They constitute its manna in the wilderness in times of adversity. They frame the policies of government. They hold the fortunes of the land in the scales of their weighing. As long as a nation has ideals it grows, it lives, it survives. When these become degraded it dies. It would be impossible to estimate the service to America and the world of the men who made concrete the noblest ideals of a great nation. They found the framework of these ideals in the law of Almighty God, apart from which there are no ideals of the race worthy of cherishing. They made the Bible the law of American right. They gave to goodness a new dignity in the estimation of the American people. They wove into the fabric of the growing nation the sanctities of a divine purpose. Religion is potential and life is fair and fruitful because men dared and died for the cause of American liberty and the promotion of American ideals. The sacrifice in the spirit of brothers cemented the land.

There is much food for thought, much material for reflection in the sacred service of love for the memory of the dead soldiers of the republic. A nation honors itself when it reverences those who have served it well. The American people honor themselves and honor their God when they place their floral offerings upon the graves of the men who had their eyes turned toward the glowing dawn that shall be ushered in when the last roll call sounds. A noble class of noble men, born of a noble race, they are the sure pledges of the future as long as the ideals that flamed in their breasts remain.

THE UNMENDED FENCES.

This is the time the Congressman devotes to "mending his fences," to sowing the spring speeches in order to raise the fall crop of votes. He generally gets busy about the first of May, shaking hands with the voters, going to church, attending missionary societies, exhibiting himself in hotel lobbies, and "mixing around" generally. Though it is not so spectacular a stage of the campaign as the stump-speaking, baby-kissing period, the veteran statesman knows that it is no less important. None knows better than he that a hand shake and a little talk with the Bill Joneses and the Hank Smiths count in the ballot box. Wherefore, about the middle of April the Congressman who is held in Washington begins to get nervous. He hears about the activity of his opponents at home, he knows the folks are wondering if he has "got so high and mighty" in Washington that he is too good for them; he finds his enemies are sowing tares while he is away.

If Congress doesn't adjourn by the first of May he begins to perspire at the thought of the job he will have in explaining things to the home folks. But when the House and Senate go on and on, with interminable debates, with long investigations, with tangles that tie up the bills that must go through—when he learns that it may be the middle of July before he can get away and get to work in the home field, he is on the verge of despair. All he can do is to make speeches in the House and fire them by the ton at his constituents as public documents. The delay in adjournment is loading up the Congressional Record with yards of campaign speeches made, not for the benefit of fellow-members or the country, but for the voters in Mr. Anxious J. Congressman's district.

Howbeit, the cold pamphlet is a poor substitute for the warm grasp of the hand and the "Hello Bill!" of the campaigner. It is like love-making by correspondence or kissing by telephone.

Congress will probably not adjourn until after the middle of July. Meanwhile the fences must go unmended, the constituents ungreeted, the hands unshaken. The Congressman sits in his seat and hums that sad old tune, "Do They Miss Me At Home, Do They Miss Me?" And the clouds of gloom settle down over the House thick as the shades of defeat.

THE DEATH RECORD.

HENRY LEWIS.

Henry Lewis, aged more than eighty-two years, died at his home in Garrett county last Thursday of senile debility. The deceased served during the Civil War as a soldier in Company D, 3rd Md., P. H. B., and was a comrade of a number of Garrett county residents who served in the same command. His funeral took place on Saturday.

MRS. DAISY F. NINER.

Mrs. Daisy F. Niner, wife of Anthony Niner, died at her home in Wharton township, Fayette county, Pa., on Sunday, May 22, 1910, aged twenty-one years, three months and six days. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Fike, of Garrett county. The remains were interred in the Fike cemetery in District No. 2 on Tuesday following her death after impressive services conducted by Rev. George VanSickle in the Asher Glade church.

JOSHUA B. LIPSCOMB.

Joshua B. Lipscomb, one of the most highly respected residents of Garrett county, died at his home in Election District No. 10, near the Bethlehem U. B. church, on Tuesday evening at six o'clock, after an illness of four weeks of a complication of diseases. Mr. Lipscomb was aged 73 years; had been a member almost his entire life of the U. B. church, loved by his neighbors and revered by numerous friends. He leaves surviving him his wife, one son, P. T. Lipscomb, of Loch Lynn Heights, and the following daughters, Hulda, wife of William Schooley, of Ohio; Hettie, wife of Josiah T. Beckman; Almeda, wife of William Rodeheaver; Misses Dora E. and Minnie, at home. Another daughter preceded Mr. Lipscomb to the grave a number of years ago. The funeral of the deceased will occur this afternoon at two o'clock. The services will be held at the residence.

Let us fill your prescriptions. Lowest prices, quality considered. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

DEMOCRATS ARE PILING UP COSTS ON THE PEOPLE

Party in Power Making Elections Far Too Expensive.

One important effect of the ruling of Attorney General Straus that direct primary elections are required for the nomination of all candidates, congressional, judicial and others, is the addition of great costs to elections. These costs fall not only upon the taxpayers directly but also upon the candidates, and instead of paving the way for poor men to enter politics and to seek public office the direct primaries, involving double campaigns, are really impossible barriers to the ambitious man not abundantly supplied with capital.

For these additional costs incidental to elections and participation in politics, as well as for other expenses which have crept into local and state governments, the Democrats are primarily responsible. An opportunity awaits the real, genuine, sincere reformer, who will lead a crusade for abolition of useless offices and in the reduction of the number of members of topheavy boards and commissions. Under the Democratic regime there has been a steady increase in the offices. At the last session of the General Assembly the sum of over $85,000 annually was added to the appropriation list for the support of the public service commissioners, automobile commissioner and assistants, banking commissioner and assistant.

Goveruor Crothers brought before his cabinet the other dav the suggestion that it might be advisable to consider whether one police commissioner could discharge the duties now falling to the three commissioners. He mentioned the Police Board only to illustrate his point. He might have gone further and mentioned the Police Examiners, Road Commission, the Geological Survey, the Shellfish Commission, and later, perhaps, the Public Service Commission. He has already taken steps, by the creation of a central purchasing committee, to make possible in the future a reduction in the membership of the boards of directors of the several state-supported institutions, including the hospitals for the insane and the penal institutions.

The expense of the new primary election law as interpreted by the Attorney General and accepted unwillingly by the Democratic State Central Committee because it had no other course open to it imposes hardships on candidates, who are required to pay assessments before they can have their names printed on the ballots.

Here is the provision of the law imposing this assessment:

Each candidate for nomination for public office at a primary election shall pay the sum of twenty-five dollars ($25) for each county or legislative district of Baltimore city in which his name appears upon the ballot; provided, that in any county where the salary of the office for which nomination is sought is three hundred dollars ($300) or less, such payment shall be ten dollars ($10); and if a candidate for Governor, Attorney General, Comptroller, or Clerk of the Court of Appeals of the state, then he shall pay the sum of ten dollars ($10) for each county or legislative district of Baltimore city, upon filing his respective certificates with the Board of Supervisors of Elections; and the Board of Supervisors of Elections for Baltimore City shall pay over the amount so received to the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, and the Board of Supervisors of Elections for each county shall pay over the amount so received to the County Commissioners of each county, respectively; and all of the expenses of each of said primary elections in Baltimore city shall be paid by the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore.

It is only with candidates for Congress with whom the law deals this year, though there is no specific mention of congressional or judicial candidates in the law. Thus, in Southern Maryland each candidate will be required to deposit with the election supervisors $25 in each of the six counties of the district. It will be a difficult, if not impossible task to determine the assessment upon each candidate in the three wards and in the five precincts of the Eighteenth ward of Baltimore, which are attached to the district. In Baltimore there will be a hard knot to disentangle in determining the assessments upon candidates in the Third and Fourth districts. The law makes provision for assessments according to legislative districts and wards, but not according to congressional districts. Thus, the Third district is composed of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth and Twenty-second wards, and four precincts of the Eighteenth ward. The First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth and Sixth wards compose the First legislative district. The Seventh and Eighth wards are in the Second legislative district. The Twenty-second ward and the Eighteenth ward precincts are in the Fourth district.

How are candidates' assessments for their segregative sections of the district to be determined?

The same difficulty will be encountered in the Fourth congressional district, in which lie all of the wards of the Third legislative district and a part of the Fourth legislative district.

In the Second congressional district are two city wards, and an intricate arithmetical problem will arise in figuring out the amount of the assessments for these two wards.

These and other missing, inconsistent and intricate features of the law furnish conclusive and incontestable proof that the act was hastily drawn, and is one of the many inconsistent and costly results of hasty legislation.

Legislation which is deferred, as was the case of the Primary Election Law, until the closing hours of the session of the legislature, instead of being founded upon careful consideration and deliberate discussion.

A GREAT NATIONAL HIGHWAY.

Rehabilitation and Extension of National Road Projected.

A project is outlined by a writer in the Washington Post, which he says is neither chimerical nor Utopian but practical and probable and it is of especial interest to our section of the country. It is that a great national highway, 100 feet wide, be constructed from New York to San Francisco. It is suggested that some great American multimillionaire, like Mr. Rockefeller, construct it as a memorial with the proviso that it be kept up by the states through which it passes, but in the event that no man of wealth responds to the call, then the $75,000,000 necessary to construct the great thoroughfare shall be furnished by the national and state governments.

The project is of especial interest to us because, beginning at New York it runs to Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Cumberland and then follows the old pike, or Cumberland road, to St. Louis. Thence the proposed highway would be built on through Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, California to San Francisco. The only national highway ever constructrd in the United States was the Cumberland road. It was not such a highway as is being proposed, being only about one-third as wide, but it was a stimulus to trade and a great flood of traffic passed over it from the time of its completion to Wheeling in 1818 until it was abandoned. Few railroads do as much business as the old pike did in its palmy days. And if traffic was so great with the old time methods of transportation, what wonderful business, prosperity and pleasure the proposed new highway from coast to coast would bring! The Cumberland road cost from $9,745 to $13,000 per mile.

The article referred to contains some fine pictures of the old Cumberland road and in closing the author quotes Archer Butler Hurlbut in his work on American roads, "Historic Highways of America:

Mr. Hubert is an enthusiast upon the subject of the old days of "the road," and not only longs for, but really believes there will eventually be a revival of the glories that have departed Here is what he says at the end of his volume dealing with the history of the Cumberland road:

"What of the future? The dawning of the era of country living is in sight. It is being hastened by the revolution in methods of locomotion. The bicycle and automobile presage an era of good roads, and of an unparalleled country-ward movement of society. With this era is coming the revival of inn and tavern life, the rejuvenation of a thousand ancient highways and all the happy life that was ever known along their dusty stretches.

"By its position with reference to the National capital, and the military and commercial key of the central west, Pittsburg and the great cities of Ohio, the Cumberland road will become, perhaps, the foremost of the great roadways of America. The bed is capable of being made substantial at a comparatively small cost, as the grading is quite perfect. Its course measures the shortest possible route practicable for a roadway from tidewater to the Mississippi river. As a trunk line its location cannot be surpassed. Its historic associations will render the route of increasing interest to the thousands who, in other days, will travel, in the genuine sense of the word, over those portions of its length which long ago became hallowed ground.

"The 'Shades of Death' will again be filled with the echoing of the horn which heralded the arrival of the old-time coaches, and Winding Ridge again be crowded with the traffic of a nation. A hundred Cumberland road taverns will be opened, and bustling landlords welcome, as of yore, the travel-stained visitor. Merry parties will again fill those tavern halls, now long silent, with their laughter

"And all this will but mark a new and better era than its predecessor, an era of outdoor living, which must come, and come quickly, if as a nation we are to retain our present hold on the world's great affairs."

NOTICE CONCERNING WATER AND SEWER TAPS.

All persons are hereby notified not to make any tap to the water or sewer lines of the town of Oakland without first obtaining permission from the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland.

The ordinances of the town prohibit such interference with water and sewer lines and all persons violating the same will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Permission to tap both water and sewer pipes may be obtained from J. C. Dunham, clerk, upon application and payment of the proper charges.

By order,
6-3t The Mayor and Council of Oakland.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank

Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

D. E. BOLDEN'S Remodeling Sale

Contemplating extensive improvements to my store building, I offer my entire stock of Bed Room, Dining Room, Library and Parlor Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Pictures, Mattresses, Etc.

—AT—

10 Per Cent. Discount

For the Next 30 Days.

During the past few weeks the wholesale price on my lines have advanced ten per cent., but I am willing to give my customers the benefit of this advance in addition to the ten per cent. discount as above.

Some Rare Bargains will be included in this Special Sale

D. E. BOLDEN.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

School Board Meeting.

The Board of County School Commissioners will meet in their office in Oakland on

MONDAY, JUNE 6, 1910,

for the purpose of considering new buildings and repairs and such other business as may come before them.

By order of the Board.
E. A. BROWNING, Sec.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.

G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt — Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis — George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell — William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Miss Marguerite Davis is in Grafton on a visit to Miss Ethel Loar.

Mrs. Julius Scherr is in Washington visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Harland L. Jones spent Sunday with Terra Alta relatives.

Mr. William A. Smith, of Hoyes, was in Oakland last Friday for an hour or two on business.

Mrs. S. C. Hartley, of Meyersdale, is in Oakland visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles F. Hammond.

Miss Eleanor Johnson and Mrs. Creed Wilson are guests of Mrs. Fundenberg at Oakland.—Cumberland Times.

WANTED—A good reliable woman for general housework. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland.

Miss Grace Teats left Oakland this morning for Columbus, O., to visit relatives and friends for a short time.

Miss Grace Loar went to Grafton, W. Va., Saturday to visit her brothers, Messrs. George and Lawson Loar.

Miss Ann Shaffer, of Carmel, West Va., was in Oakland Monday as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Louis Bush.

Mrs. Anna Jones and Mrs. Hal Jackson and little son were guests on Monday of Mr. and Mrs. Scott T. Jones.

Mrs. John F. White returned to Oakland Monday from a week's visit to her daughter, Mrs. Nell Browning, in Pittsburg, Pa.

Mr. S. A. Nally left Oakland Tuesday night for a visit to friends in Trenton, New Jersey, expecting to be absent several days.

Try one of our Long Life Batteries on your telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Steiner, of Baltimore, spent Sunday and Monday in Oakland as the guests of Mrs. Steiner's father, Mr. E. D. Kepner.

Dr. W. W. Davis, superintendent of Mountain Lake Park, and Mrs. Davis were in the city last night on their return home from Pittsburg.—Cumberland News.

Fountain Syringes and Hot Water Bottles, household necessities, at prices ranging from 75c. to $1.50, at Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Mr. R. H. West has disposed of his interest in the City Roller Mills property to his partner, Mr. Andrew W. Helbig, who will assume personal charge at once.

Mr. Stuart F. Hamill left Oakland Tuesday night for a ten days' trip to New York and Boston. He will also visit Atlantic City and Philadelphia before returning to Oakland.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best. Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

Miss Teckla Johnson, of Cameron, W. Va., who with Dr. Ward's family is spending some time at Lake Terra Alta, was in Oakland Sunday and Monday as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cheuvront.

Miss Sarah Porter, a teacher in the Perkasee (Pa.) public schools, arrived in Oakland Sunday night to spend the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Porter, at their home on Alder street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Stull arrived in Oakland last Friday morning from Philadelphia, being preceded here by Mrs. Stull's sister, Miss Law, who arrived the day previous. Mrs. Stull has been and is still quite ill.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

Mr. Lakin Roberts, of Grafton, son of Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Roberts, was in Oakland last Thursday, going from here to Crellin on Friday where he attended the funeral of his grandfather, the late Jesse J. Ashby.

Messrs. S. C. Hartley, of Meyersdale, Pa., J. Ray Smoot, of Newburg, W. Va., J. N. Berthy, of Cowen, W. Va., and C. H. Smoot, of Alingdale, W. Va., spent Tuesday with Mr. C. F. Hammond in Oakland on business.

Mr. B. W. Harvey, of near Deer Park, was in Oakland Tuesday on business connected with the opening of a new county road in District No. 10 which will add very materially to the convenience of almost every resident of that district.

All members of Oakland Lodge No. 113, Knights of Pythias, are expected to be present at the session of the lodge to be held tomorrow night when the third degree will be exemplified. At the adjournment of the lodge refreshments will be served.

Money to Loan—Secured by first mortgage on real estate. Terms easy. Renninger & Offutt, Attorneys Oakland, Md. 3t

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

JURY AWARDED OWNERS $800

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Will Pay for Land Condemned.

The condemnation proceedings instituted some days ago by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for the purpose of obtaining possession of half an acre of land at Hutton belonging to Messrs. Carney & Pendergast, merchants at that point, were determined Tuesday when a jury summoned by Sheriff Shartzer for the purpose of hearing testimony and placing a value upon the land, awarded the owners the sum of $800.

The jury, officers, attorneys and others interested in the case went to Hutton in a special car and after viewing the land adjourned to the court house in Oakland where the testimony of a number of witnesses was heard, the greater part of the afternoon being consumed in taking the testimony and hearing the arguments of counsel.

Ex-Sheriff Edward J. Frantz was foreman of the jury. Various estimates concerning the value of the property were fixed by witnesses, running all the way from $700 to $2200. The land is improved by a small dwelling house which brings a small revenue to the owners. Evidence was introduced showing the cost of the property when purchased nineteen years ago by Messrs. Carney & Pendergast, the cost of repairs, etc., since that time and other vital points.

The railroad representatives had offered the owners $500 for the property, which was refused, hence the proceedings as above stated.

Messrs. Thayer and Sincell appeared for the owners of the property and Mr. Gilmor S. Hamill appeared for the railroad company.

Dr. J. E. Legge leaves tonight for St. Louis, Mo., where he will attend the meetings of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Physicians and Surgeons, and also the meetings of the American Medical Association. From St. Louis he expects to go to Chicago where he will spend a few days, returning home in about ten days.

Since May 18th forty-six marriage licenses have been issued at the office of Clerk E. Z. Tower, the greatest number for one day being eight. These were issued on Monday of this week, marking the largest number issued in twenty-four hours since in August, 1904, when licenses to the number of ten were granted.

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Cross, of near Sines, left Oakland Monday at midnight for Nez Perce, Idaho, where they expect to make their future home. Mr. Cross has already made one or two trips across the continent, but becoming dissatisfied with conditions he always returned to Garrett county. He will engage in farming in Idaho and we trust that he will be successful in his new home.

Write E. S. West, Oakland, Md., the only licensed real estate dealer in Garrett county, for booklet describing all kinds of real estate for sale in this vicinity. Also valuable farms, coal and timber lands in other States, Mexico and Canada. 1-4t.

A new traction engine consigned to Messrs. Price & Hoblitzell, road contractors, came very near being wrecked in the local freight yards Monday when the car upon which it was loaded became derailed and in an endeavor to place it upon the track the lower wheels sunk so deep into the earth that the machine almost toppled over. The steam rigger from Piedmont was called into requisition and in half an hour the car was placed upon the rails and later in the day the engine was unloaded and will be taken down on Hoopole in a day or two.

Mr. Edward E. Sollars, of near Oakland, left here Saturday afternoon for Baltimore where on Monday evening he attended the graduating exercises of the class of 1910 of the Maryland Medical College, of which his son, Edward E., was a member, leading his class of more than forty by a high mark in all branches of study. The graduate, Dr. Sollars, has the best wishes of a host of friends for a successful professional life and is to be congratulated for the eminent position he maintained while a student. THE REPUBLICAN acknowledges an invitation to be present at the commencement and we express our regret at not being able to attend.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

Miss Anna Manges arrived in Oakland Tuesday evening from the East and is engaged in preparations for the presentation at the Opera House on the night of the 9th inst. of the "Gibson Family Reunion." Miss Manges as a trainer has made an enviable reputation and has been engaged for several months past in the work of training local people in various towns and cities of the eastern states for the presentation of this and other plays of like nature. Rehearsals for the play will begin as soon as the cast is made up, which will probably be this evening. The play will be given for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Lutheran church, the engagement having been booked more than two months ago.

Preparations and Work for "Family Reunion" Well Started.

The ladies of St. Mark's church are the busiest people in town at present. This "Family Reunion" must be made the biggest amateur play from every standpoint ever given in Oakland and it takes some real hustle to get characters invited and all the preliminary work done to even get a start on such a production. The ladies on the committee have been very successful in securing the very best talent of the city for most of the principal parts. The principal musical and dramatic roles are usually quite difficult to fill but the committee has had the readiest responses from all those who have the reputation of having real talent for stage work.

Rehearsals began yesterday when Miss Manges, the instructor, arrived for the drilling of the various parts. As has been stated previously through these columns this play has been prepared and arranged by Annie Sara Bock, a talented elocutionist and authoress from West Virginia. Miss Bock employs a company of thirty young women who are drilled and trained in this special play to produce it. The director who is sent to our town by Miss Bock is one of the ablest in the company. Over 75 persons have been invited to take part in the play and they surely make a big success of it.

"At the Ferry," which was presented by local talent in the Oakland Opera House last Thursday evening, met with such success that the performance was repeated on Friday evening to a smaller but nonetheless appreciative audience. The characters in the play numbered fifty of Oakland's young people and they carried out their parts perfectly. Miss Bookwalter, who came here to drill those taking part in the entertainment, left on Monday for Hagerstown, where she will have charge of a like entertainment to be presented in that city for the benefit of one of the Lutheran churches there. The entertainment in Oakland netted the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's M. E. church, under whose auspices it was given, a neat sum.

Mr. J. Griffin Hall, of Baltimore city, an extract from the oration "The Nation's Debt of Gratitude" delivered at the National Cemetery, Antietam Battlefield, we publish in this issue, is quite popular in the Monemental City and elsewhere, as a public speaker and entertainer. It will be remembered that during the last political campaign Mr. Hall spent three weeks campaigning in this county in the interest of the Republican ticket, and delivered addresses at nearly all the principal points in the county, with Congressman Pearre. Mr. Hall also delivered an address before the Teachers' Institute held at Friendsville. Being of a very genial and social disposition he made many friends during his visit and canvass of the county.

State Senator Harvey J. Speicher and Mr. N. U. Bond left Oakland Monday night for Baltimore where they went to attend a meeting of the State Central Committee called to assemble at noon Tuesday for the purpose of revoking the call recently promulgated for the Congressional primaries in the various counties of the District. The reassembling of the State Committee was made compulsory owing to the recent decision of Attorney General Straus who held that the Congressional primaries must be held under the Lee law and that candidates must be voted for direct instead of electing delegates to a convention who in turn nominate the Congressional candidate. At the meeting Tuesday dates were set for the primaries and these will be held under the direction of the Board of Supervisors of the various counties composing the district.

DR. L. M. DeMORIAN.

An Osteopath, Is In the City.

Dr. L. M. DeMorian, an Osteopath of high standing, has located in Oakland with offices in the opera house block, second floor. He came here from Salisbury, Md., for the purpose of practicing his profession and is now ready to treat all kinds of diseases where medicine or other methods have failed.

The doctor does not use any medicine whatever, nor does he resort to the knife—only scientific manipulation of the human system. Thus he gets wonderful results.

The following are some of the diseases treated by his method:

Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption in its first stages, Brights Disease, Diabetes, Constipation, Indigestion, or any other disorder of the alimentary canal; Catarrh of the stomach, Bowels or Intestines; Kidney, Liver or Bladder trouble; Fevers, Disability, Vertigo, Curvature of the Spine, Headaches, Weakness of the Back, Dizziness, all kinds of Rheumatism, Appendicitis. For nervous and female trouble it has no equal in the world.

The doctor does not take any case that he thinks that he cannot cure or benefit. Call and consult him. Consultation free. Ladies and children treated at their homes. Offices in the opera house block, Oakland. 14-tf

New Wall Paper Store.

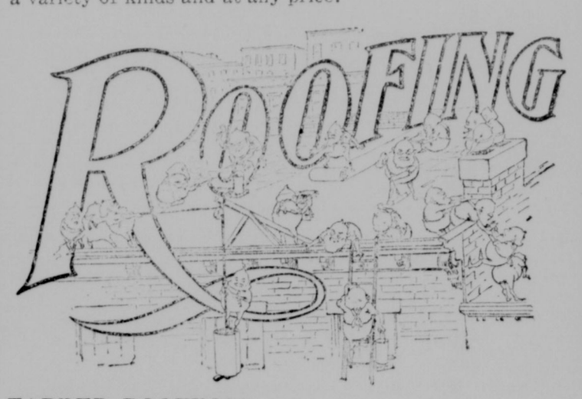
Having purchased the wall paper stock of Messrs. Matthews & Helbig and added a large stock of new patterns, we are now open for business on the second floor of the Townshend building, Second street, and solicit the patronage of the public.

W. H. BARTLETT & Co.

Subscribe for The Republican.

ESTABLISHED 1894.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have a variety of kinds and at any price.



TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S

FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Dr. and Mrs. Campbell arrived here Thursday morning of last week from Oklahoma, where they had spent the winter with relatives.

Our streets were lighted last night by electricity, the light plant having been started up for the season.

Miss Sarah C. Harris came to the Park last week from her winter home in Virginia and will soon have her house ready for summer guests.

Mr. H. E. Felty, who has been in Baltimore for several weeks, is again with us.

Delegations were sent from our Sunday school Sunday afternoon to decorate the graves of members of our church who had died within the past year. Messrs. J. A. Enlow and H. V. Leighton went to the Oakland cemetery placed flowers on the grave of Erastus Rathbun, and Messrs. H. N. Cuppett and Adam Long performed a like service at the Deer Park cemetery on the grave of Mrs. Adam Long.

Miss Nellie Lee is visiting Miss Virginia Sperry in Baltimore.

Miss Louise and Messrs. Paul and Willard Sperry were with their parents Sunday and Monday, returning to Baltimore Tuesday morning.

Mr. Willard Sperry has resigned the position he held in Fairmont and goes back to the B. & O. central office in Baltimore.

Miss Rose Wilson recently returned from a visit with her brother Charles and family in Washington, D. C.

The Epworth League monthly business meeting and social was held at the parsonage Tuesday evening. After the transaction of business and a pleasant social hour, light refreshments were served by Mrs. Musgrave.

Mr. George Dawson has the contract for the painting of the parsonage.

Mr. Lee N. Hayden will paint Wesley chapel.

Mrs. S. L. Allen arrived here yesterday and will be a guest at Haydenhurst for some time.

Our people generally observed Memorial Day, some going to Oakland and others to Deer Park, while many took in both places.

Preaching Sunday evening, 8 o'clock.

Preaching and communion Sunday, June 12th, at 11.00 a. m.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, letters of administration on the estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof duly authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 11th day of October, 1910 they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

MARY V. SPIKER,

Given under my hand this 12th day of April, 1910.

J. M. SPIKER,
Administrator,
Piedmont W. Va.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscribers hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof duly authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of October, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

ELLA DAVIS,

Given under my hand this 28th day of April, 1910.

ANNIE WARNICK,
Administratrix,
Chaffee W. Va.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said road commencing at or near the mouth of Crabtree Creek on Savage River by crossing said river from West to East side and passing through the lands of the Lonaconing Coal & Iron Company, Oss Brothers and others to intersect the County Road near Bloomington, a distance of about four and one-half miles, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of June, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said locating of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

P. P. McANDREWS,
P. H. ROBERTSON,
GEO. W. BROADWATER,
Examiners.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the German Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

PASTOR RUSSELL HOMEWARD BOUND

"As the Waters Cover the Great Deep" (Isaiah xi, 9).

Pastor Russell is returning to America in good condition after having addressed the public of Great Britain, Ireland, Germany, Warsaw, Russia; Rome and Jerusalem—in all forty times. His largest audiences were at London, about 7,000, with Glasgow a good second.

Mid-Ocean, May 29.—As I look abroad and see water, water everywhere, without a speck of land in sight, and as I reflect that we are passing over varying depths, some of which are as great as five miles, I am reminded of the promise in the Lord's Word that ultimately the whole earth, the world of mankind, shall have such an abundant knowledge of the Creator and the Redeemer, as to be fitly illustrated by the depths of the sea. I have therefore chosen as my text the words, "The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." I remember also the very similar promise by the Lord through the Prophet (Habakkuk ii. 14), "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." I am reminded also of the Prophet's declaration that the time will come when "Every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess" (Isaiah xlv, 23). And again "That at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; And that every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." And I am also reminded that in that day, "They shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord, for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord" (Jeremiah xxxi, 34). The question properly arises, To what extent shall we consider these statements literally true? What kind of fulfillment should we expect them to have?

If we look out upon the heathen world, however sympathetic we may be in respect to foreign missionary work, doing all in our power to make known to the heathen the grace of God, and the great Redeemer, we are nevertheless compelled to admit that there is absolutely no hope of our ever causing every knee to bow, and every tongue to confess Christ in heathen lands, even as we have long ago given up hope of accomplishing such work in civilized lands. The work is too great for us, and the errors of heathendom are too deeply seated to be quickly eradicated. Government statistics show us that there are twice as many heathen today as there were a century ago. If, therefore, any of us had been flattering ourselves respecting our ability to accomplish the conversion of the world, it is time for us to acknowledge our error and to look to the Lord, realizing that in him alone is the world's hope. Doubtless this is just the lesson that the Lord wishes us to learn. He does not wish us to give up our efforts to "Do good unto all men as we have opportunity, especially the household of faith," for our own blessing is associated with such activity on behalf of others. But God does wish us to realize that of ourselves we are unable to cope with the situation. He wishes us to realize that only through the establishment of the Kingdom of God's dear Son can the glorious blessings of the Millennium ever be hoped for. Alas! We must admit, and should feel deeply humble by the admission, that even in civilized lands, the number of footstep followers of the Lamb of God is very few. The number who are "walking, not after the flesh, but after the Spirit" in civilized lands is very few, in comparison with the population as a whole. We are not in this setting ourselves as judges of the hearts of our fellow-creatures—remarkably few make any pretention to walking in the "narrow way," which alone now leads to life everlasting (Matthew vii. 14).

The Necessity For Knowledge.

Many dear Christian people, desirous of thinking well of the heavenly Father, are so befogged with the teachings of the past, that they try to imagine that the way to eternal life is not so narrow as the Master said; they try to imagine that somehow the heathen will be saved in their ignorance, notwithstanding the Apostle says, "How shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard" (Romans x, 14). And again, his assurance that "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts iv, 12).

The error from the past which led to this inconsistency is the teaching that all of the heathen are going to eternal torture, and that they never will have an opportunity of accepting Christ in the future. They rebel against the thought which has come down from the dark ages that God foreknew the ignorance of the heathen and predestinated their eternal torture; that they should not hear of the only name under heaven or given among men whereby they might be saved and fixed their environments so that they never heard. The whole difficulty, we see, lies in the fact that God's people in the past have not studied his Word as they should have done. Some of us subscribed to one creed, and some to another, saying to ourselves, Our creed is not satisfactory, but it is probably as free from error as other creeds. We consoled ourselves with the thought that all Christendom was considerably befogged, and we no more than others. Some of us probably tried to satisfy our minds by saying that those features of our creeds which dishonored God, and implied his lack of wisdom, or worse, his willingness but lack of justice, or lack of power—that these things were mysteries which must be believed, although they could not be reconciled with human reason and common sense. Some of us even tried to persuade ourselves that we were exercising extraordinary faith in these matters, but in reality we were merely ignorant of God's Word, and credulous of the wisdom of our creed-makers of the past.

True Light Now Shining.

But now, thank God, "The night is far spent, and the day is at hand" (Romans xiii, 12). "Now is our salvation nearer than when we believed" (Romans xiii, 11). The evidence that we are in the morning of the new dispensation multiplies on every hand! We are evidently in the period which the Bible declares as "The day of God's preparation." God is preparing to usher in the long-promised period of blessing and refreshment, which he has foretold through all the holy prophets. The wonderful inventions of our day along the lines of chemistry, steam and electricity are fulfillments of the wonderful "Day of Christ," which is nearing. God's people have failed of great blessings in not sooner noticing this fact. We stood, as it were, with our backs toward the East, looking for the sun to rise in the West; we were looking to our own efforts to convert the world, rather than looking to the Lord from whom alone must come the help. Hence the glow in the East had assumed considerable proportions before we noticed it—and many of our brethren are still looking to the West, and angrily refuse to turn and follow the dawn of the New Dispensation, which now may be so clearly seen by the eye of faith.

Let us note well the Apostle Peter's words, assuring us that the vision he had on the Mount of Transfiguration made a deep impression upon him. He tells us, nevertheless, that "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts"—the "parousia" (presence) of Christ, the "Morning Star."

Knowledge a Necessity.

But admitting the promise of the Scriptures that the knowledge of the Lord shall be worldwide and ocean deep—that every creature shall be brought to an accurate knowledge of the truth, in due time (I Timothy ii. 4-6), wherefor is the necessity for this? Is knowledge really indispensable to salvation? Is it not written in the Scriptures of the Apostles Peter and John, that "The people perceived that they were ignorant and unlearned men?" If their ignorance and lack of learning did not hinder them from having God's favor, and obtaining salvation through Christ, and even obtaining Apostleship, why should so much stress be laid upon knowledge? Does God really care for knowledge? Has he predetermined that all who would be in his favor must be educated, and that he cares naught for the ignorant? Do we not read to the contrary that, "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise" (I Corinthians i, 26, 27). "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith?" (James ii, 5.)

Very true, we answer. With God the wisdom of this world is foolishness, and with this world, the wisdom of God is foolishness. Knowledge may therefore be viewed from two standpoints. So far as worldly knowledge commending any man or woman to God, or making any man or woman more fit for divine favor, we believe the contrary to be true. Unwillingly we are forced to the conclusion that the great colleges of the world are the most destructive agencies in the earth, as respects the Divine revelation, the Bible, and the true knowledge of God, which is essential to salvation and eternal life. We therefore sharply discriminate between earthly knowledge and heavenly knowledge, and between the wisdom of men and the wisdom of God.

Our Lord Jesus gave us the key to this question of the importance of knowledge in relationship to our attainment of eternal life. He said, in praying to the Father, "And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent" (John xvii, 3). Only such as attain to this knowledge may have eternal life. Consequently we see at a glance that remarkably few of our race have thus far attained to the degree of knowledge which God would be pleased to recognize. At first this might seem peculiar to us; we might say to ourselves or to others, Why does not God give it out freely to all? The reply of the Scriptures is that God is giving his knowledge freely now to a certain class, and that by and by he will give it to all the families of the earth. This essential knowledge is promised to the faithful in the world, He that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. "The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence him, and he will show them his Covenant." "Blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears, for they hear." Such as thus abide in covenant relationship with the Lord Jesus are indeed taught of God in the School of Christ, and may truly grow in grace and knowledge.

A distinction should be observed in knowing about God, and knowing God himself. It is not sufficient that we should recognize God as the Almighty Creator, for devils also believe that. On the other hand, to be intimately acquainted with God means that we must come into intimate fellowship with him, and this means that we must come unto the Father through the Son, by faith. By thus coming to our heavenly Father by an acquaintance with his Word, and through an appreciation of his glorious work, past, present, and future, we get a view of the lengths, and breadths, and heights and depths of "love divine, all love excelling." In proportion as we behold the outline of the Divine character, we perceive our own deficiencies and try the more to rid ourselves of them, and at least manifest to the Lord that our hearts are in harmony with the principles of righteousness.

The Sun of Righteousness.

Very appropriately the Scriptures speak of the present as a night-time. They tell us that now "Darkness covers the (civilized) earth, and gross darkness the people (Heathendom)." They assure us that now God's people need the lamp of Divine revelation to guide their footsteps until the day dawns. They assure us, however, that the morning will be ushered in by the great Sun of Righteousness—the Christ, the Messiah, Prophet, Mediator, King of Glory.

Now is the Church excluded from this work of shining upon and enlightening the world and scattering its darkness. The Master gave us to understand that the Church with himself will constitute the Sun of Righteousness, which will then arise with healing in its beams. Thus in the parable of the Wheat and Tares, he pictures the entire work of this Gospel Age and its consummation, which he styles "The harvest—the end of the age." His word respecting the separation of the wheat from the tares is that the wheat shall be gathered into his barn—changed from the earthly to the heavenly nature, and he adds, "Then shall the righteous shine as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father." "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear."

The figure of the rising sun scattering the darkness, ignorance and superstition of the world harmonizes with the other picture, which represents the Kingdom of God superseding the kingdom of Satan, and those deluded by Satan, styled in the Scriptures, the kingdoms of this world.

Be Glad and Rejoice.

We may well sympathize with our forefathers, to whom it was not granted to see as clearly as we may now see the glorious fullness of the Divine purpose to eventually enlighten the whole earth, by causing the knowledge of the glory of God to fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep. To us, therefore, is especially applicable the prophetic words, "Be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create. For behold, I create new heavens and a new earth, and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind" (Isaiah lxv, 18, 17). Thus does the Lord picture the new dispensation in graphic language. The new heavens symbolically represent the Church in its new and glorified condition, exercising superior control over the affairs of mankind. Likewise, the new earth symbolically represents the new state or condition of society—the new social order of things which will be introduced as a part of the New Dispensation. Imperfection is now written upon everything with which men are associated, partly because of our fallen condition through heredity, and partly, as the Scriptures declare, through Satan, the god of this world or age, who now works in the hearts of the children of disobedience—prompting to sin and selfishness, pride and ambition, and in every sense of the word tending to alienate the hearts of men from the ways of righteousness. Moreover, the Adversary is largely responsible for the gross errors of misconception of the Divine character, which during the centuries past have been creeping into the minds of those who were feeling after God, if haply they might find him. All who are of the right spirit, truth seekers, and truth lovers, will be glad to abandon the errors on this subject, which so long have hindered a proper appreciation of the glorious character of our heavenly Father. By teaching us through false doctrines to dread the heavenly Father, the Adversary has implanted in our minds a fear which constitutes a barrier. The Lord speaks of this saying, "Their fear of me is taught by the precepts of men" (Isaiah xxix, 13). Let us then use more diligently than ever before the wonderful Bible which Divine Providence has placed within the reach of all of God's people, that we may know him, whom to know aright will mean to us life eternal.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson X.—Second Quarter, For June 5, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xiv, 22-36. Memory Verses, 26, 27—Golden Text, Matt. xiv, 33—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It was a time of expectation, on the part of some, of the coming of Elijah or the prophet like unto Moses (Deut. xviii) or the Messiah; hence the different thoughts and sayings of people concerning John and Jesus. Some who had seen this latest miracle said, "This is of a truth that prophet that should come into the world" (John vi, 14). When Jesus, therefore, perceived that they would come and take Him by force to make Him a king He constrained His disciples to get into a ship and go before Him across the sea, while He sent the multitudes away, and He went alone into a mountain to commune with His Father, no doubt about many things. He felt free to talk with His Father at any time, in any place and about everything. Heaven and the Father were more real to Him than all the places and people on earth. He could say as none other ever could, "I came down from heaven;" "I go to prepare a place for you." Even while He was on earth He spoke of Himself as "the Son of Man which is in heaven" (John iii, 13). If we are taught in the last lesson the one great business of the believers who are on the earth to give the bread of life to the perishing we have in this at least a suggestion of the present work of Christ, in heaven with the Father, on our behalf.

As we see the disciples in the boat, toiling in rowing, tossed with the waves, for the wind was contrary unto them, and Jesus alone on the land we can hardly fail to recognize a picture of this present age with Jesus on high, while the company of believers on earth toil on, contending with many contrary things and seemingly making little progress. I am glad that it is written "He saw them toiling" (Mark vi, 48). I recall that is written concerning Israel in Egypt, "I have surely seen the affliction of my people * * * and have heard their cry, * * * for I know their sorrows, and I am come down to deliver them" (Ex. iii, 7, 8). We are sure that God knows and loves and cares and will in due time deliver His church from this evil age and will deliver you, suffering one, from your trials in the very best time and way (II Cor. i, 10; II Tim. iv, 18). In the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea. In the morning, that may now be very near, He will come for His church, and just as the disciples were immediately at the land as soon as they received Him into the boat so the church will be at her destination as soon as she welcomes Him on His return for her. Oh, that she might say with one accord, "Come, Lord Jesus!" The morning deliverances of Scripture are a most profitable study—for example, the overthrow of the host of Pharaoh, the deliverance of Daniel from the lions' den, the future deliverance of Israel in the time of their great tribulation according to Ps. xlvi, 5, margin. It will be a beautiful morning for Israel, according to II Sam. xxiii, 4, but there will be no morning for unbelievers, and so the morning cometh and also the night (Isa. viii, 20, R. V.; xxi, 12). At first the disciples cried out for fear when they saw the Lord walking on the sea, and there are many believers who would be greatly startled if Jesus should come. Just recently I have heard several confess that when they first heard of Jesus' coming again, literally coming for His church, and that it might be at any time it gave them cold chills. Some added that the chill soon gave place to a thrill of joy, and it has been a joyful expectation ever since. How blessed His "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid." Compare Matt. ix, 2, 22; John xvi, 33; Acts xxiii, 11. May we have grace to recognize Him and His love in every event.

Peter as literally walked on the water as Jesus did, but not far, for he took his eyes off Jesus, and the wind and the waves were more real to him than the Lord, and he began to sink. His prayer was very brief and to the point, "Lord, save me." Immediately that kind hand held him, and he was safe, and soon they were in the boat, and the wind ceased. Peter's trouble was "little faith and real doubt." Do we not see ourselves? We must have faith and doubt not (Jas. i, 6). In a letter from a physician, an earnest Christian, received this week he says: "In instances where I have absolutely trusted Him, where all else had failed and the darkness was so black, He never failed me. Oh, if I could always absolutely trust Him without wavering!" The faith of the disciples was evidently strengthened, for they said, "Of a truth Thou art the Son of God."

When He had landed and the people knew it they soon brought to Him from all the country round about all who were diseased, asking the privilege of just touching the hem of His garment, and as many as touched were made perfectly whole. They must have touched as did the woman of chapter ix. But some must have spread the knowledge of Him or the others would not have known. What are we doing to tell the glad tidings of such a Saviour? Are we zealous in this matter? How do we show our love and gratitude to Him and our love to others?

AID FOR ROCK ROADS

Native Limestones to Be Tested at Kansas University.

BY ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT

Counties and Towns May Have the Benefit For the Asking—Materials and Methods Found That Will Make Macadam Last Indefinitely.

The engineering department of the University of Kansas has decided to join the good roads movement. From now on it will be equipped to give the benefit of its testing laboratories to the counties and cities in the state of Kansas on road materials and methods. A bulletin will be published soon by the department giving the standard tests on more than 200 samples of limestone from the eastern half of the state. The regents established a testing station at Lawrence about a year ago, but up to this time there have been no funds to publish the results of the tests that have been made. The tests in the first bulletin are of stones available for macadamizing, of which there is practically an unlimited amount.

In 1905 Professor W. C. Hoad, who has charge of the work, had two senior students begin an investigation of the value of Kansas limestones for road-making, and they tested nearly a hundred samples. In the following year two more students, Edward N. Noyes and D. C. McConaughy, carried on the tests. Last year more tests were made from time to time until the department has a good idea of what limestones will make macadam roads. There is a wonderful difference in them, some being practically worthless, while others—and they are in the majority—are first class material.

Two tests are applied, one to determine the toughness and wearing qualities of the stones and the other to determine the cementing properties of the powder that is made by the road roller and the wear of traffic. It sometimes happens that a stone that is good in one respect is worthless on account of the lack of the other quality. Wearing qualities are determined by the standard "rattler" test, which was originated in France thirty years ago. The samples of some are broken into uniform pieces, so that fifty will weigh approximately eleven pounds. They are put into a "rattler," which consists of an iron cylinder, set at an angle of thirty degrees with the axis of rotation. In the test, lasting five hours, the cylinder is rotated 100,000 times, and the amount ground off the samples in that time by weight determines the measure of wearing quality of the stones. In making the cement test the powder is taken from the "rattler" and mixed with water. It is allowed to harden in cylindrical briquettes and is tested for its resistance under the trip hammer.

"We expect to be able to make tests from now on for any town or county that has a macadamizing project under way," said Professor Hoad, "and I believe the work will be a great thing for the good roads movement in the state. There are any amount of limestones which, if properly selected and put on the roads, will make roads that last indefinitely."

There are only six other testing stations in the United States that are equipped for the tests now being made at the university. The only other one west of Ohio is at the Iowa Agricultural college.—Kansas City Star.

ROAD DRAG PARADE.

Novel Movement at Sturgeon, Mo., For Good Highways.

A road drag parade half a mile in length attracted a crowd of people to Sturgeon, Mo., the other day and undoubtedly converted many who will take up the work in the future.

The parade was headed by the Sturgeon band. In carriages were the officers of the Brotherhood of Road Draggers, and then followed the drags, which were furnished by the farmers living near town. At the end of the procession an automobile owned by G. A. Pollard carried a drag, and this feature was liberally applauded along the line of march.

Sturgeon is trying to sustain her reputation of having the best dirt roads of any city in the state, and the road drag is doing the work.

Good Roads Prescription.

At a recent meeting of the highway commission and road supervisors of Baltimore county, Md., Dr. Charles L. Mattfeldt, one of the highway commissioners, wrote the following prescription for good roads:

Good stone
On good grades,
Over good base,
Dry and well packed,
Rolled and rolled,
Oiled or tarred
And properly drained,
Dustless and waterproof—
Success will follow.

It will be noticed that the letters forming the beginning of each line spell "good roads."

New Road Preserver That Works.

The Essex county (N. J.) park commission believes that it has found the most serviceable and at the same time the simplest road preserver and dust eliminator in a cheap preparation which is made from wood pulp and, mixed with water, is spread on the roads by means of an ordinary sprinkler. The material has been tried on the roads of Orange park with great success. The mixture, while holding the surface together, hardens it and resists the wear of automobiles.

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m.

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-69-1y.

Baltimore & Ohio R. R.

Schedule effective June 2, 1907.

OAKLAND.

*Daily. †Daily except Sunday. §Sunday only.

For WASHINGTON, BALTIMORE, PHILADELPHIA & NEW YORK, Depart *12.27 a. m., *6.34 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *8.29 p. m. Arrive *7.12 a. m., *9.38 p. m., *10.29 p. m., *11.54 p. m.
For CUMBERLAND and Way Points, Depart *10.00 a. m., §4.40 p. m. Arrive *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m.
For COLUMBUS & CHICAGO, Depart *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m.
For GRAFTON (Accom.), Depart *9.26 a. m., *7.26 p. m. Arrive *10.00 a. m., *4.40 p. m.
For FAIRMONT and WHEELING, Depart *9.26 a. m. (local), *3.38 p. m., *11.54 p. m. Arrive *6.07 a. m., *4.17 p. m., *12.25 night.
For FAIRMONT (Accom.), Depart *7.26 p Arrive *10.00 a. m.
For CINCINNATI, LOUISVILLE and ST LOUIS, Depart *7.12 a. m., *3.38 p. m., *10.26 p.m. Arrive *12.27 a. m., *6.31 a. m., *8.29 p m

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS!

This is to notify the taxpayers of Garrett county that the Annual Levy for 1910 has been made and published, and to call their attention to the following abstract Section 45, Chapter 506, Acts of 1888, relating to the discount to be allowed and the interest to be charged on all tax bills.

"All county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of the levy thereof, and on all county taxes paid on or before the 1st day of September a discount of 3 per cent. will be allowed and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the tax bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt given for taxes so paid. But the discount shall not be allowed unless the whole amount of state and county taxes are paid when same is made.

R. L. FRIES, Treasurer.

Notice to The Public.

I have taken charge of the Fresh Meat Department of Creutzburg's store where I can furnish my trade with the best Fresh Meats at all times, and solicit a share of your patronage. Everything clean and up-to-date.

Farmers, bring your calves, mutton, lambs and beef and get the highest cash prices for them.

Yours to please,
HENRY SMOUSE.
The Up-to-Date Market.

Thirty Reasons For Using Electric Light

1 Safe
2 Clean
3 Bright
4 Odorless
5 Dirtless
6 Greaseless
7 Sootless
8 Fumeless
9 Flameless
10 Matchless
11 Healthful
12 Convenient
13 Explosionless
14 Draws Trade
15 Helps Advertise
17 White Light
18 Steady Light
19 Always Ready
20 Makes Home Attractive
21 Welcomes Friends
22 Frightens Thieves
23 Brightens Everything
24 Can Be Used Anywhere
25 Saves Labor
26 Permits Better Work
27 Consumes No Oxygen
28 Is a Cheap Luxury
29 Is Better Than Ever
30 Is Cheaper Than Ever

The Oakland Electric Company

WATCH OAKLAND GROW.

A Modern City on the Crest of the Alleghany Mountains.

Oakland, the county seat of Garrett county, Maryland, is situated in a magnificent farming country. Agriculture being the true basis of all continued prosperity, this industry alone could support a city or several thousand people, where most crops of the temperate zone are produced and where total failures are wholly unknown. In addition to the staple crops of wheat, oats, corn, rye, potatoes, buckwheat, maple sugar, hay, etc., this section is a great apple country, and many varieties of fruits, berries and vegetables grow with little attention.

Yet, these are by no means all the advantages nature has so prodigally bestowed upon this community. Right at our doors are rich deposits of coal, kaolin, pure glass sand, fire and potters' clay, an inexhaustible supply of brick and tile shale, abundant supply of natural gas for lighting, heating and manufacturing purposes, the purest water on earth, a great supply of water power only waiting harness to illuminate this mountain top, and supply factories and electric railways with power.

Oakland is situated in the center of a plateau twenty by sixty miles in extent, two thousand eight hundred feet above the sea, where it is never too hot for comfort and never too cold for convenience; America's ideal summer resort; America's greatest health resort; where we sleep under two or more blankets all summer long and you, who reside in the lowlands or large centers of population, are sweltering with the heat and breathing humid, unhealthy and poisoned air. Here the drives are grand in prospect and glorious in nature's garb; where some new scene greets the vision at every turn of the road. $238,000.00 is being spent on State highways radiating from Oakland.

Come to Western Maryland, young man, and grow up with the country. If you prefer to invest in agricultural lands or fruit lands, you will find prices ranging from five to fifty dollars per acre, depending upon location and improvements. These are attractive investments without risk of loss. We also invite factories and industries of all kinds, and believe that this location offers the best advantages on account of the abundance of raw material, cheap fuel and accessibility to market.

When you consider that right here, within six hours of the Nation's capital, is a country with almost unbounded resources, with a variety of everything: Water Works, Sewerage, Natural Gas, a healthy climate, where hay fever and many ills to which the human race is heir in less favored climes, is entirely unknown; a land of pure and abundant water, a land of churches and schools, without any race or other vexatious problems, and where the small investor along with the man of more pretentious capital has opportunities commensurate with his pluck, intelligence and energy, of an equal start in life, then you will readily concede the importance and correctness of the advice given herein.

"The Creator is still making people, but no more land." "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, if taken at the flood, leads on to fortune and fame."

Don't miss the opportunity of a lifetime and regret it for years to come. "A word to the wise is sufficient." Oakland is on the boom, and you should get on the band wagon if you wish to be in the procession.

For further information, call on the Secretary of the Board of Trade, Oakland, Md.

OPERA HOUSE

School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,

Opera House. OAKLAND, MD.

Creutzsburg's

MARKET

Go to the only up-to-date

Grocery and Meat Market

in Garrett county for Staple and Fancy Groceries, leading brands of Canned Fruits and Vegetables, fresh Fruits and Vegetables of all kinds.

All kinds of FRESH and CURED MEATS, Western and Domestic, at the lowest possible prices for first-class goods—the only kind we handle.

Our refrigerator is always sanitary and ready for your inspection.

Farmers, bring your BEEF, SHEEP, LAMBS, VEAL, and get the highest spot cash prices for them.

H. CREUTZBURG, Prop'r.

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

A CABBAGE SNAKE QUERY.

A lady reader of these notes living near Massillon, O., writes making inquiry if there is any ground for the impression existing in some localities that the cabbage snake or worm is poisonous, or, rather, if cabbages inhabited by them are such, she having found one twelve inches long coiled up in a bunch about as large as a hickorynut. There was quite a stir over this matter three or four years ago, and enough was published in the papers so that the cabbage growers of the country lost many thousands of dollars. With a view to getting at the truth about the matter the agricultural department at Washington made a thorough investigation at the time and reported that there was no connection and could be no connection whatever between the presence of these long white worms in cabbages and the illness or death of persons eating them. The probabilities are that if deaths ever did occur from eating cabbage they were due rather to the fact that the cabbages had been sprinkled with paris green after they had begun to head or were stale when eaten, ptomaine poisoning resulting from the process of decay which had already set in. It is true that the mere idea of one of these snakes being in a cabbage and being boiled up with it is calculated to upset one's stomach, but that it produces a poison is entirely beyond the range of possibility. If our inquirer is of an investigating turn of mind she may demonstrate the truth of the above claims by boiling the snake up in some milk and feeding it to a kitten. Should there be any truth whatever in the poison theory the kitten will show the effects of it. If the kitten is not affected it is safe to conclude that a child or grown person would not be.

A SEVERE CRITICISM.

There has been much criticism recently of the method which is followed by the government in the disposal of public lands, which requires the would be homesteader to travel hundreds or thousands of miles to register for a drawing when hardly one person in 300 can possibly be successful. One of the severest critics of this system in vogue is President Hill of the Great Northern road, which has been benefited to the extent of millions of dollars in car fare through the transportation of folks to these land drawings. In speaking of the Flathead Indian reservation drawing in western Montana, Mr. Hill says that less than 2 per cent of the people who registered had a chance to draw any land at all, while a good share of the claims which were thrown open to entry were well nigh worthless. He concludes: "I have met lots of people who gave up good positions in the east and went out there, only to be bitterly disappointed. The thing is entirely impracticable and on the order of a swindle to take the people's money away and give it to the railroads." In view of such a condemnation as this, coming as it does from a beneficiary of the system at present in vogue, it would seem that Uncle Sam might well see his way clear to devise a more just and less expensive method of disposing of his public domain.

A CLAM HATCHERY.

The pearl button manufacturers of the country feel much pleased over the prospect of the clam hatchery which is to be erected at Fairport, a little town near Muscatine, Ia. The work is to be in charge of officials of the bureau of fisheries and will cost about $60,000. The plant will consist of buildings, pumping station and laboratories, and sixty acres of land, the greater portion of which is sloping and will be cut up into a series of some fifty terraced ponds, the water being pumped into those on the higher level and gradually seeping through to those below. So closely have the American streams in which clams abound been dredged in the past few years that the supply bids fair to become exhausted unless precautions are taken to protect and propagate them artificially.

GOOD LIME FOR LAND.

Replying to a query relative to the application of the limestone byproduct of beet sugar factories to sour or acid soils, the Illinois experiment station states that such product will be as valuable for this purpose as finely ground limestone, provided the burnt lime used does not contain too much magnesium, which element should not exceed 5 or 6 per cent. Where it does not contain magnesium in excess it has some advantages over natural ground limestone in that it contains much of the phosphorus of the sugar beet, together with considerable quantities of organic nitrogen from the protein and albumenoid compounds of the beets.

The very poor are thrice handicapped in that scarcity of food is usually accompanied by shortage of fuel and thinness of clothing.

A hot soapstone wrapped in a flannel cloth and put in the foot of the bed in a cold room is worth at least 25 cents per application and is about the only thing that makes life endurable in a below zero country.

The discovery a few years ago of large deposits of lignite or semi-formed soft coal in the Dakotas and the more recent manufacture of it into bricks or briquets give much promise to the Missouri valley country as a future manufacturing and industrial center.

The frost of winter cracks the water pipes, nips the vegetables stored in bin and cellar and kills tender fruits not well protected, but the service it performs in disintegrating and loosening the soil of the field and making it easy for the plowman to handle is beyond calculating, more than offsetting the harm it works.

While a majority of folks hanker for a larger measure of leisure than is theirs, the truth is that more people die from too little exercise than overwork after they reach the age of forty-five. Every person who can stand on two feet and move his hands is better off if he has some regular work and exercise, if it isn't more than walking.

A Wolf river apple weighing twenty-five ounces and measuring sixteen and five-eighths inches in circumference took first prize for size at the Spokane national apple show. A Spokane Beauty weighing forty-one ounces and measuring seventeen and one-eighth inches in circumference was exhibited, but it was disqualified because of bruises received in harvesting or packing.

Added to the fact that most corncribs are built too wide and without chance for proper ventilation is another cause which is responsible for the spoiling of much corn in the cribs during seasons like the past, when the ear does not dry out properly before husking, and that is a slipshod job of husking which leaves much silk and husks on the corn as it is cribbed, serving to still further prevent proper circulation of the air.

Hood river apple growers received the highest prices for their 1909 crop than for any yet recorded. They were bought by Steinhardt & Kelley of New York city, and were handled through the local apple growers' union. Best Spitzenburgs brought $3.25 per bushel box, fancy Newtowns $2.25 to $2.40, fancy Jonathans $2, fancy Baldwins $1.90 and fancy Ortleys $2.25. The choice fruit was sold to Portland dealers at from $1.75 per box and less.

The grand champion fat steer of the 1909 International was King Ellsworth, a two-year-old pure bred Angus shown by the Kansas Agricultural college and weighing 1,750. The same animal was exhibited last year, when he weighed 1,400 pounds. His ration the past year has been corn, bran and oilmeal, with alfalfa hay. In the car lot exhibits the Shorthorns had the best of it, not only winning the championships in the fat and feeding classes, but the grand championship carload, the first time in the history of the big show, the prize bunch being a carload of yearlings.

It is probably safe to assume that if the true status of all dairy herds in the country could be known tuberculosis would be found one of the greatest sources of no profit cows. The dairyman who applies the tuberculin test to his herd and eliminates affected animals not only does the public a service by disposing of hotbeds of disease, but in the long run puts dollars in his own pocket. Should he add to the tuberculin the Babcock test, to tell him what his cows are doing along the line of butter fat production, he will be able to spot every undesirable individual in the herd.

Experiments which have been recently conducted by the aricultural department show that fruit like oranges, grapes and apples may have their life considerably extended by cooling to a temperature of 40 degrees before shipment. Normally fruit is picked and packed under warm conditions and, while it cools during shipment, does not cool rapidly enough to prevent the rapid ripening of some fruit and the decay of other fruit. It seems clear that this precooling will not only extend the area over which such fruit may be shipped, but it will improve its quality and reduce the amount of ice required in refrigeration.

Farmers' bulletin No. 380, published by the bureau of plant industry, treats of loco weed poisoning and has been issued largely in response to demands of ranchmen of the western plain and Rocky mountain states where the loco weed is found. While investigations into the matter have not been completed, some of the findings are of definite and practical value. The bulletin states that of the two varieties of loco weed, purple and white, the former, although the more poisonous, affects horses almost exclusively, as cattle and sheep rarely eat it. The white is eaten by all three animals and produces disease in all of them. The worst effects of the disease are noticed in animals which acquire a taste for the weed and eat it when other herbage is abundant. Locoed animals may recover under careful feeding and by being kept on a range from which the weed has been eradicated. The cure is hastened by the use of Fowler's solution for horses and strychnine for cattle. Loco weeds may be eradicated from fenced pastures by cutting the plant below the crown buds.

The great agricultural labor of the coming years will not be devoted to developing virgin lands so much as conserving and restoring the fertility of soils already under cultivation.

The danger of vegetables in the cellar freezing on the severest nights may be reduced by having a tub or two or three pailfuls of water there. Water is more susceptible to the action of frost than vegetables and will therefore freeze first.

Owing to the fact that very many of the Danish cows are tethered while at pasture, their owners drive the water to them instead of driving the cows to water, as is customary in America and some other countries where larger pastures are the rule.

There is probably no factor in the winter feeding of the flock of poultry that has more to do in getting results in eggs than in making the hens scratch for what they get to eat. A loafing hen stuffed chiefly with corn never has laid to speak of in the winter or any other time and never will.

The fact that a fellow names his farm is no proof that he is boastful or stuck on himself, but simply that he considers what he is doing sufficiently worth while so that he is not ashamed to have the public know to whom the place belongs. If a fellow doesn't believe in naming his farm, there is doubtless a practical reason for it that is not far to seek.

The 1909 corn crop is far and away the most valuable ever raised, its worth being placed at $1,720,000,000. While in quantity it is less than the crop of 1906, there was still a total of 2,707,000,000 bushels, which is 3.5 per cent greater than the average for the past five years. The value of the 1909 crop exceeds by 36 per cent the value of the crops for the past five years.

Careful investigations which have been carried on in California in connection with the pear thrips show that from 70 to 73 per cent of the thrips may be destroyed by means of deep plowing in the fall and from 90 to 97 per cent of the remainder by proper spraying under high pressure in a downward direction with a combination spray of dilute tobacco extract and distillate oil emulsion.

The grower of spring or hard wheat on land worth $50 an acre, with a yield that the past year averaged but fifteen bushels per acre in the spring wheat belt, is up against a practical proposition—namely, his returns at prevailing prices after expenses are paid don't leave him a fair return on his investment. He must either raise a variety of wheat that will yield more bushels to the acre or quit raising wheat altogether except in a three or four year rotation.

Every housewife should be in possession of "Care of Food In the Home," a very practical bulletin (farmers' No. 375) by Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel and prepared under the supervision of the office of experiment stations of the department of agriculture at Washington. The publication contains a world of information about a great variety of subjects, while the subject matter is tersely put, and to the point. It may be had free by applying to one's senator or representative at Washington.

One of the chief drawbacks to sod in the orchard or a mulching system which involves a lot of dry litter about the trees is the danger from fire, especially in the spring, when things have dried out by warm winds and before the green herbage starts. Where it is deemed best for any good reason to keep an orchard in sod this fire danger should be guarded against by having a strip plowed around the orchard, which will stop a fire originating outside, while occasional furrows in the orchard will prevent the spread of a fire from one part of the orchard to another.

It is strange that the stock judges at the big shows don't insist that animals outside of the fat steer class ripe for slaughter should come before them for honors in normal breeding trim instead of the overstuffed, fat and logy condition which characterizes so many animals in the show ring. Especially is this true of the heavier breeds of cattle, which have to be stuffed and polished for weeks and put into an unnatural condition in order to fit them for exhibition. The harm in the system lies in the fact that it gives a wrong impression and leads many a breeder to believe that unless an animal has mountains of fat on it it is not well bred, which is as far as can be from the truth.

John Sundberg of Iowa, whose record of producing 155 bushels of corn per acre the past season was mentioned in these notes, will have to take a back seat for Mr. Batts of Wake county, N. C., who the past year raised 226 2-3 bushels on an acre of ground, as certified to by the state commissioner of agriculture and the chairman of the Raleigh board of trade. This corn would not rank high as viewed by corn show standards, but it delivered the goods—the shelled corn. The variety was Cocke's Prolific, which on the acre in question averaged four ears to the stalk, some stalks carrying as many as eight ears. The blue ribbon for the highest yield in 1908 was carried off by a grower in the same county, with 183 bushels.

F. E. Trigg

HER CHAUFFEUR.

How a Girl Worried Her Family by Loving an Auto Driver.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"Cab!" called a young girl standing on a curb on F street, Washington.

A chauffeur sitting in an auto on the other side of the street caught her eye. She was very stylishly dressed, very pretty, and, although attractive, the chauffeur looked at her for a moment without replying to her summons, then, as if obeying an impulse, drove his auto to the curb on which the young lady was standing.

"Are you engaged?" she asked.

"No'm."

"I thought you were from your not answering my call at once." She stepped into the auto. "Take me to —— Massachusetts avenue."

"Yes'm."

Formerly all the unfortunate love affairs and misalliances with manservants occurred between the pretty daughter of the house and the family coachman. In these days of motors the coachman has given place to the chauffeur. From the moment Miss Flora Denton, the daughter of a rich congressman who had recently been elected from the middle west, set eyes on the chauffeur there was trouble in store for her.

HE WAS SITTING IN HIS SEAT, UNCONSCIOUS.

"I presume you know all about Washington," she said, leaning forward on her seat. "I don't know my way anywhere. We came only yesterday."

"I'm pretty familiar with the streets. I have to be to drive an auto."

"What a rich, deep voice!" said Miss Denton to herself, then aloud: "I want some one I can trust to take me about. If you will tell me where I can call on you I'll have you regularly."

The chauffeur did not reply at once. When he did he said:

"Call up telephone No. 6842."

Miss Denton took a pocketbook from a little bag hanging to her wrist, from which she drew a card and on the card wrote the telephone number.

"Who shall I ask for?" she said. "I suppose there are other autos there."

"Say you would like to speak to Drake."

"Very well; here we are—the dark stone house over there. What's the fare?" she added as she alighted.

"If I'm to drive you regularly you might pay at the end of the month," replied the obliging chauffeur.

"That'll do very well, if you're satisfied. Perhaps you'd better come tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to take me for a ride."

"All right, ma'am."

When 3 o'clock the next afternoon came Miss Denton was at a front window in auto costume, drawing on her gloves while waiting for the chauffeur. He drove up punctually and, not knowing that the lady was looking at him, stepped out of his machine and, walking up to the door, rang.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Miss Denton. "He walks like a ramrod. I believe he was a soldier before he became a cab driver. Just look at those shoulders! It's a wonder they don't pull him over backward."

She met him at the door with a smile, but suddenly repressed it, remembering his station. She asked him to take her across the Potomac. He did so, and once away from the city they spun along merrily. Reaching an old bridge over a shallow creek, he said:

"If I could trust that bridge I would take you back by way of Arlington."

"Cross it. I'll take the risk."

"I doubt if it will hold under the weight of this machine. It's off the main road and not intended for general use."

"Try it."

"I think I'd better not."

Miss Denton sniffed the air. "I had an idea that you were a soldier before you became a chauffeur. I'm surprised at your timidity."

He made a dash at the bridge, hoping for safety in speed. They had got nearly over when it broke under them and down they went.

Fortunately the distance to fall was not great, and the machine remained right side up. But a falling beam struck the chauffeur on the head, and when Miss Denton, who had scrambled out on to dry land, turned to look at him he was sitting in his seat unconscious, with blood streaming down over his face.

At the moment there came the honk of an auto horn, and Miss Denton ran to the main road and signaled for the driver to stop, and two men who were in the machine came to her assistance. They got the chauffeur out, brought him back to consciousness and kindly offered to take both back to the city. As for the auto, it was not to be moved at once.

When they reached the city the chauffeur was about to tell them where to take him when he was forestalled by Miss Denton, who insisted that, the accident having been her own fault, he should go to her own home. He demurred at this, saying they would go there first; then he wished to be left at his room. When they reached —— Massachusetts avenue the lady's father, seeing from a window that something was wrong, went out and when informed of the facts directed that the chauffeur come inside, at any rate temporarily. So the man walked in, refusing support, and was placed in an easy chair and given a stimulant. He declined to have a physician called.

A week later Mr. Denton said to his daughter: "Pussy, I think it's time that your chauffeur go back to his garage. He's all right and by hanging around here is losing money every day. I had his auto seat for, and it has been put in order. The bill will come to me."

Miss Denton told the chauffeur what her father had said, softening the invitation to depart as well as she could. The young man bade her goodby, looking longingly into her eyes, while her hand lingered in his, and said:

"If I weren't only a chauffeur!"

He stopped and, turning away, left the house.

The father of Miss Flora Denton, being a shrewd observer of what was going on about him, saw very plainly that his daughter was in danger of a complication that would wreck the peace and comfort of the family. He gave her orders that when she wished an auto she should call him up on the telephone and he would send her one. The girl must either obey or admit that she was desirous of riding with an especial chauffeur, which would be giving away her case. She longed for a spin with the driver of her choice and since she could not ride with him would not ride at all. But she went often to the business portion of the city and kept a sharp eye open for a familiar face belonging to her own especial chauffeur.

Then came the first important social function since Congressman Denton had taken his seat in the house of representatives. The president was to give a reception, and the Denton family were to attend. Mrs. Denton, who was greatly worried about the chauffeur episode, was anxious that her daughter should go about, hoping that the impression made by a common cab driver might be eradicated by some young man of prominence. Washington was full of officials, some of whom were quite young enough for her daughter to marry, and the place literally swarmed with army and navy officers. Mrs. Denton, therefore, got out Miss Flora's most becoming costume and endeavored to excite an interest on the part of her daughter in this her first appearance in Washington public social life.

But the girl was languid and listless. In vain her mother told her of the great people she would meet—young men some of whom were already political leaders, the generals, the admirals and the junior officers near her own age. Flora made no objection to going among all these people, but there was none of that enthusiasm to be expected in a young girl on whom fortune had bestowed such advantages. Finally the mother, losing patience, exploded:

"I do believe you're gone on that cab driver!"

This was the feather that broke the camel's back. Flora burst into tears and, going to her room, locked herself in.

However, when the time came to dress for the president's reception she permitted her maid, her mother supervising, to arrange her costume, and it must be confessed that she looked ravishing. Even the tinge of melancholy in her eyes was becoming.

A throng of people in evening dress were at the White House waiting the entrance of the president. There were members of the cabinet, senators, generals and admirals—indeed, the governmental magnates of the nation. Their wives and daughters, dressed in silks and satins, in laces and feathers, stood with them, forming lines on either side of a passageway along which the president was to proceed to the position in which he would receive his guests. Congressman Denton, his wife and daughter stood among the rest. Presently there was a flourish of musical instruments, and two young army officers marching abreast led the procession escorting the chief magistrate.

"Pussy," said Mr. Denton, "that officer on the right looks for all the world like your chauffeur."

Feeling his daughter's hand clutching his arm, he turned and saw her in a fever of excitement. When she could catch her breath and articulate she whispered:

"Oh, papa, he is my chauffeur!"

"He isn't," protested Mrs. Denton, who had noticed the young man and overheard what her husband and daughter had said.

But when the young man passed within a few feet of them and gave them a smile in which was expressed his satisfaction at having duped them there was no further doubt as to his identity. When a few minutes later he joined them and Flora asked reproachfully, "Why did you do it?" he replied, "I didn't; you took me for a cabman, and I didn't tell you I wasn't one."

Mrs. Lieutenant Drake of the artillery is now stationed at one of the southern forts.

WATCH OAKLAND GROW.

A Modern City on the Crest of the Alleghany Mountains.

Oakland, the county seat of Garrett county, Maryland, is situated in a magnificent farming country. Agriculture being the true basis of all continued prosperity, this industry alone could support a city or several thousand people, where most crops of the temperate zone are produced and where total failures are wholly unknown. In addition to the staple crops of wheat, oats, corn, rye, potatoes, buckwheat, maple sugar, hay, etc., this section is a great apple country, and many varieties of fruits, berries and vegetables grow with little attention.

Yet, these are by no means all the advantages nature has so prodigally bestowed upon this community. Right at our doors are rich deposits of coal, kaolin, pure glass sand, fire and potters' clay, an inexhaustible supply of brick and tile shale, abundant supply of natural gas for lighting, heating and manufacturing purposes, the purest water on earth, a great supply of water power only waiting harness to illuminate this mountain top, and supply factories and electric railways with power.

Oakland is situated in the center of a plateau twenty by sixty miles in extent, two thousand eight hundred feet above the sea, where it is never too hot for comfort and never too cold for convenience; America's ideal summer resort; America's greatest health resort; where we sleep under two or more blankets all summer long and you, who reside in the lowlands or large centers of population, are sweltering with the heat and breathing humid, unhealthy and poisoned air. Here the drives are grand in prospect and glorious in nature's garb; where some new scene greets the vision at every turn of the road. $238,000.00 is being spent on State highways radiating from Oakland.

Come to Western Maryland, young man, and grow up with the country. If you prefer to invest in agricultural lands or fruit lands, you will find prices ranging from five to fifty dollars per acre, depending upon location and improvements. These are attractive investments without risk of loss. We also invite factories and industries of all kinds, and believe that this location offers the best advantages on account of the abundance of raw material, cheap fuel and accessibility to market.

When you consider that right here, within six hours of the Nation's capital, is a country with almost unbounded resources, with a variety of everything: Water Works, Sewerage, Natural Gas, a healthy climate, where hay fever and many ills to which the human race is heir in less favored climes, is entirely unknown; a land of pure and abundant water, a land of churches and schools, without any race or other vexatious problems, and where the small investor along with the man of more pretentious capital has opportunities commensurate with his pluck, intelligence and energy, of an equal start in life, then you will readily concede the importance and correctness of the advice given herein.

"The Creator is still making people, but no more land." "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, if taken at the flood, leads on to fortune and fame."

Don't miss the opportunity of a lifetime and regret it for years to come. "A word to the wise is sufficient." Oakland is on the boom, and you should get on the band wagon if you wish to be in the procession.

For further information, call on the Secretary of the Board of Trade, Oakland, Md.

OPERA HOUSE

School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,

Opera House. OAKLAND, MD.

Creutzsburg's

MARKET

Go to the only up-to-date

Grocery and Meat Market

in Garrett county for Staple and Fancy Groceries, leading brands of Canned Fruits and Vegetables, fresh Fruits and Vegetables of all kinds.

All kinds of FRESH and CURED MEATS, Western and Domestic, at the lowest possible prices for first-class goods—the only kind we handle.

Our refrigerator is always sanitary and ready for your inspection.

Farmers, bring your BEEF, SHEEP, LAMBS, VEAL, and get the highest spot cash prices for them.

H. CREUTZBURG, Prop'r.

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

A CABBAGE SNAKE QUERY.

A lady reader of these notes living near Massillon, O., writes making inquiry if there is any ground for the impression existing in some localities that the cabbage snake or worm is poisonous, or, rather, if cabbages inhabited by them are such, she having found one twelve inches long coiled up in a bunch about as large as a hickorynut. There was quite a stir over this matter three or four years ago, and enough was published in the papers so that the cabbage growers of the country lost many thousands of dollars. With a view to getting at the truth about the matter the agricultural department at Washington made a thorough investigation at the time and reported that there was no connection and could be no connection whatever between the presence of these long white worms in cabbages and the illness or death of persons eating them. The probabilities are that if deaths ever did occur from eating cabbage they were due rather to the fact that the cabbages had been sprinkled with paris green after they had begun to head or were stale when eaten, ptomaine poisoning resulting from the process of decay which had already set in. It is true that the mere idea of one of these snakes being in a cabbage and being boiled up with it is calculated to upset one's stomach, but that it produces a poison is entirely beyond the range of possibility. If our inquirer is of an investigating turn of mind she may demonstrate the truth of the above claims by boiling the snake up in some milk and feeding it to a kitten. Should there be any truth whatever in the poison theory the kitten will show the effects of it. If the kitten is not affected it is safe to conclude that a child or grown person would not be.

A SEVERE CRITICISM.

There has been much criticism recently of the method which is followed by the government in the disposal of public lands, which requires the would be homesteader to travel hundreds or thousands of miles to register for a drawing when hardly one person in 300 can possibly be successful. One of the severest critics of this system in vogue is President Hill of the Great Northern road, which has been benefited to the extent of millions of dollars in car fare through the transportation of folks to these land drawings. In speaking of the Flathead Indian reservation drawing in western Montana, Mr. Hill says that less than 2 per cent of the people who registered had a chance to draw any land at all, while a good share of the claims which were thrown open to entry were well nigh worthless. He concludes: "I have met lots of people who gave up good positions in the east and went out there, only to be bitterly disappointed. The thing is entirely impracticable and on the order of a swindle to take the people's money away and give it to the railroads." In view of such a condemnation as this, coming as it does from a beneficiary of the system at present in vogue, it would seem that Uncle Sam might well see his way clear to devise a more just and less expensive method of disposing of his public domain.

A CLAM HATCHERY.

The pearl button manufacturers of the country feel much pleased over the prospect of the clam hatchery which is to be erected at Fairport, a little town near Muscatine, Ia. The work is to be in charge of officials of the bureau of fisheries and will cost about $60,000. The plant will consist of buildings, pumping station and laboratories, and sixty acres of land, the greater portion of which is sloping and will be cut up into a series of some fifty terraced ponds, the water being pumped into those on the higher level and gradually seeping through to those below. So closely have the American streams in which clams abound been dredged in the past few years that the supply bids fair to become exhausted unless precautions are taken to protect and propagate them artificially.

GOOD LIME FOR LAND.

Replying to a query relative to the application of the limestone byproduct of beet sugar factories to sour or acid soils, the Illinois experiment station states that such product will be as valuable for this purpose as finely ground limestone, provided the burnt lime used does not contain too much magnesium, which element should not exceed 5 or 6 per cent. Where it does not contain magnesium in excess it has some advantages over natural ground limestone in that it contains much of the phosphorus of the sugar beet, together with considerable quantities of organic nitrogen from the protein and albumenoid compounds of the beets.

The very poor are thrice handicapped in that scarcity of food is usually accompanied by shortage of fuel and thinness of clothing.

A hot soapstone wrapped in a flannel cloth and put in the foot of the bed in a cold room is worth at least 25 cents per application and is about the only thing that makes life endurable in a below zero country.

The discovery a few years ago of large deposits of lignite or semi-formed soft coal in the Dakotas and the more recent manufacture of it into bricks or briquets give much promise to the Missouri valley country as a future manufacturing and industrial center.

The frost of winter cracks the water pipes, nips the vegetables stored in bin and cellar and kills tender fruits not well protected, but the service it performs in disintegrating and loosening the soil of the field and making it easy for the plowman to handle is beyond calculating, more than offsetting the harm it works.

While a majority of folks hanker for a larger measure of leisure than is theirs, the truth is that more people die from too little exercise than overwork after they reach the age of forty-five. Every person who can stand on two feet and move his hands is better off if he has some regular work and exercise, if it isn't more than walking.

A Wolf river apple weighing twenty-five ounces and measuring sixteen and five-eighths inches in circumference took first prize for size at the Spokane national apple show. A Spokane Beauty weighing forty-one ounces and measuring seventeen and one-eighth inches in circumference was exhibited, but it was disqualified because of bruises received in harvesting or packing.

Added to the fact that most corncribs are built too wide and without chance for proper ventilation is another cause which is responsible for the spoiling of much corn in the cribs during seasons like the past, when the ear does not dry out properly before husking, and that is a slipshod job of husking which leaves much silk and husks on the corn as it is cribbed, serving to still further prevent proper circulation of the air.

Hood river apple growers received the highest prices for their 1909 crop than for any yet recorded. They were bought by Steinhardt & Kelley of New York city and were handled through the local apple growers' union. Best Spitzenburgs brought $3.25 per bushel box, fancy Newtowns $2.25 to $2.40, fancy Jonathans $2, fancy Baldwins $1.90 and fancy Ortleys $2.25. The choice fruit was sold to Portland dealers at from $1.75 per box and less.

The grand champion fat steer of the 1909 International was King Ellsworth, a two-year-old pure bred Angus shown by the Kansas Agricultural college and weighing 1,750. The same animal was exhibited last year, when he weighed 1,400 pounds. His ration the past year has been corn, bran and oilmeal, with alfalfa hay. In the car lot exhibits the Shorthorns had the best of it, not only winning the championships in the fat and feeding classes, but the grand championship carload, the first time in the history of the big show, the prize bunch being a carload of yearlings.

It is probably safe to assume that if the true status of all dairy herds in the country could be known tuberculosis would be found one of the greatest sources of no profit cows. The dairyman who applies the tuberculin test to his herd and eliminates affected animals not only does the public a service by disposing of hotbeds of disease, but in the long run puts dollars in his own pocket. Should he add to the tuberculin the Babcock test, to tell him what his cows are doing along the line of butter fat production, he will be able to spot every undesirable individual in the herd.

Experiments which have been recently conducted by the aricultural department show that fruit like oranges, grapes and apples may have their life considerably extended by cooling to a temperature of 40 degrees before shipment. Normally fruit is picked and packed under warm conditions and, while it cools during shipment, does not cool rapidly enough to prevent the rapid ripening of some fruit and the decay of other fruit. It seems clear that this precooling will not only extend the area over which such fruit may be shipped, but it will improve its quality and reduce the amount of ice required in refrigeration.

Farmers' bulletin No. 380, published by the bureau of plant industry, treats of loco weed poisoning and has been issued largely in response to demands of ranchmen of the western plain and Rocky mountain states where the loco weed is found. While investigations into the matter have not been completed, some of the findings are of definite and practical value. The bulletin states that of the two varieties of loco weed, purple and white, the former, although the more poisonous, affects horses almost exclusively, as cattle and sheep rarely eat it. The white is eaten by all three animals and produces disease in all of them. The worst effects of the disease are noticed in animals which acquire a taste for the weed and eat it when other herbage is abundant. Locoed animals may recover under careful feeding and by being kept on a range from which the weed has been eradicated. The cure is hastened by the use of Fowler's solution for horses and strychnine for cattle. Loco weeds may be eradicated from fenced pastures by cutting the plant below the crown buds.

The great agricultural labor of the coming years will not be devoted to developing virgin lands so much as conserving and restoring the fertility of soils already under cultivation.

The danger of vegetables in the cellar freezing on the severest nights may be reduced by having a tub or two or three pailfuls of water there. Water is more susceptible to the action of frost than vegetables and will therefore freeze first.

Owing to the fact that very many of the Danish cows are tethered while at pasture, their owners drive the water to them instead of driving the cows to water, as is customary in America and some other countries where larger pastures are the rule.

There is probably no factor in the winter feeding of the flock of poultry that has more to do in getting results in eggs than in making the hens scratch for what they get to eat. A loafing hen stuffed chiefly with corn never has laid to speak of in the winter or any other time and never will.

The fact that a fellow names his farm is no proof that he is boastful or stuck on himself, but simply that he considers what he is doing sufficiently worth while so that he is not ashamed to have the public know to whom the place belongs. If a fellow doesn't believe in naming his farm, there is doubtless a practical reason for it that is not far to seek.

The 1909 corn crop is far and away the most valuable ever raised, its worth being placed at $1,720,000,000. While in quantity it is less than the crop of 1906, there was still a total of 2,767,000,000 bushels, which is 3.5 per cent greater than the average for the past five years. The value of the 1909 crop exceeds by 36 per cent the value of the crops for the past five years.

Careful investigations which have been carried on in California in connection with the pear thrips show that from 70 to 73 per cent of the thrips may be destroyed by means of deep plowing in the fall and from 90 to 97 per cent of the remainder by proper spraying under high pressure in a downward direction with a combination spray of dilute tobacco extract and distillate oil emulsion.

The grower of spring or hard wheat on land worth $50 an acre, with a yield that the past year averaged but fifteen bushels per acre in the spring wheat belt, is up against a practical proposition—namely, his returns at prevailing prices after expenses are paid don't leave him a fair return on his investment. He must either raise a variety of wheat that will yield more bushels to the acre or quit raising wheat altogether except in a three or four year rotation.

Every housewife should be in possession of "Care of Food In the Home," a very practical bulletin (farmers' No. 375) by Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel and prepared under the supervision of the office of experiment stations of the department of agriculture at Washington. The publication contains a world of information about a great variety of subjects, while the subject matter is tersely put, and to the point. It may be had free by applying to one's senator or representative at Washington.

One of the chief drawbacks to sod in the orchard or a mulching system which involves a lot of dry litter about the trees is the danger from fire, especially in the spring, when things have dried out by warm winds and before the green herbage starts. Where it is deemed best for any good reason to keep an orchard in sod this fire danger should be guarded against by having a strip plowed around the orchard, which will stop a fire originating outside, while occasional furrows in the orchard will prevent the spread of a fire from one part of the orchard to another.

It is strange that the stock judges at the big shows don't insist that animals outside of the fat steer class ripe for slaughter should come before them for honors in normal breeding trim instead of the overstuffed, fat and logy condition which characterizes so many animals in the show ring. Especially is this true of the heavier breeds of cattle, which have to be stuffed and polished for weeks and put into an unnatural condition in order to fit them for exhibition. The harm in the system lies in the fact that it gives a wrong impression and leads many a breeder to believe that unless an animal has mountains of fat on it it is not well bred, which is as far as can be from the truth.

John Sundberg of Iowa, whose record of producing 155 bushels of corn per acre the past season was mentioned in these notes, will have to take a back seat for Mr. Batts of Wake county, N. C., who the past year raised 226 2-3 bushels on an acre of ground, as certified to by the state commissioner of agriculture and the chairman of the Raleigh board of trade. This corn would not rank high as viewed by corn show standards, but it delivered the goods—the shelled corn. The variety was Cocke's Prolific, which on the acre in question averaged four ears to the stalk, some stalks carrying as many as eight ears. The blue ribbon for the highest yield in 1908 was carried off by a grower in the same county, with 183 bushels.

J. E. Trigg

HER CHAUFFEUR.

How a Girl Worried Her Family by Loving an Auto Driver.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

"Cab!" called a young girl standing on a curb on F street, Washington.

A chauffeur sitting in an auto on the other side of the street caught her eye. She was very stylishly dressed, very pretty, and, although attractive, the chauffeur looked at her for a moment without replying to her summons, then, as if obeying an impulse, drove his auto to the curb on which the young lady was standing.

"Are you engaged?" she asked.

"No'm."

"I thought you were from your not answering my call at once." She stepped into the auto. "Take me to —— Massachusetts avenue."

"Yes'm."

Formerly all the unfortunate love affairs and misalliances with manservants occurred between the pretty daughter of the house and the family coachman. In these days of motors the coachman has given place to the chauffeur. From the moment Miss Flora Denton, the daughter of a rich congressman who had recently been elected from the middle west, set eyes on the chauffeur there was trouble in store for her.

HE WAS SITTING IN HIS SEAT, UNCONSCIOUS.

"I presume you know all about Washington," she said, leaning forward on her seat. "I don't know my way anywhere. We came only yesterday."

"I'm pretty familiar with the streets. I have to be to drive an auto."

"What a rich, deep voice!" said Miss Denton to herself, then aloud: "I want some one I can trust to take me about. If you will tell me where I can call on you I'll have you regularly."

The chauffeur did not reply at once. When he did he said:

"Call up telephone No. 6842."

Miss Denton took a pocketbook from a little bag hanging to her wrist, from which she drew a card and on the card wrote the telephone number.

"Who shall I ask for?" she said. "I suppose there are other autos there."

"Say you would like to speak to Drake."

"Very well; here we are—the dark stone house over there. What's the fare?" she added as she alighted.

"If I'm to drive you regularly you might pay at the end of the month," replied the obliging chauffeur.

"That'll do very well, if you're satisfied. Perhaps you'd better come tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to take me for a ride."

"All right, ma'am."

When 3 o'clock the next afternoon came Miss Denton was at a front window in auto costume, drawing on her gloves while waiting for the chauffeur. He drove up punctually and, not knowing that the lady was looking at him, stepped out of his machine and, walking up to the door, rang.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Miss Denton. "He walks like a ramrod. I believe he was a soldier before he became a cab driver. Just look at those shoulders! It's a wonder they don' pull him over backward."

She met him at the door with a smile, but suddenly repressed it, remembering his station. She asked him to take her across the Potomac. He did so, and once away from the city they spun along merrily. Reaching an old bridge over a shallow creek, he said:

"If I could trust that bridge I would take you back by way of Arlington."

"Cross it. I'll take the risk."

"I doubt if it will hold under the weight of this machine. It's off the main road and not intended for general use."

"Try it."

"I think I'd better not."

Miss Denton sniffed the air. "I had an idea that you were a soldier before you became a chauffeur. I'm surprised at your timidity."

He made a dash at the bridge, hoping for safety in speed. They had got nearly over when it broke under them and down they went.

Fortunately the distance to fall was not great, and the machine remained right side up. But a falling beam struck the chauffeur on the head, and when Miss Denton, who had scrambled out on to dry land, turned to look at him he was sitting in his seat unconscious, with blood streaming down over his face.

At the moment there came the honk of an auto horn, and Miss Denton ran to the main road and signaled for the driver to stop, and two men who were in the machine came to her assistance. They got the chauffeur out, brought him back to consciousness and kindly offered to take both back to the city. As for the auto, it was not to be moved at once.

When they reached the city the chauffeur was about to tell them where to take him when he was forestalled by Miss Denton, who insisted that, the accident having been her own fault, he should go to her own home. He demurred at this, saying they would go there first; then he wished to be left at his room. When they reached —— Massachusetts avenue the lady's father, seeing from a window that something was wrong, went out and when informed of the facts directed that the chauffeur come inside, at any rate temporarily. So the man walked in, refusing support, and was placed in an easy chair and given a stimulant. He declined to have a physician called.

A week later Mr. Denton said to his daughter: "Pussy, I think it's time that your chauffeur go back to his garage. He's all right and by hanging around here is losing money every day. I had his auto sent for, and it has been put in order. The bill will come to me."

Miss Denton told the chauffeur what her father had said, softening the invitation to depart as well as she could. The young man bade her goodby, looking longingly into her eyes, while her hand lingered in his, and said:

"If I weren't only a chauffeur!"

He stopped and, turning away, left the house.

The father of Miss Flora Denton, being a shrewd observer of what was going on about him, saw very plainly that his daughter was in danger of a complication that would wreck the peace and comfort of the family. He gave her orders that when she wished an auto she should call him up on the telephone and he would send her one. The girl must either obey or admit that she was desirous of riding with an especial chauffeur, which would be giving away her case. She longed for a spin with the driver of her choice and since she could not ride with him would not ride at all. But she went often to the business portion of the city and kept a sharp eye open for a familiar face belonging to her own especial chauffeur.

Then came the first important social function since Congressman Denton had taken his seat in the house of representatives. The president was to give a reception, and the Denton family were to attend. Mrs. Denton, who was greatly worried about the chauffeur episode, was anxious that her daughter should go about, hoping that the impression made by a common cab driver might be eradicated by some young man of prominence. Washington was full of officials, some of whom were quite young enough for her daughter to marry, and the place literally swarmed with army and navy officers. Mrs. Denton, therefore, got out Miss Flora's most becoming costume and endeavored to excite an interest on the part of her daughter in this her first appearance in Washington public social life.

But the girl was languid and listless. In vain her mother told her of the great people she would meet—young men some of whom were already political leaders, the generals, the admirals and the junior officers near her own age. Flora made no objection to going among all these people, but there was none of that enthusiasm to be expected in a young girl on whom fortune had bestowed such advantages. Finally the mother, losing patience, exploded:

"I do believe you're gone on that cab driver!"

This was the feather that broke the camel's back. Flora burst into tears and, going to her room, locked herself in.

However, when the time came to dress for the president's reception she permitted her maid, her mother supervising, to arrange her costume, and it must be confessed that she looked ravishing. Even the tinge of melancholy in her eyes was becoming.

A throng of people in evening dress were at the White House waiting the entrance of the president. There were members of the cabinet, senators, generals and admirals—indeed, the governmental magnates of the nation. Their wives and daughters, dressed in silks and satins, in laces and feathers, stood with them, forming lines on either side of a passageway along which the president was to proceed to the position in which he would receive his guests. Congressman Denton, his wife and daughter stood among the rest. Presently there was a flourish of musical instruments, and two young army officers marching abreast led the procession escorting the chief magistrate.

"Pussy," said Mr. Denton, "that officer on the right looks for all the world like your chauffeur."

Feeling his daughter's hand clutching his arm, he turned and saw her in a fever of excitement. When she could catch her breath and articulate she whispered:

"Oh, papa, he is my chauffeur!"

"He isn't," protested Mrs. Denton, who had noticed the young man and overheard what her husband and daughter had said.

But when the young man passed within a few feet of them and gave them a smile in which was expressed his satisfaction at having duped them there was no further doubt as to his identity. When a few minutes later he joined them and Flora asked reproachfully, "Why did you do it?" he replied, "I didn't; you took me for a cabman, and I didn't tell you I wasn't one."

Mrs. Lieutenant Drake of the artillery is now stationed at one of the southern forts.

KODAK ●● SAFETY ● FILM

LEE ATTACKS SURVEY

Says Members Are Better Politicians Than Road Builders.

State Senator Blair Lee, of Montgomery, pays his respects to the State Roads Commission in the following communication:

"One of the most interesting questions developed by the road situation in Maryland is, who are the most accomplished politicians in the State? It is to be hoped that none of the local Democratic or Republican organization people in Baltimore city will be offended yet recent developments show such wonderful skill and nerve on the part of the Geological Survey road building group in the face of adverse facts, calculated to knock an ordinary politician down and out, that the gameness and keenness of the survey gentlemen call for some public recognition and discriminating appreciation. Their skill recalls the general, who, in a somewhat distant province (like the Legislature at Annapolis), was subjected to a crushing defeat which his opponents could not immediately follow up, leaving the enterprising gentleman to send messengers to his government describing a glorious victory and calling for reinforcements to overwhelm a retreating foe.

"The State Roads law passed in 1908 practically required by its terms, and as the Governor seemed to construe it, that the State road building should be largely directed by the Geological Survey group who had built the Shoemaker roads prior thereto. Consequently two members of the survey and Mr. Shoemaker, in absolute sympathy with them, were appointed on the State commission and the engineer of the survey was made the chief engineer of the State Roads Commission.

"Throughout the State, however, there was even then marked reaction in public sentiment, based on experience, against the Shoemaker roads, both as to their cost and their durability, and an engineering attitude which threatened many miles of solid old pikes with practical demolition when the local public thought them worthy of respectful improvement.

"The Governor was advised of how the Shoemaker roads were being built and how they were breaking through, especially in Montgomery county, but he preferred to leave the changes he saw were necessary to be made after consideration by the General Assembly. In his message he recommended that the Geological Survey, as a road building agency, be abolished and its work turned over to the State Roads Commission. A bill was introduced in the Legislature by me to carry out that recommendation of the Governor and also one giving him power to appoint an additional commissioner on the State Roads Commission, with the express purpose of putting an end to the control by the survey group of the policy of the State Roads Commission.

"It might not be apparent to the public how three members of the commission—or half—could practically control it, but by reference to the act of 1908 it will be seen that the law calls expressly for action 'with the consent of a majority of the commission'—and that at critical places in the law the action of the commission must be based upon the recommendation in writing of the chief engineer, Mr. Crosby.

"All the legislation to correct this condition which was supported by the Governor and his friends was actively resisted by Mr. Shoemaker and Mr. Crosby and disapproved of by Dr. Remsen and Dr. Clark, geological members of the State Roads Commission. There was a hearing before the Finance Committee of the Senate and a full discussion in the Legislature itself, and both bills were passed and approved by the Governor.

"In addition to changes for the Geological Survey's road construction there was also provision in these bills for economically providing the stone and other materials to make roads, the intention of the Legislature being to use local stone and other local road-building material as far as possible and also to accumulate such material at available points for distributing it by water to counties where such material could not be found, the main object of providing a system for furnishing material being to cheapen the cost and to cut down the freight rates, which had amounted to about one-fifth of all the money expended by the Geological Survey in certain counties.

"As an illustration, in Montgomery county where I am familiar with the figures, over $40,000 was spent in freight to build Shoemaker roads out of a total expenditure of about $214,000.

"After this legislative and Executive disapproval of their conduct, in the face of all the facts and recent history, these adroit survey politicians, pending the arrival of June 1st, when the survey's work must be turned over and before the executive acts can be taken which may be necessary to carry out the will of the Legislature, are demonstrating to the public their great skill as politicians, contrasted with their lack of it as road builders.

"In fact, the old road-building group have have simply made another double and are trying to throw the public off their trail by running around and getting under the Governor's chair, where they cry out, 'We've always been right here and you can't hit us without hitting him.'

"The members of the legislative branch of our State government, advised of the Governor's disapproval of survey methods and the facts and experience upon which it is based, should properly wait, with the general public, for the Governor to carry into execution the powers which, at his request, was placed in his hands."

Marriage Licenses.

The following marriage licenses have been issued by Clerk E. Z. Tower since our last report:

Luther Sherman West and Sula E. Clark, both of Moorsville, W. Va.

Lee Myers and Sadie A. Yommer, both of Jennings.

Solomon Wesley Childs and Lulu Grace Bucklew, both of near Kingwood, W. Va.

Roy Harrison Bucklew and Laura Pearl Feather, both of near Kingwood, W. Va.

Elmer Cline Shaffer and Cora Blanche Dodge, both of Garrett county.

John Russell Shaffer, of Terra Alta, W. Va., and Jessie Lee Brown, of Grafton, W. Va.

John Ellis Hoffman, of Holt, W. Va., and Myrtle Jane West, of Morgantown, W. Va.

Ernest F. Badon and Elsie Lutes, both of Parkersburg, W. Va.

Okey Albert Reed and Daisy Pearl Matheny, both of Conings, W. Va.

Russell Laurence Loudermilk and Edna Gertrude Friend, both of Garrett county.

Thomas Bittinger and Della Wilt, both of Garrett county.

Wilford Oakey Richmond, of Calis, W. Va., and Hazel Mazie Howard, of Elm Grove, W. Va.

Hugh Guy Butcher and Edna Marguerite Taylor, both of Weston, W. Va.

Isaac Newton Davis, Cornwallis W. Va., and Ida Radcliff, of Harrisville, W. Va.

Clyde D. Satterfield, of Worthington, W. Va., and Ruby Leonard, of Monongah, W. Va.

Harry R. Hopkins and Annabelle Allman, both of Parkersburg, W. Va.

John Mench and Catharine Collins, both of Fayette county, Pa.

William David Stewart and Della Maude Everly, both of Corinth, W. Va.

James Lindsey Gladden and Cassie Lytton, both of Fairmont, W. Va.

Aaron Lambert Gregg, of Blue, W. Va., and Jessie Fay Anderson, of Friendly, W. Va.

Charles Winters and Gertrude Brandon, both of Wheeling, W. Va.

John Cale, of Bloomsburg, Pa., and Lelia Paugh, of Breedlove, W. Va.

William Merch Radcliff and Bessie Collin, both of Linn, W. Va.

William Blaire Bland and Laura Belle Weekley, both of Mt. Clare, W. Va.

Benj. Wilson Brown and Helen Grace Nelson, both of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Clyde Talbert Bell and Golda Cordelia Knotts, both of Preston county, W. Va.

Ira Lee Jenkins, of Masontown, W. Va., and Opha Gladys Wamsley, of Sturgisson, W. Va.

Clarence Wayne Pratt and Nitia Opal Taylor, both of Masontown, W. Va.

Arvey William Wagner and Ada Leola McFarling, both of Grafton, W. Va.

Brice Edward Bissett and E. I. Kessner, both of Keyser, W. Va.

George Elliott Mason and Lovenia Miller, both of Garrett county.

Peter Kusmer and Artie Gordon, both of Hiorra, W. Va.

Ernest Lewis Dugen and Lillian Martin, both of Fairmont, W. Va.

Guy Russell and Linvirnia Dotson, both of Mt. Clare, W. Va.

Otho Vangilder and Marcella Freeland, both of Fairmont, W. Va.

Henry George Howell, of Uffington, W. Va., and Oshie Goldie Everly, of Masontown, W. Va.

Charles Castelo Shaw, of Terra Alta, W. Va., and Clara Jane Goss, of Oakland.

Samuel Kaiser and Anna Frothman, both of Fairmont, W. Va.

Frank Alfred Hallett and Wilma Amelia Schnelle, both of Wheeling, W. Va.

Silas Bofyard, of Austin, W. Va. and Rebecca Arnold, of Oakland.

Isaac Clayton Sumners and Hallie Dee Frum, both of Little Falls, W. Va.

Five with request not to publish.

Church Services.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.45 a. m., and 8 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE PARK M. E.

Class meeting at 10 a. m.
Preaching at 8 p. m.
Sunday school at 2.30 p. m.
Epworth League at 7:00 p. m.

P. Z. MUSGRAVE, Pastor.

ST. MARK S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching 10:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Ferndale—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 3:30 p. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

STOYER.

We are having fine weather at the present time.

The freeze did much damage to the apple crop in this section.

Misses Susan and Ivy Harvey, of near Wilson, W. Va., were visiting friends and relatives at this place last Sunday.

Mr. McHenry was a business caller in town one day last week.

Mr. Arthur White, of near Oakland, was calling at J. T. Steyer's the first of the week.

Mr. J. P. Harvey was in town one day last week.

Messrs. Irvin and Paul Neville were in town last Sunday.

Miss Grace Riley attended the funeral of Harry Shillingburg at Gormania last Sunday.

The Glade Valley Telephone line will be extended to Stoyer within a short time.

Mr. W. P. Lee, of Wildell, W. Va., was calling on friends at this place this week.

Messrs. Charles Kidd and W. W. Steyer left here last Sunday for Gettysburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Wolfe were visiting friends in Blaine last Saturday and Sunday.

BITTINGER.

Did you tackle the trouble that came your way,
With a resolute heart and cheerful;
Or hide your face from the light of day,
With a craven heart and fearful.

Oh, a trouble is a ton; Oh, a trouble is an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it;
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only how did you take it.

Mahlon Brenneman, of McHenry, spent last Sunday and part of Monday with relatives here.

C. E. Ellithorp attended the sale of the J. T. Lohr farm at Oakland last Saturday.

Jacob Brenneman had a force of men at work on the public roads in this neighborhood this week.

Jesse Warnick, of the Backwoods settlement, passed through this village last Monday afternoon.

Columbus Brenneman, an estimable young man of this community, was taken to the hospital at Baltimore last Monday by Dr. Bowen, of Grantsville, and it is hoped that the young man will speedily recover from the sickness from which he is suffering.

Thomas H. Brenneman is busily engaged in erecting the foundation for his new barn which he hopes to have completed in time to receive this season's harvest.

Oliver Beachy, who has been confined to his home for some time, is able to be about his work again, we are glad to report.

In the absence of a Memorial Day celebration here, some of the neighbors spent the day cleaning up and beautifying the village cemetery.

The Best Is Always Cheapest especially if it's paint. Can you make better paint than PURE PAINT? Hardly. Therefore, what you want is

DAVIS 100 PER CENT PURE PAINT

Ask for Analysis and Testimonials.

For sale by J. M. Davis & Sons, Oakland, Md.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Notice to The Public.

I have taken charge of the Fresh Meat Department of Creutzburg's store where I can furnish my trade with the best Fresh Meats at all times, and solicit a share of your patronage. Everything clean and up-to-date.

Farmers, bring your calves, mutton, lambs and beef and get the highest cash prices for them.

Yours to please,
HENRY SMOUSE.
The Up-to-Date Market.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawtont & Sons.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., May 19, 1910.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Monday, June 6, 1910,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

THE STUDY OF LIZA ANN

A Character That Was Not Read Aright by the Author.

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Lawrence Stanton had gained his reputation as a great author through a faithful portrayal of types. He determined now to combine business with pleasure and take a trip to some unfrequented mountainous country where he might come in contact with the people and make a study of them in order to weave a story about them. He especially desired to find one character, an ignorant and attractive young girl; but, though many could easily answer the first requirement, the latter was always missing until he met—her.

This was the day that he had followed the lonely trail up and up, through sunshine and shadow, until he came upon her suddenly where she was sitting upon a fallen log. She arose, startled at Stanton's appearance.

"Don't go," he said quickly. "I am only resting for a few moments."

She hesitated, pulling at her bonnet strings undecidedly as he lit his pipe. Then curiosity overcame prudence.

"Whar you from?" she asked.

He waved a hand indefinitely toward the east. "My home is over there," he said. "And yours?" The girl flashed a smile at him and imitated the vague movement of his arm.

"Up thar," she answered.

Stanton laughed. "Got a mother and father?" he asked. She nodded vigorously.

"And what is your name, O maid of the mountains?"

She resumed her seat upon the fallen log. "Liza Ann," she answered, and then, "What you here for?"

"I am here," said Stanton gravely, "to obtain information which may be valuable to me in the production of a book."

Liza Ann looked puzzled.

"Did you ever read a book, my child?"

She shook her head.

"Have you ever been away from home, Liza Ann, farther away than the village?"

"Never been nowhar," said the girl contentedly. Then she looked up at

"YOU WILL MARRY THE BEAUTIFUL LADY."

him. "Tell me about that place whar you come from."

And Stanton told her.

Slowly the sun sank down behind the tall trees. Liza Ann slipped to the ground. "I'm goin'," she said.

"You will come here tomorrow afternoon, will you not?" Stanton begged. He intended to have his notebook with him then. "I will bring a book to show you, with pictures of the places we have been talking about."

Liza Ann smiled delightedly. "Yaas, I'll come," she drawled, and Stanton wondered how she could run so lightly and gracefully up the mountain path in the heavy shoes that were so many sizes too large.

He had just settled himself comfortably at the same picturesque spot upon the following day when Liza Ann appeared. Her shyness seemed to have vanished, for she responded merrily to his sallies, then silently turned the pages of the book which he had brought, while Stanton wrote rapidly, pausing to look up at her from time to time.

She came again and again at the man's bidding to sit beside him as he worked. Stanton studied her moods and emotions as a naturalist might analyze some wonderful butterfly, while the book progressed rapidly. He brought his camera, too, and took many successful pictures of the obedient little subject. The one which pleased him most was that of Liza Ann just as he had first seen her, the sunshine sifting down through the leafy trees to rest upon her upturned face. This, he decided, would make a charming frontispiece for the new book. She was very proud of the copy of the photograph which he gave her.

So the golden days passed, and later, when the early moon came peeping over the mountain peak, they would walk together up and up the fragrant pathway. On one of these evenings he told her such parts of the story as he thought she might understand—of the winsome girl who lived in a log cabin home and dressed in calico.

"That's me!" cried Liza Ann and clapped her hands gleefully.

Then he told her of the beautiful lady who wore satins and jewels. She looked up at him with startled, widening eyes.

"Who's that?" she demanded.

"That, my child," Stanton answered, with an odd smile, "is only a woman of the world."

"I don't like her," the girl burst out passionately; "I don't like her." And in a moment she had left him.

The man laughed amusedly. He knew that she would come back to him again, and she did. He found her waiting at the old trysting place on the night that he was going away. Her face was very pale in the moonlight.

"What a doleful Liza Ann!" he teased. She looked at him dumbly.

"I will come back, little one," the man comforted. "You must not forget me, and one day you shall lead me up the lonely trail again, while I tell you how much I have missed you since we said goodby."

The girl raised her dark and solemn eyes to his. "You will never come back," she said quietly.

Stanton laughed. "Well," he answered evasively, "there will be the book to finish first, and then"—

"Then," said Liza Ann in that same dull monotone, "you will marry the beautiful lady."

Stanton did not reply to this. "Good-by, my little mountain maid," he said. "I will send the book to you, and remember that the man who wrote it will be thinking of you always."

"I don't want your book!" she burst out fiercely.

He tried to put his arm about her, but she darted from him and went running fleetly up the narrow path. Far above a mossy bank lay bathed in moonlight. Stanton, watching, saw the girl pause a moment here and then throw herself face downward upon the ground. The man lit a cigar leisurely, then picked up his valise. Still the little figure lay quite motionless. "Strange creatures these," he said musingly and continued his journey downward.

Much work had accumulated during Stanton's absence, and he was very busy for some time after reaching home. Then he returned to the book once more, walking to and fro as was his custom while thinking out the details of a story. Often he would pause before the picture of Liza Ann which had been placed upon the mantelshelf. He seemed to gain inspiration from the witchery of her laughing face. Another picture stood near in a golden frame—that of a woman serene and beautiful who was wearing a wonderful gown. The author ended his walk abruptly this evening and seated himself to read the paper; then, with a sharp exclamation, he looked more closely at the printed page. The picture from the mantelshelf in some unaccountable way had been transferred to the paper before him. Liza Ann, seated upon a fallen log, the old sunbonnet framing her tangled curls, smiled happily out upon the world with childish wonder in her eyes. Beneath the picture Stanton read, "Miss Judith Jerrold, who is appearing at the Star theater this week in 'The Transformation of Liza Ann.'"

Feverishly the man turned to the theatrical notes: "Miss Judith Jerrold comes to the Star theater this week in a new play which has been written expressly for her by Henry Clayton. Miss Jerrold has been spending the summer months in a remote part of the mountains, resting after an exhausting winter season and studying the speech and mannerisms of the simple folk who will live upon the stage in Mr. Clayton's production of 'The Transformation of Liza Ann.' There are many emotional actresses. There is but one Judith Jerrold, and she will move us to laughter and tears with the mishaps of Liza Ann."

Stanton jumped to his feet. It was late, but he must see her tonight, must know for a very certainty the truth. Half bewildered, he entered the theater and sat through the performance as one in a dream. The great actress was holding an impromptu reception upon the stage after the play, so he pressed forward through the crowd which surrounded her. She advanced to meet him and graciously extended her hand, but a mocking light shone in her dark eyes.

"So," she said laughingly, "I am discovered. My only apology is that, having been in seclusion so long, the desire to act a part became irresistible. I had read many of your delightful character studies and longed to see if I could impersonate the unsophisticated mountain girl so truly as to deceive even you, a student of types. The result has been satisfactory to myself, but disappointing, I fear, to the author, as you will find that many of the original and ingenuous sayings which so amused you at the time were merely quoted from the play which you have seen tonight."

Stanton's face grew very stern. "A greater part of the book will have to be rewritten," he said. "The incident has been an unfortunate one for me."

The actress was wearing the trailing lace robe in which she appears, you will remember, during the last act when the half wild little creature is transformed suddenly into a great heiress, but she looked up at the man now with the soft, wide eyed reproach of the innocent mountain girl. Again he seemed to see her lying prone in the moonlight.

"Yes," she said slowly, "it may have been unfortunate for your book, Mr. Stanton, that this ignorant, lovable child never existed, but it was rather fortunate, don't you think, for poor little Liza Ann?"

With a bright nod she dismissed him and turned to greet a new admirer. Stanton turned to follow her, hesitated a moment, then silently made his way out into the night.

My work is like play because I refresh myself with Jersey-Creme It's sure all to the Jersey

WHAT?

JERSEY-CREME THE PERFECT

is the purest summer beverage known. You can never miss-take any other for JERSEY-CREME—the perfect drink—once you have tried it.

By the bottle or case —Ask your dealer or phone us.

OAKLAND BOTTLING WORKS

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 10 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.

7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.

50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not advertised here. For particulars address

M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

ORDER NISI.

Jane Roberts vs. J. Turner Lohr and wife, No. 1081 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 28th day of May, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by William R. Offutt and J. C. Renninger, attorneys named in the Mortgage, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of June, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 24th day of June, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $2610.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

FOR RENT—After May 1st, a 6-room cottage, with stable on lot. Kitchen and one bedroom furnished if desired; apply at this office.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JUNE 9 1910. NUMBER 15

HAGNER ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY FOR CONGRESS

He Will Go Into the Primaries as Provided by the Lee Law.

Hagerstown, Md., June 3, 1910.

To the Republicans of the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland:

Everyone, I am sure, recognizes that under our Republican form of government a citizen has a right to aspire to political office. That he must be qualified to fill the position he seeks goes without saying, and he must be honest and faithful to the trust reposed in him or he is unworthy to represent any constituency.

Early in the spring of this year I announced myself as a Republican candidate for Congress in the Sixth Maryland District, believing myself qualified to represent the people of a District of great intelligence, wealth and progressiveness and had hoped that the convention called by the Republican State Central Committee to meet at Frederick, June 9th, might honor me with that nomination, but as the Attorney General of Maryland has decided that the nomination for Congress this year must be made under the provisions of the Blair Lee Primary Election Law, passed by the Legislature of 1910, and that all candidates must be voted for directly by the people, which ruling is law until the Courts decree otherwise, I, of course, bow in deference to his opinion, but am in the fight to the finish intending to stand before the people of my district, whose will is supreme, as firm for that nomination now as I did when I first announced myself as a candidate.

Whilst any great and sudden change from a well beaten path of selecting candidates for office which has been accepted for generations and which the people have so long been accustomed to follow, might well cause surprise and consternation at first, yet no man should fail to concede that the matter of choosing candidates to represent a people's government can at all times be safely trusted in their hands. Every man desirous of representing a constituency should be willing to submit his hopes and aspirations to those whose suffrage he seeks and all who believe in a government of the people, by the people and for the people, should not complain of a change in a system of choosing candidates for office which places the responsibility directly where it belongs. True American manhood will ever acquiesce in such principles. The love of country demands a complete recognition of the supreme will of the people and I, for one, concede that principle to its fullest extent.

I was a candidate for Congress from this district in 1896 and came within one vote of the nomination for many ballots but failed in the end, Captain John McDonald, of Montgomery county, receiving the nomination. I now, after 14 years have elapsed, fighting faithfully during those years for others, ask the Republicans of Allegany, Garrett, Frederick, Montgomery and Washington counties to give me their support at this time on Primary Election Day, to be selected later, when my name will appear on the ticket in every election district in every county in the Sixth Congressional District, and I promise that I shall make an active and aggressive campaign, with no illfeeling towards anyone, but with a determination to acquire that for which I have so long aspired. And if nominated and elected to the Congress of the United States, I will faithfully and honestly do my duty and the people shall at all times be received at the National Capital by me as their servant.

Respectfully,

ALEX. R. HAGNER.

MR. DICK WANTS A JOINT DEBATE

Issues a Lengthy Challenge to Col. George A. Pearre.

Hon. David. E. Dick has issued a challenge to Hon Geo. A. Pearre to a joint debate, the challenges covering five page of closely typewritten legal cap. The challenge starts off as follows:

"While in Cumberland recently I learned that you had determined to again be a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Sixth Congressional District, and that you were not only ready, but eager, to go before the people of the district and vigorous defend your entire official record as a member of Congress for the last twelve years.

"Now that the Attorney General of the State has declared that the nomination for Congress must be secured under the new State Primary Law (our State Central Committee concuring) and you, in a recent interview expressed intense gratification at the result, in that you say 'the people and not the bosses (much to your pretended pleasure) will select their own candidates' I take this method of challenging you to joint] debate open air meetings in Oakland, Cumberlend, Rockville, Hagerstown and Frederick City, the county seats of the respective counties in your Congressional district at any time you may choose between now and the day of the primaries."

The challenge then cites the issues to be discussed. The first is that Col. Pearre from the standpoint of usefulness to his constituency of the Sixth Congressional district has been a "distinct disappointment, an abject failure." The second that Colonel Pearre's activity in defense of Collector of Customs W. F. Stone as to the charges preferred against the latter was prompted by a desire to court the favor of the "party boss," and the third because of the reasons outlined in the challenge that Col. Pearre cannot be re-elected if nominated.

GRAND JURY WAS IN SESSION TEN HOURS

Petit Jury Was Discharged at Noon Monday—Court Still in Session.

The June Term of the Circuit Court for Garrett county convened Monday morning with Chief Judge A. Hunter Boyd and Associate Judge Robert R. Henderson on the bench.

Mr. Scott T. Jones, of Oakland, was appointed foreman of the grand jury, and the following were drawn as his associates:

Scott T. Jones, foreman; Stephen G. Ashby, Daniel A. Eager, Charles I. Liller, John A. Wolf, Joseph E. Bowser, Robert E. Paugh, Christian C. Durst, Patrick Laffey, John D. Miller, Richard W. Beckman, Edward A. Beachy, Gregory E. Beavans, A. M. T. Warnick, Simon Brenneman, Henry E. Friend, Joel L. Kinsinger, Urban O. Blocher, Charles Q. Hook, Amos C. Fike, Henry A. Kaese, Patrick J. Garrett, Marshal H. Frankhouser.

Judge Boyd charged the grand jury and congratulated the people of Garrett county upon the fact that no crimes of a very serious nature had been committed within the bounds of the county, but urged that thorough investigations be made of all matters laid before the jurors. The Court directed the attention of the jury to certain laws and urged the body to expedite matters as rapidly as possible.

Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock the grand jury was discharged, after being in session a total of a little more than ten hours, which is the shortest session of a grand jury in the history of the county and probably of the entire State at a regular term of court.

The report of the jury follows:

To the Honorable, the Judges of the Circuit Court for Garrett County:

The Grand Jury for the June Term, 1910, of the Circuit Court for Garrett county beg leave to report that we have concluded our labors and have to the best of our ability performed the duties devolving upon us as members of this body. We now desire to report our proceedings and receive our discharge.

We have had before us and have examined fifty-three witnesses and found six presentments and six bills of indictments.

We have found presentments in all cases in which we believe the evidence justified and have ignored trivial cases and those cases in which the evidence did not appear to warrant presentments.

We have examined the several county buildings and have to report that we have found them in good condition except in a few minor details, such as the Treasurer's office is lacking in safeguards and facilities and would respectfully suggest that a suitable counter or desk protected by an iron railing be placed in said Treasurer's office, also proper shelving in the vault for the accommodation of books and records of said office.

We find that the jail is not in as sanitary condition as would naturally be expected in such an imposing and modern building and would suggest the thorough cleansing and disinfecting of the urns and the destruction of the present bedding which is apparently impossible to properly clean, and the providing of suitable and necessary bedding for the comfort and convenience of those so unfortunate as to be confined therein.

We would further suggest the repairing of the locking apparatus to the individual cells, which is at the present time impossible to work as intended by the constructors and expected by the county.

We desire to acknowledge our appreciation of the faithful and efficient assistance we have received from the State's Attorney, who has been untiring in his endeavors to give us all the aid we have needed.

We would acknowledge the courtesy extended by the Court and the several officers of the county, and we commend the several officers having the records of the county in charge for the excellent and neat manner in which we have found them.

We now beg to be discharged.

S. T. JONES, Foreman,

S. G. ASHBY,

U. O. BLOCHER, Clerks.

The petit jury was discharged Monday at noon an agreement having been entered into between the attorneys at the bar to submit all cases to the court.

The appeal docket was taken up first under the rule of Court and cases disposed of as follows:

No 1. Baker Johnson vs. Gilead Broadwater; continued. Thayer—Sincell.

2. C. C. Frederick vs. Dragon Automobile Co.; appeal dismissed by order of appellant. Peddicord—Hamill.

3. Felty & West Lumber Co. vs. T. W. Casteel; settled by parties on terms filed. Peddicord—Hamill.

4. C. G. Hammond vs. G. S. Hamill, tried before the court; judgment affirmed. Peddicord—Semmes.

5. E. S. Gilpin vs. James D. Heath; the plaintiff below did not appear and case non prossed

6. Elijah Livengood vs. James Horchler; no attorneys; continued.

7. Urias D. Yoder vs. International Harvester Co.; tried before the court; held sub curia. Peddicord—Renninger & Offutt.

8. H. B. Lewis vs. C. W. Hopkins; settled. Hamill—Thayer.

9. A. J. Bevans vs. Charles H. Younkin; dismissed. Matthews & Hamill—Hamill.

10. Mrs. C. I. Stewart vs. S. Davis & Sons; continued. Thayer—Peddicord.

11 W. G. Riley vs. J. W. Solomon; tried before the court; sub curia. Hamill—Renninger & Offutt.

12. Elias R. Shrout vs. N. A. Ream; non pros. Renninger & Offutt.

13. Thomas Stanton vs. Joseph Deem; tried before the court; sub curia. Hamill—Renninger & Offutt.

14. Robert J. White vs. Buick Wilson Co.; continued. Legge—Thayer.

15. George Smith et al vs. Dixon & Kelso; continued. Semmes—Hamill.

16. Fresh & Kahl vs. Martin Rush; settled. Peddicord.

One of the most important cases docketed and set for trial was that of the Garrett Telephone Company vs. James Beeghly, late secretary of the company. The suit was for an accounting and settlement. By the terms of the agreement the defendant, Beeghly, agrees to pay the telephone company the sum of $500 and all costs of the suit, with interest at six per cent. from date, and also to dismiss the actions brought against the several directors for damages, etc.

ALLEGANY COUNTY HAS HAD HER SHARE OF HONOR

Was Given Ten Members of the House In 120 Years.

The next Congressional election is not far off and the time for the nomination of candidates for the two great political parties are still nearer. A few facts or suggestions of a historical character on on the subject might be in order, and of interest to your readers. They will be entirely non'partisan in their form, and meaningless. It is advisable and desirable that voters at both the primary, and general elections should have and know the general facts before them.

Allegany county in its life of 120 years has had 10 different congressmen, beginning with Michael Sprigg in 1824 and 1826. Thomas Piney, elected in 1845; Henry W. Hoffman, in 1855; Francis Thomas in 1861-63-65; Patrick Hamill, 1868; Lloyd Lowndes, 1872; William Walsh, 1874-76; W. M. McKaig, 1892-94; Geo. L. Wellington, 1896; Geo. A. Pearre elected in 1897, and five times thereafter, with an unexpired term, Allegany county has had seven Congressmen since the beginning of the great war, covering a period of 34 years, a pretty liberal share of the 49 years since the war commenced. During the last mentioned term of years, Washington county had one member, L. E. McCombs, four times; Frederick county, two members, M. G. Urner, one term, and John Ritchie, one term; and Montgomery county, one member, John McDonald, for two years.

Besides this long list Allegany county has had a U. S. Senator for six years in the person of Geo. L. Wellington, and Lloyd Lowndes, governor from 1896 to 1900. It is, however, true that for the first thirty-five years of Allegany's existence she had no officer of the National government whatever, nothing but local one.

Possibly some of the sister counties of the Congressional district might think Allegany has had more than a fair share of Congressional honors. But it can be truly said they were not wrongfully sought or obtained unfairly.

The record, so far as known is clean and unstained.

Garrett county is now 38 years old and has not yet had a Congressman or even a candidate, but it is understood it now has a worthy aspirant.

Governor Frank Thomas represented this congressional district from Frederick county in the 1830 for 8 years. Then moved to Allegany county, from where he served about the same length of time. His whole service from the two counties would be about 16 years. So he was the senior congressman of all the members from the upper district, as it was called in ancient days.

The object of this communication is not to aid or harm any Congressional aspirant, but solely to cast some light on the subject that may be useful to voters.

It might be stated suitably in conclusion, as an interesting fact for readers, that when Allegany county got her first Congressman in 1826, the State had 9 members with a population of about 400,000 inhabitants; about 45,000 then formed a basis for a member. Now we have a population of about 1,200,000 with only six Congressmen, upon a basis of about 200,000 persons for a member. A wide difference, truly. Then our union consisted of 24 states, which stood at that number from 1820 to 1838. Now we have 46 states with more wanting to come in. Give them room.

J. B.

June 2, 1910.

REVENUE OF STATE FROM CORPORATIONS

Derives About 32 Per Cent—the Gross Tax Receipts.

Commissioner of Corporations Herbert Knox Smith has submitted to the President a report on the taxation of manufacturing, mercantile, transportation and transmission corporations in the State of Maryland.

The report is a digest of the corporate tax laws, with administrative methods and financial results. It shows that Maryland derives 32 per cent. of its total revenue from corporations. In other States whose Constitutions do not prohibit double taxation greater State tax revenues are received from corporations.

The proportionate amount derived by the State of Maryland, the report states, from special taxation of corporations is small, about 32 per cent. of the total State tax receipts. This, however, does not include a large sum received from corporations under the general property tax, an amount which cannot be segregated.

There is a so-called capital stock tax in Maryland which, however, is in essence a general property tax applied to corporations. It is collected through the corporations, based on their assets, and may be charged by the corporations to the stockholders, which in some cases is done.

Railroads are exempt from this tax. Most of the proceeds of the tax goes to the public schools, so that both in principle and application it is hardly a State corporation tax.

Railroads, transmission and other public service corporations are taxed on their gross receipts in Maryland. Shares of stock in corporations taxed either by the capital stock or the gross receips tax are exempt in the hands of the stockholders.

By far the most important single tax for State purposes levied in Maryland is the gross receipt tax, which in the year ended September, 1909, produced about $642,000. The capital stock tax produced about $107,000. The only other large item is the tax on insurance companies and savings bank deposits of about $307,000.

Queen Victoria's Crown.

The lightest of European crowns is the state crown of Great Britain, which was made for Queen Victoria sixty-six years ago. Although it weighs only two pounds, seven ounces, its value is $1,600,000. One enormous sapphire came from the signet of Edward the Confessor. One of the rubies has a sad tragic history. It was at one time in the possession of one of the great Kings of Granada, whom Pedro the Cruel invited to his palace and basely murdered through greed of this gem.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

DIXON & KELSO

Dixon & Kelso's

HAVE JUST RECEIVED

BIG CAR

Granulated Lime

FOR BUCKWHEAT.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

GIBSON FAMILY REUNION

A TWO ACT MUSICAL COMEDY

PRESENTED BY 75 LOCAL CHARACTERS

Miss Anna Manges, Instructor, Bock Entertainment Co.. Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

THE OAKLAND OPERA HOUSE

Thursday and Friday Nights, June 9 and 10, 8 O'Clock

Benefit Ladies' Aid Society of Saint Mark's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Oakland, Md.

General Admission, 25 Cents; Reserved Seats, 50 Cents.

TICKETS ON SALE AT OAKLAND PHARMACY

HE WON TWO BETS.

A Story of Baseball Rivalry Between Two Teams.

By CLARA B. TUCKER.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

Beatrice Barr was born a tomboy. At ten wrestling with her brother, two years her senior, she downed him. From fourteen to sixteen it was all horseback with her—no saddle preferred. At seventeen she quieted down a bit.

About this time Tom Barr, her brother, was chosen captain of the Arlington baseball club. Beatrice at the meets of her brother's club with other clubs never failed to occupy a front seat on the grand stand with a card and a pencil in her hand, and those about her always depended on her for the score. She was very keen to see the correct side of all disputed points, and often an umpire would take her opinion in preference to his own.

Now, the great rivals of the Arlingtons, captained by Tom Barr, were the Crescents, led by Dick Thruston. The Arlingtons had kept the lead of the Crescents till Thruston took command of the latter. After that there came a series of defeats for the Arlingtons that made Captain Barr furious. Thruston was a splendid specimen of male youth. With a superb figure, great muscular strength and a quick, springy step he was to be admired from an artistic point of view. And, a born commander, he was just the man to organize and captain a baseball team. What assured his success was that he was a first class pitcher.

"AND I'LL MAKE YOU ANOTHER BET."

At the end of the season Thruston had placed his team so far ahead of Barr's that the latter made up his mind to reorganize for the next season with a view to regaining the position he had lost. He was busy all winter examining and testing the skill of applicants and by spring had got together as likely a lot of boys as ever composed a baseball club. But in spite of all he could do he could not find a pitcher to match Dick Thruston.

Rumors of Barr's efforts reached the ear of the rival captain, and he, too, bestirred himself. The team he selected was as much better than the team he had led the season before as Tom's was superior to the one which had been defeated. And so it was that when the series of games was entered upon the Arlingtons and the Crescents were evenly matched except that the latter could outpitch the former.

Nevertheless Tom Barr entered upon the season's games with considerable confidence. He bantered Thruston as to what he would do with him, and Thruston, who was as much of a thoroughbred as a baseball player, only smiled and said: "I'd like to see you do it, Tom. There's no fun with the luck all on one side."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Tom. "I'll bet you a hat we beat you on the games during the season."

"All right," replied Thruston. "I'll take that."

"And I'll make you another bet. I'll bet you a box of cigars against a dozen pairs of gloves that we'll beat you at least one game with a man short on our team."

"I don't quite understand that," said Thruston.

"Do you take the bet?"

"Anything you like."

"Done." And Tom repeated the terms of the two bets.

"Another thing," Tom continued. "There's only one person I can get to match you in pitching—a negro. Do you object to playing against one of the colored race?"

"Not if my team don't. I'll speak to them about the matter."

Thruston soon after sent Captain Barr permission to introduce a negro into the game if required.

The agreement between the two clubs was that they were to play seven games, four to win, the games to be played on alternate Saturday afternoons, beginning with the second Saturday in April. There was great interest manifested on the part of the friends of the two teams, and when the first game was played the grand stand was packed and much of the standing room was taken up. A fine lot of boys on each side were arrayed, and the play from the first was the finest that had ever been played between the Arlingtons and the Crescents. The regular pitcher was in place for the former, Barr not having availed himself of the permission he had received to use the negro. After a hard fought game the Arlingtons won by a few runs.

When the game was finished some said that it had been won by Beatrice Barr's presence and encouragement. At any rate, she was adored by the members of her brother's team, and there was not one of them who would not give his head to serve her. A few, while attributing the Arlingtons' success to her, referred that success to a far different cause. They said that if Captain Thruston had kept his eyes off Beatrice Barr and fixed his attention on the game the score would have been very different.

The second game was played under very much the same conditions, and again the Arlingtons won. By this time a number of the Crescents had noticed that their captain was not doing his best, and one of them went to him and expostulated. Thruston knew very well what was the matter with him, though he did not reveal the secret. He promised that the next game should show up very differently.

And it did. Barr fixed his attention on the game and won it by half a dozen runs—not only that, but he beat the next, the fourth game. During both the third and fourth games Beatrice Barr was not present. It was given out that she was ill. Some malicious spectaters declared that she had been bribed by the Crescents with ten pounds of candy to keep away. This only excited merriment. All knew that she was wrapped up in the success of her brother's team. But when the fifth game came round and she was again absent, the Crescents winning, many who had noticed Thruston's bad play while she was present looked knowing and whispered to one another that they believed there might be something in the bribery story after all. Beatrice was not in her seat at the sixth game; but, despite her absence, the Arlingtons won.

Each team had now won three games, and the seventh was to decide the championship. Beatrice Barr told some of her most intimate girl friends that she would love to see the game, but she had understood that unpleasant remarks had been made about the effect of her presence on the result and she had decided to remain away from the grand stand. She was not in her seat when the deciding game was played, but it was said that she watched it from behind the blinds of a house overlooking the oval.

When the teams went out on to the field a negro was noticed among the Arlingtons. Captain Thruston was about to protest when he remembered that he had agreed that Barr should use a negro pitcher if he chose. Some surprise was indicated that a boy of his size was expected to do extra fine pitching. He was but average height, and his muscles did not show under his loose suit. But when he began to pitch the secret came out. He could do things with a baseball that a champion billiardist can work with the ivories. Few could hit his balls, and those who did usually sent them straight up in the air, to be caught by the outs.

During the changes from the bat various persons, mostly from among the Crescents' side, attempted to get near the colored pitcher to have a look at him or question him, but he managed to keep pretty well away from them and would only answer "Yes" or "No." Finally, seeing that he was not to be interviewed, they let him alone. The Crescents held the last inning, the negro pitching. The Arlingtons led in the score by two runs. Thruston was at the bat, and it was expected that he would make a hit to enable the men on the bases to get in, three men hoping to complete their runs and win the game. But the negro served the balls with such curves that Thruston either sent them straight up in the air or they struck the ground near his feet. Finally, one of his skyrockets being caught, the game was lost to the Crescents. Dick Thruston dropped his bat and with a chivalry for which he was noted strode forward with outstretched hand to congratulate the pitcher for having won the game for his team. But the negro, instead of waiting for him, ran away at the top of his speed and disappeared from the oval.

Tom Barr ran up to Thruston and said:

"I've won two bets from you, Dick."

"What two bets?"

"Bets we made at the beginning of the season—one that we'd beat you on the score of games, the other that we'd beat you a game one man short on our team."

"You've won the first, but I don't see how you've won the second."

"Come round to the house this evening and I'll explain."

That evening Thruston, having doffed his baseball clothes, in immaculate attire called at the Barrs'. He found Tom with Beatrice, who was dressed in her most becoming costume. She hung her head before the gaze of her admirer.

"You told me today," Tom said to Dick, "that you didn't understand how I had won our second bet. The last game was played with eight men and a girl. There is the girl, who has been two hours washing on the bottle cork."

Dick stood looking at Beatrice in astonishment; then he repeated the words at the close of the match. She extended her hand and gazed fondly at him in token of congratulations and confidence.

The most important feature connected with the struggle between the Arlington and Crescent teams was the announcement in the autumn of the engagement of Dick Thruston and Beatrice Barr.

S. LAWTON & SONS

Steam and Electrical Engineers.

Dealers in Steam, Water, Plumbing, Heating, Mill and Farmers' Supplies, Gas and Coal Ranges and Heating Stoves.

Majestic Gas Ranges

THE RANGES WITH A REPUTATION

In durability, beauty, economy, labor saving and service, THE MAJESTIC HIGH OVEN RANGE is so far in advance of any other gas range on the market that there is absolutely no comparison whatever.

All controlling valves are at the front of the Range, and are easy of access.

Ranges furnished with six burners on top; also with Oven placed on the left. Made with 18X21 inch or 20X21 inch Ovens.

Just the Gas Range You have been looking for

Made to hang on right hand end of any Majestic Coal Range, and with very little trouble can also be attached to any Range that has a similar top to the Majestic. Note the nice size of Oven and Broiler; can be furnished with three burners on top.

MAJESTIC RANGES FOR COAL OR WOOD.

HONEST GOODS AT HONEST PRICES

We are local agents for the CELEBRATED MAJESTIC RANGES—the Ranges with a national reputation. Nothing better is made in the stove line. Goods which are cheap, but not good, are dear at any price.

Why you should have a Great and Grand Majestic Range in your Kitchen.

It cuts the fuel bill in half because it is riveted air-tight, HOLDS the heat where it belongs, and has the proper arrangement of flues.
It is used by your neighbor, who would have no other.
It browns bread all over just alike without turning.
Has large warming closets with the right kind of doors. The only warming closet you can clean.
It is made in any style and size desired.
It is made of better and heavier material than any other.
It is the only range in the world made of Malleable and Charcoal Iron.
It costs a little more, but lasts much longer.
It is the only range made that has a ventilated ash pit to prevent burning the floor.

IT HAS A REPUTATION—
It is made of NON-BREAKABLE Malleable Iron.
It is made of NON-RUSTING CHARCOAL IRON.
It is riveted together like an engine boiler (not bolted).
It costs less than nothing for repairs as compared to other ranges.
It lasts three times as long as a cheap range, but don't cost three times as much.
You don't have to shovel the ashes out of pit, the open end ash pan does that for you. With the new ash pan carrier you can carry out ashes with one hand.
It saves TIME, WORRY, TROUBLE, LABOR, FUEL AND MONEY.
All the nickeled parts are smooth and easy to keep clean.
Has an all-copper movable reservoir that heats the water while breakfast is cooking. It boils the water. It stops boiling when reservoir is moved from fire by turning crank.
It has an ash cut under pan which catches ashes that otherwise fall on floor.
It is lined with pure asbestos board—not paper.
COME IN AND LET US SHOW YOU.

COOK WITH GAS.

Every woman is undoubtedly interested in anything that will aid her in doing her work in the easiest possible manner. If you have never used Gas you do not know what it will do for you in your home. Let us point out a few facts that we believe will interest you.

What is Gas?

Gas is simply the best of Coal with all the dirt, ashes, and smoke taken away; also the drudgery and a big part of the price. Gas is the spirit of the Coal—all that counts in it and none of the useless, wornsome part—placed in the kitchen at a trifling cost and without a particle of work, dirt or waste.

If you once use Gas you wouldn't think of going back to the old-time plan or method of coal and wood cooking. Gas eliminates the building of fires, preparing the kindling, getting in the fuel, starting the fire, watching it, and the worry and muss of taking care of it after it is started.

If you used Gas you would have more time all through the day; you could sleep longer in the morning and have more time for rest and enjoyment. And that's not all: Gas transforms the kitchen into a clean, inviting place, free from all the things that makes dust and dirt.

Gas is certainly a clean, economical, wonderful fuel.

Think of boiling, frying, stewing, all on the one range top at the same time, with the right amount of fire under each article to do it in the right way.

When the gas is lighted that instant you are ready to begin work, and gas costs less than any other kind of fuel.

Remember, also, that Gas economy depends largely upon the gas range you buy. To secure the greatest economy a gas range must be scientifically constructed with properly designed burners, valves which are adjustable to any gas pressure, and oven linings which circulate the heat, and confine in to the range. Detroit JEWEL GAS RANGES embody all these features.

Any woman who has used a DETROIT JEWEL GAS RANGE in her kitchen will gladly testify to the ease with which it can be kept clean. The burners can quickly be lifted from place to allow cleaning and when cleaned can be just as easily replaced.

The oven is the crowning feature of a DETROIT JEWEL GAS RANGE. It is made large and square on the "direct flue" plan, which saves gas, insures perfect circulation of the heat currents and overcomes excessive bottom heat so characteristic of other makes. There is no "dead corners" as the heat is caused to circulate around the sides and into the oven until it reaches the top, where it is detained by return flue plates between the crown-sheet and top plates.

This plan of construction provides the most perfect baking oven ever installed in a gas range—one that bakes perfectly in the quickest time and with the least gas consumption.

The burner of a gas range is one of the most important features of its make up and DETROIT JEWEL gas burners are easily the best ever devised.

Detroit Jewel Gas Ranges burn one-eighth gas and seventh-eighths air, the burners are cast in one piece with drilled openings, and, unlike two-piece burners cannot warp out of shape and allow unburned gas to escape. On the standard type range, five top burners are provided—a giant burner, three single burners, and a simmering burner.

On account of their scientific construction DETROIT JEWEL GAS RANGES are the greatest gas savers of any gas range made.

WE ARE CONTRACTORS AND DO
Steam and Hot Water Heating, Sanitary Plumbing, Gas Fitting and Electrical Work.
Estimates Given and Prices Quoted upon Application.
Show Rooms in Townshend Building, Oakland, Md.

"STUDIES IN THE SCRIPTURES."

Six Wonderful Bible Keys, by Pastor Russell of Brooklyn.

By now our readers doubtless feel well acquainted with Pastor Russell through his sermons, which we publish weekly in common with more than three hundred of the leading American and Canadian journals.

We are advised that many of our readers already have the Pastor's celebrated books in their homes and are using them effectively, to their delight and intellectual and spiritual profit. It must be so, since there are in circulation about three millions of copies of the first volume, "The Divine Plan." The Bible and Tract Society of Brooklyn, N. Y., publishes the volumes at cost price so as to secure for them a wide circulation. This brings them within the reach of all.

Set I., three vols. handsomely bound, over 1,100 pages, are supplied post or express charges prepaid, for $1.

Set II., three vols. to match, nearly 1,900 pages, go for $1.20.

Such works, at such abnormally low rates, naturally attract some money-lovers who seek to sell for $10 (the two sets) what costs them but $2.20. The Bible and Tract Society desires to warn all that it is unnecessary to pay such a price;—that if Pastor Russell's "Studies in the Scriptures" can not be obtained otherwise more conveniently they will be pleased to supply all orders direct from Brooklyn Tabernacle at the prices given above.

Some Still Remember "Bill Arp."

Such will be interested in the "Southern Philosopher's" review of the first volume of Series I. He wrote some time before he died:—

"It is impossible to read this book without loving the writer and pondering his wonderful solution of the great mysteries that have troubled us all our lives. There is hardly a family to be found that has not lost some loved one who died outside the church—outside the plan of salvation, and, if Calvinism be true, outside of all hope and inside of eternal torment and despair. We smother our feelings and turn away from the horrible picture. We dare not deny the faith of our fathers, and yet can it be possible that the good mother and the wandering child are forever separated?—forever and forever?

"I believe it is the rigidity of these teachings that makes atheists and infidels and skeptics—makes Christians unhappy and brings their gray hairs down in sorrow to the grave—a lost child, a lost soul! * * *

"This wonderful book makes no assertions that are not well sustained by the Scriptures. It is built up stone by stone, and upon every stone is the text, and it becomes a pyramid of God's love, and mercy, and wisdom.

"There is nothing in the Bible that the author denies or doubts, but there are many texts that he throws a flood of light upon that seem to remove from them the dark and gloomy meaning. I see that editors of leading journals and many orthodox ministers of different denominations have endorsed it and have confessed to this new and comforting light that has dawned upon the interpretation of God's book. Then let every man read and ponder and take comfort, for we are all prisoners of hope. This is an age of advanced thought, and more thinking is done than ever before—men dare to think now. Light—more light—is the watchword."

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars, Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock P. M.

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST,
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY,
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST,
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-1y.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS!

This is to notify the taxpayers of Garrett county that the Annual Levy for 1910 has been made and published, and to call their attention to the following abstract Section 45, Chapter 66, Acts of 1900, relating to the discount to be allowed and the interest to be charged on all tax bills.

"All county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of the levy thereof, and on all county taxes paid on or before the 1st day of September a discount of 3 per cent. will be allowed and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the tax bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt given for taxes so paid. But the discount shall not be allowed unless the whole amount of state and county taxes are paid when same is made.

R. L. FRIES, Treasurer.

WATCH OAKLAND GROW.

A Modern City on the Crest of the Alleghany Mountains.

Oakland, the county seat of Garrett county, Maryland, is situated in a magnificent farming country. Agriculture being the true basis of all continued prosperity, this industry alone could support a city or several thousand people, where most crops of the temperate zone are produced and where total failures are wholly unknown. In addition to the staple crops of wheat, oats, corn, rye, potatoes, buckwheat, maple sugar, hay, etc., this section is a great apple country, and many varieties of fruits, berries and vegetables grow with little attention.

Yet, these are by no means all the advantages nature has so prodigally bestowed upon this community. Right at our doors are rich deposits of coal, kaolin, pure glass sand, fire and potters' clay, an inexhaustible supply of brick and tile shale, abundant supply of natural gas for lighting, heating and manufacturing purposes, the purest water on earth, a great supply of water power only waiting harness to illuminate this mountain top, and supply factories and electric railways with power.

Oakland is situated in the center of a plateau twenty by sixty miles in extent, two thousand eight hundred feet above the sea, where it is never too hot for comfort and never too cold for convenience; America's ideal summer resort; America's greatest health resort; where we sleep under two or more blankets all summer long and you, who reside in the lowlands or large centers of population, are sweltering with the heat and breathing humid, unhealthy and poisoned air. Here the drives are grand in prospect and glorious in nature's garb; where some new scene greets the vision at every turn of the road. $238,000.00 is being spent on State highways radiating from Oakland.

Come to Western Maryland, young man, and grow up with the country. If you prefer to invest in agricultural lands or fruit lands, you will find prices ranging from five to fifty dollars per acre, depending upon location and improvements. These are attractive investments without risk of loss. We also invite factories and industries of all kinds, and believe that this location offers the best advantages on account of the abundance of raw material, cheap fuel and accessibility to market.

When you consider that right here, within six hours of the Nation's capital, is a country with almost unbounded resources, with a variety of everything: Water Works, Sewerage, Natural Gas, a healthy climate, where hay fever and many ills to which the human race is heir in less favored climes, is entirely unknown; a land of pure and abundant water, a land of churches and schools, without any race or other vexatious problems, and where the small investor along with the man of more pretentious capital has opportunities commensurate with his pluck, intelligence and energy, of an equal start in life, then you will readily concede the importance and correctness of the advice given herein.

"The Creator is still making people, but no more land." "There is a tide in the affairs of men which, if taken at the flood, leads on to fortune and fame."

Don't miss the opportunity of a lifetime and regret it for years to come. "A word to the wise is sufficient." Oakland is on the boom, and you should get on the band wagon if you wish to be in the procession.

For further information, call on the Secretary of the Board of Trade, Oakland, Md.

New Wall Paper Store.

Having purchased the wall paper stock of Messrs. Matthews & Helbig and added a large stock of new patterns, we are now open for business on the second floor of the Townshend building, Second street, and solicit the patronage of the public.

W. H. BARTLETT & Co.

OPERA HOUSE

School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,

Opera House. OAKLAND, MD.

The man Who Makes

A STUDY OF HIS

APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,

Dixon Building,

Oakland, Maryland.

One of World's Most Famous Memorial Day Addresses, Delivered By Master Orator

Great orations on Decoration Day are not so frequent as in years nearer the close of the Civil war, and some of them will bear repetition on Grand Army Sunday. The following oration by Colonel Ingersoll, who was matchless upon patriotic occasions, was delivered in New York a few years after the close of the struggle which is recalled by Decoration Day:

This day is sacred to our heroes dead. Upon their tombs we have lovingly laid the wealth of spring. This is a day for memory and tears. A mighty nation bends above its honored graves and pays to noble dust the tribute of its love. Gratitude is the fairest flower that sheds its perfume in the heart. Today we tell the history of our country's life, recount the deads of vanished years—the toil and suffering, the defeats and victories of heroic men—of men who made our nation great and free.

We see the first ships, whose prows were guided by the western sun. We feel the thrill of discovery when the New World was found. We see the oppressed, the serf, the peasant and the slave—men whose flesh had known the chill of chains—the adventurous, the proud, the brave, sailing an unknown sea, seeking homes in unknown lands. We see the settlements, the little clearing, the blockhouse, and the rude and lonely huts; brave men, true women, builders of homes, fellers of forests, founders of states. Separated from the Old World—away from the heartless distinctions of caste—away from sceptres and titles and crowns, they governed themselves.

They defended their homes; they earned their bread. Each citizen had a voice, and the little villages became almost republics. Slowly the savage was driven, foot by foot, back into the dim forest. The days and nights were filled with fear, and the slow years with massacre and war, and the cabins' earthen floors were wet with the blood of mothers and their babes. But the savages of the new world were kinder than the kings and nobles of the old; and so the human tide kept coming, and the places of the dead were filled.

Amid common dangers and common hopes, the prejudices and feuds of Europe faded slowly from their hearts. From every land, of every speech, driven by want, and lured by hope, exiles and emigrants sought the mysterious continent of the west. Year after year the colonists fought and toiled and suffered and increased. They began to talk about liberty—to reason of the rights of man. They asked no help from distant kings, and they began to doubt the use of paying tribute to the useless. They lost respect for dukes and lords, and held in high esteem all honest men. There was the dawn of a new day. They found that they could make and execute the laws. They had tried the experiment of self-government. They had succeeded. The Old World wished to dominate the New. In the care and keeping of the colonists was the destiny of this continent—of half the world.

On this day the story of the great struggle between colonists and kings should be told. We should tell our children of the contest—first for justice, then for freedom. We should tell them the history of the Declaration of Independence—the chart and compass of all human rights—"all men are equal and have the right to life, to liberty and joy." This declaration uncrowned kings, and wrested from the hands of titled tyranny the sceptre of usurped and arbitrary power. It superseded royal grants and repealed the cruel statutes of a thousand years. It gave the peasant a career, it knighted all the sons of toil, it opened all the paths to fame and put the star of hope above the cradle of the poor man's babe. England was then the mightiest of nations—mistress of every sea—and yet our fathers, poor and few, defied her power. Today we remember the defeats, the victories, the disasters, the weary marches, the poverty, the hunger, the sufferings, the agonies, and above all, the glories of the Revolution. We remember all, from Lexington to Valley Forge, and from that midnight of despair to Yorktown's cloudless day. We remember the soldiers and thinkers—the heroes of the sword and pen. They had the brain and the heart, the wisdom and courage, to utter and defend these words: "Governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed."

In defense of this sublime and self-evident truth the war was waged and won. Today we remember all the heroes, all the generous and chivalric men who came from other lands to make ours free. Of the many thousands who shared the gloom and glory of the seven sacred years, not one remains. The last has mingled with the earth, and nearly all are sleeping now in unmarked graves and some beneath the crumbling, leaning stones from which their names have been effaced by time's irreverent and relentless hand. But the nation they founded remains. The United States are still free and independent. The "government derives its just powers from the governed," and fifty millions of free people remember with gratitude the heroes of the Revolution.

Let us be truthful; let us be kind. When peace came, when the independence of a new nation was acknowledged, the great truth for which our fathers fought was half denied, and the constitution was inconsistent with the declaration. The war was waged for liberty, and yet the victors forged new fetters for their fellow men. The chains our fathers broke were put by them upon the limbs of others. Freedom for all was the cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night, through seven years of want and war. In peace the cloud was forgotten, and the pillar blazed unseen. Let us be truthful; all of our fathers were not true to themselves. In war they had been generous, noble and self-sacrificing; with peace came selfishness and greed.

They were not great enough to appreciate the grandeur of the principles for which the contest of Erie and Champlain stood, and the wonderous achievements upon the sea—achievements that covered our navy with a glory that neither the victories nor defeats of the future can dim. We remember the heroic service and suffering of those who fought the merciless savage of the frontier. We see the midnight massacre, and hear the war cry of the allies of England. We see the flames climb round the happy homes, and in the charred and blackened ruins we see the mutilated bodies of wives and children. Peace came at last, crowned with the victory of New Orleans—a victory that "did redeem all sorrows" and all defeats.

The Revolutiion gave our fathers a free land—the war of 1812 a free sea. Today we remember the gallant men who fought. They ceased to regard the great truths as having universal application. "Liberty for all" included only themselves. They qualified the declaration. They interpolated the word "white;" they obliterated the word "all." Let us be kind. We will remember the age in which they lived. We will compare them with the citizens of other nations. They made merchandise of men. They legalized crime. They sowed the seeds of war. But they founded this nation. Let us gratefully remember. Let us gratefully forget. Today we remember the heroes of the second war with England—in which our fathers fought for the freedom of the seas, for the rights of the American sailor.

We remember with pride the splendid victory which bore our flag in triumph from the Rio Grande to the heights of Chapultepec. Leaving out of question the justice of our cause—the necessity for war—we are yet compelled to applaud the marvelous courage of our troops. A handful of men—brave, impetuous, determined, irresistible—conquered a nation. Our history has no record of more daring deeds. Again peace came, and the nation hoped and thought that strife was at an end. We had grown too powerful to be attacked. Our resources were boundless, and the future seemed secure.

The hardy pioneers moved to the great west. Beneath their ringing strokes the forests disappeared, and on the prairies waved the billowed seas of wheat and corn The great plains were crossed, the mountains were conquered and the foot of the victorious adventurer pressed the shore of the Pacific. In the great north all the streams went singing to the sea, turning wheels and spindles and casting shuttles back and forth. Inventions were springing like magic from a thousand brains. From labor's holy altar rose and leaped the smoke and flame, and from the countless forges rang the chant of rhymthic stroke.

But in the south the negro toiled unpaid, and the mothers wept while babes were sold, and at the auction block husbands and wives speechlessly looked the last goodbye. Fugitives, lighted by the northern star, sought liberty on English soil, and were by nothern men thrust back to whip and chain. The great statesmen, the successful politicians, announced that law had compromised with crime, that justice had been bribed and that time had barred appeal. A race was left without a right, without a hope. The future had no dawn, no star—nothing but ignorance and fear, nothing but work and want.

This was the conclusion of the statesmen, the philosophy of the politicians, of constitutional expounders. This was decided by courts and ratified by the nation. We had been successful in three wars. We had wrenched thirteen colonies from Great Britain. We had conquered our place upon the high seas. We had added more than two millions of square miles to the national domain. We had increased in population from three to thirty-one millions. We were in the midst of plenty. We were rich and free. Ours appeared to the most prosperous of nations.

But it was the only appearance. The statesmen and the politicians were deceived. Real victories can be won only for the right. The triumph of justice is the only peace. Such is the nature of things. He who enslaves another cannot be free. He who attacks the right assaults himself. The mistake of our fathers made had not been corrected. The foundations of the republic were insecure. The great dome of the temple was clad in the light of prosperity, but the cornerstones were crumbling. Four millions of human beings were enslaved. Party cries had been mistaken for principles, partisanship for patriotism, success for justice. But pity pointed to the scared and bleeding backs of slaves; mercy heard the sobs of mother 'reft of babes, and justice held aloft the scales in which one drop of blood shed by a master's lash outweigned a nation's gold.

There were a few men, a few women, who had the courage to attack this monstrous crime. The found it entrenched in constitutions, statues and decision, barricaded and bastioned by every department and by every party. Politicians were its servants, statesmen its attornevs, judges its menials, presidents its puppets, and upon its cruel altar had been sacrificed our country's honor. It was the crime of the nation—the whole nation—north and south responsible alike. Today we reverently thank the abolitionists. Earth has produced no grander men, no nobler woman. They were the real philanthropists, the true patriots.

When the will defies fear, when the heart applauds the brain, when duty throws the gauntlet down to fate, when honor scorns to compromise with death—this is heroism. The abolitionists were heroes. He loves his country best, who strives to make it best. The bravest men are those who have the greatest fear of doing wrong.

Mere politicians wish the country to do something for them; true patriots desire to do something for their country. Courage without conscience, is a wild beast; patriotism without principle, is the prejudice of birth, the animal attachment to place. These men, these women, had courage and conscience, patriotism and principle, heart and brain. The south relied upon the bond, upon a barbarous clause that stained, disfigured and defiled the federal pact; and made the monstrous claim that slavery was the nation's ward.

The spot of shame grew red in northern checks, and northern men declared that slavery had poisoned, cursed and blighted soul and soil enough, and that the territories must be free. The radicals of the south cried: "The Union without slavery!" The radicals of the north replied: "No Union without liberty!" The northern radicals were right. Upon the great issue of free homes for free men a president was elected by the free states. The south appealed to the sword and raised the standard of revolt. For the first time in history the oppressors rebelled. But let us today be great enough to forget individuals—great enough to know that slavery was rebellion, that slavery fired upon our flag and sought to wreck and strand the mighty ship that bears the hope and fortune of this world.

The first shot liberated the north. Constitutions, statutes and decisions—compromises, platforms and resolutions made, passed and ratified in the interest of slavery became mere legal lies, mean and meaningless, base and baseless. Parchment and paper could no longer stop or stay the onward march of man. The north was free! Millions instantly resolved that the nation should not die, that Freedom should not perish and that slavery should not live. Millions of our brothers, our sons, our fathers, our husbands answered to the nation's call. The greatest armies have desolated the earth; the greatest soldiers have been ambitious dupes. They waged war for the sake of peace and pillage, pomp and power, for the ignorant applause of vulgar millions, for the flattery of parasites, and the adulation of sycophants and slaves.

Let us proudly remember that, in our time, the greatest, and grandest, the noblest army of the world fought, not to enslave but to free, not to destroy but to save, not simply for themselves but for others, not for conquest but for conscience, not only for us, but for every land and race. With courage, with enthusiasm, with devotion never excelled, with an exaltation and purity of purpose never equalled, this Grand Army fought the battles of the republic. For the preservation of this nation, for the destruction of slavery, these soldiers, these sailors on land and sea, disheartened by no defeat, discouraged by no obstacle, appalled by no danger, neither paused nor swerved, until a stainless flag without a rival floated over all our wide domain, until every human being beneath its folds was absolutely free.

The great victory for human rights—the greatest of all the years—had been won; won by the Union men of the north, by the Union men of the south, and by those who had been slaves. Liberty was national; slavery was dead. The flag for which the heroes fought, for which they died, is the symbol of all we are, of all we hope to be. It is the emblem of equal rights.

It means free hands, free lips, self-government and the sovereignty of the individual. It means that the continent has been dedicated to freedom. It means universal education—light for every mind, knowledge for every child. It means that the school house is the fortress of liberty. It means that "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed;" that each man is accountable to and for the government; that the responsibility goes hand-in-hand with liberty. It means that it is the duty of every citizen to bear his share of the public burden, to take part in the affairs of his town, his county, his state and his country. It means that the ballot box is the ark of the covenant, that the source of authority must not be poisoned. It means the perpetual right of peaceful revolution. It means that every citizen of the republic, native or naturalized, must be protected at home, in every state, abroad in every land, on every sea. It means that all distinctions based on birth or blood have perished from our laws—that our government shall stand between labor and capital, between the weak and the strong, between the individual and the corporation, between want and wealth and give and guarantee simple justice to each and all. It means that there shall be a legal remedy for every wrong. It means national hospitality—that we must welcome to our shores the exiles of the world, and that we may not drive them back.

Some may be deformed by labor, dwarfed by hunger, broken in spirit, victims of tyranny and caste—in those sad faces may be read the touching record of a weary life, and yet their children, born of liberty and love, will be symmetrical and fair, intelligent and free. That flag in the emblem of supreme will; of a nation's power. Beneath its folds the weakest must be protected and the strongest must obey. It shields and canopies alike the loftiest mansion and the rudest hut. The flag was given to the air in the Revolution's darkest days. It represents the sufferings of the past, the glories yet to be; and like the brow of heaven, it is the child of storm and sun.

This day is sacred to the great heroic host who keep this flag above our heads, sacred to the living and the dead, sacred to the scarred and maimed, sacred to the wives who gave their husbands, to the mothers who gave their sons. Here in this peaceful land of ours, here where the sun shines, where the flowers grow, where the children play, millions of armed men battled for the rights, and breasted on a thousand field the iron storms of war. These brave, these incomparable men founded the first republic. They fulfilled the prophecies; they brought to pass the dreams, they realized the hopes that all the great and good and wise and just have made and had since man was man.

But what of those who fell? There is no language to express the debt we owe, the love we bear, to all the dead who died for us. Words are but barren sounds. We can but stand beside their graves, and in the hush and silence feel what speech has never told. They fought, they died; and for the first time since man has kept a record of events, the heavens bent above and domed a land without a serf, a servant, or a slave

I. O. O. F. Memorial Service

Oak Lodge No. 8, Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Loch Lynn Heights, will hold a memorial service in the Baptist church at Loch Lynn Heights at three o'clock Sunday, June 12th, when speakers of prominence will address the assemblage. All members and visiting brothers are cordially invited to be present.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months..... .75
One copy three months..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1910.

WEST VIRGINIA WON.

All danger of war between Maryland and West Virginia is averted; the long-standing boundary line dispute has been settled by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, delivered through Justice Day. West Virginia wins, and Maryland extends congratulations. There are no hard feelings on this side of the Potomac, and West Virginia, having secured the low-tide slice for which she was contending is, of course, willing to hold out the glad hand and swear eternal friendship. The survey, in accord with the court finding, is yet to be made, but that is a mere matter of detail. West Virginia may take possession of the disputed territory at once and fence it in if she so desires.

The matter of political boundary lines has not operated in the past to prevent an extensive pooling of interests between the two states. They are literally bound together by bonds of steel. Baltimore takes pride and satisfaction in the reflection that, commercially speaking, this city is just as much the metropolis of West Virginia as of Maryland. Baltimore capital has been going into the Mountain State for, lo! these many years, and Maryland during the past half century has sent thousands of her young men and young women across that disputed boundary line.

West Virginia is not merely regarded as being within Baltimore's "sphere of influence"—she is one of the most cherished and highly prized areas within the sphere. She is Baltimore's Golconda, whence have come black diamonds in quantities sufficient to string a mile-wide necklace around the world. She is our land of promise, overflowing with milk and honey. We have lost the low-tide strip, and, having lost it, we are mighty glad that West Virginia has got it.—Baltimore News.

GOVERNMENT AND THE RAILROADS

From Washington comes the important announcement that the President and representatives of the Western trunk line committee of railroads have agreed upon a modus vivendi. The railroad companies agree to withdraw the increased rates which had been made effective June 1 and to abide by the terms of the new railroad law which is about to pass in Congress. In consideration of this new attitude the President agrees to withdraw the suit for an injunction as soon as the new law becomes effective.

This seems to be a wise compromise. It will leave the question of the propriety or admissibility of higher freight rates to be settled under the new law. Just what the exact terms of the new law will be cannot yet be told. It has not been determined whether the House will accept the Senate amendments or whether the bill go to conference.

But, in any event, the bill will shortly become a law, and the present contention about the advance in freight rates may serve to test its efficiency. More than likely, it will be left to the Inter-State Commerce Commission to determine the matter in controversy. It that case, it will be determined in an orderly manner after a full and fair hearing. The agreement will almost certainly avert anything like a panicky condition, and the railroad companies will doubtless have the good sense to drop all talk of reprisals, such as countermanding orders for equipment and the abandonment of construction.

ROOSEVELT'S RETURN.

Theodore Roosevelt will return from a trip extending over a year in foreign lands on June 18, when he will be accorded a wonderful popular reception in New York. When he laid down the reins of government, March 4, 1909, and started on his hunting trip to Africa he was by common consent the most popular man in public life in America and his fame had extended all over the civilized world. So great was the public interest in him that a corps of newspaper men have constantly followed him on his long journey and have sent home daily interesting accounts of his movements. His hunting trip in Africa over he visited Italy, Egypt, Austria, Germany, France, Holland, Norway and England, everywhere being received with honors bestowed only upon the great rulers of nations. The popular interest in him has extended to all classes, crowds greeting him all along the route of his journey and kings, statesmen, soldiers, scientists, educators and men of eminence in every department of human activity have vied with each other in doing him honor. Gen. Grant on his trip abroad was received with marked honor as a distinguished soldier, but Roosevelt's fame rests on his personality as he impressed it upon the world during his term as President. His splendid courage, his remarkable ability, his fighting qualities in the cause of civic righteousness, his wise efforts for the world's peace, his hatred of rottenness in public life, his frankness of speech and his defense of the common people against the encroachment of the arrogant rich and influential endeared him to the American people and attracted the attention of the people of other lands. All Americans feel the utmost pride in him and find great satisfaction in the attentions showered upon him by the people of other lands. When he returns to New York this month there will be such a demonstration of cordial admiration and welcome as this country has not seen.

Mayor of Terra Alta Resigned.

Terra Alta, W. Va., is in the market for government by commission or any other form of municipal administration with peace-on-earth-good-will-towards-men as a basis. The chief executive, Dr. S. M. Scott, Sr., threw up the sponge on Thursday and very emphatically remarked that any man who could preside as mayor and indulge in intimate association with the members of the city council of Terra Alta without losing his temper and better judgment would develop wings and be ready for immediate translation. The Doctor, being human and occasionally under stress inclined to iracibility, stood for the situation some three months, and on Thursday night tendered his resignation in rather high dudgeon.

The grievances of the warring factions singularly enough center in the town cemetery, or rather in the management of the "silent city of whited sepulchres." The mayor is said to have been in favor of keeping the cemetery gates locked and even went so far as to fine one gentleman for trespassing. The sexton of the cemetery is also a bone of contention, this being an office so desirable as to arouse competition for the privilege of filling the place.

Councilman John Lamb, assisted by Councilmen D. L. Wotring, Frank Zeller and C. H. Freeland, paved the way for the mayor's resignation, his honor having Councilmen Irving Price and E. F. Hardesty as a minority representation. There were two meetings last week and the exchange of compliments is reported to have been such as to make the angels weep. Meanwhile Terra Alta is without a mayor, and it is not now a compulsory qualification to be dead in order to gain admittance to the cemetery.

Maryland Coal & Iron Co.

Authentic information has been given out regarding the organization of the Maryland Coal & Iron Co. of Frostburg, Md., with a capital stock of $50,000. The company succeeds Avery & Morgan, miners and shippers of George's Creek coal, and proposes to install new mining equipment and increase the capacity of its mines to 1000 tons of coal per day. It will install 150-horse-power boiler, 100-kilowatt generator, mine hauling motor of 42-inch guage, mining machines, rock drills, etc., and desires to communicate with manufacturers or dealers handling this equipment. Officers of the company are H. B. Avery, of Troy, Pa., president; George Stern, vice-president; W. H. Morgan, secretary, and Louis Stanton, treasurer, all of Frostburg. The officers, with Hugh A. McMullen, of Cumberland, comprise the board of directors.

The Comet and Weather.

It is often asked if the stranger in the skies has anything to do with this strange weather. It is not at all improbable. Weather is a very delicate matter, and it is likely to get out of proper adjustment from the slightest interference from the outside, and this delicate adjustment involves every orb that flies through the skies. Victor Hugo says substantially, somewhere: "The anthill moves the constellation," meaning that there is a relation between these objects that gives to each a certain dependence upon the other.

It is very natural to conclude that the comet, occupying millions of miles of coma and tail, bristling everywhere with electrical emanations, flowing out into the ether, would so far affect the earth as to change a south wind into a flash of lightning or hang a veil of clouds over a lustrous dawn. We often ascribe to the comet a malevolent influence, but that is because it is a mystery and its appearance is threatening. But it is the very opposite. It is a blessing or it wouldn't have come. Just as likely its mission was to avert a danger or to improve a condition, and if it hadn't come we should have had an epidemic or a smashup. Certainly it obeys a Law, and who dares challenge the wisdom of that Law?

Let us fill your prescriptions. Lowest prices, quality considered. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

OLD MILL CHANGES HANDS.

W. E. Stanton Succeeds Eli Stanton & Son in Milling and Mercantile Business.

An important change has taken place in the ownership of the historic Stanton's mill, at Little Crossing, at the foot of the ridge on which the town of Grantsville, Md., is situated. By a deal consummated last week, the old mill passes to the sole ownership of William E. Stanton from Eli Stanton & Son, under whose joint ownership it has been operated for some years. The senior member of the firm, who owned and conducted the mill for the greater part of his lifetime, practically retired several years ago, leaving the active management to his son, W. E., who now becomes proprietor as well as manager, while his father, who has reached his three score years and ten, will no longer have his name associated with the property.

The new owner is of the third generation of Stantons who have owned and operated the mill at Little Crossing. Eli Stanton acquired it from his father, the late William Stanton, who was the chief miller in this loyality half a century ago. The present mill was erected in 1856 on the foundation of a primitive mill built on the old Braddock road in the early part of the nineteenth century. The original mill at Little Crossing was erected before the National Pike was built, and for 100 years, at least, the water power of the Casselman river has been utilized at this point to drive the whirring millstones.

Many historic associations cling around this old mill. It is one of the best and most pictureque mill sites in this entire section of country. The beautiful stone arch which spans the Casselman at this point is one of the most enduring landmarks on the old National Pike. The Little Crossing bridge is now nearly 100 years old, and but for the fact that its side walls have been toppled over into the river by vandals and mischievous boys, it is as solid and enduring as the day it was built. Stanton's Mill and the Little Crossing bridge are two landmarks that will always be associated in the minds of former residents of Grantsville and vicinity.—Meyersdale Republican.

Marriage Licenses.

The following marriage licenses have been issued by Clerk E. Z. Tower since our last report:

Floyd Earl Edwards, of Hiram, W. Va., and Ola Ocie Stephens, of Grafton, W. Va.

Dixon Blake, of Weston, W. Va., and Rezilda Christie Blake, of Orlando, W. Va.

Hoy Edward Myers and Jessie May Campbell, both of Johnstown, Pa.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

PLEASANT VALLEY.

We are having plenty of rain and the farmers are plowing for buckwheat.

Herbert Stahl, who has been working at Etam, W. Va., was calling on his sister, Mrs. Ben DeWitt, last Sunday.

Carl Smouse, of Fairmont, W. Va., is spending a few days with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bernard.

Frank Moomaw is hauling lumber from Wilson to Loch Lynn for the Rathbun cottage.

Rev. Henry Friend, of Hoyes, spent Saturday and Sunday with his sons, W. S. and G. B. M. Friend, at this place.

W. H. Smouse is buying wool and is prepared to handle a large quantity.

Rev. Frank, of Rowlesburg, preached interesting sermons Saturday evening and Sunday morning in the M.E. church.

Mr. Wolf, of Bayard, W. Va., bought a cow from D. H. Riley last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Cuppett and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Leighton, of Loch Lynn, attended quarterly meeting at this place last Sunday.

We are glad to hear that Miss Hazel Friend, who was quite ill, is out again.

Sunday school next Sunday at the regular time and preaching at 8 p. m. by Rev. Stoneking. All are invited to attend.

Another Friend of Davis.

"My painter said he never used a paint that would cover densely as much surface as

DAVIS 100 PER CENT PURE PAINT

JAMES L. McCRAY,
Blanche, N. C."

The Best Paint is undoubtedly the paint that will cover the most surface—densely—and that paint is

DAVIS.

For sale by J. M. Davis & Sons,
Oakland, Md.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The communion service announced at the M. E. church for next Sunday has been postponed until the last Sunday in this month.

So many families are coming into the Park this week that it is hardly possible to give all the names.

Many of our people have already contracted for natural gas piping and fixtures and as fast as the work can be done gas will be introduced into nearly every building in Mountain Lake Park.

Mr. John D. Hayden now has charge of our electric light plant.

The partnership heretofore existing between Newman Wilson and Thomas Bernard under the firm name of Wilson & Bernard has been dissolved by mutual consent, and Messrs. T. R. Miller and Newman Wilson will hereafter conduct the business under the firm name of Miller & Wilson.

Mrs. A. R. Sperry now has charge of the Virginia Homes and already has a number of boarders and many booked for the summer.

Mr. H. E. Felty will improve his cottage on E street.

Many cottages have been opened up this week. Among the number we note: The Rund and Miller cottages on G street, the Allegany House, the Crane cottage and the Baumgardner cottage (Rest Haven). The Queenwood is also ready for boarders.

Dr. J. A. Meehan, a homeopathist, is located with his family in Mrs. Garthright's cottage, where he has opened an office for the practice of his profession.

The drug store is now open, with a full stock of everything usually kept in a first class store.

Dr. W. W. Davis, Rev P. Z. Musgrave and Messrs. T. H. and H. N. Cuppett went to Newburg, W. Va., to attend the sessions of the Oakland District Conference.

A car load of fertilizers was unloaded at this station last week by Mr. A. W. Miller.

A car load of natural gas pipe arrived here Tuesday.

Our streets and walks are being put in excellent condition by Mr. J. L. Echard.

Mrs. M. M. Schrock is still seriously ill as is also the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Yutzy.

We had another light frost in this this section Wednesday morning.

The Maxwell cottage is being painted.

Mrs. Daisy Brown, of Cincinnati, is occupying the Binkley cottage.

Mrs. Ferris, child and nurse are at Miss Emma Hamill's.

Prof. R. G. Richardson and family, of Piedmont, W. Va., are in their large cottage.

The Blake cottage is occupied for the season.

BITTINGER.

Dennis Detriech is much occupied between blowing stumps out of his new ground and coddling the brand new baby boy which the proverbial stork brought to his home on Monday of this week.

C. J. Brenneman was taken suddenly ill at his home near this village on Friday morning of last week, and at present is under the care of Dr. Robison, of Grantsville.

Dr. R. C. Bowen, of Grantsville, made a professional visit to this neighborhood on last Monday.

Merchant C. E. Ellithorp, made a business trip to Frostburg and Lonaconing last week.

The ladies of the Lutheran church are arranging to hold a lawn fete and ice cream supper at this place on next Saturday evening.

Deputy Sheriff Shartzer, of Oakland, was in this neighborhood last week summoning witnesses to attend court.

May closed its record of uncomfortable and unseasonable weather on the 31st., with a snow storm which throughout most of the day.

The harder you fall, the higher you bounce—
Be proud of your blackened eye;
It isn't the fact that you're licked that counts—
But how did you fight, and why.

Postmaster's Salary Increased.

Another evidence that Oakland is a growing town became apparent Monday when the Postoffice Department, in a bulletin issued that day, giving the new adjustment of salaries of postmasters in different parts of the State, raised the salary of the local postmaster from $1800 to $1900. But one postmaster in the State will receive a decrease in salary, he being located in an Eastern Shore town.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County.
Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:
L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:
L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper Your Secrets Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

D. E. BOLDEN'S Remodeling Sale

Contemplating extensive improvements to my store building, I offer my entire stock of Bed Room, Dining Room, Library and Parlor Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Pictures, Mattresses, Etc.

—AT—

10 Per Cent. Discount

For the Next 30 Days.

During the past few weeks the wholesale price on my lines have advanced ten per cent., but I am willing to give my customers the benefit of this advance in addition to the ten per cent. discount as above.

Some Rare Bargains will be included in this Special Sale

D. E. BOLDEN.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

B. & O. OFFICIALS TO MEET

Nearly Four Hundred Staff Officers Will Gather at Deer Park.

Col. W. E. Burwell, manager of the Deer Park Hotel, is making extensive preparations at that well known summer resort to properly entertain the heads of departments, staff officers and others in authority in the management of the Baltimore and Ohio interests, who will gather at Deer Park on next Tuesday for a convention of three or four days when plans for the betterment of the service, equipment and internal improvements will be discussed.

President Willard of the B. & O., with preside at the meeting.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL.	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS. .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.

G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt — Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis — George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell — William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Mr. Nimrod Glotfelty, of near Bittinger, is in Oakland today on business.

See the Family Reunion at the opera house tonight; also tomorrow night.

Mrs. R. E. Sliger visited relatives and friends at Lonaconing a day or two this week.

Rev. Henry E. Friend, of McHenry, who was in Oakland as a juror, returned to his home yesterday.

Gibson Family Reunion tonight and tomorrow night at the opera house. Prices 25 cents and 50 cents.

Mr. W. H. Pool, of Kitzmiller, was in Oakland last Saturday on business, when he made THE REPUBLICAN office a brief social visit.

FOR RENT—Furnished room; three minutes walk from station. Apply at this office.

Mrs. Creede Wilson and Miss Eleanor Johnson have returned from Oakland, where they were the guests of Mrs. Fundenburg.—Cumberland News.

Gibson Family Reunion will be repeated tomorrow night at the Oakland Opera House. Prices will remain the same and the full program will be carried out.

Try one of our Long Life Batterie onvour telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mrs. W. H. Ravenscraft, of Denver, Col., who has been on a visit for several days to Dr. and Mrs. Ravenscraft, will leave this afternoon for her home.

Messrs. Stanley Mitchell and Fred. Townshend arrived home from school Saturday night and will spend the vacation weeks with their parents in Oakland.

Miss Catherine Manges is expected to arrive home from York, Pa., this evening and will spend the summer here with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. E. Manges.

Money to Loan—Secured by first mortgage on real estate. Terms easy. Renninger & Offutt. Attorneys Oakland, Md. 3t

There will be preaching in the Presbyterian church Sunday, June 12th, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. by the Rev. James M. Fisher, of Westminister, Md. All are cordially invited.

Mr. J. Madison Durst, of near New Germany, visited Oakland Monday and Tuesday on business and also to see his son, Mr. Ross Durst, who is a student at the training school.

Mr. Roy Hammond, who has been a student at the University of Virginia, returned home Saturday night to spend the summer with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hammond.

WANTED—A good reliable woman for general housework. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland.

Constable Silas Teats, of Accident, who was in Oakland Monday and Tuesday on business before the grand jury, made his accustomed semi-annual visit to the printer's shop Monday afternoon.

Miss Teleeta Poberts, of Litchfield, Ill., Miss Cecile Stewart, of Paducah, Ky., and Miss Eleanor McCall, of Christiana, Pa., spent Sunday in Oakland as the guests of the Misses Manges.

Fountain Syringes and Hot Water Bottles, household necessities, at prices ranging from 75c. to $1.50, at Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Fraley and daughter, Beatrice, arrived in the city last night from their home at Newell and are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Abbott, on West Main street.—Grafton Sentinel.

Mrs. William A. Sturgiss, who spent several weeks in Cumberland and Meyersdale on a visit to relatives and friends, returned to Oakland last Saturday evening, accompanied by her brother, Master George Hocking, Meyersdale.

The Gibson Family Reunion Tonight Tomorrow Night.

Christ J. Lichty, a veteran of the Civil war, who lives in Grantsville, spent part of Memorial Day with his army comrades in Meyersdale, and part of the day in Salisbury, where he visited his invalid brother, "Soldier Billy."—Meyersdale Republican.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

Mr. E. Ray Jones, of Deer Park, will be one of a class of one hundred and forty graduates who will receive diplomas from Ohio Wesleyan University, at Delaware, Ohio, next Wednesday. He completes the classical course and will receive the degree of B. A.

Subscribe for The Republican.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

ROBBED WHILE SLEEPING

Bold Act of Two Negroes Who Are Now in Jail.

One of the boldest robberies on record on the third division of the B. & O. occurred at No. 40 water station on the Seventeen Mile grade while the engine was taking water Saturday. George O. Stine, a stockman of Hagerstown, Md., had in transit four fine horses from Mannington, W. Va., in a car in which he was riding in fast freight train No. 94 eastbound. The car doors were open and he was dozing while the train took water, just a few minutes. He awoke with a start at some noise to find his suit case, which was by his side, gone. The trainmen had seen two negroes hurrying away. A chase ensued and one of the negroes was caught. In the short time the thieves had torn in pieces some valuable papers, including several notes. The trainmen took the man to Keyser where he was jailed. He gave his name as James Jackson, of Richmond, Va. He said that he and his companion had been working with a railroad construction gang and he had on his person a work ticket bearing "McG. & L. Co. No. 177." Conductor B. L. Hardesty, of Mt. Lake, had charge of the train and figured in the arrest.

The second party to the robbery was arrested Tuesday by B. & O. detectives after a long chase and was brought here with the one previously arrested, about fifteen minutes after the grand jury adjourned. They will have to remain in jail now until the next grand jury convenes in December.

Mr. J. W. Whorton and force of men are engaged in building a cement walk leading from the pavement to the entrance of St. Mark's church on Second street. Mr. Whorton has made many excellent walks in and about town and the one he is engaged upon now will be equal to the best.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

A large number of Friendsville's best citizens were in Oakland Monday, Tuesday and yesterday as witnesses or principals in court cases, many of whom returned home yesterday. Among those here were Justice Leon Hardie, W. H. H. Friend, sr., W. H. H. Friend, jr., Clarence V. Guard, D. S. Custer, Fred. G. Fox and James W. Friend.

Something new in Talcum Powder; Babcock's Corylopsis of Japan, the most popular Talcum on the market today. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Mr. James W. Leathers returned to Oakland last night from a three days' visit to his old home in the Valley of Virginia. The Evening Star, published at Winchester, says of Mr. Leathers: Mr. J. W. Leathers, of Oakland, Garrett county, Md. spent yesterday with his brother, Mr. B. H. Leathers, on South Market street, and attended the Confederate Memorial services in Stonewall cemetery. It was the first time he had attended a Confederate memorial service in forty years. Mr. Leathers served under Col. William Harness during the civil war, and he met many of his old comrades while in town.

Write E. S. West, Oakland, Md., the only licensed real estate dealer in Garrett county, for booklet describing all kinds of real estate for sale in this vicinity. Also valuable farms, coal and timber lands in other States, Mexico and Canada. '11-4t.

Mr. Stanhope Crane, of Kingwood, W. Va., who was in Oakland for a few days on a visit to the editor and family, returned to his home yesterday. Mr. Crane is a musician of note, being a graduate of the music department of the West Virginia University at Morgantown. His forte is the pipe organ which he played in the Methodist church here Sunday morning and evening, very much to the delight of large audiences. Monday night Mr. Crane gave a piano recital at the residence of Mr. H. C. Sincell at which about thirty ladies and gentlemen were present. The out of town guests included Chief Justice A. Hunter Boyd and Associate Justice Robert R. Henderson and Mr. J. T. Silvius, of Pennsylvania.

THE DEATH RECORD.

R. E. GARLITZ.

Mr. R. E. Garlitz, of Avilton, died at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, on Saturday, of cancer of the stomach. The deceased is survived by a family of grown children. The funeral took place Tuesday morning from St. Ann's Catholic church, near Avilton.

Married in New Mexico.

Miss Inez Shillingburg, of Gormania, W. Va., formerly a student at the Fairmont Normal School, and Mr. John Kirk, of Piedmont, W. Va., were united in marriage on Sunday, May 2, in Gallup, New Mexico, where Miss Shillingburg has been for several months. They will reside in that town, where Mr. Kirk holds a position in a bank.

Call for Your Letters.

Barbory Broneman, Miss Teaea Collins, Sovillia Miller, Propr. of The Oakland Hotel, Mr. J. Horace Pollitt, Mr. P. F. Reagan, Mr. J. E. Turner, Steve Wilson, Mrs. Crecia Wolfe.

ELECTRIC LIGHT STATION WILL BE NEWLY EQUIPPED

New One Hundred and Twenty-Five Horse Power Gas Engine Purchased.

Since the contract between the corporation of Oakland and Mr. D. E. Offutt, owner of the Oakland Electric Light Company, was renewed Monday evening, Mr. Offutt has placed an order with the Bessemer Engine Company for a new 125 horse power gas engine which will be installed in the electric station here to furnish power to drive the dynamos. One of the steam engines now in use will be eliminated and the other kept for cases of emergency.

The contract between the City Council and Mr. Offutt was made for a term of five years and at a saving of about three hundred dollars a year to the town, the rates for light having been materially lowered and the town will be at no expense hereafter for renewal of globes, etc.

THE GIBSON REUNION TO-NIGHT

Will Be Repeated Tomorrow Night at the Opera House.

The following distinguished members of the Gibson family will attend the Gibson reunion to be held at the Oakland opera house tonight and tomorrow night:

Mrs. Gibson.....Mrs. J. G. Robinson
Mr. Gibson.....Wellington Crane
Phyllis Gibson.....Miss Orpha Ashby
Caroline Gibson...Miss Corinne Manges
Ted Loraine.....James Varina
Mollie Kelly.....Miss Anna Manges
Billy O'Lee.....Mark White
Hans.....Wm. Scherr
Miss Reynolds.....Miss Alma Scherr
The Duke.....Leslie King
Country Cousin..Miss Bertie Cleveland

Besides those whose names are given above there will be innumerable other Gibsons, friends and kinfolks, to make the occasion all it should be.

During the Gibson reunion the Gibsons will hold high carnival each night. They will entertain their friends with fine, large choruses, with songs and dances. They will also entertain themselves with greetings and conversations with each other before the curious provincialisms brought in by those from the more obscure parts of the continent.

All the people of Oakland are invited. This is a very select and exclusive party. None are admitted from Boston and San Francisco. To emphasize the exclusive nature of it, admission will be only by ticket, which may be procured at Oakland Pharmacy.

Church Services.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 10.45 a. m., and 8 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE PARK M. E.

Class meeting at 10 a. m.
Preaching at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.
Sunday school at 2.30 p. m.
Epworth League at 7:00 p. m.

P. Z. MUSGRAVE, Pastor.

ST. MARK S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 10:30 a. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Ferndale—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Odd Fellows Memorial Service at 3 p. m.
Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E.

Service every Sunday at 11 a. m.
Sunday School at 2:30 p. m.

W. H. SHEARER.

Get Well and Stay Well.

You have been taking all kinds of medicines, consulted all kinds of doctors, and it seems that nothing does your diseases good. Naturally, you are miserable, unhappy, like all sick people are, but do not despair. Where there is life there is hope. You don't know; you may have a chance yet to get well and be happy, no matter what failures you have had with your health. Come and consult Dr. Demarian, second floor, opera house building. He will give you free and honest advice, and if in his opinion he cannot do your case any good he will honestly tell you so, as he never takes a case which he thinks he cannot benefit or cure. Many cannot be cured or even benefitted, but if he sees any chance for you then he will take your case and you will see results. As to his honesty and integrity, if any wish to know, ask him and he will give you addresses of the best class of people on the Eastern Shore of Marvland and you can then write yourself and inquire about him.

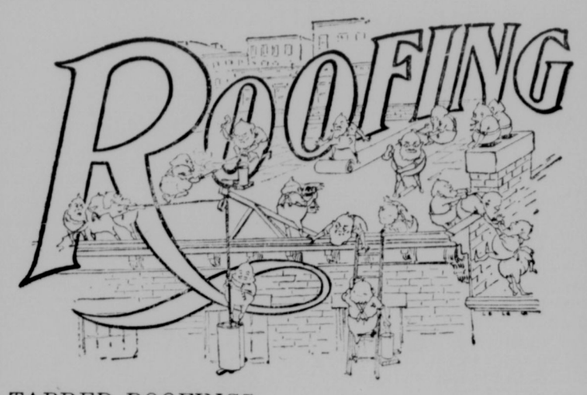
It is to your interest to come at your earliest opportunity to see the Doctor. He is not here for money making, simply for the purpose of improving his health and to earn sufficient to make expenses, therefore he will take few cases. After taking these he will not undertake others.

Consultation free. Ladies treated at their homes only.

Office, Second floor, Opera House block, Oakland, Md.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have a variety of kinds and at any price.



TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.
RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.
AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.
CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

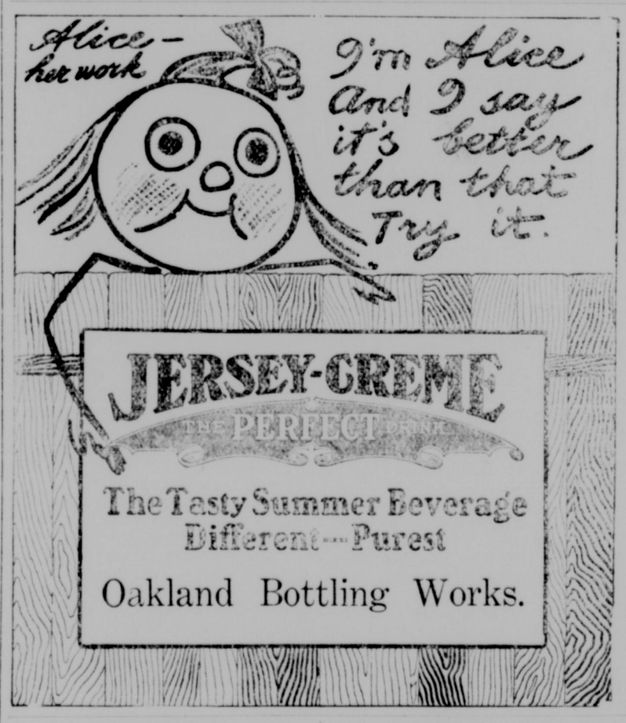
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Card of Thanks.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Through the columns of your paper we, the widow and children of the late Joshua B. Lipscomb, desire to thank our numerous friends for their kind sympathy and help during the sickness and death of our dear husband and father who departed this life May 31, 1910. MRS. LIPSCOMB and FAMILY.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said road commencing at or near the mouth of Crabtree Creek on Savage River by crossing said river from West to East side and passing through the lands of the Lonaconing Coal & Iron Company, Oss Brothers and others to intersect the County Road near Bloomington, a distance of about four and one-half miles, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of June, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said locating of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

P. P. MCANDREWS
P. H. RODEHEAVER
GEO. W. BROADWATER } Examiners.

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt

The dividend is at the rate of 2 13-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allow and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 26th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

THE RANSOM OF MACK.

A Kind Hearted Meddler and the Mistake He Made.

By O. HENRY.

[Copyright, 1907, by the McClure Company.]

Me and old Mack Lonsbury, we got out of that Little Hide and Seek gold mine affair with about $40,000 apiece. I say "old" Mack, but he wasn't old. Forty-one, I should say, but he always seemed old.

"Andy," he says to me, "I'm tired of hustling. You and me have been working hard together for three years. Say we knock off for awhile and spend some of this idle money we've coaxed our way."

"The proposition hits me just right," says I. "Let's be nabobs awhile and see how it feels. What'll we do, take in the Niagara falls or buck a faro?"

"For a good many years," says Mack, "I've thought that if I ever had extravagant money I'd rent a two room cabin somewhere, hire a Chinaman to cook and sit in my stocking feet and read Buckle's 'History of Civilization.'"

"That sounds self indulgent and gratifying without vulgar ostentation," says I, "and I don't see how money could be better invested. Give me a cuckoo clock and a 'Sep Winner's Self Instructor For the Banjo' and I'll join you."

A week afterward me and Mack hits this small town of Pina, about thirty miles out from Denver, and finds an elegant two room house that just suits us. We deposited half a peck of money in the Pina bank and shook hands with every one of the 340 citizens in the town. We brought along the Chinaman and the cuckoo clock and Buckle and the Instructor with us from Denver, and they made the cabin seem like home at once.

Never believe it when they tell you riches don't bring happiness. If you could have seen old Mack sitting in his rocking chair with his blue yarn sock feet up in the window and absorbing in that Buckle stuff through his specs you'd have seen a picture of content that would have made Rockefeller jealous. And I was learning to pick out "Old Zip Coon" on the banjo, and the cuckoo was on time with his remarks, and Ah Sing was messing up the atmosphere with the handsomest smell of ham and eggs that ever laid the honeysuckle in the shade. When it got too dark to make out Buckle's nonsense and the notes in the Instructor me and Mack would light our pipes and talk.

WHEN I STRUCK THE CABIN I NEARLY FAINTED.

One evening Mack spoke up and asked me if I was much apprised in the habits and policies of women folks.

"Why, yes," says I in a tone of voice. "I know 'em from Alfred to Omaha. The feminine nature and similitude," says I, "is as plain to my sight as the Rocky mountains is to a blue eyed burro. I'm on to all their little sidesteps and punctual discrepancies."

"I tell you, Andy," says Mack, with a kind of sigh, "I never had the least amount of intersection with their predispositions. Maybe I might have had a proneness in respect to their vicinity, but I never took the time. I made my own living since I was fourteen, and I never seemed to get my ratiocinations equipped with the sentiments usually depicted toward the sect. I sometimes wish I had," says old Mack.

"They're an adverse study," says I, "and adapted to points of view. Although they vary in rationale, I have found 'em quite often obviously differing from each other in divergences of contrast."

"It seems to me," goes on Mack, "that a man had better take 'em in and secure his inspirations of the sect when he's young and so preordained. I let my chance go by, and I guess I'm too old now to go hopping into the curriculum."

"Oh, I don't know," I tells him. "Maybe you better credit yourself with a barrel of money and a lot of emancipation from a quantity of uncontent. Still, I don't regret my knowledge of 'em," I says. "It takes a man who understands the symptoms and byplays of women folks to take care of himself in this world."

We stayed on in Pina because we liked the place. Some folks might enjoy their money with noise and rapture and locomotion, but me and Mack we had had plenty of turmoils and hotel towels. The people were friendly; Ah Sing got the swing of the grub we liked; Mack and Buckle were as thick as two body snatchers, and I was hitting out a cordial resemblance to "Buffalo Gals, Can't You Come Out Tonight?" on the banjo.

One day I got a telegram from Speight, the man that was working a mine I had an interest in out in New Mexico. I had to go out there, and I was gone two months.

When I struck the cabin I nearly fainted. Mack was standing in the door, and if angels ever wept I saw no reason why they should be smiling then.

"LISTEN, SISSY," I BEGINS.

That man was a spectacle. Yes; he was worse. He was a spyglass. He was the great telescope in the Lick observatory. He had on a coat and shiny shoes and a white vest and a high silk hat, and a geranium as big as an order of spinach was spiked on to his front. And he was smirking and warping his face like an infernal storekeeper or a kid with colic.

"Hello, Andy," says Mack out of his face. "Glad to see you back. Things have happened since you went away."

"I know it," says I, "and a sacrilegious sight it is. God never made you that way, Mack Lonsbury. Why do you scarify his works with this presumptious kind of ribaldry?"

"Why, Andy," says he, "they've elected me justice of the peace since you left."

I looked at Mack close. He was restless and inspired. A justice of the peace ought to be disconsolate and assuaged.

Just then a young woman passed on the sidewalk, and I saw Mack kind of half snicker and blush, and then he raised up his hat and smiled and bowed, and she smiled and bowed and went on by.

"No hope for you," says I, "if you've got the Mary Jane infirmity at your age. I thought it wasn't going to take on you. And patent leather shoes! All this in two little short months!"

"I'm going to marry the young lady who just passed tonight," says Mack in a kind of a flutter.

"I forgot something at the postoffice," says I and walked away quick.

I overtook that young woman a hundred yards away. I raised my hat and told her my name. She was about nineteen and young for her age. She blushed and then looked at me cool, like I was the snow scene from the "Two Orphans."

"I understand you are to be married tonight," I said.

"Correct," says she. "You got any objections?"

"Listen, sissy," I begins.

"My name is Miss Rebosa Redd," says she in a pained way.

"I know it," says I. "Now, Rebosa, I'm old enough to have owed money to your father. And that old, specious, dressed up, garbled, seasick ptomaine prancing around avidiously like an irremediable turkey gobbler with patent leather shoes on is my best friend. Why did you go and get him invested in this marriage business?"

"Why, he was the only chance there was," answers Miss Rebosa.

"Nay," says I, giving a sickening look of admiration at her complexion and style of features. "With your beauty you might pick any kind of a man. Listen, Rebosa. Old Mack ain't the man you want. He was twenty-two when you was nee Reed, as the papers say. This bursting into bloom won't last with him. He's all ventilated with oldness and rectitude and decay. Old Mack's down with a case of Indian summer. He overlooked his bet when he was young, and now he's suing nature for the interest on the promissory note he took from Cupid instead of the cash. Rebosa, are you bent on having this marriage occur?"

"Why, sure I am," says she, oscillating the pansies on her hat, "and so is somebody else, I reckon."

"What time is it to take place?" I asks.

"At 6 o'clock," says she.

I made up my mind right away what to do. I'd save old Mack if I could. To have a good, seasoned, ineligible man like that turn chicken for a girl that hadn't quit eating slate pencils and buttoning in the back was more than I could look on with easiness.

"Rebosa," says I, earnest, drawing upon my display of knowledge concerning the feminine intuitions of reason, "ain't there a young man in Pina—a nice young man that you think a heap of?"

"Yep," said Rebosa, nodding her pansies. "Sure there is. What do you think? Gracious!"

"Does he like you?" I asks. "How does he stand in the matter?".

"Crazy," says Rebosa. "Ma has to wet down the front steps to keep him from sitting there all the time. But I guess that'll be all over after tonight," she winds up, with a sigh.

"Rebosa," says I, "you don't really experience any of this adoration called love for old Mack, do you?"

"Lord, no!" says the girl, shaking her head. "I think he's as dry as a Java bed. The idea!"

"Who is this young man that you like, Rebosa?" I inquires.

"It's Eddie Bayles," says she. "He clerks in Crosby's grocery. But he don't make but thirty-five a month. Ella Noakes was wild about him once."

"Old Mack tells me," I says, "that he's going to marry you at 6 o'clock this evening."

"That's the time," says she. "It's to be at our house."

"Rebosa," says I, "listen to me. If Eddie Bayles had a thousand dollars cash—a thousand dollars, mind you, would buy him a store of his own—if you and Eddie had that much to excuse matrimony on, would you consent to marry him this evening at 5 o'clock?"

The girl looks at me a minute, and I can see these inaudible cogitations going on inside of her, as women will.

"A thousand dollars?" says she. "Of course I would."

"Come on," says I. "We'll go and see Eddie."

We went up to Crosby's store and called Eddie outside. He looked to be estimable and freckled, and he had chills and fever when I made my proposition.

"At 5 o'clock," says he, "for a thousand dollars? Please don't wake me up! Well, you are the rich uncle retired from the spice business in India! I'll buy out old Crosby and run the store myself."

We went inside and got old man Crosby apart and explained it. I wrote my check for a thousand dollars and handed it to him. If Eddie and Rebosa married each other at 5 he was to turn the money over to them.

And then I gave 'em my blessing and went to wander in the wildwood for a season. I sat on a log and made cogitations on life and old age and the zodiac and the ways of women and all the disorder that goes with a lifetime. I passed myself congratulations that I had probably saved my old friend Mack from his attack of Indian summer. I knew when he got well of it and shed his infatuation and his patent leather shoes he would feel grateful. "To keep old Mack disinvolved," thinks I, "from relapses like this is worth more than a thousand dollars." And most of all I was glad that I'd made a study of women and wasn't to be deceived any by their means of conceit and evolution.

It must have been half past 5 when I got back home. I stepped in, and there sat old Mack on the back of his neck in his old clothes, with his blue socks on the window and the "History of Civilization" propped up on his knees.

"This don't look like getting ready for a wedding at 6," I says, to seem innocent.

"Oh," says Mack, reaching for his tobacco, "that was postponed back to 5 o'clock. They sent me a note saying the hour had been changed. It's all over now. What made you stay away so long, Andy?"

"You heard about the wedding?" I asks.

"I operated it," says he. "I told you I was justice of the peace. The preacher is off east to visit his folks, and I'm

"I OPERATED IT," SAYS HE.

the only one in town that can perform the dispensations of marriage. I promised Eddie and Rebosa a month ago I'd marry 'em. He's a busy lad, and he'll have a grocery of his own some day."

"He will," says I.

"There was lots of women at the wedding," says Mack, smoking up. "But I didn't seem to get any ideas from 'em. I wish I was informed in the structure of their attainments like you said you was."

"That was two months ago," says I, reaching up for the banjo.

HILL ROADWAY WORK

Suggestions For Making a Quick Drying Road.

HOW TO GET RID OF WATER.

Carry It Directly Across by Sloping Highway From Bank Side—Pointers on Grading—Change Suggested In King Drag For Hill Work.

I have always been very interested and observant in the matter of country roads and have read many valuable articles on the subject. But I still think there are some points that I have not seen touched upon relative to roadmaking, especially in the hill country along the Mississippi and Missouri slopes.

The great object of road work should be to get the water away as quickly as possible. We have a good soil for roadmaking, but the hills are of silt formation, and a stream of water crumbles them like so much loaf sugar.

Many of our experienced roadmakers will throw up a hill grade and carry the water down each side for long distances. Then comes a heavy rainfall. Forty thousand rivulets from the hillside above pour into the drains, and such a volume of water accumulates as to cut deep gorges. These make the road almost impassable and require several days' labor a number of times each year to repair. To avoid this trouble the road may be sloped from the bank side enough to carry the water directly across the road.

When a grade is desired on a side hill roadway plow in three furrows on the lower side, the outside furrow to be about twenty feet from the bank. When grading draw this loose dirt toward the center of the roadway with a slope of about one inch to the foot, carrying this slope across the entire grade. The ditch thus made should be opened at short intervals to let out the water.

After the grading is done headers should be put in to divert any water that might follow the wheel track. To make these headers scrape with the slusher a trench a little diagonally across the grade about two scrapers width and not deep. Deposit this dirt with more from the outside alongside the trench, making the ridge no higher than absolutely necessary to accomplish its purpose and not less than ten feet wide, thus causing as little obstruction as possible. This plan will always provide a quick drying hill road. With the occasional use of a King drag this can be kept like a boulevard.

Mr. King is an enthusiast on the merits of his invention and thinks lightly of any changes that may be made in it, but for the benefit of those not so sanguine I will describe my improvement, to be used more particularly in a hill country.

We are all familiar with the construction of Mr. King's drag. Now, instead of making this drag rigid by tight mortices, tenons, etc., we use two 4 by 6 inch crosspieces with 3 by 6 inch tenons six inches long on each end. The shoulders of these tenons are mitered each way from the center. These fit mortices in each end of the plank. The mortices are mitered from the center to each side. The tenons are secured with one inch hardwood pins outside of the plank, thus allowing the frame to oscillate. The utility of this may be seen when we want to carry the dirt all one way on side hills, etc. We pull through as far as desired, then change the team, hitch to the opposite side, turn around and continue moving the dirt as before. If properly made this drag will pull in a direct line and do better work.

When the highway is cut through a hill it is desired to keep reducing the grade. To this end work the road against one bank, leaving a ditch on one side only. Turn all the water from above and along the hill into this ditch. Plow it in repeatedly each season. After this trench has washed too much for safety smooth this side and change the ditch to the opposite side of the road and repeat. You will be surprised at the change in steepness effected in ten or twelve years.—W. S. Wiley in Good Roads Magazine.

A Gold Road.

At Oroville, in Butte county, Cal., a section of roadway has been found so rich in placer gold that an application has been made for permission to dredge it. The miner who makes the application to the authorities agrees, according to newspaper reports, to replace the road by one fully as good as or better than the present one. It would seem, however, that if the city owns a gold mine it would pay better to work it and get the money for the city treasury. Not many cities in the country can boast of paying gold deposits in the public streets, and there is probably a dearth of precedents to guide the city council in its action.

Automobiles to Haul Road Drags.

At Salina, Kan., an effort is being made to induce each automobilist to drag several miles of road after each rain. The theory is that the use of the drag places the earth on the crown of the road, where it dries and hardens. After another rain a repetition of the dragging carries on more earth, which in turn hardens, and after a few such applications of the drag there is a considerable hardened surface to the road which does not easily disintegrate. The employment of the motor car to haul the drag would demonstrate a hitherto unemployed utility of the machine.

THE GRANGE

Conducted by
J. W. DARROW, Chatham, N. Y.,
Press Correspondent New York State Grange

A PATRONS' EXCHANGE

Why Co-operation In Connecticut Is Likely to Succeed.

Members Get Quotations From the Exchange and Keep Prices and Arrangements to Themselves—This Is Said to Be the Secret of Successful Co-operative Buying Farmers' Supplies.

On Feb. 23, 1909, a committee appointed by the state grange organized the Patrons' Exchange of Connecticut, with a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and manager, an executive committee of three and an advisory board consisting of one from each Pomona district, of which there are ten in the state. The exchange buys for Patrons any article that they may wish. It is also endeavoring to furnish a market for them. They have been able to get during the past year 29½ cents per pound for Connecticut unwashed wool, which was 1½ to 3 cents per pound more than jobbers would give.

The exchange tackles anything in the line of business for its members. It claims to be the only association in the east that has been able to buy coal at the mines. The exchange is run on the principle of "simon pure co-operation," says Mr. Healey. It is necessary to have some standing and credit in order to do business. Therefore they charge those who wish to join the exchange $5. This entitles them to all the benefits of the exchange so long as they remain in good standing in some subordinate grange. To all such members the exchange does business for exact cost. The members send in for quotations on what they want, and the exchange sends back the lowest quotations they can get from the manufacturer or such source as the article wanted comes from. There is no credit allowed to any member, as cash or its equivalent has to accompany the order.

The way they support the exchange is the important point. Of course it costs something to do business. It costs something to buy articles for members, and it costs to dispose of their products for them. When a member buys flour which costs $6 per barrel he knows that is just what he will have to pay for the flour plus the cost of doing the business, which is the brokerage added to the cost. It is noticeable in that many have inquired how business could be handled so cheaply. Up to this time they have never had a complaint on brokerage. It has been left to the manager to charge up to each member the cost of doing his business. This brings out one important feature—that if it costs $5 to do business for one member and 10 cents to do business for another the one member pays his $5 and the other his 10 cents. There are no pro rata charges, so there is no opportunity for complaint. In selling a product through the exchange it is just the same. Each individual pays the cost of handling his product.

One of the strong points of the exchange is that it is not bound to any special manufacturer, but can get such articles as the members want and are not obliged to take such articles as the association does not want to handle. "It is surprising," says Mr. Healey, "to see the variety of requests that come in. Of course our big business is done in coal, grain, groceries, dairy supplies, household furnishings, harnesses and blankets, but we have furnished watches, boots and shoes, dry goods, cream separators, silos, sewing machines, carpets, rugs, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, jewelry, subscriptions to magazines, etc., to our members."

The essential to the success of an exchange of this kind is secrecy, and they are continually hammering that idea into their members through correspondence, to keep prices and arrangements to themselves. Another method of keeping secrecy is that the exchange recognizes no individual in anything. Everything is shipped to the Patrons' Exchange, and the members' goods are marked with a private mark so that the manufacturers know nothing but the Patrons' Exchange and the railroads and those outside know no one except the Parons' Exchange.

The exchange has been organized but nine months, but it has done $50,000 or $60,000 worth of business. We believe it is organized on the right principle and also believe the plan worthy a trial when nation wide co-operative buying and selling are to be attempted.

Atlantic City Next Year.

The next annual meeting of the national grange will be held at Atlantic City, N. J. Invitations were received from New York and Washington states, Atlantic City winning out over Washington by a small plurality. The reelection of National Master Bachelder was never in doubt, the opposition to him being merely nominal.

Alaska gave us $19,000,000 worth of gold in 1908. But what of it when New York gave $23,000,000 worth of potatoes and Vermont $18,000,000 worth of hay!

Any questions that any reader may like to ask about the grange movement may be addressed to the name at the head of this department.

TRIED IT ON DAD.

Botanist of the Family Treats the Old Man on a Discovery.

A prominent Yale professor is exceptionally fond of mushrooms. His son, who is an enthusiastic botanist, one day brought some home and told his mother to have them prepared as a special treat for his father. When the professor came in to dinner he was delighted to find his favorite dish at his place.

"These are not all for me, are they?" he asked, not wishing to be selfish.

"Yes, father; I gathered them specially for you," answered the dutiful son.

Next morning his son was awaiting him with rather an anxious expression on his face. "Good morning, dad," he ventured. "Did you sleep all right last night?"

"Fine," was the encouraging reply.

"Not sick at all, or didn't have any pain?"

"Why, of course not!" answered the professor.

"Hoorah!" said the botanist. "I have discovered another species that is not poisonous!"—Success Magazine.

Not a Laughing Matter.

They were gliding round the ballroom to the strains of a soft, dreamy waltz.

Suddenly he tripped and fell sprawling to the floor, carrying a goodly portion of his charming partner's gown.

Roars of derisive laughter greeted his contortion, and ruefully he extricated himself from the masses of chiffon and lace.

Reaching the side of a gentleman whose face had not assumed even the ghost of a smile, he burst out gratefully:

"Sir, you are a gentleman! You are the only man in the room who did not grin when I had the misfortune to tear that lady's dress!"

"Don't thank me, my dear sir!" replied he of the stony stare. "The lady happens to be my wife, and I paid for that dress!"—Answers.

The Cowardly Egg.

"When I arose to speak," related a martyred statesman, "some one hurled a base, cowardly egg at me, and it struck me on the chest."

"And what kind of an egg might that be?" asked a fresh young man.

"A base, cowardly egg," explained the statesman, "is one that hits you and then runs."—Everybody's.

Gems of Indexing.

The following are to be found in the catalogue of the Squantum Corners Public library:

Bacon; Its Preparation.
" on Inductive Reasoning.
Lead Poisoning.
" Kindly Light.
—Jack-o'-Lantern.

Easier.

Johnny—The medicine ain't so nasty as it usetir be, mommer. I'm gettin' used to it.

Mommer—Do you take a whole spoonful every hour?

Johnny—No'm. I couldn't find a spoon, so I'm usin' a fork.—Cleveland Leader.

As Usual.

In vain they told the heiress that the duke was an impostor and worse. "Why," said a friend, "I have read there is a price upon his head." But the heiress, all serene, only answered, "I have the price!"—Young's Magazine.

Unidentified.

Officer—Whose little boy was it jist fell off the wharf?

Tommy—Dunno. When they fished him out he wuz so clean day couldn't identify him.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

During the Siren Yell.

First Laborer—How do you like them college boys' yell?

Second Ditto—I got docked an hour yesterday taking it for the quit whistle.—Punch Bowl.

Where It Falls Down.

"Say, pa, does philosophy help us to endure trials?"

"It helps us to endure the trials of other people, but it usually falls down when applied to our own."

Where They Land.

"Pa, what is a libretto?"

"A libretto, Aurelius, is a home for old jokes."—Detroit Saturday Night.

The Week In London.

"Is Lady Jane in?"

"Very sorry, sir, but mistress is in prison this afternoon."—Life.

A Striking Lass.

So striking is May—
She strikes with delight
Typewriter by day,
Piano by night.
—Town Topics.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Pastor Russell's Discourse On Jerusalem

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 5.—Pastor Russell returned from his European trip just in time to keep his appointment to speak in Brooklyn's largest auditorium, the Academy of Music. His topic was "JERUSALEM," from the text, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her appointed time is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins" (Isaiah xl, 1, 2). As had been anticipated, the crowds were too great for accommodation at the Tabernacle. The spacious Academy of Music was crowded, with a large number of ministers and other men on the platform. After announcing his text the speaker said:—

Christendom, with united voice, admits that all of the Divine Revelation came to and through the Hebrew people. Listen to the argument of the Apostle Paul, "What advantage then hath the Jew? or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way; chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God"—the Divine message respecting the Divine purposes, present and to come. The Apostle again informs us that the entire Gospel message was briefly comprehended in the Creator's promise to Abraham, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Galatians iii, 8).

"To the Jew First."

It was the most natural thing imaginable for the Jewish Nation to suppose that the giving to them of the Law at Mount Sinai, through the mediatorship of Moses, was the fulfilment of the promise to Abraham. Nevertheless they were mistaken.

Israel's Mediator, and the sacrificing priests, and the sacrifices they offered, and their Tabernacle, with its Holy and Most Holy, and the Temple, and all the features of the Law Covenant were types or foreshadows of the "better sacrifices," higher Priesthood, better Mediator, and glorious blessings of eternal forgiveness and reconciliation yet to be accomplished. Nevertheless the period of Israel's types was not wasted. Not only were the types there given, but at the same time a special class of agents were selected: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all the Prophets and worthy ones of that age, holy, consecrated to God, and accepted as agents qualified for the Kingdom conditions. Of these the Scriptures declare, "They fell asleep." They are still asleep in the dust of the earth, awaiting the glorious resurrection morning, and a grand share then with Messiah in the work then to be accomplished. In their lifetime, they were styled the Fathers, because Messiah was foretold to be of the posterity of Abraham, and also "David's Son."

But other Scriptures, without contradicting these statements, show us distinctly that "David's Son" and "Abraham's Seed" is to be Lord and Father of both David and Abraham. Thus we read, "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth" (Psalm xlv, 16). David's son, Messiah, will be David's father, or life-giver, when he will raise David from the dead. Similarly he will be the father of all of those ancient worthies; and as David's Lord, and "Lord of lords," it will be his pleasure to appoint to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all of the Ancient Worthies, and Prophets, and faithful ones a glorious share with himself in the great Messianic Kingdom, which he is about to set up for the ruling and blessing of Israel and all the nations of the earth. Will not this be a grand honor to Abraham and his Seed! Could we expect that the Almighty would honor and use in such a high position any except the faithful? Surely not. When Messiah shall make these Ancient Worthies "Princes in all the earth," as representatives of his invisible Kingdom, will not this mean honor and dignity to the Jews first?

"Comfort Ye My People."

Our text is one of three declarations in the Old Testament, which assure us that there is a "double" connected with Israel's history. That is to say, Jewish history naturally divides itself into two exactly equal parts; the first of which was a time of favor, intermingled with disciplines, but favor nevertheless. The second of these parts has been one of disfavor and exclusion from Divine fellowship. As foretold by the Prophet, Israel for many centuries has been without prophet, or priest, and without ephod and without communion with God; whereas, at one time they were God's favored people. They now, according to their own admission, are so thoroughly rejected that they have no communication whatever, no light to shine upon their pathway. The prophet's words have been fulfilled, "Let their table become a snare before them: and that which should have been for their welfare, let it become a trap. Let their eyes be darkened, that they see not" (Psalm lxix, 22, 23). They have stumbled; they are blinded; but thank God! their blindness is not to be perpetual. The period of their blindness is the second part of the "double;" with the fulfilment of that "double" their blindness will begin to vanish, and "All the blind eyes shall be opened." Of that time the Lord declares that "He who scattered Israel will gather them."

We are impressed, not by fancy, but by the Word of God, that Israel's "double" is now fulfilled, that Israel's blessing has already begun, that the opening of Israel's eyes is now in progress. For this reason we have chosen for our text, "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Cry unto Jerusalem and say unto her that her appointed time is accomplished, for she hath received at the Lord's hand double [the two parts of her chastisement] for all her sins." Because the "double" is completed, we may speak the words of comfort.

Thirty-four years ago we called attention to these facts, but few had ears to hear. When eighteen years ago we visited Jerusalem, having in mind chiefly the fact that the time for the regathering of Israel was nigh at hand, and that the set time to favor Zion had come, we found no hearing ears amongst the Jewish people; and Zionism had not then been dreamed of. Our communications with the representatives of the Baron Hirsch Immigration Fund, and also with the executors of the Sir Moses Montefiore Jewish Relief Fund met with scant recognition. Nevertheless, we felt sure that Israel's "double" had been fulfilled, and that her morning of joy would soon break.

Meantime how much has happened during those eighteen years! Zionism has risen and engendered the hope of the "chosen people" in every land, and turned their eyes toward the land of promise; not that all are thinking of returning thither, but that every Jew who retains faith in the God of his fathers, and in the Abrahamic promise, is now looking and hoping for the time of blessing, long foretold. They know not about their "double"; they have not been studying the Holy Scriptures, but the teachings of their ancients, as presented by the Talmud. They have been making a very similar mistake to that of Christian people, who have been studying the creeds of the "dark ages" instead of the Word of God.

The Three "Doubles."

Glance with me at three different statements by the Lord through the Prophets of Israel respecting Israel's "double" of experience: the first, an experience of God's favor; the second, an experience of equal length without divine favor. Notice first Jeremiah's prophecy (Jeremiah xvi, 18). After telling of Israel's disfavor, and then of their regathering, the Lord declares, "And first I will recompense their iniquity and their sin double"—some of the recompense with favor, and some without favor. Jeremiah's prophecy looks down to the "double" from his own day, which was more than six hundred years before the second part of their "double" began.

Turn now to Zechariah's prophecy, and note that prophetically he takes his standpoint at the very time when the second part of the "double" began. His words are, "Even to-day do I declare that I will render double unto thee (Zechariah ix, 12).

Come next to our text, and note that the Prophet Isaiah stands with us, and views the matter from the standpoint that the "double" of experience has been fulfilled: "Speak comfortably unto Jerusalem, cry unto her that her appointed time is accomplished, because she hath received at the Lord's hand double [two equal parts] for her sins." It is our understanding that this "double" reached fulfilment in the year 1878 A. D., and since that date we have been declaring to the best of our ability, as the Lord granted opportunity, these comforting words to Israel, assuring God's chosen people that their period of disfavor has ended, and that they are gradually returning to prosperity; that Divine favor began with them in 1878. Yea, more than this, our sermons which to some extent reflect this feature of the Divine program relating to Israel's restoration to Divine favor, are being read to a considerable extent by Hebrews as well as by Christians; their eyes are gradually opening, as the Scriptures foretell they shall do.

But how may we know when the turning point of Israel's "double" took place? How may we know that the "double" was completed in 1878? We reply that the answer to the question necessitates an acknowledgment of Jesus as the Messiah. Israel's rejection of him as their King, marks the turning point of God's favor, as the prophecy of Zechariah, just quoted, distinctly shows. Neither Christians nor Jews have appreciated the full import of the incident mentioned in the Gospel; that five days before his crucifixion, Jesus rode upon an ass, after the manner of Jewish kings, into the city of Jerusalem, a multitude surrounding him, and going before him, shouting, "Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of Jehovah!" The Prophet Zechariah called attention to this incident centuries before it occurred, and then gives the Lord's words, "Even to-day do I declare, I will render double unto thee."

Israel's history as a nation began with the death of Jacob, when he gave his blessing to the twelve tribes. The period from that time to the death of Jesus, according to the Scriptures, was 1845 years; and a like period of disfavor, measuring from the day of Jesus' rejection marks the year 1878, as the end of Israel's disfavor,—the time when the message of comfort should go forth. However, Divine favor was only gradually taken from Israel, and altogether a period of thirty-six years intervene between the death of Jesus and the utter destruction of Jerusalem. Similarly we should expect that the return of favor would be gradual, a like period of 36 years; and this would bring us to the year 1914, as the time when God's favor for his people will be publicly and openly manifested.

"The Seed of Abraham."

The question now arises, What has God accomplished during the latter half of Israel's "double"? Did he pass by his chosen people to directly bless the Gentiles, or how shall we understand Divine Providence with respect to this matter?

We answer that Almighty God had one feature of his plan which he did not make known directly and explicitly to Abraham or any other Prophet; he kept that feature of his purpose a secret. It is this: Messiah could not be a man and yet accomplish the great things which Jehovah intended, as stated in his Word. The Law called for an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth and a man's life for a man's life. In this God set forth his principle governing his course of dealing with men. As by man (Adam) came the sentence death, and through heredity upon all of his offspring, even so the Divine law purposed that there must be a sacrifice of one human life to offset the one human life condemned to death. The one who would thus meet the demands of Justice on behalf of the race would have the right to give eternal life and human perfection to every member of Adam's race willing to accept it on the terms of the Divine Law. It was for this reason that Christ should die, "the just for the unjust."

As a reward for his obedience to the Father even unto death, Christ was raised from the dead to the Divine nature. In this exalted condition he is capable of being a Mediator and of doing a work for Israel and for the world much higher and broader than Moses could effect. Moses, the typical mediator, made atonement for a year with the blood of beasts; but Messiah with his own blood makes perpetual atonement for the sins of all the people. This is the great Messiah (Jesus) who suffered the death of the cross—for the Jews and for the Gentiles—"for all the people." This is the glorified Messiah, who as the Spiritual Seed of Abraham is about to bless Israel's Ancient Worthies, and to "make them Princes in all the earth;" ministers of his Kingdom for the ruling, blessing and instruction of whosoever will, out of the present sin and death conditions, to life eternal to full human perfection, with the earth as Paradise restored.

Members of Messiah.

But, some one may say, Where do Christians come in connection with this Divine arrangement? And if God's dealings with the world are to be through Israel, and not through the Church, why has there been so long a delay? Why did not the glorified Messiah at once set up his Kingdom, and bring forth the Ancient Worthies from the tomb to be its earthly representatives? Oh, here is another part of the mystery of God! Isaac, Abraham's son, was typical of Messiah, the Spiritual Seed, but before Isaac began the work of dispensing the blessings to his brethren and to his children, he first took a bride, and this act also was allegorical or typical. In the antitype, Messiah, the glorified Jesus, partook of the divine nature according to the Father's invitation, and he is to take a Bride who is to be his joint-heir on the spirit plane—to share with him the glory, honor and service of his Messianic Kingdom. The period of Israel's disfavor, as a Nation, has been the time in which a special class has been called of the Father and begotten of the Holy Spirit to joint-heirship with Christ as his Bride.

But did God pass by the natural seed of Israel to give these spiritual privileges to the Gentiles—to gather from the Gentiles a people, figuratively to constitute the Bride of Messiah? Nay. The Scriptures assure us that this spiritual privilege went first to the Jews; they show us that during the three and a half years of Jesus' ministry, and during the thirty-six years following it, the gospel message was given almost exclusively to the Jews, and gathered from that people as many as were found to be "Israelites indeed without guile," as many as were not only of the circumcision of the flesh, but also who were of the circumcision of the heart. God did not continue to deal with his chosen people, but after having gathered from them as many as were worthy of the spiritual blessing and exaltation—only then was the message sent to the Gentiles, to gather from the Gentiles a number sufficient to complete the foreordained and predestined number who will constitute the Bride.

So then, my brethren, in proving from the Scriptures that Israel's "double" is about completed; that Israel's blindness is about to be taken away, and that Israel's exaltation as the earthly representatives of Messiah's Kingdom is near at hand, we are proving to ourselves another thing; namely, that the full number called from amongst the Gentiles to participate with Christ on the spirit plane, as members of his Bride class, will soon be completed (Romans ii, 25-32).

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson XI.—Second Quarter, For June 12, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xv, 21-28. Memory Verses, 21, 22—Golden Text, Matt. xv, 28—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

This chapter begins with a question from the Pharisees, "Why do Thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders?" to which Jesus replied, "Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God?" Then He added, "Ye have made the commandment of God of none effect by your traditions," quoting from the prophet Isaiah concerning those whose worship is only from the mouth and lips, while their hearts are far from God (Isa. xxix, 13; Ezek. xxxiii, 31). Paul tells us that even the wisdom of words (he must mean the human wisdom of men's words) may make the cross of Christ of none effect (I Cor. i, 17). So between mere outward form and the wisdom of man the gospel would seem to be greatly hindered, and yet our Lord is not discouraged (Isa. xlii, 4). In a lesson which we are soon to have we will hear Him say, "Let wheat and tares grow together till the harvest," but in verse 13 of this chapter He warns us in these words: "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." Let us see to it that we are indeed "trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, that He may be glorified" (Isa. lxi, 3).

I cannot help thinking that from such religious formalism and hypocrisy our Lord went away into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon to be refreshed by some real faith, for, knowing all things and all people, He knew what He would find where He was going, and we do not read of any other result of this visit except the healing of this woman's daughter. This incident is found only here and in Mark vii, where we read that He entered into a house and would have no man know it. That would lead us to think that He came aside, possibly for physical rest as well as the refreshment from the faith of a gentile. This woman, whose daughter was troubled by an unclean demon, having heard of Him, came and fell at His feet and besought Him to heal her daughter. Note that she heard of Him. The questions keep ever coming. Are any hearing of Him through me? Are my life and testimony all for Him? Might some others hear if I was willing to go or more self denying in order to help others to go? The apostles are again in evidence with their "send her away, for she crieth after us" (verse 23). It is so much easier to turn down the many appeals for help, just to be let alone. So few of us seem to learn to live wholly for others, for the good we can do rather than the good we can get. The Holy Spirit needs to have more full control of us.

She addressed Him as "O Lord, thou Son of David," but as the Son of David she, being a gentile, had no claim upon Him, and He answered her not a word. We must never tolerate a thought of any unkindness or even lack of consideration on the part of Jesus, not even when He addressed His own mother as He did in John ii, 4. He was never anything but love, and love is kind (I Cor. xiii, 4). The most that we can ever say is, "Well, I do not understand." But we must implicitly trust Him. In this case He was no doubt preparing her for the blessing He was ready to bestow. He said to the disciples, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

Her next appeal is simply "Lord, help me," and now she gives Him His right place in relation to her, but He replied, "It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to dogs." This does seem to our ears almost too much to bear, but He will never try us too much (I Cor. x, 13). He knew what He was doing, and it was all love, no matter how it looks to us. Listen to her reply: "Truth, Lord, yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' tables." The victory is hers. She has won; she gave Him His place as Lord, and now she takes hers, the lowest, a gentile dog. Now listen to Jesus: "O woman, great is thy faith. Be it unto thee even as thou wilt. For this saying go thy way. The devil is gone out of thy daughter" (verse 28; Mark vii, 29). She believed his word, returned home and found her daughter well.

There was a great realized need. Her daughter's trouble was her own. It was nothing foreign, nothing to which she could be in any degree indifferent. She knew she had come to one who could help her, and she would not let go. The lessons for us are easy. May we lay them to heart. He is always "this same Jesus." Compare this "great faith" with that of chapter viii, 10, and note that in each case it was the great faith of a gentile. Contrast the little faith of the disciples in Matt. vi, 30; viii, 26; xiv, 31; xvi, 8, and let us have faith in God, the faith that faints not, doubts not, wavers not, but clings believingly and expectantly (Matt. xxi, 21, 22). In order to ask in faith we must remember John xv, 7, and I John iii, 21, 22. So much is meant by abiding, keeping His commandments and with a clear conscience doing the things that are pleasing in His sight. Then we must remember also Jas. iv, 2, 3, lest we ask amiss.

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is Pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. It cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. It relieves Teething Troubles, cures Constipation and Flatulency. It assimilates the Food, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.

The Kind You Have Always Bought
In Use For Over 30 Years.
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

A Hint to the Wise Is Sufficient.

Special Sale on
2-qt Blue Enamel Saucepan.
2-qt Blue Fnamel Pudding Pans.
2-qt Blue Enamel Preserve Kettles.

We have just received over 1500 lbs. of our famous 10c Candy.
SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

TAKE our advice—buy now, don't wait, but come and see
THE Little Man
and you will save money on all your Holiday Goods,
Toys, Candies, Novelties, Fancy Goods.
Baumgartner.

CAPITAL $25,000.00
The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.
Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.
SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department
Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages
Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
T. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, T. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

Letter Heads
Statements
Bill Heads
Envelopes
Cards

Anything and everything in the way of high-grade commercial printing. Our assortment of job type is complete, our press facilities of the best, and our workmen true typographical artists. This tells all the story of our facilities for doing job printing of the right kind at the right prices.

Cards
Envelopes
Bill Heads
Statements
Letter Heads

Muco-Solvent is an indispensible household remedy because it is a preventive as well as a cure, and because it arrests development of all contageous germs and bacterial diseases. It cures croup, colds, tonsilitis with its associated ills and all inflamed and catarrhal conditions of the mucous surface. It is a harmless vegetable preparation that may safely be administered to the tenderest babe. If not for sale in your neighborhood, write to
THE PIEDMONT SUPPLY CO.,
Sole Agents for Muco-Solvent. Piedmont, W. Va.

WHAT RETURN OF ROOSEVELT MEANS TO U. S.

His Appearance Upon the Scene a Subject of Paramount Interest.

Theodore Roosevelt comes back to America on June 18. During his absence, he has made two conspicuous records—in the interior of Africa and in the courts and capitals of Europe. He has become an international factor of first importance and stands today as the most imposing character in the world. His homecoming will be marked by a reception the like of which has never been previously witnessed and the genuineness of which will leave nothing to be desired. All sections of the land will liberally represented and the accompanying enthusiasm will make the demonstration most unique.

Not withstanding any individual opinion that may be held regarding Mr. Roosevelt, the fact remains that all Americans feel a pardonable pride in the truly remarkable honors that have been showered upon him in Europe and the deep impression he has created upon the people of the Old World. In referring to his address in Berlin, a critic whose unfriendliness might reasonabiy be expected, in view of existing environments, made the following significant comment:

"It we examine the address of the centennial of the University of Berlin on Thursday, we see that Mr. Roosevelt's gift of composition is equal to serious and exacting demands. One almost gasps at the thought of the amount and kind of labor that must have been given to this grave and careful presentation of a subject of such import before so critical an audience. When did he find time for it since he formed his plans and knew it was to be done? Obviously he did not cram for it. It bespeaks, therefore, a remarkable background of general culture that is not generally credited to Mr. Roosevelt. The evidence that he has it is the latest of a considerable series of surprises to which he has treated the world. It is not likely to be the last."

The unusual attentions bestowed upon our former executive, not only by the populace, but by distinguished scholars, statesmen and especially by royalty everywhere, simply express the esteem in which he is held and the impress he has made upon our times. Few strong men have weak enemies—and this is particularly true of Mr. Roosevelt. The fifteen months intervening since his term as president expired have mellowed opposition, and affairs at Washington in 1906, 1907 and 1908 are now viewed with more enlightened vision. Because President Roosevelt foresaw the inevitable; pointed out the dangers that surrounded us and preached his warnings with all the vigor with which he is so gifted, his influence temporarily suffered. The party in power, chosen on a platform promising to carry out his policies, attempted to disregard its covenants and a campaign of misrepresentation development. He was directly charged with responsibility for the panic of 1907. Facts have clearly proved that the month of October in that year merely rounded out the succession of events in a world-wide recession in industrial and financial affairs. Like other nations, we had become overextended; extravagances had inflated our judgment and our credited system had been laid upon untenable foundations. Danger signs had been ignored and the crash came when the producing capacity of the country was crowded to the limit with unfilled business. Mr. Roosevelt's occupany of the presidency has been frequently referred to as seven years of turbulence. Those who were not in sympathy with the Roosevelt program last year gave as devout thanks as their limitations could command that peace and order had again been restored. Yet, in less than a year, and before the present administration had been rightly started, that series of blunders began which has almost disrupted the dominant party. And in that period, not one word of criticism or a single inference has come from the man who has been surrounded by the keenest intellects for months in the hope and expectation of hearing an expression upon any of the leading questions of the hour in the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt's return is, therefore, a subject of paramount interest. What he may say and what he may do has been daily discussed since his arrival at the outposts of civilization in Africa. There is not the least doubt that his knowledge of the situation in this country is accurate. During his absence there has been a clearer recognition, even by his bitterest opponents, of his sincerity of purposes, his unselfishness and his unswerving fidelity to the principles he has enunciated. Whatever else Wall Street may have attributed to Mr. Roosevelt, it cannot be said that he ever attacked the rights of property. He made mistakes, but that is human. Though it must be admitted that enactments secured during his tenure of office, as compared with the measures he vigorously urged, were few, yet it must also be admitted that he has "created a new standard of business ethics" and changed the sentiment of a nation. His advocacy of the square deal has been the real basis in bringing about the marvelous revision in corporation management. It is reflected in the willingness to initiate old age pensions, employers liability and better hours of working—concessions that are required by the law abroad. More considerate treatment of the public; greater publicity of corporation affairs; improved relation between capital and labor and a better appreciation of their rights and responsibilities toward each other and of both to the general public are results that can be directly credited to this single individeal. But the real and surest test of his popularity is that the people trust him and, on this account, his home-coming assumes its largest aspect.

The people manifest no anxiety or apprehension over possible opinions he may express on present or prospective conditions. Their faith in him is abiding; he did little in the past to test that faith For this reason, if none other, Mr. Roosevelt cannot be expected to take any decided position involving much demarkation from convictions he has often expounded. His opposition to the principle that might makes right can, therefore, be depended upon and those interests which have formerly been specially favored by suppliant representatives at Washington and at various state capitals need anticipate no relaxing because of private citizenship. In reality, his power has evidently been materially increased since he left the White House —notwithstanding that he has no patronage to distribute, nothing but his personality to attract and no announced political plans or ambitions. If, as reported, he declared before departing for Africa last year that he would reserve the right on his return to approve or condemn the acts of his successor, there can be no doubt of highly interesting comments. These comments are impatiently awaited. The earnestness with which the present administration professes to believe in his practical endorsement suggests only hope thereof. Should it be realized, the effect not only on the Taft administration, but on the vested interests and their allies would be temporarily electrical. There would be an immediate and radical change in the business, financial, investment and political situation. The collapse of the insurgent movement, the election of Republican House of Representatives and the retention of a number of state legislatures, insuring Republican successors to senators whose terms expire next year, would be practically assured. The shrewdest politicians clearly recognize there contingencies. But the fighting for the maintenance of the Roosevelt policies has not been done by the few senators and representatives who have braved the power and the wrath of the leaders on congress and the administration and who have wrung important concessions from a most unwilling majority, by unremitting efforts. The prospect that the advantages so acquired will be jeopardized, by the greatest politician this country has ever produced, seem to remote too be seriously considered. Moreover, it is against all precedent to suspect that Mr. Roosevelt has any project in mind that would benefit the few at the expense of the many. It is certain that approval of the party in power, and Mr. Roosevelt is a strong party man, would immediately stimulate enterprise, encourage exploitation and revive many plans that are held in abeyance. Corporation progress was retarded by the Roosevelt policies and the litigation against the so-called trusts, begun during the former administration. The re-argument of the American Tobacco and Standard Oil cases before the Supreme Court of the United States, next November along with the certainty of decisions not far distant thereafter, presages additional hesitancy. These proceedings were instituted only because it had become apparent that the manner of conducting large corporations had reached a point pregnant with the gravest dangers for the safety of the republic. Final interpretation of the questions at issue will blaze the way for future operation along constitutional lines and will safeguard the interests of invested capital and the rights of the individual. The rapidity of the growth of industrial power after Mr. McKinley's first inauguration overshadowed all other developments between 1897 and 1902 and led to the supposition that the country was to capture the trade of the universe. The American invasion became a spectre in Europe in 1901 but the sudden collapse in 1903, followed by and equally sudden recuperation in 1905 demonstrated to the world at large our irrational character and removed the possibility of our becoming the arbiter of industeral and financial affairs. During the first McKinley administration, there was no effort to check industrial aggrandizement and most of the abuses sought to be corrected, since 1905, then had their most vigorous development.

Believing that Mr. Roosevelt, whose sagacity is universally conceded, will not give the vigorous indorsement which the Taft administration and the Republican party so urgently needs, the effect of political uncertainty naturally arises. Washington has been a deterring factor for months. Business has slackened about 20 per cent. since last November and improvement is retarded by fears of political upheaval in the autumn elections. Iron and steel, coal and coke, cotton and woolen fabrics, lumber and copper are much duller than considered possible at the beginning of January. Costs of living are still inordinately high and there have been general advances in wages of labor recently. Some reaction in various markets, particularly in view of a more promising crop outlook, has occurred, while restricted consumption of many articles is working for readjustment in other directions. Cotton and grain have been under manipulative control for nearly two years. The manner in which speculation has been conducted therein has been an adverse influence on general trade as well as impelling growers to retard marketing in the hope of securing the high prices predicted by those instrumental in the manipulation. Farm reserves are conceded to be larger than commonly supposed and the decline in wheat, corn, cotton and food animals has resulted in bringing out a larger movement to primary markets. The evils of cornering commodities and of over-speculation in stocks are clearly recognized, but no progress worth mentioning has yet been made towards correction. Stock and investment markets just now are almost stagnant and railroads have been obliged to resort to foreign monetary centers to raise funds for corporate purposes. This was not because of lack of capital at home, but rather to timidity. There are too many uncertainties in the outlook over the next six months and too much of a feeling that some impending danger is at hand.

The investor, beset with a smaller purchasing power from a fixed income than five and ten years ago, demands and is securing a higher rate of interest. Economists differ as to the likelihood of a permanent basis of high costs or an ultimate readjustment to a lower level. Needless to state, capital will insist on a return commensurate with prevailing conditions. The continued prosperity of this country depends greatly on its ability to compete in agricultural products in the world's markets and the present state of our foreign trade is mainly due to the fact that domestic prices of wheat, corn, meats and cotton have been out of line. Instead of exporting such commodities in anything like the usual volume we have been sending gold to liquidate London's indebtedness to Argentine, India and Russia for food stuffs. If May and June show the same ratio of increase in imports and exports as the previous ten months, the result of the fiscal year's movements should be an excess of exports amounting to $165,000,000. This would compare with $351,178,000 in 1900; $666,431,000 in 1908, and a yearly average of $490,000,000 since 1897. The necessity for a change is conclusive; we believe that it is under way.

Inflation progressed with little interruption for twelve years; deflation under ordinary circumstances would be looked for naturally, though it, too, must require time. It was only partial in 1908, as the powerful financial and speculative groups in New York, with huge resources, released from the ordinary channels of business because of depression, and aided by the prosperity of the western agricultural regions, were able to force one of the most extraordinary advances in the history of stock market operations. In previous periods of recess'on, liquidation was generally permitted to run its course and recuperation started from a secure basis. A new experiment was tried two years ago. Holders of securities suffered severely in the panic of 1907 and the vendors of merchandise in 1908. Labor was little affected, except from irregular employment. Wall Street and those who guide its destinies evidently believed that a sharp rebound in security values and the optimism that nowadays so closely follows such movements would not only demonstrate that prosperity's return was predicated on the end of the Roosevelt regime and the inauguration of a "business administration," but would inevitably impress party leaders with the conviction that nothing must interfere with the plans and schemes of the captains of industry. Trade did expand vigorously for a few months last year and production in different lines reached new record totals. Meanwhile, the public at large became deeply exercised over the apparent return of corporation control and the alleged sidetracking of policies which had been accepted as vitally essential to the general welfare. A quick revision of ideas suddenly developed in Washington and those who had anticipated a period of noninterference immediately changed many of their plans by reason thereof. The result was an abrupt termination of the forward movement in the stock market and severe liquidation, subsequently followed by speculative and investment inertia.

Wall Street has intimate knowledge of the sentiment of the country on matters of public import, as well as the general opinion regarding Mr. Roosevelt. Financial interests are prone to credit others than themselves for unsatisfactory conditions in security markets, for political unrest and for business hesitancy. Mr. Roosevelt has no ulterior motives to gratify. He has insisted that the law be obeyed; has urged enactments in line with real progress, and has wanted faulty statutes corrected. His observations abroad have undoubtedly fortified the position he had long since assumed on various problems and the country may, therefore, anticipate some striking recommendations after his return. To expect that Mr. Roosevelt will suffer sudden eclipse and become an ordinary private citizen is not taking into account that he has been a decided exception to all precedents, and that such a virile personality cannot remain quiescent, especially when that personality is directly responsible for a transition uncompleted. The place Theodore Roosevelt occupies in the hearts of the American people is due to the fact that he recognizes in them the love of fair play and they recognize in him one strong enough to help them in their struggle for the "Square Deal."

Notice to The Public.

I have taken charge of the Fresh Meat Department of Creutzburg's store where I can furnish my trade with the best Fresh Meats at all times, and solicit a share of your patronage. Everything clean and up-to-date.

Farmers, bring your calves, mutton, lambs and beef and get the highest cash prices for them.

Yours to please,
HENRY SMOUSE.
The Up-to-Date Market.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawtont & Sons.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett county, Maryland, letters of administration on the estate of late of Garrett county, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof duly authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 14th day of October, 1910; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

MARY V. SPIKER,

Given under my hand this 12th day of April, 1910.

J. M. SPIKER,
Administrator,
Piedmont, W. Va.

Notice to Creditors.

This is to give notice, That the subscriber hath obtained from the Orphans' Court of Garrett County, in Maryland, Letters of Administration on the personal estate of late of Garrett County, deceased. All persons having claims against the deceased are hereby warned to exhibit the same, with the vouchers thereof duly authenticated to the subscriber, on or before the 28th day of October, next; they may otherwise by law be excluded from all benefit of said estate. All persons knowing themselves indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

ELLA DAVIS,

Given under my hand this 28th day of April, 1910.

ANNIE WARNICK,
Administratrix,
Chaffee, W. Va.

NOTICE CONCERNING WATER AND SEWER TAPS.

All persons are hereby notified not to make any tap to the water or sewer lines of the town of Oakland without first obtaining permission from the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland.

The ordinances of the town prohibit such interference with water and sewer lines and all persons violating the same will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Permission to tap both water and sewer pipes may be obtained from J. C. Dunham, clerk, upon application and payment of the proper charges.

By order,
6-3t The Mayor and Council of Oakland.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not advertised here. For particulars address
M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

ORDER NISI.

Jane Roberts vs. J. Turner Lohr and wife. No. 1661 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 28th day of May, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by William R. Offutt and J. C. Renninger, attorneys name in the Mortgage, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of June, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 24th day of June, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $2610.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

Subscribe for The Republican.

PEOPLE OF THE DAY

Mr. Ridder and Uncle Joe.

Herman Ridder of New York, who recently felt the weight of Uncle Joe Cannon's displeasure, is treasurer and manager of the New York Staats-Zeitung, one of the most influential German dailies in the country. He is also president of the American Publishers' association, and it was in this capacity that he incurred Mr. Cannon's wrath.

It was all because of the duty on print paper, Mr. Cannon declared in a recent speech, that he was unpopular with the press. He said that he was waited upon in the speaker's room at the capitol by a deputation of the Publishers' association, Mr. Ritter at its head, and the deputation had made the demand that he railroad through congress a bill which would make print paper free of duty. This Mr. Cannon declined to do, although the deputation had offered him, he said, practically a promise or a bribe that he should be the next president; that they (the publishers) would use their influence to that effect. When he had emphatically declined, said Mr. Cannon, the deputation, with Mr. Ridder at its head, had gone forth to fight him through the daily press.

HERMAN RIDDER.

Mr. Ridder characterizes the charge as both false and ridiculous.

Herman Ridder is a native of New York of German parentage and is fifty-eight years old. For many years he has been influential in politics. He took a prominent part in the Cleveland campaigns and has been active in reform movements in New York. In the last national campaign he was treasurer of the Democratic national committee.

Suffragette and Suffragist.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the woman suffrage movement in England, in the course of a recent speech defined the difference between suffragist and suffragette. She pointed her definition with the story of two newsboys who were crying in their papers a meeting of the suffragists and a "raid" of the suffragettes. One asked the other what was the difference.

"Well," responded his pal, "a suffragist jist wants the vote, but the suffragette"—making the g hard—"she means to get it."

Mrs. Pankhurst told how the name suffragette had been applied by a newspaper in contempt and ridicule, but that the women had turned it into a title of honor.

The Sugar Weighing Scandal.

Henry Lewis Stimson, special assistant attorney general for the prosecution of the weighing fraud case against the American Sugar Refining company, is well equipped for the work required. For several years he was United States attorney for the southern district of New York and carried on a number of highly successful prosecutions. It was through Mr Stimson's efforts that the so called sugar trust was forced to pay to the government the sum of $2,000,000 back duty on sugar importations. In addition $136,000 was paid in fines.

In the present case Mr. Stimson is called upon to prosecute various employees and officials of the trust who have been indicted by the federal grand jury on the charge of defrauding the government of customs duties.

HENRY L. STIMSON.

Mr. Stimson is a native of New York and is forty-two years old. He began the practice of law in 1893 and for years was the law partner of Elihu Root.

RURAL TELEPHONES.

They Are Necessary to a Successful Country Community.

GOOD FOR MANY PURPOSES.

Physicians Can Be Secured Hurriedly, Help Called Quickly In Case of Fire and For Planning Impromptu Social Affairs—How to Establish a Suburban System.

This is the time when the ruralite snugs close to the hearth and thinks of ways and means whereby he can help to beautify and improve his home town. One thing that should by all means come into the suburbanite's first consideration is the construction of a telephone system. It is a greater necessity and convenience to the man living in the small town than to the big business man in a large city. In the city distances are short and help easy to get, while in the small town the distances are great and help of every kind grows scarcer every year. A telephone in the suburban home is a servant of great value and is available for many purposes. It may be used to summon help in emergencies, to call the doctor in sudden sickness and perhaps save a priceless life and to call the neighbors in case of fire or accident. A telephone system also brings the subscribers into close social union, regardless of the distances which separate their homes. It enables the women and young folks to plan many impromptu little affairs, which help to relieve the monotony of rural life.

The idea of having telephone service naturally occurs sooner or later to some one in the community. He talks the matter over with his neighbors and after the idea of uniting to build a telephone line has spread around a meeting is held and if possible some one familiar with the advantages of telephones makes an address. It may be possible to have some men from nearby places, supplied with telephone service, tell of experiences with telephone service and of the many uses they find for it. The next step depends upon the number of telephones which will be used, whether a two wire line or a one wire line shall be used and how the expense shall be divided among the users. If many parties decide to have telephones it may be desirable to form a company, in which case the next step at the meeting of the organization is to draw up some kind of an agreement which will state the obligations imposed upon each subscriber or telephone owner. After organizing get permission from the owners of the adjoining lands to set poles near their property. There are certain rules and regulations in every town governing the setting up of poles. Ascertain and follow these. Great care should be taken not to use more poles than necessary, as there is nothing that does so much to disfigure a town more than to see a great number of stripped poles carelessly painted strewn about in inconvenient places. Then comes the wire stringing. If you put up these poles do not leave them go to waste and string the wires to the trees. Trees are a valuable asset to the beauty of a town, and if they are used for the purpose of running wires through and around them they will soon become dilapidated and an eyesore. All poles should be firmly set, and lightning rods should be placed on every fourth pole. Well seasoned white or bur oak poles will last nearly as long as cedar. No pole should be set that is smaller than six inches in diameter at the surface after being set three feet in the ground.

The apparatus and supplies usually provided for rural lines are simple and readily installed. The best system available is the metallic system.

This system consists of two line wires, having connected between them the telephones by the wires, and affords a comparatively high grade of ringing and talking, even in the neighborhood of electric light and power wires. The disadvantage of the metallic system is the necessity of stringing two wires for each line, thus involving the cost of the extra wire and labor.

When it comes to purchasing phones get the best on the market. A cheap one may do where only two or three wish to use the line, but for a rural circuit, with twenty on the line, the best is none too good. Then, too, if you have connection with an adjoining toll line you should have a phone strong enough to carry you thirty miles with ease.

With a single wire good ground connections are of the first importance. Ground wires must be got down to damp earth, down so deep that they will not dry out in summer or freeze dry in winter. Gravel or sand makes poor ground connections.

The cost of installing a system varies considerably, depending upon whether the lumber for poles is at hand or whether it has to be shipped in. The suburbanite will find that the cost, when the line is completed, will be surprisingly low.

Trees For Beautifying Streets.

From time to time inquiries have come in from the colder parts of the country and some points more remote concerning the best eastern maple for street planting. It may surprise easterners to find that it is the opinion of all the best authorities that the Norway maple makes a superior street tree in comparison with American species. After two or three years from planting it usually becomes a shapely tree well adapted to street use in the eastern part of our country.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1910. NUMBER 16

WILL FURNISH CHEAP CURRENT FOR BALTIMORE

Garrett County Power Company Makes Low Offer Through H. P. Tasker.

The Baltimore Sun of Thursday says: Ten thousand horsepower at the rate of $3 per horsepower a year is offered to the mayor and city council by Mr. H. P. Tasker, if the city will build the pole line to his plant at Swallow Falls, on the Youghiogheny river, 54 miles west of Cumberland. In order to protect the city in its investment, Mr. Tasker, as the sole owner of the Youghiogheny Light and Power Company, declares in a letter to the mayor and city council that he is willing to give the city a contract for 99 years at the price he mentions.

Following is the letter received by the mayor:

To the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, Md.:

Gentlemen—As general manager and sole owner of the Youghiogheny Light and Power Company of Swallow Falls, Garrett county, Md., I respectfully submit the following proposition, viz: If the city will agree to furnish the transmission wires, either on poles or underground, from Swallow Falls to Baltimore, about 200 miles (electrical power is now being successfully transmitted 300 miles in some of the western states), I will contract to furnish the city with about 10,000 horsepower for 99 years, at the phenomenally cheap rate of three dollars a horsepower per year at the hydro-electric plant, this offer to stand for 30 days.

One reason for this very low offer is that, at the age of 75 years, I was stricken down last winter with an incurable disease, and brought to a hospital, where I expect to end my days. Those interested are invited to call at the hospital and examine my data, etc. H. P. TASKER, General Manager.

When seen yesterday Mr. Tasker said:

"The falls from which I derive my power are 320 feet. There is no necessity for a dam or anything else. It is a wonderful natural water power. Enough water runs to waste in the Youghiogheny river, Muddy creek and Deep creek to supply a 48-inch pipe with over 300 feet head to the hydro-electric plant. With Pelton impulse wheels over 10,000 horsepower can be developed.

"I have been reading of what the city council has been doing about electricity, and I am anxious to have fair treatment and to get the product where it will benefit the people. I am too old now to have much benefit from it myself."

Electrical Engineer Phelps, in commenting on the proposition yesterday, said:

"The rate which he proposes to charge the city is absurdly low. Just how practicable the proposition is could not be definitely ascertained unless the exact cost of the right of way for 230 miles which the pole line would have to extend could be known. There would be no particular engineering difficulty about constructing the pole line, though it would cost about $1,500,000. To this would have to be added the cost of the right of way, and when the interest on this total was computed and added to the cost of the current at $3 a horsepower it could quickly be seen just how good a proposition this is.

"A large loss in current would be sustained on account of the long distance it would have to be transmitted. This would use up about 40 or 50 per cent. of the total. It seems, on its face, however, as though the absurdly low rate at which the power is offered would equalize other difficulties and other costs and make the proposition an excellent one."

Obituary.

After a long and painful illness Margaret Catherine Lorene Yutzy, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Yutzy, passed away Saturday morning, June 11, aged two years, nine months and twenty-three days. The funeral was preached in the Loch Lynn Heights Baptist church by the pastor on Monday, June 13, and interment took place at Deer Park. A large concourse of friends and relatives were present and much sympathy was expressed for Brother Yutzy and his wife in their bereavement.

Little Margaret was indeed a gift of God, for she was always sweet and sunny and lovable. Her little life, though short, was a blessing to those about her. It is true that our hearts grieve because of her departure, but we thank God for the years she was with us. Instead of grieving unduly let us rather look forward to the time when father and mother and loved ones shall meet in that bright land beyond the grave.

"A year of sweets—a little year,
That vanished with our darling's breath;
So strange! it doth not yet appear
What is the blessing hid in death.

"O shining brow and golden hair
And eyes that looked beyond the blue;
Dear face, that grew from fair to fair,
The same, yet always something new.

"A sweeter dream who ever dreamed
Than came with her soft lips to ours;
Blent with her life, our being seemed
Drowned in the glowing soul of flowers.

"O heart of God, that pities all!
O love that gives and takes away!
Confused and faint, on Thee we fall,
Yet know not how we ought to pray."

C. W. HUDSON.

A Card.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester C. Yutzy wish to thank their numerous friends for their many kind acts and expressions of sympathy during the illness and at the death of their beloved little daughter Margaret.

DIXON & KELSO

We wish to call your attention to our complete line of Muslin Underwear which we are offering at such low prices, considering the high price on cotton.

A special good Gown or Skirt, lace or embroidery, at $1.00.

An extensive assortment of Drawers and Corset Covers at 25 cents anc 50 cents.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

SENTENCED TO FIFTEEN YEARS IN PENITENTIARY

Allen Timmerman Will Serve That Term for Assault on Young Girl.

On Tuesday afternoon Chief Judge Boyd passed sentence upon those who were found guilty of criminal charges at the present term of the Circuit Court.

Allen Timmerman, who was found guilty of statutory rape upon the person of a young girl named Paugh, was given fifteen years in the Maryland Penitentiary.

William A. DeWitt, guilty of stealing hams from the farmhouse of Mr. Smouse, south of Oakland, was sentenced to two years in the same institution.

John Parks, guilty of stealing a bottle of spirits from the saloon of John J. Sweeney, has not yet been sentenced.

Since our last report the following cases have been disposed of on the several dockets.

1. Daniel E. Offutt vs. C. A. Ashby; continued. Renninger & Offutt.

2. Manor Mining and Manufacturing Co. vs. Victoria E. Rafter et al; continued. Mitchell—Sincell.

3. Same vs. Mary E. Kitzmiller; continued.

4 Gilead Broadwater vs. W. T. Stanton, admr.; continued. Sincell—Renninger & Offutt.

5. Frank Strawn vs. N. Augustine et al; continued. Thayer—Hamill.

6. N. Y. Mining Co. vs. James Resh; continued. Richmond & Sincell—Hamill.

7. Georges Creek Coal & Iron Co. vs. P. S. Fazenbaker; continued. Williams—Sincell & Peddicord.

8. Mary E. Hootton vs. Isaac Rinker; dismissed. Thayer & Peddicord—Hamill.

9. C. D. Gillespie vs. J. R. Lipscomb; continued. Sincell—Hamill.

10. Paul Beachy vs. Jacob L. Durst; continued. Sincell.

11. Albert Lewis vs. Seymour Hamstead; dismissed. Peddicord—Mitchell.

12. E. C. Shaffer, use Piedmont Grocery Co., vs. John Durst; judgment $133.02. Hamill—Thayer.

13. George W. Magruder et al vs. Chapmen Coal Co.; continued. Peddicord—Blackiston.

14. Rowlesburg Grocery Co. vs. C. G. Hammond; tried before court; judgment for plaintiff for $516.95. Renninger & Offutt—Peddicord.

15. John Felty, Jr., vs. M. C. Hoye; dismissed. Peddicord—Hamill.

16. Annie F. Bray vs. Harley L. Warnick; continued. Peddicord—Hamill.

17. John Felty vs. Cora Skipper; stet. Peddicord—Hamill.

19. George Burdock vs. Farmers' Union Association; continued.

20. Horace R. Boyer vs. B. W. Briscoe; continued. Hamill—Peddicord.

21. C. M. Smith vs. J. W. Green; continued. Renninger & Offutt—Peddicord.

22. John A. Connell vs. Kendall Lumber Co.; dismissed. Connell—Hamill.

23. Isaac N. Rinkel vs. Mollie Hootton; dismissed. Hamill—Thayer & Peddicord.

24. Western Md. R. R. vs. Potomac Lumber Co.; continued. Hamill—Peddicord.

25. John Price vs. Samuel C. Raybeck; settled. Renninger & Offutt—Peddicord.

26. Samuel C. Raybeck vs. John Price; settled. Peddicord—Renninger & Offutt.

28. Jacob A. Blackburn vs. D. M. McClosky; continued. Peddicord & Hamill.

30. Garrett County Telephone Co. vs. J. W. Beeghly; settled and satisfied. Hamill—Peddicord.

31. H. W. McComas vs. Gilmor S. Hamill; judgment for plaintiff for $180.77. Thayer—Hamill.

32. Sarah Ashby and others vs. Mason Bros.; tried before the court; sub curia. Thayer & Peddicord—Hamill.

33. James W. Beeghly vs. Garrett Telephone Co.; settled. Peddicord—Hamill & Renninger.

34. Same vs. C. V. Guard; settled. Peddicord—Hamill & Renninger.

35. Same vs. W. A. Smith; settled; Peddicord—Hamill & Renninger.

36. Gilead Broadwater vs. Eli and I. U. Stanton; dismissed. Sincell—Peddicord.

37. A. E. Bosely vs. Stuart F. Hamill et al; settled. Peddicord—Semmes.

38. Same vs. Same; settled. Peddicord—Semmes.

40. Mary E. Bevans vs. Hall Brothers; continued. Matthews & Hamill—Renninger & Offutt.

41. Marian A. Broadwater vs. J. A. Kimble; stet.

42. A. D. Miller vs. Amos Broadwater; continued. Hamill—Peddicord.

43. Kenneweg Co. vs. C. E. Hilleary; garnishee; tried before the court; dismissed; Hamill—Peddicord & Thayer.

45. Joseph Heighman vs. A. J. Bevans; judgment for plaintiff for $407.18. Peddicord—Matthews & Hamill.

46. F. C. Browning vs. Bert Feathers; tried before the court; sub curia. Hamill & Thayer—Renninger & Offutt.

48. Gilmor S. Hamill vs. Abel DeWitt; continued. Hamill—Peddicord.

49. Laura S. Jones vs. M. T. Harris et al; dismissed. Peddicord—Semmes.

50. Pearl Hesen vs. Austin Brown; settled. Peddicord—Hamill.

51. Charles E. Hilleary vs. D. E. Offutt, Jr., tried before the court; judgment for defendant. Peddicord—Hamill.

52. Samuel P. Arnold vs. West. Md. Coal Co.; settled. Peddicord & Thayer—Hamill & Reynolds.

53. David T. Michaels vs. G. H. Mitchell; continued. Sincell & Renninger—Whitworth.

54. Charles E. Hilleary vs. Austin Brown; tried before the Court; judgment for defendant. Peddicord—Hamill.

55. Warren C. White vs. Kendall Lumber Co.; settled. Mitchell—Hamill.

56. Erastus C. Cuppett vs. Sidney A. Lewis; continued. Renninger & Offutt—Thayer.

57. Philip H. Simmons vs. Brown & Hamill, garnishee; setted. Peddicord—Hamill.

59. Caroline M. Smith vs. Roy C. Holbrook; continued. Renninger & Offutt—Peddicord.

60. P. T. Garthright vs. John Galloway; judgment for plaintiff for $164. Peddicord.

61. L. Strauss & Co. vs. R. Schlossnagle; fiat. Doub & Renninger.

62. Clara Elsey vs. L. B. Crane; judgment for plaintiff for $261.66. Thayer.

63. Harvey J. Speicher vs. Lawrence F. Green; continued. Peddicord—Hamill.

65. Thomas F. Smouse vs. M. A. Browning; continued. Peddicord—Hamill.

66. John Sines & Sons vs. Owen T. Mackin; dismissed.

68. Lemuel Male vs. O. T. Mackin, garnishee; dismissed.

69. Same vs. Matthews & Hamill, garnishee; dismissed.

70. Thomas F. Smouse vs. Hamill; continued. Peddicord—Hamill.

71. Andrew Mullen vs. John C. Brydon et al; continued. Mitchell—Hamill.

72. Tony Collatte vs William Tunney; continued. Renninger & Offutt—Peddicord.

73. Mt. Lake Water & Light Co. vs. L. A. Rudisill; judgment on rule. Peddicord.

74. C. C. Frederick & Co. vs. George J. Walters; dismissed. Peddicord—Matthews & Hamill.

75. Catherine Teats vs. Edward Liston; continued. Renninger & Offutt—Peddicord.

76. German Brewing Co. vs. Geo. R. Long; dismissed. Renninger & Offutt—Peddicord.

80. Luther Brown vs. J. B. Meese; settled.

81. Thomas F. Smouse vs M. A. Browning; continued. Peddicord—Hamill.

82. C. W. Everts vs. David M. Landen; judgment for $207.39.

83. Same vs. L. F. Noel; judgment for $207.39.

84. Same vs. E. O. Wonderly; judgment for $207.39. Hamill.

87. William S. Sharpless vs. Hardie L. Warnick; judgment $338.42.

88. Same vs. H. P. Copland; judgment $338.42. Hamill.

89. Same vs. M. B. Barnard; judgment $338.42. Hamill.

90. Same vs. Charles M. Wilson; judgment $338.42. Hamill.

92. First Nat. Bank, Oakland, vs W. A. Harvey; judgment $187.92. Thayer.

93. Same vs. W. H. Ridder; judgment $187.92. Thayer.

94. Same vs. John L. Harvey; judgment $187.92. Thayer.

95. Same vs. Susan Harvey; judgment $187.92.

CRIMINAL APPEARANCES.

1. C. R. Savedge vs. State; tried before the court. Peddicord & Offutt.—Renninger.

2. U. G. Palmer vs. State; dismissed.

CRIMINAL TRIALS.

1. State vs. Kendall Lumber Co.; stet. Renninger—Hamill.

2. State vs. James Tasker; stet. Renninger—Peddicord.

3. State vs. Frank and Jos. Davis; pollution of stream; tried before the court; guilty and fined $25 and costs. Renninger—Offutt.

4. State vs. Edward A. Sanders; continued. Renninger—Offutt.

6. State vs. William H. Dewitt; larceny; tried before the court; plea; sentenced to 2 years in Penitentiary. Renninger—Legge.

7. State vs. John Parks; tried before the court; plea guilty. Renninger—Matthews & Hamill.

8. State vs. Allan Timmerman; rape; tried before the court; guilty; sentenced to 15 years in Penitentiary. Renninger—Thayer.

9. State vs. Taylor Morgan; tried before the court; not guilty. Renninger—Hamill.

10. State vs. John J. Sweeney; selling liquor to minors; tried before the court; not guilty. Renninger—Sincell.

11. Same vs. same; tried before the court; not guilty. Renninger—Sincell.

MILLIONHIRE SOAP MAKER NOT HAPPY WITH NEW WIFE

The Second Mrs. Percy Procter Is In This Country Trying to Locate Her Spouse.

Mr. Percy Procter, formerly of Oakland, where he owned a very fine summer home and where he held his citizenship until about three years ago when he disposed of his property and made a tour of the world, returning to this country less than two years ago, when his wife died very suddenly on board a C. & O. train as it was entering Washington, D. C., and who later married a Russian Baroness, is a very unhappy man and is estranged from his new wife as recounted in the following taken from the Cincinnati Post of last Thursday:

The Russian Baroness, Nadine Von Klifuss, now the wife of Percy Procter, Cincinnati soap millionaire, who Tuesday came to Cincinnati from Paris, France, to contest for 100 shares of Procter & Gamble stock, is in reality fighting for the recovery of her marriage dowry, according to her attorneys, Cormany & Cormany.

Before her marriage to Procter, who is 60, she made an antenuptial contract with him, whereby she agreed to marry the aged millionaire, and under which he agreed to turn over to her 200,000 francs, or $40,000, represented in the value of the stock for which she is contesting in court, the lawyers say.

The Procter-Von Klifuss contest makes an international comedy with the following characters:

The Baroness, proprietor of a castle in France, who is seeking her American millionaire husband, while fighting for the return of the marriage dot which he gave her.

Percy Procter, stockholder in the Procter & Gamble Co., who seeks to get back the dowry which the Baroness claims is hers. He cannot be found and thinks his wife no longer loves and has left him.

Joseph de Wychoff, an English barrister, to whom the Baroness gave her dowry of soap stocks to convert into real money and who now makes legal claim of said stock as security for expenses he incurred.

Twelve Cincinnati lawyers, a judge, notaries, a soap factory and others of the hoi polloi.

The Baroness has brought with her from her castle in France the alleged contract under which she says she agreed to marry the American millionaire.

It states that within a year after the presentment to her by Percy Procter of the 200,000 francs she will marry him. As security for the dowry, in the absence of immediate cash, the soap maker gave to the Baroness 100 shares of Procter & Gamble stock, the lawyers say.

Then they were married. For four months they lived happily in her chateau in Southern France—the castle she inherited from her first husband. The millionaire lived love's young dream over again, and then a purely false alarm made him wake up.

According to the Baroness and her attorney, George W. Cormany, of Cormany & Cormany, Procter is a most deluded man, laboring under a groundless error.

Somewhere in the United States he is now believing that his wife, the Baroness, has left him, when she is right here now eager to renew the first vow and explain to him the mistake he had made.

The late Baron had left to his widow, besides the castle in France, some debts. And when she entered upon her new matrimonial career she desired to clear his debts away and so without the knowledge of her husband, according to her attorney, turned over the stocks he gave her as collateral for his dowry to Barrister de Wychoff, of London, in order that he might convert it into securities that would be salable in Europe.

And shortly after that Procter left France for a little trip on the continent, and feeling lonely the Baroness thought while he was away she would go to St. Petersburg for a visit to her parents.

Well, then, the Cincinnati millionaire returns while his wife is still away, and while he is still trying to figure out what could have happened, there appeared at the castle M. and Mme. Wangeroff, the parents of the Baroness.

And in that way began the international comedy of errors. About the same time the Baroness left her castle in France to visit her parents, they left their home in St. Petersburg to visit her. They must have passed each other on the way.

"Where is our daughter?" ask the parents.

"Where is my wife?" asks the millionaire husband of the Baroness.

More worry is on the way. He hears of the conversion of the dowry of soap stock. He is angry. He believes his wife has left him. He thinks his love-dream has vanished into thin air. He flees from the castle to America.

The Baroness returns.

"And where is my husband?" she asks the servants.

"He has gone," they reply.

The first step by the husband when he reaches Cincinnati is to file suit for the recovery of the stocks which his wife had transferred to Wychoff. He keeps on sending his beautiful young Baroness 600 francs a month, or $120.

And in the meantime—the Baroness hears of the suit for the stock which she says was given her as a dowry. And straightway she communicates with the American Embassy at Berlin, where she was given a letter of introduction to the son of Attorney George W. Cormany, who has offices in New York.

Young Cormany meets her at the Battery, and the same day she leaves for Cincinnati with a letter to Cormany's father.

"Meet a large woman with a blue veil at the Grand Central Depot," was the telegram Cormany got from his son in advance of the coming of the Baroness.

"Are you Mrs. Procter?" asked Cormany, of a tall slim woman as she came out of the depot shed.

"No," she replied frigidly.

Cormany then figured that a "large woman" might also be stout as well as thin, and while he was meditating thus, he looked up and saw another blue veil.

"Are you Mrs. Procter?" he asked.

"Ya wohl, gewiss," replied the voice behind the veil. Mrs. Procter took up quarters at the St. Nicholas and then began a search for Procter with whom the Baroness desires to affect a reconciliation as well as a settlement.

"We could find him nowhere," said Cormany. "His lawyers, Maxwell & Ramsey, would not tell us where he is. So Tuesday Mrs. Procter appeared in court to make her claim in the contest between Procter and Wychoff for the 100 shares of stock."

There are now twelve lawyers engaged in the fight. Cormany & Cormany, representing the Baroness; Cobb, Howard & Bailey, representing Wychoff; Maxwell & Ramsey, for Procter; Warrington, Paxton & Seasongood, for the Procter & Gamble Co., and Kramer & Kramer, for the London brokers of Wychoff.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. MARGARET ELIZABETH MASON.

Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Mason, wife of Mr. George M. Mason and mother of Messrs. Wallace L. and Lee R. Mason, all of Oakland, died at her home on Water street Tuesday morning at ten o'clock of internal cancer, after months of intense and unremitting suffering. The deceased was born at Fellowsville, West Va., and was aged sixty-five years and seven months. Besides her immediate family she is survived by two brothers, Messrs George F. Loughridge, of Oakland, and William Loughridge, of Fellowsville, West Va., and an aunt, Mrs. Sarah Ryland, who resides in the State of Oregon. Mrs. Mason was a member of the M. E. church for more than fifty years, during all of which time she lived a devoutedly christian life. Her funeral will occur from St. Paul's M. E. church this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Thanks.

The ladies of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church desire to express their thanks and appreciation for the liberal patronage accorded the Gibson Family Reunion last Thursday and Friday nights, and also to thank heartily all who took part in the entertainment and helped make it a great success.

Married.

WHITE—SHARTZER—At the Lutheran parsonage by Rev. E. Manges, Wednesday evening last, Miss Etta Shartzer, daughter of Sheriff Andrew Shartzer, and Mr. Harry White, son of Mr. and Mrs. George D. White, were joined in the bonds of wedlock. The young couple are at present residing with the groom's parents and will later go to housekeeping. They have the best wishes of a host of friends for a happy life.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Publr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

Thus far this season anglers agree that the biggest got away.

What a perfect rhyme there is between "April seeds" and "July weeds!"

Hurrah! The Maryland strawberry crop is reported to be one of the best on record. The optimists are not all dead yet.

A Washington bulldog ate up one enumerator's census book. He may find the long list of queries but questionable diet.

To judge from the way aviators have been falling from the sky lately there is at least one product of the day which is coming down.

The prospect of a "Chantecler" drama in this country should arouse great hopes among the musical comedy players known as broilers.

The couple who were married on a Western Maryland train going at the rate of 40 miles an hour evidently wished the matrimonial knot tied fast.

A six-year-old girl in Brooklyn has two heads. It must be something of a strain on her lungs when she gets into an animated conversation with herself.

New York city continues to go up in the air. The plan for a new 38-story building means a notable addition to the finest collection of sky-scrapers in the world.

Some claim that young Sidis, who is elucidating the fourth dimension at Harvard, is after all but a reincarnation of Euclid. Young Sidis himself says to this theory: "What bosh!"

There are a great many swollen fortunes in this country, but investigation will show that very few of them can be traced back to the Belgian hare craze that caught so many hopeful ones a dozen years ago.

Lord Kitchener, England's big general, knows what good soldiering is, and having seen West Point he gives high praise to the military academy as one of the best of training schools. And American history shows his judgment is correct.

In London a police magistrate decides that it is proper when a woman insists on wearing a big hat in the theater to put her out. The issue is out of date in New York. The lady takes her hat off over here, rather than put her neighbor out.

The bacteriological drama to be given by Wisconsin girl students in which bacilli and germs will be personified on the stage goes the Chantecler barnyard drama one better. There will be curiosity to discover which particular microbe will have the leading role.

An English novelist is in this country to study the women. The American woman just now seems to be the most interesting topic of civilized creation. Still, there is no need to be going to outside writers for a full understanding of her. It takes the native American to appreciate her full worth.

Prince Victor Napoleon will, it is announced, renounce his pretension to the throne of France. Prince Victor is about to marry a daughter of the late King Leopold of Belgium and she has a lot of money, so that it will not be necessary for him to go on pretending for the sake of having something to do.

"Fret not thy gizzard!" is the motto that Dr. D. K. Pearson, Chicago's millionaire philanthropist, gives to the world, at the age of ninety. It's a comparatively easy motto to live up to, when you are a retired multi-millionaire, but it's harder when you don't know where the money is coming from to pay the rent.

There is a "butter war" out in Elgin, Ill., the center of a large dairy industry. One faction is trying to hold up prices to a certain rate and another crowd wants the figure one cent a pound lower. Meanwhile the "ultimate consumer" is disregarded. He is expected to pay whatever the other fellows decide upon. That seems to be the way the law of supply and demand works with trusts and combinations running things.

Herr Wilhelm Voight added to the gaiety of nations when he personated a German army officer and "held up" the Mayor of Koepenick, although the imperial authorities, who do not relish that sort of humor, sent him to prison for his indiscretion. And now he finds that the "joke" has a serious side. Uncle Sam's laws forbid the admission of immigrants with a prison record, and Herr Voight, who wanted to locate here, has been deported as an objectionable alien. The laugh at present seems to be on the man who made merry at the expense of the German army.

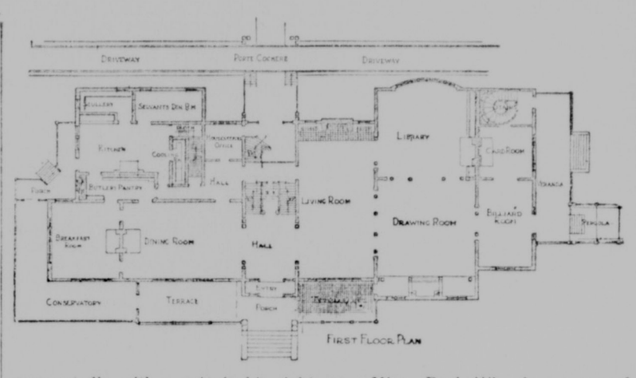
An announcement from the British foreign office is to the effect that China has granted a concession under the terms of which an American-English syndicate will finance the Chin-Chow and Aigun railroad. This line will run through a part of Manchuria, and the concession represents the successful negotiations with which our government has been connected. In fact it indicates acquiescence in the propositions of Secretary of State Knox looking to the fair recognition of American interests in that quarter.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.



First Floor Plan

CHAPTER I.

I Take a Country House.

This is the story of how a middle-aged spinster lost her mind, deserted her domestic gods in the city, took a furnished house for the summer out of town, and found herself involved in one of those mysterious crimes that keep our newspapers and detective agencies happy and prosperous. For 20 years I had been perfectly comfortable; for 20 years I had had the window-boxes filled in the spring, the carpets lifted, the awnings put up and the furniture covered with brown linen; for as many summers I had said good-by to my friends, and, after watching their perspiring hegira, had settled down to a delicious quiet in town, where the mail comes three times a day, and the water supply does not depend on a tank on the roof.

And then—the madness seized me. When I look back over the months I spent in Sunnyside, I wonder that I survived at all. As it is, I show the wear and tear of my harrowing experiences. I have turned very gray—Liddy reminded me of it only yesterday by saying that a little bluing in the rinse water would make my hair silvery instead of a yellow white. I hate to be reminded of unpleasant things and I snapped her off.

"No," I said sharply, "I'm not going to use bluing at my time of life, or starch, either."

Liddy's nerves are gone, she says, since that awful summer, but she has enough left, goodness knows! And when she begins to go around with a lump in her throat, all I have to do is to threaten to return to Sunnyside, and she is frightened into a semblance of cheerfulness—from which you may judge that the summer there was anything but a success.

The newspaper accounts have been so garbled and incomplete—one of them mentioned me but once, and then only as the tenant at the time the thing happened—that I feel it my due to tell what I know. Mr. Jamieson, the detective, said himself he could never have done without me, although he gave me little enough credit, in print.

I shall have to go back several years—13, to be exact—to start my story. At that time my brother died, leaving me his two children, Halsey was 11 then and Gertrude was seven. When Halsey had finished his electrical course and Gertrude her boarding school both came home to stay. The winter Gertrude came out was nothing but a succession of sitting up late at night to bring her home from things, taking her to the dressmakers between naps the next day, and discouraging ineligible youths with either more money than brains or more brains than money. By spring I was quite tractable. So when Halsey suggested camping in the Adirondacks and Gertrude wanted Bar Harbor, we compromised on a good country house with links near, within motor distance of town and telephone distance of the doctor. That was how we went to Sunnyside.

We went out to inspect the property, and it seemed to deserve its name. Its cheerful appearance gave no indication whatever of anything out of the ordinary. Only one thing seemed unusual to me: The housekeeper, who had been left in charge, had moved from the house to the gardener's lodge a few days before. As the lodge was far enough away from the house, it seemed to me that either fire or thieves could complete their work of destruction undisturbed. The property was an extensive one; the house on the top of a hill, which sloped away in great stretches of green lawn and clipped hedges, to the road, and across the valley, perhaps a couple of miles away, was the Greenwood Club house. Gertrude and Halsey were infatuated.

The property was owned by Paul Armstrong, the president of the Traders' bank, who at the time we took the house was in the west with his wife and daughter, and a Dr. Walker, the Armstrong family physician. Halsey knew Louise Armstrong—had been rather attentive to her the winter before, but as Halsey was always attentive to somebody, I had not thought of it seriously, although she was a charming girl. I knew of Mr. Armstrong only through his connection with the bank, where the children's money was largely invested, and through an ugly story about the son, Arnold Armstrong, who was reported to have forged his father's name for a considerable amount to some bank paper. However, the story had had no interest for me.

I cleared Halsey and Gertrude away to a house party, and moved out to Sunnyside the first of May.

The first night passed quietly enough. I have always been grateful for that one night's peace; it shows what the country might be under favorable circumstances. Never after that night did I put my head on my pillow with any assurance how long it would be there; or on my shoulders, for that matter.

On the following morning Liddy and Mrs. Ralston, my own housekeeper, had a difference of opinion, and Mrs. Ralston left on the 11 train. Just after luncheon, Burke, the butler, was taken unexpectedly with a pain in his right side, much worse when I was within hearing distance, and by afternoon he was started cityward. That night the cook's sister had a baby—the cook, seeing indecision in my face, made it twins on second thought—and, to be short, by noon the next day the household staff was down to Liddy and myself. And this in a house with 22 rooms and five baths!

Liddy wanted to go back to the city at once, but the milkboy said that Thomas Johnson, the Armstrongs' colored butler, was working as a waiter at the Greenwood club and might come back. I have the usual scruples about coercing people's servants away, but few of us have any conscience regarding institutions or corporations—witness the way we beat railroads and street car companies when we can—so I called up the club, and about eight o'clock Thomas Johnson came to see me. Poor Thomas!

Well, it ended by my engaging Thomas on the spot, at outrageous wages, and with permission to sleep in the gardener's lodge, empty since the house was rented. The old man—he was white-haired and a little stooped, but with an immense idea of his personal dignity—gave me his reasons hesitatingly.

"I ain't sayin' nothing', Mis' Innes," he said, his hand on the door-knob, "but there's been goin's-on here this las' few months as ain't natchal. 'Tain't one thing an' 'taint another—it's jest a door squealin' here, an' a winder closing there, but when doors an' winders gets to cuttin' up capers and there's nobody nigh 'em, it's time Thomas Johnson sleeps somewhar's else."

That Completed Our Demoralization.

Liddy, who seemed to be never more than ten feet away from me that night, and was afraid of her shadow in that great barn of a place, screamed a little, and turned a yellow-green. But I am not easily alarmed.

It was entirely in vain I represented to Thomas that we were alone, and that he would have to stay in the house that night. He was politely firm, but he would come over early the next morning, and if I gave him a key, he would come in time to get some sort of breakfast. I stood on the huge veranda and watched him shuffle along down the shadowy drive with mingled feelings—irritation at his cowardice and thankfulness at getting him at all. I am not ashamed to say that I double-locked the hall door when I went in.

"You can lock up the rest of the house and go to bed, Liddy," I said severely. "You give me the creeps standing there. A woman of your age ought to have better sense." It usually braces Liddy to mention her age; she owns to 40—which is absurd. Her mother cooked for my grandfather, and Liddy must be at least as old as I. But that night she refused to brace.

"You're not going to ask me to lock up, Miss Rachel!" she quavered. "Why, there's a dozen French windows in the drawing room and the billiard room wing, and every one opens on a porch. And Mary Anne said that last night there was a man standing by the stable when she locked the kitchen door."

"Mary Anne was a fool," I said sternly. "If there had been a man there she would have had him in the kitchen and been feeding him what was left from dinner, inside of an hour, from force of habit. Now don't be ridiculous. Lock up the house and go to bed. I am going to read."

But Liddy set her lips tight and stood still.

"I'm not going to bed," she said. "I am going to pack up, and to-morrow I am going to leave."

"You'll do nothing of the sort," I snapped. Liddy and I often desire to part company, but never at the same time. "If you are afraid, I will go with you, but for goodness' sake don't try to hide behind me."

The house was a typical summer residence on an extensive scale. Wherever possible, on the first floor, the architect had done away with partitions, using arches and columns instead. The effect was cool and spacious, but scarcely cozy. As Liddy and I went from one window to another, our voices echoed back at us uncomfortably. There was plenty of light—the electric plant down in the village supplied us—but there were long vistas of polished floor, and mirrors which reflected us from unexpected corners, until I felt some of Liddy's foolishness communicate itself to me.

The house was very long, a rectangle in general form, with the main entrance in the center of the long side. The brick-paved entry opened into a short hall, to the right of which, separated only by a row of pillars, was a huge living room. Beyond that was the drawing room, and in the end the billiard room. Off the billiard room, in the extreme right wing, was a den, or cardroom, with a small hall opening on the east veranda, and from there went up a narrow circular staircase.

Liddy and I got as far as the cardroom and turned on all the lights. I tried the small entry door there, which opened on the veranda, and examined the windows. Everything was secure, and Liddy, a little less nervous now, had just pointed out to me the disgraceful dusty condition of the hard-wood floor, when suddenly the lights went out. We waited a moment; I think Liddy was stunned with fright or she would have screamed. And then I clutched her by the arm and pointed to one of the windows opening on the porch. The sudden change threw the window into relief, an oblong of grayish light, and showed us a figure standing close, peering in. As I looked it darted across the veranda and out of sight in the darkness.

CHAPTER II.

A Link Cuff-Button.

Liddy's knees seemed to give away under her. Without a sound she sank down, leaving me staring at the window in petrified amazement. Liddy began to moan under her breath, and in my excitement I reached down and shook her.

"Stop it," I whispered. "It's only a woman—maybe a maid of the Armstrongs'. Get up and help me find the door." She groaned again. "Very well," I said, "then I'll have to leave you here. I'm going."

She moved at that, and, holding to my sleeve, we felt our way, with numerous collisions, to the billiard-room, and from there to the drawing-room. The lights came on then, and, with the long French windows unshuttered, I had a creepy feeling that each one sheltered a peering face. In fact, in the light of what happened afterward, I am pretty certain we were under surveillance during the entire ghostly evening. We hurried over the rest of the locking-up and got upstairs as quickly as we could. I left the lights all on, and our footsteps echoed cavernously. Liddy had a stiff neck the next morning, from looking back over her shoulder, and she refused to go to bed.

"Let me stay in your dressing room, Miss Rachel," she begged. "If you don't I'll sit in the hall outside the door. I'm not going to be murdered with my eyes shut."

It was 11 o'clock when I finally prepared for bed. In spite of my assumption of indifference, I locked the door into the hall, and finding the transom did not catch, I put a chair cautiously before the door—it was not necessary to rouse Liddy—and climbing up put on the ledge of the transom a small dressing mirror, so that any movement of the frame would send it crashing down. Then, secure in my precautions I went to bed.

I did not go to sleep at once. Liddy disturbed me just as I was growing drowsy, by coming in and peering under the bed. She was afraid to speak, however, because of her previous snubbing, and went back, stopping in the doorway to sigh dismally.

Somewhere down-stairs a clock with a chime sang away the hours—eleven-thirty, forty-five, twelve. And then the lights went out to stay. The Casanova Electric Company shuts up shop and goes home to bed at midnight, when one has a party, I believe it is customary to fee the company, which will drink hot coffee and keep awake a couple of hours longer. But the lights were gone for good that night. Liddy had gone to sleep, as I knew she would. She was a very unreliable person; always awake and ready to talk when she wasn't wanted and dozing off to sleep when she was. I called her once or twice, the only result being an explosive snore that threatened her very windpipe—then I got up and lighted a bedroom candle.

My bedroom and dressing room were above the big living room on the first floor. On the second floor a long corridor ran the length of the house, with rooms opening from both sides. In the wings were small corridors crossing the main one—the plan was simplicity itself. And just as I got back into bed, I heard a sound from the east wing, apparently, that made me stop, frozen, with one bedroom slipper half off, and listen. It was a rattling metallic sound, and it reverberated along the empty halls like the crash of doom. It was for all the world as if something heavy, perhaps a piece of steel, had rolled clattering and jangling down the hardwood stairs leading to the card-room.

In the silence that followed Liddy stirred and snored again. I was exasperated; first she kept me awake by silly alarms, then when she was needed she slept like Joe Jefferson, or Rip—they are always the same to me. I went in and aroused her, and I give her credit for being wide awake the minute I spoke.

"Get up," I said, "If you don't want to be murdered in your bed."

"Where? How?" she yelled vociferously, and jumped up.

"There's somebody in the house," I said. "Get up. We'll have to go to the telephone."

"Not out in the hall!" she gasped; "Oh, Miss Rachel, not out in the hall!" trying to hold me back. But I am a large woman and Liddy is small. We got to the door, somehow, and Liddy held a brass andiron, which it was all she could do to lift, let alone brain anybody with. I listened, and, hearing nothing, opened the door a little and peered into the hall. It was a black void, full of terrible suggestion, and my candle only emphasized the gloom. Liddy squealed and drew me back again, and as the door slammed, the mirror I had put on the transom came down and hit her on the head. That completed our demoralization. It was some time before I could persuade her she had not been attacked from behind by a burglar, and when she found the mirror smashed on the floor she wasn't much better.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Charity Thinketh No Evil

By REV. W. A. CRAWFORD-FROST

Pastor of Protestant Episcopal Church of Redemption, Locust Point, Md.

It is commonly supposed that when an innocent man is accused of wrongdoing the consciousness of his innocence supports him and is a great comfort to him, so much so that the indignity offered his honor and reputation cannot hurt his feelings, because he is buoyed up by his consciousness of rectitude. I do not believe this. I cannot help thinking that an innocent man accused of a crime suffers far more keenly from the imputation than a guilty man does. A man who has really committed a crime and is arrested for it suffers fear of punishment, but he has a feeling deep down in his heart that he is getting what he deserves, and, besides, a man who will commit a crime is generally more careless of what people think about him than is the man whose whole life has been scrupulous, conscientious, gentle and harmless, who has always tried to do right and to avoid the slightest injury to his neighbor in body or in mind. When a man of this kind is suddenly held up to the public as a possible murderer, when his every action for weeks has been misrepresented and utterly gratuitous falsehoods have been invented—when, I say, a man of this character is subjected to these acts of persecution, it is nothing short of tragic. Injustice is always hard to bear, and this is the worst kind, for there seems to be no redress for it.

From a journalistic standpoint the fault does not often lie with the reporters. They have to go where they are sent and do what they are told, and the majority of them are intelligent and honorable men. The chief trouble comes from irresponsible correspondents, who make up sensational stories and telegraph them entirely for the money they make out of it.

Underlying much of this terrible injustice is a fallacy, namely, that the people have a right to know. The general public has no right to know every individual's private affairs. If a crime has been committed the people have a right to know only what facts are brought out at a due and proper trial. This idea that the police, or any other authorities, have a right to publish their theories and suspicions, no matter how many honorable men and women they may dishonor, how many hearts they may break and how many lives they may ruin by their ignorant or malicious impudence is monstrous, and the intelligence of the American people should be able to devise some way of punishing such offenders.

It is the business of a detective to have suspicions, but it is his duty to keep his suspicions to himself. When he has facts sufficient to justify him let him make his arrest, and then let the talking come through the courts. He has no right to open his mouth about his suspicions, and any detective who does so, or the head of any police force who does so, and thereby besmirches the reputation of innocent persons, should certainly be removed from his office.

The real root of the matter is this: People are too ready to think evil, too apt to attribute the worst motive. As the people are, so must the press be, for the highest and purest newspaper in the land can only keep a certain distance above its constituency. It must give the news that its readers desire, or it will soon have no readers.

The persons who are most ready to suspect others of impropriety are the ones who are themselves improper. The freer we are from evil ourselves the less inclined will we be to think evil of others.

The New Creation.

What could we not accomplish if only we might start life over again! Jesus worked a miracle that made this possible for a paralytic, whose life was wrecked and held in bondage by sin as well as by disease. Jesus created in him both physical and spiritual strength, and sent him on his way a new man. The afflicted man was given a chance to begin life all over again, no longer poor and weak, but rich and strong. And Jesus did exactly the same thing for that sin-wrecked publican Matthew, when he called him out of a paralyzed life of getting into the empowered life of giving. Matthew began life over again; and, as a result, one of the four priceless records of Jesus' own life bears that publican's name. We, too, may start life over again. That is exactly the offer that Jesus makes to every one who will follow him.

Blessed Are the Meek.

"Meekness is patience in the reception of injuries. Meekness produces peace. Meekness is the reception of injuries with a belief that God will vindicate us. 'Vengeance is mine, I will repay, said the Lord.' Meekness is proof of true greatness of soul. It comes from a heart too great to be moved by little insults. It looks upon those who offer them with pity. Meekness is neither meanness nor a surrender of right nor cowardice; but it is the opposite of sudden anger, of malice, of long harbored vengeance. Christ insisted on his right (John 18:23) and Paul asserted his (Acts 16:37) and yet Christ was the model of meekness. And no man endured more and more patiently than Paul."

Train up a child in the way you should have gone yourself.—Spurgeon.

CAPTAIN BILL IN MEXICO

by ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE COPYRIGHT BY PEARSON PUB. CO.

A CHAPTER FROM THE MEMOIRS OF CAPTAIN BILL McDONALD OF TEXAS ☆ ☆ ☆

CAPTAIN BILL stayed for a considerable time in the Mexican capital, for his traveling companion, the bank director, fell very ill, and the Ranger captain turned nurse to pull him through. He became a well-known figure in the city, being often pointed out as the man who had taken a squad of police in charge; who was going to bring the Rangers down to whip the Guatemalans, and whose skill with the six-shooter was nothing short of miraculous. This last belief was in some manner sustained one day when he visited a shooting gallery in company with an American dentist, who had taken pleasure in showing him the sights of the quaint old town.

"Captain, suppose you shoot out those targets as rapidly as you can, and see how many you'll miss," he said, when they were inside.

Without hesitation McDonald drew his revolver and opened a fusillade, hitting a target at each shot. Two Mexicans who were practising in the gallery made a wild break for the open air and safety. Soldiers and police came running in excitement and confusion to discover the cause. It was all over by this time and the officers, seeing only Captain Bill and the dentist, stood gaping, waiting an explanation.

"It is nothing," said the dentist in Spanish; "my friend the captain was only practising a little to keep his hand in."

As the century drew near its end a wave of disorder and crime that amounted to an inundation swept over the eastern and southeastern portion of Texas. Murders, lynchings, mobs and rumors of mobs were reported daily.

The Reece-Townsend feud in Colorado county gave the state no end of trouble. The Reece and Townsend families killed one another in the regulation way, when good opportunities offered. They had a fashion of gathering in the streets of Columbus, the county seat, for their demonstrations and sometimes on a field day like this they killed members of other families, by mistake. But errors of this sort were not allowed to interfere with the central idea of the feud; they apologized, and went on killing one another, just the same.

It was when a boy who belonged to neither faction was shot and killed at one of these reunions that Capt. Bill McDonald and his Rangers were ordered to Columbus to put down what seemed about to become a general war.

Captain Bill failed to receive the order in time to get his men the same day, but did not wait. He wired two to follow him on the first train, and set out for Columbus alone. Arriving on the streets of Columbus, he saw detachments of armed men gathered here and there—the streets being otherwise deserted. He set out at once for the home of District Judge Kennon, to whom he had been ordered to report. After the exchange of greetings, McDonald said:

"We haven't much time, judge, from appearances. I saw a lot of armed men as I came along and it looks like we're going to have war."

"You are right," Judge Kennon said; "we are expecting it any minute. Where are your men and how many have you?"

"None, judge. I came alone, but I expect two in the morning."

"In the morning! Why, man, by that time the fight will be over! And what can you do with two men here? Nothing less than 25 or 30 will help this case."

"Judge," said Captain Bill, in his deliberate way, "I believe I can stop this thing if you will come down to the courthouse with me. Anyhow, it's my duty to try; and we'd better be getting over there now, judge, for this ain't going to wait long. If we can't stop it, we can see a mighty good fight, anyhow."

They set out together. The courthouse in Columbus stands in the middle of a big square, with a street on each of its four sides. On one corner of the square was gathered the Reece faction and near another corner the Townsend crowd had assembled. Both were fully armed. They were making no active demonstratons as yet, but were evidently organizing for business. It was a still, sunny day, and both crowds were in easy calling distance of the courthouse.

"Now, judge," said Captain Bill, when they had arrived at the courthouse, "who is your sheriff and where is he?"

"His name is Burford, J. C. Burford, and he's over there with the Townsend crowd. He belongs to that faction."

Captain Bill stepped to the window and called, in the strong, official manner of a witness summons: "J. C. Burford," repeated three times.

There was a movement in the Townsend crowd and a man crossed over and ascended the courthouse stair. McDonald introduced himself, as the sheriff entered, and added:

"Now, Burford, why don't you stop this row? Looks as if we're going to have a killing match here, right away."

"Captain, I can't. I'm powerless to do anything with these men. If I undertake to disarm them it will start a fight that nobody can stop."

"Well, Burford, if you'll do as I tell you, I'll stop it in 30 minutes or I'll resign my job as Ranger."

"All right, captain, I'll do whatever you say," assented Burford.

"Then call your crowd over here. I want to talk to them."

Sheriff Burford stepped to the window and signed to the Townsend faction. They trooped over and ascended the courthouse stair, carrying their guns.

"Mr. Burford," said McDonald, "which are your regular deputies here?"

The sheriff indicated his three deputy officers. Captain Bill motioned them to stand apart from the others.

"Now, sheriff," he said, "disarm the rest of these men."

The officer looked a little bewildered.

"I don't know about—" he began.

"Didn't you agree to do what I ordered?" Then, to Kennon—"Didn't he, judge?"

The judge nodded. The sheriff still hesitated.

"Never mind," said McDonald, "I'll do it myself. Here, boys," he went on in his mild, friendly drawl, "come in here and stack your guns in this wardrobe. It's a good safe place for them. They won't be likely to go off and hurt anybody in there."

What was it about the manner of the man that made men obey? Those aroused, bloodthirsty Texans, full of an old, deep hatred and the spirit of revenge, marched in and put away their guns at his direction, with scarcely a word of dissent.

He went out of the courthouse and crossed the street to where the Reece crowd was gathered. He carried his Winchester and the faction watched him curiously as he approached.

"I guess you boys are going to war, ain't you?" he said, cheerfully, as he came nearer.

Nobody replied and Captain Bill came up close.

"Boys," he said, "your guns are all right up till now, but the governor has sent me down here to stop this trouble and I want you-all to help me."

"How can we help you?" asked one of the Reece faction.

"Like them boys did over yonder, just now—by giving up your guns. Then by going quietly home."

There was a little murmur of dissent, and one big, husky fellow said:

"Well, you'll play hell getting my gun!"

In less than an instant a Winchester was under his nose and Captain Bill was crisply saying:

"I will, hey? Well, I'll just put you in jail, anyway, to show you how easy it is to do that."

The big fellow gave a great jump and nearly fell over with surprise and fright. His gun dropped as if it had been hot. The leader of the Reece faction spoke up quickly:

"Boys' he is right," he said. "The gov'nor sent him and he's obeying orders. He has no interest in one side or the other."

McDonald marched the Reeces over to a store nearby, where they laid down their guns and the clerk was ordered to take charge of them. The big man under arrest promised all manner of things if Captain Bill would let him go. He was set free, with a warning. Peace now seemed to be restored and in the general gratitude of the community refreshments and invitations were tendered to Captain Bill from both sides. He decided, however, to remain on duty during the rest of the day and night. His two men arrived next morning, but everything was still quiet and there appeared no sign of a renewal of hostilities. The Reece-Townsend trouble, for the time, at least, was over.

Captain McDonald was still at Columbus when he received a telegram ordering him to report at once to Assistant Attorney General Morris and the local officials at Athens, Henderson county, Texas, for the purpose of investigating the lynching of three respectable citizens—a father and two sons, named Humphrey—in a timbered tract between Trinity river and Cedar Creek, known as the Trans-cedar bottoms.

The Humphreys were honest, sturdy men—fearless and open in their dealings. They were a menace to a gang who made moonshine whisky, stole whatever they could lay hands on and would swear a man's life away for a lean hog. It was necessary for the welfare of the neighborhood that the Humphreys be disposed of, and they were taken by a mob one night and hanged—three of them to one tree—they having been placed upon horses and the horses driven from under them. Then, when the ropes had proven too long and the feet of one of the three Humphreys had touched the ground, the mob had bent back the legs of the victims at the knee and tied the feet upward to the hands, so that the Humphreys might swing clear.

Bill McDonald knew something of the Trans-cedar country and the character of its settlement, for he had passed his youth and his early manhood at Henderson and at Mineola, both within 75 miles of that very district. He set out by first train and arriving at Athens he learned the details of the ghastly crime which already, through the telegraphed reports, had stirred the entire state. He learned that the lynching had taken place about 25 miles from Athens, near a little postoffice named Aley, and he hurried to that place without delay, taking with him one Guy Green, an Athens lawyer, familiar with the neighborhood. With Green, the Rangers went straight to the scene of the murder and made such examination of the tracks and various clues as remained. Two days had passed since the crime and many of the signs had been obliterated. Still there was enough for a man with the faculties of Captain Bill. He identified no less than four trails—one, as he decided, made by five horses, another by three, a third by two, and a fourth the track of a single horse. The trails wound in and out, crossed and recrossed, and were evidently made with the idea of baffling pursuit. Captain McDonald did not consider them especially difficult, and having satisfied himself that they could be followed, he went on to Aley, for it was near nightfall.

At Aley he joined Assistant Attorney General Ned Morris, District Attorney Jerry Cook and others who had come out from Athens to aid the investigation.

He discussed the case with the officials and learned that one Joe Wilkerson was suspected as having been connected with the murder, it being well known that Wilkerson had pursued the Humphreys and bemeaned them, finally accusing them of stealing hogs, and swearing to some meat which the Humphreys had earned by digging wells. In the evidence it had developed that the Wilkerson hogs, though mortgaged by him, had in reality been sold, and that he had thus attempted to evade the consequences of this illegal act by saddling the Humphreys with a still heavier crime. The Humphreys had been cleared, but Wilkerson had never ceased to vilify them. Later one of the Humphrey boys, George, had been set upon by some of the Wilkerson crowd and in defending himself had killed, with a knife, one of his assailants. The courts—there were honest courts in Athens—had cleared him, but in the Trans-cedar tribunal he had been doomed. These facts constituted about all the foundation of known motive upon which McDonald would have to build his evidence. It was while he was discussing these things with the attorney on the night of his arrival that a man rode up to the gate just outside and called his name.

Captain Bill rose, but the others protested, declaring that it might be a plot to shoot him in the dark. However, he went, six-shooter in hand, and sticking it in the face of the caller, demanded his business. The man protested that he meant no harm, but had come from one Buck Holley, who lived two miles down the road, and said he knew Captain McDonald and wanted to see him. The Ranger captain reflected a minute.

"I don't know any Buck Holley," he said. "I knew a scoundrel by the name of Bill Holley some years ago up in the Panhandle and if that is who it is I don't want to see him. I judge you fellows have got a gang down the road there to shoot me from ambush. Who are you, anyway?"

The man said his name was Monasco; that he was staying at Holley's and that he had a brother named Bill Monasco, in Amarillo.

"I know Bill Monasco," McDonald said, "and he has a brother that was sent to the penitentiary. Is that you?"

The visitor acknowledged that he was the man—that he had been recently released.

"Well," said McDonald, "that's about the kind of a crowd I would expect to find Bill Holley running with, and you can tell this Buck Holley, as you call him, that I suspect him of being connected with this mob and that I used to make him stand hitched in the Panhandle, and that I'm going to do the same here."

Monasco said "Good night," and Captain McDonald never saw him again. Somewhat later, when he met Bill Holley, he said:

"Look here, Bill, I'm afraid your partner, Monasco, didn't tell you the message I sent the night I came. I said I didn't know Buck Holley, but that I knew a sorry, bulldozing scoundrel by the name of Bill Holley, and that I supposed he was down the road there to take a shot at me from ambush. You weren't in this lynching mob, I reckon, but they're your friends, and you'd help 'em if you could. Now, Bill, you've been courting a funeral a good while, and if you try any of your nonsense here, you'll win out."

The Ranger captain was out early the morning after his arrival in Aley, and on the trail. The tracks of the five horses were followed to the houses of Joe Wilkerson and his son Brooks and to the homes of John and Arthur Greenhaw. In Joe Wilkerson's lot he found a part of a well-rope, the remainder of which had been cut away. It matched precisely with the rope used to hang the Humphreys—the freshly cut ends being the same on both. The Wilkersons and one of the Greenhaws were taken into custody forthwith and other arrests followed as the criminals were tracked home.

The testimony brought out the facts that the Humphreys had known of an illicit still run by two men—one Polk Weeks and a man named Johns. Also that they had known of John Greenhaw stealing cattle and hogs, and that John Greenhaw had once drawn a gun on the elder Humphrey, who had promptly taken it away from him, instead of killing him with it and rendering the community a service. These things, added to the other provocations already named, had made the Humphreys sufficiently unpopular in a neighborhood like the Trans-cedar bottoms to warrant their being hung to a limb, trussed up to swing clear of the ground.

Guilty knowledge of the crime actually killed a man named Eli Sparks, whose conscience tortured him day and night to the point of giving testimony, yet whose fears upon the witness stand caused him to withhold the truth. He was a large, red-faced man, evidently greatly excited when questioned and concealing more than he told. Soon after his first examination he met Captain McDonald and offered to testify again, saying that he had been too frightened to tell the truth the first time, but thought he could do better now. The Ranger captain scrutinized him keenly and made the prophecy that Eli Sparks would not live 30 days, unless he got rid of the load on his conscience. He died in just half that time; not, however, until he had fully confessed.

The efforts of the men believed to be concerned as principals in the crime, to establish their innocence were sometimes wary, sometimes crudely absurd and always fruitless. The mesh of fact that was weaving and linking itself about them became daily more tightly woven, more impossible to tear away. Knowing themselves closely watched, they dared not attempt flight. To do so would be to confess guilt and capture would be well-nigh certain. Like Ahab, having compassed the death of a neighbor, they "lay in sackcloth and went softly." Finally it came to pass that three of these "children of Belial," turned state's evidence—that is, they confessed fully, sacrificing their comrades, under the law, to save themselves. Eleven men, including these three, were brought to trial.

In the final trial John and Arthur Greenhaw and Polk Weeks, who were not only murderers but cowardly traitors, were given their freedom in exchange for their evidence that sent their eight associates to the penitentiary for life.

Polk Weeks, in giving his evidence, appeared much disturbed, but confessed how he had climbed the tree and tied the ropes, and tied them too long, making it necessary for the legs of the Humphreys to be bent upward, to clear the ground. John Greenhaw corroborated this, but grinned as he told it, remembering how amusing it had been. He did not live to enjoy his freedom, for he was shot dead soon after his liberation, by Willie Humphrey, son of one of the younger Humphreys, and no punishment followed the righteous act.

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — MRS. EMMA IMSE, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit Treated. Free trial. Cases where other remedies have failed, specially desired. Give particulars. Dr. B. G. CONTRELL, Suite 996, 400 W. 23d St., New York.

SURELY NO PLACE FOR HER

In the Presence of Such Magic There Seemed But One Thing for Maid to Do.

Prof. Percival Lowell, the eminent Martian astronomer, said in a recent interview in New York:

"The Martian canals are not Panama canals. The word 'canals,' you know, really means 'lines.' It shouldn't be taken literally, as the servant girl in Boston took the parlor magic.

"An amateur magician in a Beacon street house was going through his tricks while a maid passed in and out with refreshments.

"The magician was reading letters placed under a rug as the maid brought in a tray of lemon ices.

"'What is this?' a spectator asked.

"'That is B,' the magician answered; and, sure enough, his answer was correct.

"The maid looked with astonishment at the letter which had been hidden under the thick rug. She turned her gaze on the handsome young magician who had read it. Then, setting down her tray of ices, she hid her rosy face in her hands and ran out of the room.

"'What's the good o' me clothes?' she cried."

An Unusual Attribute.

Little Johnnie, who cannot pronounce S, has been frightened into keeping out of the attic by tales told by his nurse of a dreadful ghost that lives in the dim recesses under the eaves. The other day he was overheard to say confidentially to a small friend:

"We've got an old gho't up in our attic!"

To which his friend, much interested, responded: "Do he butt?"

Easy for Him.

Tommy's Mother—Why aren't you a good boy, like Willie Bjones?

Tommy—Huh! It's easy enough for him to be good; he's sick most of the time.—Philadelphia Record.

HARD ON CHILDREN.
When Teacher Has Coffee Habit.

"Best is best, and best will ever live." When a person feels this way about Postum they are glad to give testimony for the benefit of others.

A school teacher down in Miss. says: "I had been a coffee drinker since my childhood, and the last few years it had injured me seriously.

"One cup of coffee taken at breakfast would cause me to become so nervous that I could scarcely go through with the day's duties, and this nervousness was often accompanied by deep depression of spirits and heart palpitation.

"I am a teacher by profession, and when under the influence of coffee had to struggle against crossness when in the school room.

"When talking this over with my physician, he suggested that I try Postum, so I purchased a package and made it carefully according to directions; found it excellent of flavor, and nourishing.

"In a short time I noticed very gratifying effects. My nervousness disappeared, I was not irritated by my pupils, life seemed full of sunshine, and my heart troubled me no longer.

"I attribute my change in health and spirits to Postum alone."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months ..... .75
One copy three months ..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 16, 1910.

IT IS clear that Mr. Roosevelt was hailed as the champion of the masses against the classes, of the poor against the rich. To thousands and tens of thousands in Europe this American typifies what they vaguely call the social revolution. In him they think they hear the voice of the struggling common man uttering protests and warnings to the wealthy. That is the final secret of the great stir of popular admiration for Roosevelt in Europe. He looks there a large-limbed Goth ready to strike down every form of privilege.

A WOMAN'S MIND.

Hugo Munsterberg makes the claim that by some psychological method he can read a woman's mind. That is indeed wonderful. The male part of the population will have to be shown before giving credence to this remarkable claim, and the more important part of the population will scoff at the great discoverer's conceit. This accomplishment of Mr. Munsterberg would be more prodigious than the invention of wireless telegraphy or the prevailing style in hats.

Mr. Munsterberg proposes to read something which since the harvesting of the first apple has been illegible to the profoundest scholars and unintelligible to mere men. Reading the Rosetta stone, the bricks of Babylon and the clay tablets of Nineveh has been considered child's play in comparison with the achievement proclaimed by this savant.

If Mr. Munsterberg can really and truly read a woman's mind, what moments of ecstacy must be his! For most men even the vain attempt to read her eyes gives thrills, but what joy can compare with the reading of a mind which so many churlish philosophers have considered blank. Think of the charming secrets which Mr. Munsterberg may pierce! Think of the delight of reading inmost thoughts all tangled and festooned with ribbons, laces, mock flowers, willow plumes and aigrettes and other dainty mysteries! Think of the marvel of penetrating to a woman's honest thoughts about her best friend's taste in hats, her style in dress and the neighbors' children!

APPLYING THE MEASURE.

If the real measure of statesmanship is to be taken by applying the rule of thumb to small appropriations gained for the particular constituency of a representative, then we are falling far behind the ideals of the founders of the republic. Every now and then a man announces his candidacy to succeed himself in legislative office and at once the question arises: What is this man's record?

Too often, through what must be political short-sightedness, the discussion resolves itself into one of what particular material benefits has this member of a law-making body been able to obtain for his immediate locality, and the broad purpose of his choice as the representative of the whole people of state or nation is lost to view. Obviously it is a part of the duty of a congressman or of a state legislator to look out for the interests of his constituents. He would be a pretty poor sort of a representative if he did not give a serious regard to that. But his efficiency as a law maker is in no wise to be determined by the net result of appropriations he has been able to force or cajole for the folks back home.

In Congress he must, to deserve being returned, have taken a broad view of questions of national importance, have been vigorous in espousing the causes of political and economic righteousness. How he stood, for example, on the tariff, on the railroad bill; how he regards the great principle of ship subsidies; what his attitude was toward the postal savings banks measure—these comprise the sort of questions by which he should properly be judged. That he used his influence to have a good man named for postmaster of Squash Corners ought to go without saying.

There is a danger that in insisting too much upon the money-pulling power of a representative for local projects we forget the real purpose for which he is elected. Under our organic law he is chosen by a geographical unit, not so much to represent that unit to its own ends as to be its voice in the broad gauged government of the whole. It is therefore by laying too much insistence upon results in his particular district that there is danger of weakening him in his efforts toward doing his full duty to the nation. We make him, in other words, a magnified ward heeler, a nauseating growth on the body politic that the founders of the country never contemplated.—Baltimore American.

GOVERNOR CROTHERS FOR CROTHERS.

Governor Crothers had another chance to show his sincerity and devotion to the public welfare and failed to make good. His friends claimed that his move in placing Dr. Hering on the Utilities Commission and appointing Clagett Comptroller, was for the purpose of getting control of the Board of Public Works to enable him to make some changes in the interest of better service. For instance, Col. Schley, the State Tax Commissioner, gives little attention to that office, seldom even taking the trouble to go to Annapolis. Moreover, he is charged by responsible people with favoring some of the largest corporations by assessing them for less than they ought to be. The Governor had repeatedly said that all officials should give personal attention to their work. Here was a chance to make good his professions. Did he do it? Oh, no! Col. Schley was seen and after promising to join the Crothers machine was unanimously re-appointed! This case was widely discussed and it affords a fine example of what can be expected from Governor Crothers when he must choose between serving himself or serving the people.

WORK WELL DONE.

In accordance with an act of Assembly passed last winter the work of the highway division of the Maryland Geological Survey has been transferred to the State Roads Commission. It is now an opportune time to call the attention of the people of Maryland to the debt they owe to this department of their Government. But for the work of the highway division of the Geological Survey the State would not now be engaged in the great work of road improvement which is destined to add enormously to the physical wealth of the State and the comfort and prosperity of its people. The Survey did the pioneer work of road improvement and conducted a campaign of education which made the enactment of the State Roads law of 1908 possible. In making the transfer to the Roads Commission the highway division of the Geological Survey submitted a report which gave a summary of its activities. Its principal achievement has been to put Maryland in the front rank of road-building States. It has explored and located the road-building material, made surveys, tested materials, provived the counties with scientific aid and advice which has resulted in improved methods, and it has brought public sentiment to favor the best kind of roads. In its activities of 12 years it has made a wise expenditure of $1,784,208.51, including $495,113.73 paid by the several counties and individuals. The roads constructed and completed are 125½ miles, with outstanding contracts for 49 miles more.

In 1904, by the work of the Geological Survey, aided by Mr. Samuel M. Shoemaker and other public-spirited citizens, the Shoemaker or State Aid law was enacted, appropriating annually $200,000 to roads, the counties to contribute as much as they received. At first the counties refused this aid, declining to contribute even half. But after a start was once made and the character of the roads established, the applications for State aid increased until finally the entire appropriation was used. In 1906 the highway division was further charged with the construction of a road from Baltimore to Washington, and all but 10 miles of that important work has been completed.

Terra Alta Still Without a Mayor.

The city fathers met in regular session Thursday night, at the council chamber, and as Terra Alta is now without a mayor, Recorder Wotring was in the chair. The first business taken up was a motion by Councilman John Lamb to appoint a mayor to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. S. M. Scott on the previous Thursday, and after an hour's discussion of who would make a good mayor and who would not, a committee of three, consisting of Councilmen John Lamb and E. F. Hardesty and Recorder D. L. Wotring, was appointed to call upon Mr. John C. Mayer and ask him to become mayor of the municipality. Mr. Mayer being familiar with the exchange of compliments between the council and ex-Mayor Scott, declined to accept the highest office that the little mountain city of Terra Alta has to offer, and the committee returned to the council chamber to report that being unable to find a man who would sit with them as mayor they were now in favor of a government by commission, or any other form of municipal administration that would guarantee them peace in the council, and they decided to table the matter till next meeting night and await the suggestions of the people.

Subscribe for The Republican.

FEARS U. S. OWNERSHIP

Mr. Willard Tells B. & O. Men Government Will Get Railroad.

Government ownership of railroads in the United States was predicted by President Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, in an address before the officials of the traffic and operating departments of the railroad at Deer Park, Monday.

President Willard declared emphatically that he did not believe Government ownership would be a good thing, but rather a step backward, but he said that this would be the probable outcome of the present Government regulation.

In opposing Government ownership Mr. Willard took up particularly the question of rates and pointed to the fact that the tariffs in this country were cheaper than in any other, though many European governments own their railroads.

Mr. Willard spoke informally and his audience was most attentive, especially as this is a subject which has not been spoken on to any extent by high railroad officials. He began by telling the men that he would expect a rigid compliance with all laws and regulations. From obedience to the rapidly increasing number of laws and rulings of the Inter-State Commerce Commission and the increase in the powers of the commission made by the recent Railroad bill passed by Congress Mr. Willard traced this control further until it merged into Government ownership.

That this would not be a good thing for the country he attempted to prove by showing that rates were practically lower than they ever had been, while on the other hand, urged on by private interests and capital, improvements were being made which gave better service, insuring quicker and safer delivery of freight and passengers, while increasing the efficiency of the men and the amount of work one man could do.

He also drew attention to the increases in salaries of all railroad employes made by private owners. These, he said, had so burdened the treasuries of the railroad companies that some means of filling them would have to be found.

The only possible way at present, President Willard declared, was to raise rates, and this could only be done successfully by unamity of action on the part of the different railroads.

On the Baltimore and Ohio alone, he said, the increase in wages had amounted to about $2,000,000 aunually, and this was exclusive of the increase of the expense of operation and increased cost of every item needed in the extensive equipment.

Millions have thus been added, President Willard declared, to the millions on which the road is already paying for fixed charges, to bring the earning power of the company to the standard it must achieve to hold its own. To take advantage of this tremendous expenditure, it would be necessary, he continued, for every possible effort to be taken by improvement in operation, and large efficiency of motive power, larger trains, with a cutting down of fuel and other savings, to make the railroad a paying proposition.

President Willard intimated that this effort that would be necessary to insure a return on the increased investment would be made far better in private hands than in the hands of the Government, and also that the railroads should be allowed to work out their own salvation on the rate situation without any more regulation from the Government that necessary.

Enthusiasm was aroused among President Willard's audience of railroad men, however, when he assured them that the company would earn millions over its record in the coming fiscal year.

The officials remained at Deer Park until last night.

The general conference is participated in by the traffic and operating departments, with First Vice-President Randolph presiding. Others of the traffic department in attendance were General Traffic Manager Wright, General Freight Agents Galleher, Constans, McLaughlin and Gray, General Passenger Agents Bassett, Austin and McCarty, assistant general passenger agents, division freight and passenger agents, commercial freight agents, etc., from Baltimore and Ohio territory everywhere. With Third Vice-President Patter representing the operating department are General Superintendent of Transportation Walber, Vice-President and General Manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Chicago Terminal and General Superintendent Baltimore and Ohio Northwestern Division Batchelder, General Manager of the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Bent, General Superintendents Loree, Blaser and Williams, with division superintendents and others representing divisional activities.

With President Willard are his assistants, Messrs. George M. Shriver and H. B. Voorhees, Chief Engineer Thompson, staff and divisional engineers, Chief Engineer of Maintenance of Way Stimson and staff, Purchasing Agent Bankard, Vice-President and General Superintendent Campbell, of the Staten Island Railroad; General Real Estate Agent McCubbin, Superintendent of Telegraph Selden and General Superintendent of Motive Power Harris.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

TO FIX THE DATE FOR PRIMARIES

Hanna And Vandiver Expected to Confer During the Present Week.

Chairmen Murry Vandiver and John B. Hanna, of the Democratic and Republican State Central Committees, respectively, are expected to confer this week and fix the date for holding the Congressional primaries.

It is believed that the primaries will be held August 30 or September 3, the indications pointing to the latter day. Under the primary law both parties must make their nominations by direct vote throughout the State on the same day. They can not, however, be held later than the first Monday in September, which this year is Setember 5. As it is Labor Day Democrats and Republicans alike advocate the selection of another day. County leaders desire that the primaries be held on Saturday, as it would be more satisfacory the country voters to participate in them, while the city leaders are anxious that they be held on a Tuesday.

The late primaries appear to meet with the approval of nearly all avowed or prospective candidates. Apparetnly they do not want a long primary campaign. The leaders are anxious that the Congressional campaign should be about two months long.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

SHORT RUN.

As there have been no items from this place for some time we will send some just to let people know we have all lived through the "comet fright," rainy weather, etc.

Russell Fichtner, of Kitzmiller, was seen in our town Sunday evening.

Mr. Claude Harvey was injured badly last Wednesday by a horse kicking him under the heart. He is getting better now.

James A. Wilson was calling on Miss Scinda Wilson Monday evening.

Messrs. Milo Wilson and Arthur Harvey attended the District Conference at Newburg, W. Va., last week.

Mr. Geo. White, of Ryan's Glade, was visiting friends here Sunday.

We were all much surprised to hear that one of our most popular young ladies, Miss Jane Wilson, and Mr. Granville Harvey were united in marriage April 20, 1910. We wish them a long and happy journey on the sea of matrimony.

Every one in this vicinity seems well pleased with the work Mr. J. B. Moore is putting on the roads here. The only trouble is lack of funds to carry the work farther.

Miss Ida Wilson, who has been visiting friends at Wildell and Elkins for the past month, returned to her home here Sunday.

Scott Harvey and his sister Emma were visiting Frank Sharpless at Mt. Zion last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Harvey are visiting friends at Deep Creek at this writing.

Messrs. Scott and Santford Moon were calling on their Uncle Daniel Wilson Monday.

Mrs. Geo. W. Wilson spent a few days at Elk Garden.

Miss Lois Harvey and Mr. Allen Moon were visiting relatives at Curtz Chapel Sunday.

Wishing THE REPUBLICAN success, I am BLUE FEATHER.

You Can't Gather Figs From Thistles

neither can you secure a real, decent job of painting if you use adulterated Paint. You are unreasonable to expect it; the quality is not there.

When you buy

DAVIS 100 PER CENT PURE PAINT

the analysis and guarantee on every can tells you plainly what you are using.

For sale by J. M. Davis & Sons,
Oakland, Md.

Mr. Sloan on Commission.

D. Lindley Sloan yesterday received a letter from Governor Crothers stating that Mr. Sloan had been named by the Governor as a member of the commission on local legislation.—Cumberland News.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. MCCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. MCCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. MCCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. MCCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

D. E. BOLDEN'S Remodeling Sale

Contemplating extensive improvements to my store building, I offer my entire stock of Bed Room, Dining Room, Library and Parlor Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Pictures, Mattresses, Etc.

—AT—

10 Per Cent. Discount

For the Next 30 Days.

During the past few weeks the wholesale price on my lines have advanced ten per cent., but I am willing to give my customers the benefit of this advance in addition to the ten per cent. discount as above.

Some Rare Bargains will be included in this Special Sale

D. E. BOLDEN.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Lots of Fun at Deer Park on July 4th.

Dr. J. W. Laughlin, Mr. Jack Grimes and Mr. William Miller are perfecting arrangements for a safe and sane Fourth of July celebration at Deer Park. As a committee of arrangements on Decoration Day these gentlemen gave the town of Deer Park and its many visitors a grand, good time, and everybody went home at night feeling that they had had a most enjoyable day. All these things will be repeated at Deer Park on the Fourth of July, only there will be more of it. Plenty of band music and a good time for everybody.

Something new in Talcum Powder; Babcock's Corylopsis of Japan, the most popular Talcum on the market today. Hamil-Gonder Pharmacy.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL. . . . . $ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS. . 45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.
G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt — Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis — George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell — William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Mrs. Matthews has gone to Somerset county, Pa., to visit relatives.

Miss Grace Robinson, of Baltimore, is in Oakland on a visit to relatives.

Mr. George Loar, of Grafton, spent Sunday in Oakland with his mother.

Miss Harriett Schroeder, of Grafton, was the guest last week of Miss Eleanor Peddicord.

FOR RENT—Furnished room; three minutes walk from station. Apply at this office.

Mr. Stanley Harvey, of near Gormania, was in the city Monday when he called at this office.

WANTED—A good reliable woman for general housework. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland.

Mrs Sue R. Laughlin, of Kitzmiller, spent Friday and Saturday in Oakland visiting Mr. M. R. Hamill's family.

Mrs. R. E. Sliger returned to Oakland last Thursday evening from a few days' visit to relatives in Lonaconing.

Mrs. E. H. Sincell and Mrs. Eva Mitchell visited relatives and friends in Lonaconing and Cumberland this week.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

Miss Josephine Robinson, who has been in Cumberland for two or three months, has returned to her home in Oakland.

Mrs. Albert Fraley, of Newell, W. Va., was in Oakland yesterday visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Fraley and other relatives.

Try one of our Long Life Batterie onyour telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mrs. J. Oliver Lantz, of Hartmonville, W. Va., spent a few days last week in Oakland with her sister, Mrs. Louis Bush.

The twenty-eighth annual program for the Mountain Chautauqua will be issued very shortly, work upon which was begun in this office Monday.

Mrs. A. S. Frost, wife of Col. A. S. Frost, U. S. A., retired, and two daughters, are guests of Lieut. and Mrs. E. S. West, at their home near Oakland.

Mrs. Webster Pavenscroft returned to her home near Oakland last Wednesday from an extended visit to Miss Lynn Waddell at Shepherdstown, West Va.

Let us fill your prescriptions. Lowest prices, quality considered. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Money to Loan—Secured by first mortgage on real estate. Terms easy. Renninger & Offutt. Attorneys Oakland, Md 3t

Dr. W. W. Grant returned to Oakland Sunday night from a three days, visit to Baltimore, where he attended the annual convention of dentists of the State.

Dr. J. E. Legge returned Monday night from St. Louis, Mo., where he had been for ten days attending the sessions of the American Medical Association.

A water motor which is to furnish power for operating the pipe organ in St. Paul's M. E. church, was installed Tuesday by Mr. Stanhope O. Crane, of Kingwood.

Fountain Syringes and Hot Water Bottles, household necessities, at prices ranging from 75c. to $1.50, at Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Mr. Graham Dukehart, Grand Lecturer of Maryland, A., F. and A. Masons, will visit the local lodge this evening on on his annual round of visit to lodges in this section of the state.

Mrs. Elmer Haulenbeek came up to Deer Park from Baltimore a few days since and will remain at Uplands during the summer. Miss Irene Haulenbeek came up several days ago.

Mr. Henry M. Speicher, of Accident, was in Oakland one day last week when he purchased a 30 h. p. Maxwell automobile from Mr. Hoffman, representing the Meyersdale Garage Co.

Mr. Elmer Haulenbeek, who is connected with the Real Estate Department of the B. & O., entertained Mr. A. L. Gable, of the same department, at his Deer Park home last Sunday.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

Mr. Will Davis, assistant at the B. & O. station in Oakland, has been transferred to the Deer Park Hotel station, where he becomes agent in charge for the summer. His place in Oakland is being filled by Clarence Murphy.

Capt. James A. Hayden, of the Park, as special agent for the Agricultural Department at Washington, left Monday morning for his annual tour of inspection through the lower counties of Maryland, expecting to return on Monday night.

Subscribe for The Republican.

CAPITAL 50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Pays 3 Per Cent.

on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

GREEK HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Fell From Train and Lost Leg at Oakland Station.

A Greek employed on construction work along the line of the B. & O. R. R. west of Oakland, fell from a freight train at the railroad station in Oakland last Friday afternoon and was seriously injured. That the man escaped instant death is miraculous.

Evidently he attempted to alight from the train and was thrown beneath the wheels of the car following the one upon which he was riding. His right leg was severed below his knee and he was otherwise injured, the serious bruises being about his head. The man was taken from the point where he was injured to the office of Dr McComas and later remove to the Keyser hospital where he is being treated.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

Misses Bertha Wolfe and Annie Lowenstein of Oakland, Md., are in the city, having arrived Tuesday to attend the graduation exercises at St. Augustine's school, their cousin, Dennis A. Litzinger, being one of the graduates.—Grafton Sentinel.

Beginning yesterday morning an additional mail will reach Oakland every morning from the East, bringing the Baltimore and Washington dailies and other mail matter which is mailed later than midnight in the Eastern cities. The mail car is attached to train No. 45 and arrives here at about eight o'clock.

State Superintendent Geo. H. Nock was in Oakland last Saturday. Mr. Nock is superintending the work of the Maryland Evangelistic Association. This institution does slum work in the cities and at points throughout the state which are neglected. Mr. Nock later expects to hold meetings in various parts of Garrett county.

Mr. C. W. Maxwell, trustee, advertises in this paper today the sale of several valuable Garrett county properties, owned by C. D. Gillespie, who has been adjudged bankrupt by the United States Court for the Northern District of West Virginia. The sale of the property will occur in front of the court house in Oakland on Saturday, July 23rd.

Write E. S. West, Oakland, Md., the only licensed real estate dealer in Garrett county, for booklet describing all kinds of real estate for sale in this vicinity. Also valuable farms, coal and timber lands in other States, Mexico and Canada. '11-4t.

A social, tendered those taking part in the Gibson Family Reunion and also the City Band, was given last Tuesday evening in the supper room of St. Mark's church at which about one hundred and fifty young people were present. Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and coffee were served by the ladies and a pleasant social hour was passed.

Mr. E. Ray Jones, of Deer Park, was one of the leading honor winners at the annual Recognition chapel at Ohio Wesleyan University on Monday. He gained membership in Phi Beta Kappa, the much prized honorary fraternity, and also gained "Cum Laudo," or "with praise," for his general high scholarship rank during his course. He was also given the debate pennant, which signifies his participation in the winning debate against Oberlin College, and the Transcript pin for his connection with the University publication as assistant editor.

Gibson Family Reunion A Success.

The Gibson Family Reunion, which was staged in Oakland last Thursday and Friday nights under the direction of Miss Anna Manges, was a great success, notwithstanding the fact that rain poured both evenings and in consequence many were prevented from attending. Large numbers, however, were present and it was unanimously expressed opinion that the entertainment was the best ever produced in the local playhouse. Lack of space prevents us from mentioning personally all who took part in the entertainment. All were proficient, however, and the large audiences each evening were delighted. The little tots in the Boogie Boo drill were beautiful and resembled a garden filled with fairies, while Playing Truant, represented by thirty youngsters dressed in overalls fairly brought down the house. Then one drill after another followed in rapid succession and were equally as good as those mention above, ending with the See Saw drill, which was spectacular and most beautifully arranged. The ladies of the society received as their share of the proceeds one hundred dollars.

Find Woman Almost Frozen

After a serching party had been scouring the town for hours, Mrs Hanna McEllery was found at 10 o'clock Sunday morning lying in her night clothes almost frozen, in the cellar her home in Fairmont. During the night the woman had walked in her sleep and had laid down on the cold damp cellar floor. She was missed at midnight Saturday and a large searching party organized to find her. It was eleven o'clock Monday morning beforeshe recovered consciousness.

THE NATION'S EXECUTIVE

Passed Through Oakland Yesterday Morning on His Way West.

Yesterday morning as a passenger on train No. 3, whichis scheduled to arrive in Oakland at 6.41 o'clock, President William H. Taft passed through here on his way west.

The President was accompanied by Capt. Butt and his private secretary and occupied staterooms on a private car attached to the regular train. Apparently no one in Oakland, with the possible exception of the local railroad officials, knew that the President and party were on board the train.

Teachers' Training School.

The Teachers' Training School of Garrett county opened Monday, June 6th, with an enrollment of 130 which has increased to 150 at the present time.

The school is now well organized and is doing good work. It is divided into three sections. Section one is for beginners, section two for teachers of limited experience and section three for experienced teachers. Prof. Gibson is instructor of music as well as of rhetoric and composition. Prof. DeWitt has charge of grammer and algebra, Prof. Palmer of mental and written arithmetic, and Misses Klinefelter and Coleman of the primary work.

Examinations began Tuesday, June 7th, and one examination is given each day.

The school was dismissed Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the students marched in a body to the court house where the judicial department of our government was seen in actual session. This was greatly enjoyed by all.

The Teachers' Institute begins June 20th under the supervision of Dr. M. Bates Stevens. D.

Liveryman Cures "Cribbing" Horse.

L. J. Swartz, a liveryman of Huntingdon, Pa., had a horse known as a "cribber" and planned to use electricity to stop him chewing his trough in the stable. The edge of the trough was wired, the current turned on and the horse placed in his stall. The animal grasped the trough, wire and all and dropped over dead.

Church Services.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 8 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.
G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE PARK M. E.

Class meeting at 10 a. m.
Preaching at 8 p. m.
Sunday school at 2.30 p. m.
Epworth League at 7:00 p. m.
P. Z. MUSGRAVE, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching 10:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.
E. MANGES, Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E.

Service every Sunday at 11 a. m.
Sunday School at 2:30 p. m.
W. H. SHEARER.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Deer Park—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 8 p. m., subject "What shall we do with the American Sabbath?".
Everybody invited.
C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

BITTINGER.

Continued rains, accompanied by unseasonably cool weather, is causing some apprehension among the farmers as crops are not making much growth and corn especially is suffering.

Merchant C. E. Ellithorp attended the meeting of the Board of School Commissioners held at Oakland last week.

Frank Watts and family, of Frostburg, drove up to this village laat week and looked over the J. Turner Lohr farm recently purchased by Mr. Watts.

Earl Stanton and family, of Grantsville, spent last Sunday with Mrs. Stanton's parents at this place.

Messrs. Elias Orendorf, Simon Brenneman, Joseph Bowser and Jonas Bittinger, of this village, were attending court at Oakland last week.

C. J. Brenneman, who has been quite ill at his home near this place for some days, is reported to be slightly better at this time.

The lawn fete held at this place by the ladies of the Lutheran church on last Saturday evening was a satisfactory success notwithstanding adverse weather conditions.

Charles Stark, who is employed in a coal mine at the western end of the county, was home with his parents a few days last week.

Call for Your Letters.

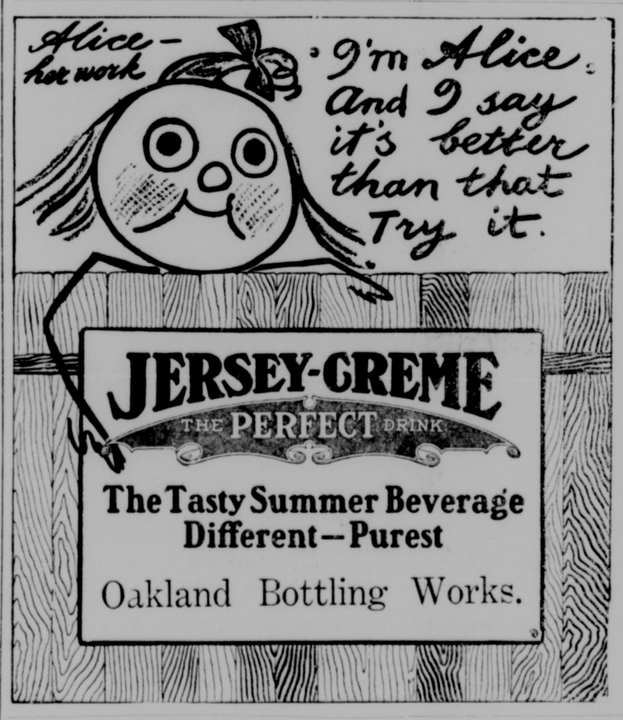
Miss Clara Buoy, Mr. Jone Congley, The Glades Hotel, The Saratoga Hotel, Mr. Ray Souders, Mrs. Etta J. Jackson.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have a variety of kinds and at any price.

TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.
RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.
AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.
CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.
SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.
Yours to please,
A. D. NAYLOR & CO.
PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S
FOR
Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.
Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.
LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP
FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.
Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Notice to The Public.

I have taken charge of the Fresh Meat Department of Creutzburg's store where I can furnish my trade with the best Fresh Meats at all times, and solicit a share of your patronage. Everything clean and up-to-date.

Farmers, bring your calves, mutton, lambs and beef and get the highest cash prices for them.

Yours to please,
HENRY SMOUSE.
The Up-to-Date Market.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said road commencing at or near the mouth of Crabtree Creek on Savage River by crossing said river from West to East side and passing through the lands of the Lonaconing Coal & Iron Company, Oss Brothers and others to intersect the County Road near Bloomington, a distance of about four and one-half miles, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of June, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said locating of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

P. P. MCANDREWS
P. H. RODEHEAVER
GEO. W. BROADWATER } Examiners.

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt.

The dividend is at the rate of 2 13-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allow and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 20th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

The Grace of Plumes

THE diaphanous picture hats in black or white, and the dead white of chip hats, makes a back ground upon which the fancy of the designer can pose her "dreams of beauty," in materials and colors. Many colored ostrich plumes have provided color combinations that vie with those in flowers. Ostrich, in two or three shades of one color, in two or three colors, and even in brilliant dashes of many colors in the same plume have been brought out and placed in the hands of milliners throughout the country. It is the grace of plumes that endears them to the heart of every designer of really beautiful millinery. If securely fastened by the stem to the body of the hat and left to its own sweet will (or curve, rather), and the law of gravity, the ostrich feather will dispose its length most gracefully. The trimmer cannot improve these lines which nature has drawn with the supple quill and dainty flumes. Blown by the wind the airy fibers move in graceful lines and come back to rest in the original positions that they held before they were disturbed. This is true of the "skeleton" willow ostrich (plumes with tied flumes) more especially. In tying the flumes to lengthen them, the manufacturer is able to introduce new colors or shades and produce blended harmony or contrast, as he desires.

These plumes are light in weight and very beautiful. In black they have a tendency to come to pieces. For some reason the black dye so effects the feather that moisture makes it shrink or "crawl" and the knots untie. But in colors they wear fairly well. Women have been buying fragile materials too long to dispense with willow plumes on that account.

The natural ostrich plume with wide spread of fibers, slightly curled, should be selected if one is buying black. A good ostrich plume, moderately heavy, and made of uniformly good stock, will prove about the most lasting article and the most satisfactory in which the investor in millinery can put her money. Two plumes of this character will do service summer and winter. They are at their loveliest on the black picture hat for midsummer. This hat, of hemp or hair braid, with broad, sweeping flare of brim, through which the light filters, is the ideal model for a "stunning" effect. It is cool looking and always distinguished. In white with plumes in white and black it looks as chaste as frost, and throws a becoming reflection upon the skin of the wearer. The wide brims require this sweep of plumes in which trimmers delight.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

CLEAR SKIN A NECESSITY

Claim to Beauty Cannot Be Admitted Without the Possession of That Charm.

The fascination of a clear, fair skin is recognized by every woman. No matter how regular her features, if the skin is blotched a woman loses all her power to attract. A good skin is an evidence of health, pure blood and right living. Powder will not cover an imperfect complexion, but will give it a mottled, livid appearance. A new preparation gives a soft, youthful bloom to the skin, will not show and is absolutely beneficial in every way. It contains no zinc, peroxide or white lead, and may be used on a baby—surely a perfect test of its purity. It will remove the tired, old expression engendered by pain or fatigue and the haggard look which the bustle of modern life will give to even a youthful face. Rarely indeed can a beautifier be found which cannot be detected, and the obvious use of cosmetics robs a woman of that air of refinement which makes a lady. A fresh, natural appearance exacts willing admiration from either sex, and such is certainly to be obtained by the use of this dainty preparation.

NEW NAPOLEON HAT.

A new phase of the Napoleon hat, in white linen, lined with dark butcher-blue linen.

As in foulards and other silk materials the polka dot is a favorite in the mixtures of silk and cotton.

SOME OLD FRIENDS RETURN

Materials Familiar to a Past Generation Have Again Become Popular Favorites.

An inspection of the materials for summer wear show that certain old-time, reliable materials have returned under new names, but our mothers will recognize their friends in the shape of the coarse linens that resemble "oatmeal" cloth, hopsacking and the various basket weaves.

The feature that commends itself to many women is the fact that the weave is so evident that it serves for decoration, and, therefore, requires very little other ornamentation. Simple braiding designs or buttons are generally sufficient for the morning dress, while the square meshes of these coarse fabrics form excellent backgrounds upon which designs in cross-stitching (done with woolen or linen threads) may be added.

When the individual touch of embroidery is added, these materials are excellent for afternoon wear, and although the design is more conventional than the trailing vines worked by the weavers of 50 years ago, the effect warrants the time expended in the construction.

To Use India Print.

Blue and white India print cut into bias strips of varying width makes an excellent trimming for a child's dress.

Here is something unique and yet beautiful, that will not fade and is by no means too old-looking for a little girl.

India print is an altogether desirable and durable stuff in color and quality, and can be used on fine or coarse white linen without the least danger of the colors spreading into the white surface.

Buttons covered with the print will add style and then, too, the end of material you have left will do for a band round the dark blue or white straw hat.

Biscuit Color Liked.

Biscuit color is in great demand.

Of course, it is perishable, but dear to the heart of woman.

When this shade forms a background for a cross-bar of old rose in a thin line it is fascinating.

Helen of Troy

By ROYAL N. GREEN

Fred Erickson was heart-keen to the fact that he loved the girl, but, as yet, he had said nothing to her about it. In fact he had never spoken to her. They were not acquainted with each other.

It was what is called love at first sight—that is, as far as Fred was concerned. The first time he saw her she was sitting opposite him on a belt line car going from Albany to Troy, and his susceptible heart had gone pit-a-pat. Chance thrust them together often after that, but without an opportunity to become acquainted.

Erickson, a young lawyer located in Albany, should have been giving his whole attention to the theories of a practice that was yet to come. Instead, he dreamed the long office hours through, and all his dreams were of the fair unknown.

This fascinating girl was, in points of beauty, a maid to marvel at. Her eyes were dusky wells of midnight with long, dark lashes that half hid the depths of them, and the black of these contrasted strangely with the white of her satiny skin. All in all she was, from her daintily arranged hair to the tips of her tiny shoes, the sweetest girl creation that had ever come to the ken of Fred Erickson. He longed to meet her.

Here romance stepped in.

If Helen Landen—this was her name—had ever cast a calculating eye over the tall, serious faced youth who appeared so frequently to her, she did so without due knowledge of what fates had in store.

Ringston's circus, a mighty army of tents, opened in Albany to play two dates, afternoon and evening, with all the pomp and ceremony of that dignified institution. Erickson attended the evening performance. Spangled performers crowded the three rings in marvelous act after act. An army of clowns capered to queer pranks, and, as always, the circus was a pulsating success—a gaudy, glittering success.

"O, What a Great Beast.

After the concert, Erickson and a friend found themselves leisurely strolling through the menagerie tent. A mighty elephant, almost the peer of the famous Jumbo in size, interested them. Its crafty eyes were sparkling with intelligence. Its calm, calculating survey of the curious ones who gathered to do it honor, was majestic regal. Its swaying trunk, vitally restless, raised itself above them occasionally as if delivering a benison.

A tinkling cadence of girlish laughter from behind the youth again caused the erratic heart vibrations in his breast, responsive to only one maid, and Erickson turned. His face flushed as he gazed at her. She was with an elderly person—evidently her father. Her nearness caused the youth to fear for himself. It seemed to him that he must turn and crush her in his arms.

"O what a great beast!" The girl turned to her father. "I wonder if she is cross?"

The elderly person looked inquiringly toward a keeper who stood at some little distance.

"Not at all," answered the attendant. "Mildest mannered animal in captivity, and the largest. Bess here knows mor'n some folks, she does."

The girl stepped daintily forward, a smile curving her red lips, and the pert little nose of her's wrinkled in amusement.

"I'm going to feed her," she said. The elephant graciously accepted an absurdly small bon bon, and seemed to wink a knowing eye at Erickson, who glared enviously.

"The tiger is out!" A hoarse voice raised the cry and in an instant the tent was mob mad. Women screamed and fainted. Children wailed and men cursed. To add to the pandemonium, the gasoline lights flickered desperately in the wind created by the panic-stricken crowd—and went out. A feline scream rose above the noise, and an animal chorus quickly responded. Elephants trumpeted. Lions roared. The camels lifted their voices in uncanny shrieks, and excitement was the order of the moment.

Erickson, stricken dumb, suddenly recovered himself and reached out blind arms for the girl. His first thoughts were of her. She must be rescued at all hazards.

Just as his satisfied hands came in contact with her, a velvety something brushed curiously across his face, and then suddenly dropped to his waist—their waists—and the two were lifted high in the air to be placed gently on the back of the elephant.

The girl gave a frightened half scream, and her little hands convulsively clutched the arm of her companion.

"What-wha-what is it?" she gasped.

Erickson thrilled at her touch. "Don't be frightened," he said. "The big elephant has picked us up, and, for some reason, placed us on her back. Just at present it is the safest place in the tent. We are out of the struggling crowd, and away from the tiger. Hello! What's happening?"

The elephant was beginning to move. Slowly, cumbersomely, like the heavy body that it was, the great mass of flesh began to get under way, and in a moment the two upon the beast's back found themselves under the starry sky. Save for a scurrying circus man, here and there, the stretch of green about the tents was deserted.

The girl kept tight hold of the exultant youth, although the broad back and gentle motion of the now rapidly moving Bess were not calculated to precipitate a fall.

"O, I—I am so frightened," gasped the damsel. Her hands convulsively gripped the youth's arm. Erickson was not frightened. He was hilariously happy.

From behind them came hoarse shouts, and the elephant, hearing, quickened his pace. Had Erickson been a solitary rider, he would have slid to the ground, but now he was pleasantly impressed with a sense of guardianship.

"Keep up your nerve," came from the young attorney. "The elephant is running away with us, but he is not dangerous. We are safe enough. The keepers and circus men are trying to catch us."

Suddenly the beast plunged off the moon-lit road and into a lane, slowing up and stopping as it came to a tall tree. The sensitive trunk cautiously rose to investigate the lower branches, and then, with a despairing squeal, a long-tailed spider-monkey was brought from a sheltering clump of leaves, and passed carefully back and into the very hands of Erickson.

The lawyer laughed.

"O, how sweet," ventured the girl her fear suddenly gone. "And how do you suppose the elephant knew he was in this tree?"

"I'm sure I don't know. It seems to have been her sole errand for she is now going back."

Sure enough, the great beast was now retracing her footsteps.

In a few minutes she had come to the pack that had been following her. With the sang froid of a calculating human, the animal reached a careful trunk around and placed her passengers, one at a time, on the ground. Then the same impressable organ relieved Erickson of his chattering charge, and without waiting for her escort the elephant ambled on, turning a quizzical eye to her late riders as she did so.

It developed that the tiger was still a captive. The panic had been started by some mischief maker, but the rushing, scrambling crowd had alarmed the animals, and the monkey cage had been overturned by the crazy exit of the masses. The little simian rescued by the big pachyderm had been an especial pet of the trainer having Bess in charge. How she knew the monkey was hidden in the tree, no one knew.

"Well," said the girl, flushing as she turned to Erickson. "I am sure that I shall never care to see another circus."

"I shall always have a friendly feeling for them," answered the youth meaningly, and the flush on the girl's cheeks deepened to an alarming red.

"Inasmuch as it will be useless to attempt to find your escort, I must insist upon seeing you safely to your home."

"You don't have to—to insist," answered Helen Landen, softly.

The Stony British Glare.

Lord Crewe made a very interesting little speech the other day at the annual meeting of the Atlantic union, a society which works for the improvement of Anglo-American cordiality and of the relations between Englishmen and men of other nations generally. He said that one grave cause of international misunderstanding was our "notorious stiffness of demeanor," and he referred to that delightful drawing by Du Maurier in Punch in which the table d'hote of a foreign hotel in the slack season was depicted as populated only by two Englishmen, sitting at opposite ends of the table, glaring speechlessly at each other. All that he said was true enough. We are undemonstrative. We are not men and brothers the whole world round as we should be, and as we shall be when Robert Burns' millennium comes at last. If we may be allowed to say so, we can hardly picture Lord Crewe himself responding with a leap into the air and a joyful howl to the "How do, sonny?" of an Ontario mine manager. He would probably smile charmingly, bow most courteously and extend a friendly hand; but the colonist would take all that for coolness and the Atlantic union would have to explain.—London Evening Standard.

THE REAL WRENCH.

Smith—It's mighty hard to get a wife.

Hardup—It's no trouble to get one, but it's hard to keep her.

Have You a Baby?

Every woman knows how imperatively necessary it is that baby's things should be absolutely and perfectly clean. She knows the trouble she has with certain yellow soaps that leave the dirt in and often make the little garments harsh and irritating to baby's skin. Easy Task soap—you can get it of your grocer—is the quickest and safest cleanser made; it is antiseptic—and it reduces the work of washing by half.

Her Excuse.

"Why—er—yes," Miss Goodley admitted, "perhaps you did hear me telling the minister I was only twenty-two."

"Oh, I'm surprised!" exclaimed Miss Gaddiet, "and you a Sabbath school teacher, too!"

"But," Miss Goodley protested, "the minister has told us it's always better to understate a thing than to exaggerate."

A Sample Box of Resinol Ointment Was Nearly Sufficient in This Case.

Enclosed find money to pay for Resinol. Just the sample you sent has almost cured Eczema on my little girl's face. I will gladly tell my friends of the great merits of Resinol.

Mrs. Emma B. McConkey,
Hacker Valley, W. Va.

Limit to Woman's Suffrage.

Women have obtained the right to vote in Krain, a province of Austria. They will be allowed to cast their ballots in person and not by proxy. There is, however, one limitation imposed on them. A special time of the day has been allotted to them for the exercise of this right.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Not in the Agreement.

Daniel had been cast into the lions' den.

"My main objection," he said, as he playfully tweaked a lion's mane, "is that I get no moving-picture royalties."—Puck.

Hearsay Evidence.

Mrs. Frost—How's your husband?

Mrs. Snow—The members of his club say he is looking splendid.—Life.

Red, Weak, Weary, Watery Eyes. Relieved By Murine Eye Remedy. Try Murine For Your Eye Troubles. You Will Like Murine. It Soothes. 50c at Your Druggists. Write For Eye Books. Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

A man really can make more fuss over the way a barber trims his mustache than a woman over the way a tailor cuts her gown.

For Headaches

Caused by sick stomach, ill-regulated bile, sluggish bowels, nervous strain or overwork, the safest and surest remedy is

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Sold Everywhere. In boxes 10c. and 25c.

Shoe Boils, Capped Hock, Bursitis ARE HARD TO CURE, yet

ABSORBINE

will remove them and leave no blemishes. Does not Blister or remove the hair. Cures any pain or swelling. Horse can be worked. $2.00 per bottle. Book 6 E free. ABSORBINE, JR., (mankind, $1 and $2 per bottle.) For Boils, Bruises, Old Sores, Swellings, Goitre, Varicose Veins, Varicosities, Allays Pain. Your druggist can supply and give references. Will tell you more if you write. Manufactured only by W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

STOCKERS & FEEDERS

Choice quality; reds and roans, bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.

National Live Stock Com. Co.

At either

Kansas City, Mo. St. Joseph, Mo. S. Omaha, Neb.

Trade Mark. Don't accept any substitute.

MOTHER GRAY'S SWEET POWDERS FOR CHILDREN,

A Certain Relief for Feverishness, Constipation, Headache, Stomach Troubles, Teething Disorders, and Destroy Worms. They Break up Colds in 24 hours. At all Druggists, 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address, A. S. OLMSTED, Le Roy, N. Y.

CANCERS NO CURE, NO PAY. Don't all advertise. Health Herald and testimonials FREE for the asking. Address Dr. E. M. Boynton, Lawrence, Mass.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

Libby's Food Products

Libby's Evaporated Milk

Contains double the nutriment and none of the impurities so often found in so-called fresh or raw milk.

The use of Libby's insures pure, rich, wholesome, healthful milk that is superior in flavor and economical in cost.

Libby's Evaporated Milk is the purest, freshest high grade milk, obtained from selected, carefully fed cows. It is pasteurized and then evaporated (the water taken out), filled into bright, new tins, sterilized and sealed air tight until you need it.

Use Libby's and tell your friends how good it is.

Libby, McNeill & Libby
Chicago

WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western states that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

125 Million Bushels of Wheat in 1909

Western Canada field crops for 1909 will easily yield to the farmer $170,000,000.00 in cash.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres, and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Railway and Land Companies have land for sale at reasonable prices. Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop. Splendid climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates, wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

H. M. WILLIAMS
Law Building Toledo, Ohio
(Use address nearest you.) (1)

GRANULATED EYELIDS Cured

The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are absolutely cured by

Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil

A soothing antiseptic discovered by an Old Railroad Surgeon. All Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c, 50c & $1.

Paris Medicine Co. Hodges, Texas.

Dear Sirs: I must say that DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL is one of the greatest remedies known to me. I had granulated eyelids so badly it caused blindness for about six weeks. I got a bottle of DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL and up to the time of this writing have used about half of it and my eyes are almost entirely well. I wish every body could know the value of DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL. Yours truly

(Signed) CLEMENT BASHAMS

Made by

E. W. Grove

Maker of

Laxative Bromo Quinine

6% vs. 4% Why accept 4% from a savings bank when you can buy

Six Per Cent Real Estate Bonds?

Besides sharing in the profits of a great corporation. Write for full particulars. Dept. K.

DEBENTURE CORPORATION OF NEW YORK
334 Fifth Avenue New York City

DR. J. D. KELLOGG'S ASTHMA

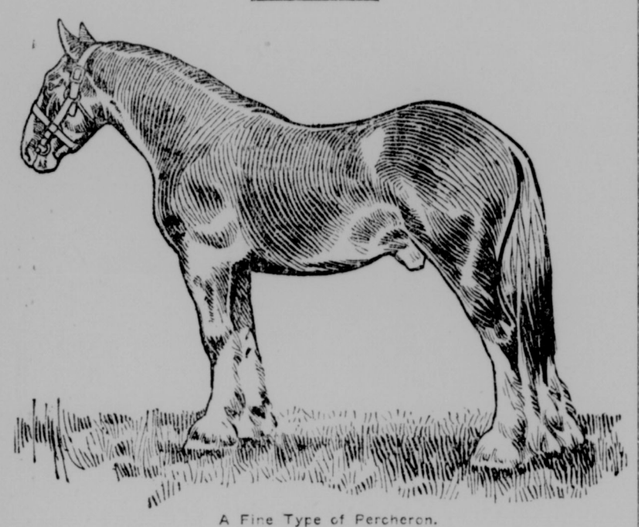
Remedy for the prompt relief of Asthma and Hay Fever. Ask your druggist for it. Write for FREE SAMPLE. NORTHROP & LYMAN CO. Ltd., BUFFALO, N.Y.

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 30c.

HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

RAISING DRAFT HORSES IS PROFITABLE BUSINESS

Practical Breeder Gives Some Good, Sound Reasons Why Farmers Should Pay More Attention to Them.



A Fine Type of Percheron.

(By J. D. DUMIRE.)

The horse for the farmer is the draft-bred horse. He is the horse that can be raised by the common farmer with little trouble and expense. He is in reach of almost every farmer in the country. It is a profitable business on the farm to raise a few good colts. I say good colts, for it is just as easy to raise good ones as poor ones.

It is just as easy to raise good horses as good cattle or good sheep or good hogs. It does not pay to raise poor ones—leave that for the other fellow. The farmers that raise good stock of any kind are the men that select good sires. The men that have good herds and good flocks are the men that select pure-blood sires from one or the other of the several pure breeds and stick to the breed of their choice, if in cattle it is Shorthorns in a few years his herd is all the same type and color.

If it is Angus or Herefords, the results are the same. If this is true of cattle and sheep, it is certainly true of the horse. Fellow farmers, select a sire from one of the pure breeds of draft horses—Percheron, Shire or Belgian—it matters but little which breed.

It is only a matter of choice to the breeder himself. Be sure that the sire is a good individual. Breed just such mares as you have. The better the dam the better the result. Always breed their produce to a pure-bred sire of the same breed.

In a short time your mares are all alike and of the same type and disposition, all bearing a family resemblance. You will not have the disposition of a broncho in one and the trotting horse in the other, but you will have a class of horses that are easily handled, easily fitted for the market and an every-day market at home and abroad.

You need not spend any extra time and expense in looking after buyers; the buyers are always looking after this kind. If they get a wire-cut or blemish they are the kind that are useful to keep for any kind of farm work. A good mare with proper care will do just as much service on the farm and raise a colt as will a gelding, and you have the colts for the keep.

Never allow the colt to follow the dam when in harness at work, as the colt will do much better if left in the barn, and the dam will be better off without the colt. Give the little fellow some oats and bran in its trough; it will soon learn to eat and forget its dam.

A colt is easily weaned, and if proper care is taken it will not stop growing until it is matured. Breed in this way and in a very short time it will be almost impossible to raise a poor colt. Look at the farmer who breeds one year to a draft horse and the produce afterward bred to some cheap mongrel. His horses in ten years' breeding are no better than when he began. The price of service fees should hardly be considered. It is the matured horse to be considered. It costs as much to raise a low-priced horse as to raise a high-priced one. It is all in the breeding.

Always use a pure-bred draft sire—a better individual than the dam—and then you are sure of gaining. Select one breed or the other and stick to it and you will come out ahead and be on the right road to success in the horse-breeding business.

COW IS KEY TO SUCCESS

To Compete With Oleomargarin Makers Dairymen Must Study to Produce Butter Cheaply as Possible.

Liberal feeding does not produce profitable results unless the food is of the proper kind. Successful dairying depends on good cows and balanced rations.

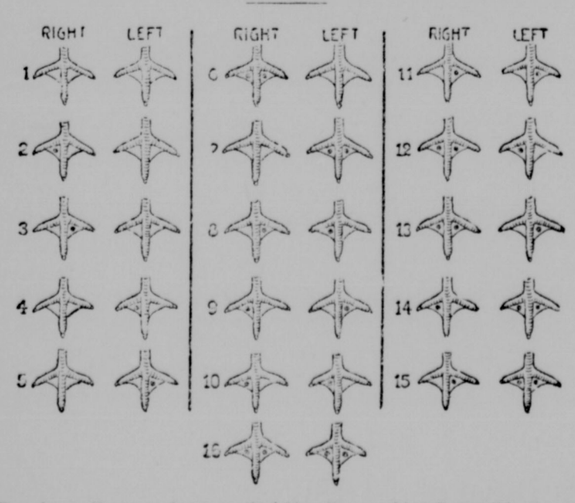
If dairymen expect to compete with the makers of oleomargarine they must study how to produce butter as cheaply as possible. Until consumers are educated to eat butter at high prices they will turn to the substitute at about a certain price for real butter.

It is estimated that one pound of butter is the amount one person who is not obliged to restrict his appetite will consume in one week. It is also estimated that for the 85,000,000 people in this country we produce only about 50,000,000 pounds of butter in a week.

If you had grown a few tons of mangels last year they would have come in handy during the winter just past—wouldn't they? Now is the time to think about mangels for next year. They are easily grown and are heavy yielders.

Selling whole milk to a cheese factory is selling the fertility of the farm out of a can. Feeding this milk to hogs, minus the butter fat, takes nothing from the farm, for a ton of butter fat is worth only about 75 cents as a fertilizer.

MARKS FOR IDENTIFICATION



The above diagram shows method of marking chicks so that 16 different flocks, ages or families may be identified by absence of punch marks as in No. 1, and by punch marks as shown in Nos. 2 to 16, says Farm Press. A good chick-size poultry punch may be had at small expense. Newly hatched chicks should always be punch-marked and a record kept of the date on which they were hatched; later the marks can be supplemented by leg banding, making it possible to positively identify many ages, flocks or families. Chicks should be punch-marked soon after hatching. Keep a record of your chicks this season.

Sheep in the World.

There are about 580,000,000 sheep in the world—Australia with 88,000,000 Argentine with 67,000,000 and the United States with 57,000,000 are the leading sheep countries

TEMPERANCE NOTES

VALUE OF TOTAL ABSTINENCE

Interesting and Able Address Delivered by Sir Alexander Russell Simpson, M. D., D. Sc.

An interesting and able address on the value of total abstinence was recently delivered by Sir Alexander Russell Simpson, M. D., D. Sc., dean of the faculty of medicine, Edinburgh university, before an immense assemblage gathered for the Scottish national Sunday school convention, held in the great Scottish center. Speaking from the standpoint of morality and science, Sir Alexander said in part:

"About a quarter of a century ago some friends in Kingston, Ont., took me on an excursion on the St. Lawrence river. The speaker of the Canadian parliament, who was of the company, made me take notice, as we sailed out from the town, that the first imposing building we were passing was a distillery. Near by was an infirmary, then a lunatic asylum, then a prison, and after these a cemetery.

"I take it for granted that every teacher before me has so far considered the relation of the use of alcoholic liquors to disease, derangement, degradation, and death, as to have seen the advisability of becoming a personal abstainer. Supreme among the dangers that beset all our lives is the danger inherent in the common use of alcohol. Whatever be the form in which it is taken—wine, beer, spirits, or what else—it is a more common cause of loss of health, of loss of reason, of loss of character, of loss of life, than any other of the influences that tell upon our complex mechanism. An intoxicated man is simply a man that is in the clutch of a poison.

"This leads me more immediately in the direction in which I suppose you expect me, as a member of the medical profession, to offer some suggestions as to what instruction it might be desirable to impart to our young charges if much of the result of all your labor is not to be blotted out of their lives in later years through ignorance of the influence of alcohol on the body and even more on the mind of the man.

"To begin with, young people should be taught that wine is not a necessity of life. It is no more necessary for man that for any of the creatures around him. There are tribes and communities who live and thrive without it. The want of it is never felt by one who has not begun to use it. No household that excludes it from its dietary suffers in anything from its absence. The child reared in abstinence has missed nothing that could have helped its growth and development, or, I will add, its happiness.

"We deny it a place among the necessities of life. But there is no denying it a place among life's luxuries. We must be quite honest with ourselves and with the young, and recognize that those who habitually or occasionally drink wine do so because of some gratification it affords. But it is a costly luxury. The temporary gratification it yields puts a tax upon the life. It is the most dangerous luxury in which a human being can indulge, because of the risk to life and health attendant upon its use, apart altogether from its contramoral and antispiritual influences.

"In a graduation address 18 years ago, I took occasion to congratulate the young doctors who during their student curriculum had had the wisdom and the courage to be members of the Total Abstinence society, and to say to all the graduates: 'You will not be long in practice before you will prove these five things:

"'1. That alcohol, habitually used, can of itself produce disease from which the abstainer remains exempt.

"'2. That it will aggravate diseases to which all are liable.

"'3. That it renders those who habitually use it more open to attacks of various forms of illness.

"'4. That the alcoholist has a worse chance of recovery from a fever or an injury than an abstainer.

"'5. That in the crisis of disease the alcoholist gets less benefit from stimulants than the abstainer.'

"It may occur to some one to ask, But what of the people who take their daily glass of wine and live to old age? Well, with the splendid equipment of blood and blood vessels with which they were endowed by nature, how much longer might they not have lived on had the deteriorating element been kept out of their system? They are likeliest to come near the natural limit of longevity who all their lifetime keep their blood and tissues clear of the effect of alcohol.

"It is sometimes claimed for wine as a virtue that it stimulates the appetite. Here again experiment and observation show that if it irritates the stomach to secrete more fluid, the secretion is of lowered digestive quality. Instead of helping, it hinders digestion. It temps the drinker to take in what his stomach cannot property digest."

Pertinent Questions.

What fools the citizen by talk of revenue? The saloon.

What makes a man a demon in private? The saloon.

What would reduce our taxes and replenish pocket books and banks? The abolishing of the saloon.

WOMEN'S ILLS.

Many women who suffer with backache, bearing-down pain, headaches and nervousness do not know that these ailments are usually due to trouble with the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills remove the cause.

Mrs. Joseph Cross, Church St., Morriliton, Ark., says: "For weeks I was bent double by pain in my back and the kidney secretions were profuse. My feet and ankles were badly swollen and I had headaches and dizzy spells. Six doctors treated me without relief and I finally began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A DIFFERENCE.

"This pie," said he, "is not at all Like mother used to bake;"
His wife's remarks, however, were Like mother used to make.

BABY'S SCALP CRUSTED

"Our little daughter, when three months old, began to break out on the head and we had the best doctors to treat her, but they did not do her any good. They said she had eczema. Her scalp was a solid scale all over. The burning and itching was so severe that she could not rest, day or night. We had about given up all hopes when we read of the Cuticura Remedies. We at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and followed directions carefully. After the first dose of the Cuticura Resolvent, we used the Cuticura Soap freely and applied the Cuticura Ointment. Then she began to improve rapidly and in two weeks the scale came off her head and new hair began to grow. In a very short time she was well. She is now sixteen years of age and a picture of health. We used the Cuticura Remedies about five weeks, regularly, and then we could not tell she had been affected by the disease. We used no other treatments after we found out what the Cuticura Remedies would do for her. J. Fish and Ella M. Fish, Mt. Vernon, Ky., Oct. 12, 1909."

"Show Me Another."

Soon after twins had arrived at the home of a prominent dry goods merchant recently the proud father led his son Richard, aged four, into the room to see the little strangers. The father first pulled down the covers and showed one of the babies to his son. He then walked to the other side of the bed and exhibited the other twin. Richard gazed at the two for a moment with a noncommittal look on his face, and then demanded: "Show me another, papa."

Understood the Sex.

His Daughter—Daddy, you were twenty-five when this was taken, weren't you? Why, you might have sat for it yesterday.

Her Father—M'yes; your mother's own daughter. Well, well, you'll find it on the table, I think.

His Daughter—Find what, daddy, darling?

Her Father—The checkbook, my own lamb.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address F. J. CHENEY & CO. Toledo, O.
Sold by all Druggists 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

At the Funeral.

"He has been not only a minister, but an editor."

"You don't say! Then his chances of getting to heaven are even."

"No, his chances of getting to heaven are not quite so good. He was an editor only a short time—not enough to make it an even thing."—Life

Desire for Information.

"Mrs. Gaddington wants to know all about everybody's business."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "She regards matrimony as a failure because she didn't marry a census taker."

SUCCESS FOR SEVENTY YEARS

This is the record of Pond's Extract Perry Davis'. A reliable remedy for diarrhea, dysentery and all bowel complaints. Get the genuine. 25c, 35c and 50c.

A letter should bear the stamp of approval—also a two-cent stamp if it is to go by mail.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Toil, says the proverb, is the sire of fame.—Euripides.

TO GET ITS BENEFICIAL EFFECTS
ALWAYS BUY THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE

SYRUP OF FIGS AND ELIXIR OF SENNA

MANUFACTURED BY THE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

The original and genuine Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, known throughout the world as the best of family laxatives, for men, women and children, always has the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of every package. It is for sale by all leading druggists everywhere, one size only, regular price 50 cents per bottle. The imitations sometimes offered are of inferior quality and do not give satisfaction; therefore, should be declined.

Glorious Colorado

No one can say he has seen the world until he has seen "Colorado."

Write for the books that picture and describe it

Electric block signals—dining car meals and service "Best in the World"

via the

Union Pacific

"The Safe Road"

Ask about our personally conducted tours to Yellowstone National Park

For full information, tickets, etc., address

E. L. LOMAX, G. P. A.
Union Pacific R. R. Co.
Omaha, Nebraska

DEFIANCE COLLEGE DEFIANCE OHIO

A real college of the highest grade. A college that gives you standing in the educational world, with the great Universities, Public School Men, School Boards, etc. Graduates in demand.

DEPARTMENTS

Collegiate, Academic, Teachers', Manual Training, Engineering, Commercial, Music, Art, Elocution and Domestic Science.

EXPENSES

Board $1.75 per week; Room rent, 75c to $1.00 per week, including the light and heat; Tuition and regular incidentals, $5.00 for the full year.

Description of a Mountain.

"Jimmy," said the teacher, "what is a cape?"

"A cape is land extending into the water."

"Correct. William, define a gulf."

"A gulf is water extending into the land."

"Good. Christopher," to a small, eager-looking boy, "what is a mountain?"

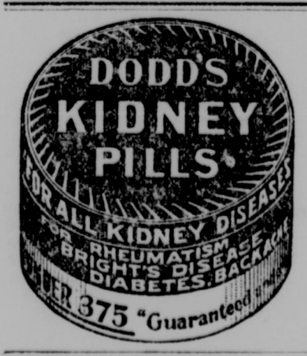
Christopher shot up from his seat so suddenly as to startle the teacher, and promptly responded: "A mountain is land extending into the air."

Doctors Know Soap.

Ask your family physician what he thinks about a laundry soap that is made of borax, cocoanut oil, clean tallow and naphtha. He'll tell you such a soap will be cleansing, sterilizing and antiseptic. That means it will not only make your clothing sweet and clean, but that it will also save you from the dangers of contagion that lie in common soaps. Easy Task soap is the only one that would fill his prescription.

Love is life. He who has love is truly rich; he who hath none is poor indeed. Life with love is eternal.—Krishna.

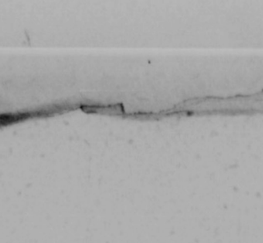
A precious thing is all the more precious to us if it has been won by work or economy.—Ruskin.



WANTED MEN AND WOMEN for quickest selling household specialties on earth. Every woman buys on sight. Experience unnecessary. Goods sell themselves. Write today FISCHGRUND SPECIALTY CO., 160 E. 94th St., New York City.

Your Liver is Clogged up

That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.



CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days. They do their duty. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, and Sick Headache.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

FREE POWDER PAPER FOR EXAMINATION

ROSY-POSY Papier-Poudre & Rouge

The dainty French way. IMPORTED, chamois-like paper coated with smooth, invisible powder, exquisitely perfumed. Carry in purse. Have a cool, velvety complexion ANYWHERE-ANYTIME. Removes moisture and "shine." Rouge paper in same book, gives a touch of natural color. LET US SHOW YOU. Write at once specifying shade: white, flesh or cream. We will mail it in plain envelope. Keep it and mail us 20c in coin or stamps, or; just put in envelope and mail it back to us. Or, if preferred, we will mail you very small sample absolutely free.

LA FRANCESA CO., Dept. 4, LOUISVILLE, KY.

Sticky Sweating Palms

after taking salts or cathartic waters—did you ever notice that weary all gone feeling—the palms of your hands sweat—and rotten taste in your mouth — Cathartics only move by sweating your bowels —Do a lot of hurt—Try a CASCARET and see how much easier the job is done — how much better you feel. 909

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

DELAWARE FARMS Best fruit-growing section. Productive soil, good markets, fine climate. Write new to WILLEY & RAWLINS, SEAFORD, DEL.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The Law of Retribution

Sowing and Reaping---Visiting Sins of Parents Upon Their Children---Justice of the Divine Arrangement---Grace So Much More Abounds---Else Were Your Children Unholy.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 12.—Pastor Russell of The Brooklyn Tabernacle preached here twice today to large and attentive audiences. We report his discourse from the text, "I, the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquities of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments" (Deuteronomy v. 9, 10). A report of the discourse follows:—

No one of experience can question the fact that our text is corroborated by all our experiences in life. However unjust some may claim it to be that the children should inherit the weaknesses resulting from parental dissipations and violations of the Divine law, the fact remains that however atheism may question the existence of a God or infidelity doubt the inspiration of his Word, no one can question the two facts of this text, (1), that sin and its penalty can be inherited and (2) the fact that God is merciful to such as renounce sin and turn to him and seek to walk according to his direction. However these blessings upon evil doers and their children and these blessings upon well doers and their posterity may be termed natural laws and laws of heredity, it does not alter the fact, because the Almighty is the one who made these laws of heredity.

Under the delusion handed down to us from the "dark ages"—that God had condemned to eternal torment all the children of Adam because of his sin—we are all inclined properly enough to feel rebellious against any such matter and to assert that from the standpoint of human reasoning it would be entirely unjust to torture the posterity of Adam eternally for his transgression—"original sin." But as we get the eyes of our understanding opened to see what is the real penalty for sin, that it is death, extinction, and that our perfect parents, fully informed respecting the divine will, were culpable, worthy of death, and when we learn further that whatever is enjoyed by Adam's posterity in the way of life, however disadvantageous the conditions, is so much of divine leniency and mercy and comes so much short of being the full penalty, death, extinction—then we begin to see that life under any conditions and disadvantages is still a boon, better than extinction.

In Wrath Have Mercy, Lord.

Recognizing the wrath of God as manifested in the death penalty (not in an eternity of torture) we can see that the Scriptures everywhere declare that the wrath of God is resting upon our race; that every member of it is subject to this very penalty which came upon father Adam and has been entailed upon all of his posterity.

The Almighty Creator did not wait for us to cry out for his pity and compassion, but from the very beginning, foreknowing our fall into sin, he had the plan arranged for our redemption and ultimate recovery from this condition of wrath, curse, death. We are informed that our Lord Jesus was the Lamb of God slain from the foundation of the world—in the Divine purpose and arrangement—though only now being made manifest to the Church and shortly to the world. Thus viewed there has been no injustice practised against our race in permitting the children to share with their father Adam in his penalty. Rather they had esteemed it and do esteem it better than the sentence itself, and furthermore in the Lord's providences the world's present experiences in the fall and later on in the recovery from the fall in the hands of the great Redeemer during the Millennial Age, is to prove a lesson, a schooling, in the exceeding sinfulness of sin, which the race as a whole will never forget and out of which many (now the Church, later on the world) will draw lessons of wisdom and grace.

Looking still more deeply into the Divine Plan as it is revealed in the Lord's Word for those who are his (Psalm xxv. 14), we find a particular reason why it was not only advisable but necessary that this law of heredity should operate in our race, even though it brought in its train a terrible list of experiences to our race. The reason for this is based upon one element of the Divine character—Justice—the very element which at one time we supposed was violated by this law of heredity. As our eyes open to the teaching of the Scriptures we perceive that if God had not permitted his law of heredity to operate, but had permitted each individual of the race to come forth to perfection and to stand an individual trial such as father Adam was subject to, it would doubtless have meant that at least one-half of the race, possibly more, would have deliberately chosen a course of sin as father Adam chose it. To expect more than one-half to be obedient would be unreasonable. Rather, from what we see about us in the experiences of life, we would have been liable to conclude that only a very small majority, perhaps one-tenth, would have been obedient to God, while the remaining nine-tenths would have been disobedient.

Some might ask, Would not even that have been better than the Divine arrangement as we see it operating now, that the whole race should suffer for one man's disobedience? We answer, No! Not according to the testimony of the Scriptures. The Bible shows us that while this law of retribution has worked such terrible havoc in Adam and his race for now 6,000 years—while 20,000,000,000 have been born in sin and sorrow and pain and after a few years of trouble have died in sorrow and pain, nevertheless in God's due time all of these shall have more favorable opportunities of knowing of God's true character and of attaining to a full character development in his likeness during the Millennial Age. This means that probably more will gain eternal life and blessing under the divine arrangement as we have it than we could reasonably expect would have been saved had the Lord not provided this law of heredity and condemnation of all, but on the contrary had permitted each to be born in perfection and to stand his trial as between loyalty to God with the reward of eternal life or disobedience punished with death. But we shall see that it means much more than this.

Condemned In One—Redeemed by One.

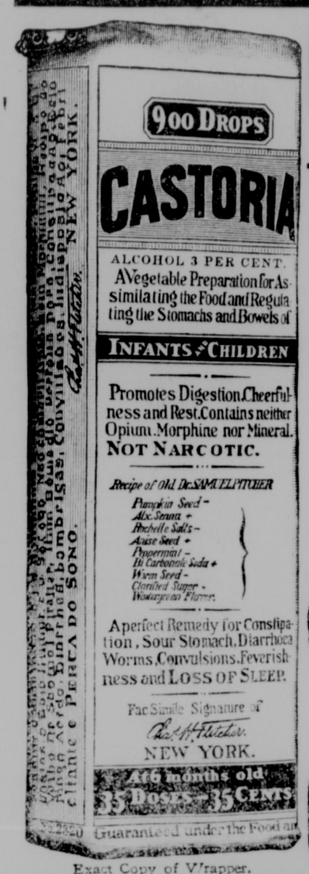
A great economic law is connected with the divine arrangement: The condemnation of a race in one man's loins because of his transgression made possible the divine arrangement that a Second Man should pay the penalty for the first and redeem both him and all who were in him at the time of his condemnation. This is at once a demonstration of Divine Wisdom and of Divine Justice. Suppose, for instance, that the law of heredity had not prevailed, had not been instituted by our Lord, but that each individual had come forth perfect and had been personally placed on trial and been personally condemned to death. Would it not have required an individual savior for each one condemned under such an arrangement? Surely it would. Hence, had one-half of the race proven themselves sinners and been personally condemned it would either have been necessary to avoid redemption altogether or to redeem the sinner half of the race, by giving a life for a life—a perfect being's sacrifice for or instead of each imperfect life. Estimating the total number of our race at 20,000,000,000, Justice would have been obliged to require 10,000,000,000 of perfect beings to be offered as the ransom price for the 10,000,000,000 of sinners. Under the very best estimate that we can possibly make, this would have required the death of all the perfect ones of the race as redeemers for all the imperfect members of the race, and what a havoc that would have implied—with just as many dying as under present conditions, namely, one-half as sinners and the other half as redeemers, ransoms. Besides, we perceive that it would not have been just on the part of the Almighty to compel the righteous ones to suffer for the unrighteous as their redeemers, hence there would have been no assurance even then that any but a fraction of the sinner race would have been redeemed. On the contrary, how wise, conservative and economical was the Divine arrangement that by one man's disobedience under the laws of heredity the many would be born sinners and sharers in his penalty, death, and that then in due time one Savior, one perfect one, the "man Christ Jesus," might redeem Adam and, redeeming him, redeem all of his race from the death sentence, the curse, the wrath of God, and as a result of the redemption obtain the right, the authority, the power during his Millennial Kingdom and in association with his glorified Church of the Gospel Age, to bless all the families of the earth and to uplift as many as would be willing out of all their ignorance, weakness and sinful and dying conditions to all that was lost in Adam.

We have seen that in harmony with the Divine law it would not have been just for the Heavenly Father to obligate the righteous to die for sinners and that hence the redemption of the sinners would have been problematical—very doubtful. But on the contrary the Heavenly Father well knew in advance the loyalty of his First-Begotten, his only Begotten, who is declared to have been the "beginning of the creation of God" (Revelation iii, 14). He knew not only of Jesus' loyalty but that his experiences with him in glory would every way qualify our Lord for the tests and the sacrifices necessary for the redemption of the race with his own precious blood. The Scriptures assure us furthermore that the Father set before him some certain joys, certain blessings, certain promises, in connection with this work of man's redemption; as we read, "Who for the joy set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is now set down on the right hand of the majesty on high" (Hebrews xii, 2).

Retributive Joys and Rewards.

We are to remember, too, that the Scriptures distinctly teach that the condition of the affairs of our world—sin, retributive punishment, the redemption through Jesus, the call of the Church and their sufferings with their Redeemer and the promises of future blessing and glory both for the Church and for the world—are subjects in which the angels of God are interested. As the Apostle Peter says, "Of which salvation the prophets have enquired and searched diligently. . . . Searching what or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow. . . . Which things the angels desire to look into" (I Peter, i, 10-12). They wondered when all the sufferings of Jesus and the Church would be completed and when the glory time would come and recovery from sin and death conditions; when God's purpose would thus ripen and bear fruit in the recovery of those who fell from his favor in Adam's disobedience but were redeemed by the precious blood.

The great lesson of what constitutes disobedience, and how serious a sin it is, and what it would lead to if allowed to take its course, was illustrated in man's experiences; and all the hosts of angels looked on with amazement, no doubt. God's Justice was fully demonstrated in the infliction of the death penalty and the permission of its inroads upon the mental, moral and physical perfection of his creatures, bringing many of the race down almost to brutality. God's Love was manifested in the gift of his Son, in the arrangement of his plan by which for the joy set before him, Jesus might become Adam's Redeemer, and the Bridegroom of the Elect Church and ultimately the great King of Glory who, during the Millennial Age, is to restore, revive and bless and test Adam and all his race.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Fifty Miles from Home and no train until morning—a thought that brings no anxiety to the man with a residence

Bell Telephone Service

His voice will bridge the distance in a twinkling.
If your are still without this safeguard in the home, call the Business Office today.

Use the Bell

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company
D. P. DAVIS, Agent,
Keyser, W. Va.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF Valuable Coal AND OTHER PROPERTY

Situate in Garrett County, Md., Known as the Gillespie Property.

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned Trustee, by decree entered on the 20th day of May, 1910, in the matter of C. D. Gillespie, bankrupt, pending in the District Court of the United state for the Northern District of West Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will, on SATURDAY, the 23rd Day of July, 1910,

at Eleven O'clock A. M.,

at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, owned by C. D. Gillespie.

I

All the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying

315 Acres of Land.

being part of a tract known as "Elk Garden," situate in Garrett county, Maryland, together with 100 acres of the surface of said 315 acres and all the rights and privileges granted to the said C. D. Gillespie in connection with said coal property. Two-thirds of said property was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Ada A. V. Halterman, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, of record in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 43, folio 152, and the remaining one-third was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Austin Brown, Sheriff, by deed bearing date December 1, 1909, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 59, folio 133, to which deeds reference is now here had for a more particular description of said property.

This property is situated very near the Western Maryland Railroad, near the station of Henry on said railroad and adjacent to the coal property now being operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Company at its mines at Henry. The coal underlying this property which is to be sold is very valuable.

II

All of the coal underlying a tract of land containing

68 1-2 Acres,

situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being known as a part of the "Elk Garden" tract and being the same coal conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Peter F. Snyder and wife, by deed bearing date October 27, 1905, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 364, to which deed reference is here had for a particular description of said 68½ acres, together with all the rights and privileges as to mining rights, surface and rights of way, as were vested in said Gillespie by said deed.

This 68½ acres of coal is considered very valuable. It is located a distance of about three or four miles from the railroad.

III

An undivided one half interest in ten acres of land, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being also a part of what is known as the "Elk Garden" tract, said undivided one-half interest having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry F. Marshall and wife, by deed dated the 11th day of August 1902, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 42, folio 200, to which deed reference is had for a particular description of said property.

IV

A tract or parcel of land containing one acre, more or less, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, on the Western Maryland Railroad, near Gorman, having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry C. Stemple and wife, by deed dated the 30th day of April, 1907, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 54, folio 454. There are situated, on this property, several buildings, one of which can be used for a combination dwelling house and store building.

All of the above described property will be sold free and acquit from all liens and incumbrances. The title to all of said property is considered good.

TERMS OF SALE.—One-third cash in hand on day of sale and the residue upon a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to give interest bearing notes, with good personal security, for the deferred purchase money and the legal title to the property to be retained as additional security, until said deferred purchase money has been paid.

C. W. MAXWELL, Trustee.

ORDER NISI.

Jane Roberts vs. J. Turner Lohr and wife. No. 1661 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 28th day of May, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by William R. Offutt and J. C. Renninger, attorneys name in the Mortgage, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of June, 1910, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 24th day of June, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $2610.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Alice Campbell, et al. vs. William Guard, et al.

No. 1667 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 15th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Norval Speelman, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 15th day of July, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 8th day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1809.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

OPERA HOUSE
School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,
Opera House. OAKLAND, MD.

SINES.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sines went to Connellsville and Coal Centre to visit their son and daughter last week.

Sylvester Markley was visiting his niece near Hutton last Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Charles Haskell went to Oakland last Monday for a load of goods for John Sines & Son.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sines made a flying trip to Hutton last Sunday.

Sylvester Markley is working on the state road at Thayerville.

Mrs. Bruner Friend was visiting at Hoyes Run last week.

Mr. William Ream was visiting his son at Crellin last week.

Elmer Cross is working at Breedlove, W. Va.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawtont & Sons.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to schol and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not are vertised here. For particulars address
M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p m

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-1y.

The Republican for Job Printing

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1910. NUMBER 17

HARRY WELCH WAS KILLED NEAR ALEXANDER

His Body Brought to Oakland Sunday and Taken to Friendsville From Here

Harry Welch, aged about twenty-four years, son of Thomas Welch, of Friendsville, who was employed by the Croft Lumber Company at Alexander, West Va., was killed Saturday by a log slipping from its fastenings as it was being placed upon a truck and falling upon the young man, produced almost instant death.

The remains were brought to Oakland Sunday morning from Alexander, being accompanied here by Mr. J. H. Dowler, superintendent of the mill, and Harry Selby, a young man who was well acquainted with the deceased. Later in the day the remains was taken to Friendsville, Mr. Welch's former home and was buried on Tuesday.

The deceased was married about a year ago and at the time of the accident Mrs. Welch was at Friendsville on a visit to her husband's parents.

Garrett County Institute.

The annual county institute of Garrett county opened Monday at 10 a. m., by singing "Maryland, My Maryland." This was followed by an invocation by Rev. Davis. The address of welcome was delivered by Mr. S. T. Jones and was responded to by Prof. Gibson. The afternoon was spent in section work and music. The remainder of the week was taken up by lectures by Dr. Corson of Ohio, Dr. Baer of Frostburg, and Prof. Jones of Baltimore, interspersed by singing under the direction of Prof. Gibson. Unfortunate Dr. Stephens, Miss Davis and Prof. Snyder could not be present.

The school adjourned at 3 p. m. Tuesday to witness a game of ball between the normal students and Oakland's team.

The Committee on Resolution headed by M. K. Welch met Wednesday and presented three resolution, which are in brief, that the minimum salary be raised from $27 to $30; that teachers' ability be determined by teaching instead of by examination, and that the training school term be lengthened. D.

Stocking Garrett Streams.

A large consignment of brook trout stock was taken to Oakland by the U. S. Fish Commission from the hatchery at White Sulphur Springs, Va., on Tuesday, and were distributed to applicants who had made requisition for them months ago. In all over 30,000 of the stock were placed in Garrett trout streams.

Subscribe for The Republican.

A CALL TO ARMS

No Room In Oakland for Knockers and Pessimists.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I am surprised at the number of people in Oakland who are doing exactly what they are advised to do in the head line of an article running in one of the local papers, viz: "Watch Oakland Grow." Ninety per cent of the people of Oakland are content to watch, while the remainder are doing things. It is surprising the great number of Mike Macawbers, or descendants of that worthy friend of Dickens, who are always "waiting for something to turn up."

What publicity does Oakland or Garrett county get? A local correspondent has a chill and he wires Baltimore papers that the crops in Garrett county have been ruined by a freeze, or he has a night sweat and reports great damage from flood. A man who would publish such reports at the expense of the reputation of his county in order to have the pleasure of reading something from his own pen is so narrow minded that the people of Oakland should take up a collection to pay his fare at least as far as Hutton, so he could see the world and have his vision broadened somewhat.

I would like to see the dry bones of Oakland wake up. Why haven't we got a modern hotel in Oakland that would be a credit to the town? Why do we ship in brick and tile from a distance when better material for the manufacture of these articles is found right here at home? Why is it we haven't a first class lumber yard with a planing mill and a good supply of building material? Why do we send our laundry to Cumberland and Grafton when a small steam laundry would be a paying investment in Oakland? Why is it that we have people looking for offices, stores and houses for rent almost every day in the week, and the applicant turns away disgusted? A number of other "whys" may be had for the asking.

Oakland should be a better town, and Garrett county should be the wealthiest and most progressive county in the State. Garrett has the agricultural lands and the mineral resources.

Awake, ye sleepers! wake! shake off the horrible nightmare of bad climate, inertia, etc!

If you do not like this keep still about it. CONTRIBUTED.

Drowned While Giving Swimming Feats.

On Monday George Blackburn, a young man from Elk Garden, was drowned in the North Branch near Piedmont. The body was carried down stream and has yet been found. He was giving exhibitions along with "Skinny" Bell in doing feats of swimming, when the accident happened. Bell came near drowning.

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO

HAVE 20 TONS

Granulated Lime

To Sell $6.00 Ton.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

A TERRIFIC LIGHTNING AND THUNDER STORM SATURDAY

Which Raged Nearly Nine Hours and Did Comparatively Little Damage.

From half past seven o'clock Saturday evening until nearly three o'clock Sunday morning this section of the country was swept by a storm of thunder, lightning, rain and hail which was probably the most severe and of longer duration than any storm in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The man who dares to come forward and say he has witnessed more brilliant and threatening flashes of lightning repeated more frequently at closer range and through a longer duration of time, has not yet been found, or if such an individual is a resident of this community he is afraid to voice his assertions, feeling sure that his word would be doubted.

The lightning was unlike any ever seen in the mountains. It came in sheets, forked, streaked and seemingly also in circles. At times there were apparently a dozen streaks showed simultaneously, followed by sharp crashes of thunder. This display of nature continued until eleven o'clock before rain fell and then it came with a rush and roar that made the earth tremble.

The rain continued until three o'clock and at times there was considerable hail mixed with it. The storm was at its height at about two o'clock when the lightning's play was most vivid and crash upon crash of thunder followed in rapid and seemingly unending crescendos. The lightning was evidently so near at hand and the thunder was so clear, sharp and startling that few people were able to sleep through it.

With it all, however, comparatively little damage resulted. The most serious loss that has been reported was the death of three cows belonging to Mr. Perry Bowser, near Bittinger. The animals were in a pasture field and had sought shelter under a tree which was struck by a bolt of lightning.

A cow belonging to Miss Nell Turley, of Oakland was also killed.

Numerous buildings were damaged but none caught fire so far as can be learned. The barn of Mr. S. C. Beachy, near Bittinger, was damaged to some extent, while County Treasurer Robert L. Fries sustained the loss of a large number of chickens which were drowned in the waters of White Rock Creek west of Oakland.

Contractors along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad both east and west of Oakland lost considerable by the heavy wash which carried away embankments and materials.

Saw Mill Boiler Lets Go At Shaft.

At about 10:30 o,clock Monday morning the boiler of the engine of the saw mill run by Mr. William Hansel at Borden Shaft exploded, seriously injuring Mr. Robert Marstellar and also scalding and burning Mr. Wm. Jones, both employes at the mill. Mr. Oscar Hansel, son of the owner, was working near the engine, but fortunately escaped unhurt, although he was thrown some distance by the force of the explosion. Mr. Marstellar is formerly from Keyser and was employed as a sawyer by Mr. Hansel, who is operating the mill getting lumber out for the Consolidation Coal Company. Mr. Marstellar was at the furnace door when the explosion occurred and the force blowing out the furnace door carried him over a pile of lumber, landing him sixty feet away, while the engine itself was thrown twenty-five feet the other direction.

Crossed Wires Caused Fright.

Crossed wires in the Oakland opera house last Saturday evening about seven o'clock was the cause of filling a portion of the building with smoke and the consequent alarm of fire which followed. In some unaccountable manner the wires, placed in the building only temporarily, became crossed and the composition coating covering them began to smoke. Miss Beckwith was the first to notice the condition of things and in trying to locate the trouble she caught a curtain at a window and her hands came in direct contact with the wires. The lady suffered painful burns on several of her fingers, otherwise she was uninjured, and the building was not damaged.

No Celebration at Deer Park.

The contemplated celebration at Deer Park, announcement of which appeared in this paper last week, has been called off; hence Deer Park will enjoy a safe and sane Fourth.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

MARYLAND-WEST VIRGINIA BOUNDARY LINE

Text of the Decision of the Supreme Court.

The following is the text of the opinion and order of the Supreme Court of the United States handed down recently in the case of the State of Maryland vs. the State of West Virginia:

This cause came on to be heard at this term and was argued by counsel; and thereupon, on consideration thereof, it was adjudged and decreed as follows:

First. That the true boundary line between the States of Maryland and West Virginia is ascertained and established as follows:

Beginning at the common corner of the States of Maryland and Virginia on the southern bank of the Potomac River at low-water mark at or near the mouth of the Shenandoah River (near Harper's Ferry) and running thence with the southern bank of said Potomac River at low-water mark, and with the southern bank of the North Branch of the Potomac River at low-water mark, to the point where the north and south line from the Fairfax Stone crosses the said North Branch of the Potomac, and thence running northerly, as near as may be, with the Deakins or Old State line to the line of the State of Pennsylvania.

Second. That Julius K. Monroe, William McCulloh Brown and Samuel S. Gannett be, and they are hereby appointed commissioners to run, locate and establish and permanently mark with suitable monuments the said Deakins or Old State line as the boundary line between the States of Maryland and West Virginia from said point on the southern bank of the North Branch of the Potomac River to the said Pennsylvania line, in accordance with the opinion of this court heretofore filed in this case and with this decree, the said line to be run and located as far as practicable as it has been generally recognized and adopted by the people residing about or near the same as the boundary line between the said States, and not as conforming, except to a limited extent, to the western boundary of the Maryland Military Lots as said lots are now located and held. Said commissioners shall mark said line as run, located and established by them with suitable stone monuments, at reasonable and proper intervals, according to the topography of the country.

It is further ordered that before entering upon the discharge of their duties each of said commissioners shall be duly sworn to perform faithfully, impartially and without prejudice or bias the duties herein imposed; said oath to be taken before the clerk of this court, or before either of the clerks of the Circuit Courts of the United States for the District of Maryland or for the Northern District of West Virginia, or before an officer authorized by law to administer an oath in the State of Maryland or of West Virginia, and returned with their report; that said commissioners may arrange for their organization, their meetings and the particular manner of the performance of their duties, and are authorized to adopt all ordinary and legitimate methods in the ascertainment of the true location of said boundary line, including the taking of evidence under oath and calling for papers and documents, but in the event evidence is taken the parties shall be notified and permitted to be present and cross-examine the witness; and all evidence taken by the commissioners and all exceptions thereto and action thereon shall be preserved and certified and returned with their report.

Said commissioners are also at liberty to refer to and consult the printed record in the cause so far as they may think proper to enable them to discharge their duties under this decree.

It is further ordered that the clerk of this court shall at once forward to the governor of each of said States of Maryland and West Virginia, and to each of the commissioners appointed by this decree, a copy of this decree duly authenticated. And said commissioners are authorized, if they deem it necessary, to request the cooperation and assistance of the State authorities in the performance of the duties imposed on them by this decree. It is further ordered that said commissioner do proceed, with all convenient dispatch, to discharge their duties in running, locating, establishing and marking said line as herein directed, and make their report thereof and of their proceedings in the premises to this court on or before the first of January, 1911, together with a complete bill of costs and charges annexed.

It is further ordered that should vacancies occur in said board of commissioners by reason of death, the refusal to act or inability to perform the duties required by this decree, the Chief Justice of this court is hereby authorized and empowered to appoint other commissioners to supply such vacancies, and said Chief Justice is authorized to act on such information in the premises as may be satisfactory to himself.

It is further ordered that all costs of the proceedings by said commissioners under this decree, costs incident to the running, locating, establishing and marking said line, shall be paid by the States of Maryland and West Virginia equally.

Third. That the cross bill of the State of West Virginia, in so far as it asks for a decree fixing the north bank of the Potomac River as the boundary line between said States be, and the same is hereby dismissed.

Fourth. That this decree shall not be construed as abrogating or setting aside the compact made between commissions of the State of Maryland and the State of Virginia at Mount Vernon on the 28th day of March, 1875, and which was confirmed by the general assembly of Maryland and afterwards by act of the general assembly of Virginia passed on the 3rd day of January, 1876, but the said compact, except so far as it may have been superseded by the provisions of the Constitution of the United States, or may be inconsistent with this decree, shall remain obligatory upon and between the States of Maryland and West Virginia, so far as it is applicable to that part of the Potomac River which extends along the border of said States, as ascertained and established by this decree.

Fifth. That all the costs in this case and the proceedings therein as the same shall be taxed by the clerk of this court, and including also the costs of the surveys made by the two States under the order or orders of this court, said costs for said surveys to be ascertained and taxed by the clerk of this court upon vouchers sworn to and exhibited to him, shall be equally divided between the said two States.

Married.

DEWITT—FRIEND—At the home of the bride's parents at Hoyes, by Rev. C. A. Powers, of Friendsville, Miss Sadie Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Henry E. Friend, and M. Arthur DeWitt, also of Hoyes. The young couple are well known in many portions of Garrett county and they will be followed by the best wishes of their numerous friends for a long and prosperous wedded life.

BOYER—RILEY—At the Commercial Hotel in Oakland, yesterday afternoon, by Rev. C. A. Powers, pastor of the Friendsville M. E. church, Miss Mattie E. Riley, of Selbysport, and Mr. Charles Ross Boyer, of Cranesville. The bride has been one of Garrett county's most successful educators and for a number of years past has held the position of principal of our foremost schools. The groom is an enterprising young man and is highly esteemed by all who know him.

OAKLAND WILL CELEBRATE THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

Will Be under the Auspices of the Mountain City Band.

Oakland will celebrate the Glorious Fourth.

This announcement was made yesterday morning after a meeting held by members of the Mountain City Band the night previous when plans were outlined and arrangements completed for the safe and sane observance of the great national holiday.

The day's program contemplates an outing and picnic rather than a noisy and boistering gathering.

The Oakland Hotel grounds have been secured as the picnic grounds where all kinds of amusements will be provided for the entertainment of visitors who may come to Oakland that day. The ball room of the hotel will be utilized at night when a dance will be held.

The program during the day will include band concerts, a tournament, two base ball games, and races of various kinds, besides other amusements.

All are cordially invited to visit Oakland Monday, the 4th.

WASHOUT NEAR EVERETT TUNNEL

Cloudburst on the Seventeen Mile Grade Takes Away Westbound Track.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad, suffered again Tuesday from storm and flood. At Big Curve, near Everett tunnel on the seventeen mile grade, the westbound track was completely washed away for some distance, requiring fourteen cars of stone and six hours hard work for a large force of men to again open.

Program at Crellin.

Great preparations are being made for the big celebration to be held at Crellin this county on July 2nd and there will be something doing every hour of the day and until late in the evening. The big events have been scheduled as follows: Parade of Woodmen, Sunday schools and band, 11 to 12 a. m.; dinner served on the grounds, 12 to 1 p. m.; speaking in the grove, 1 to 2 p. m.; baseball, Deer Park vs. Crellin, 2 to 4 p. m.; races, sack, potato, etc., 4 to 6 p. m.; supper on the grounds, 6 to 7 p. m.; fireworks at 8 p. m.

Excursion trains will leave Crellin in time for all to get home at a reasonable hour and everything will be done to make visitors feel at home and enjoy the day.

Let us fill your prescriptions. Lowest prices, quality considered. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

Copyrighted.

TEDDY TAFTY

Teddy-Tafty Sundae

The Latest in Ice Cream.

Healthful

Delightful

Refreshing

Oakland Steam Bakery

Manufacturers of Ice Cream complying absolutely with the Pure Food Laws of the United States.

We Freeze our Reputation into our Ice Cream.

TEDDY TAFTY

TEDDY-TAFTY.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises.

CHAPTER II.—Continued.

"There's going to be a death!" she wailed. "Oh, Miss Rachel, there's going to be a death!"

"There will be," I said grimly, "if you don't keep quiet, Liddy Allen."

And so we sat there until morning, wondering if the candle would last until dawn, and arranging what trains we could take back to town. If we had only stuck to that decision and gone back before it was too late!

The sun came finally, and from my window I watched the trees along the drive take shadowy form, gradually lose their ghostlike appearance, become gray and then green. The Greenwood club showed itself a dab of white against the hill across the valley, and an early robin or two hopped around in the dew. Not until the milk-boy and the sun came, about the same time, did I dare to open the door into the hall and look around. Everything was as we had left it. Trunks were heaped here and there, ready for the trunk-room, and through an end window of stained glass came a streak of red and yellow daylight that was eminently cheerful. The milk-boy was pounding somewhere below, and the day had begun.

Thomas Johnson came ambling up the drive about half-past six, and we could hear him clattering around on the lower floor, opening shutters. I had to take Liddy to her room upstairs, however—she was quite sure she would find something uncanny. In fact, when she did not, having now the courage of daylight, she was actually disappointed.

Well, we did not go back to town that day.

I warned Liddy not to mention what had happened to anybody, and telephoned to town for servants. Then, after a breakfast which did more credit to Thomas' heart than his head, I went on a short tour of investigation. The sounds had come from the east wing, and not without some qualms I began there. At first I found nothing. Since then I have developed my powers of observation, but at that time I was a novice. The small card-room seemed undisturbed. I looked for footprints, which is, I believe, the conventional thing to do, although my experience has been that as clews both footprints and thumb-marks are more useful in fiction than in fact. But the stairs in that wing offered something.

At the top of the flight had been placed a tall wicker hamper, packed with linen that had come from town. It stood at the edge of the top step, almost barring passage, and on the step below it was a long, fresh scratch. For three steps the scratch was repeated, gradually diminishing, as if some object had fallen, striking each one. Then for four steps nothing. On the fifth step below was a round dent in the hard wood. That was all, and it seemed little enough, except that I was positive the marks had not been there the day before.

It bore out my theory of the sound, which had been for all the world like the bumping of a metallic object down a flight of steps. The four steps had been skipped. I reasoned that an iron bar, for instance, would do something of the sort—strike two or three steps, end down, then turn over, jumping a few stairs, and landing with a thud.

Iron bars, however, do not fall down-stairs in the middle of the night alone. Coupled with the figure on the veranda the agency by which it climbed might be assumed. But—and here was the thing that puzzled me most—the doors were all fastened that morning, the windows unmolested, and the particular door from the card room to the veranda had a combination lock of which I held the key, and which had not been tampered with.

I fixed on an attempt at burglary, as the most natural explanation—an attempt frustrated by the falling of the object, whatever it was, that had roused me. Two things I could not understand; how the intruder had escaped with everything locked, and why he had left the small silver, which, in the absence of a butler, had remained downstairs over night.

In the afternoon a hack came up from Casanova, with a fresh relay of servants. The driver took them with a flourish to the servants' entrance, and drove around to the front of the house, where I was awaiting him.

"Two dollars," he said in reply to my question. "I don't charge full rates, because, bringin' 'em up all summer as I do, it pays to make a special price. When they got off the train I sez, sez I: 'There's another bunch for Sunnyside, cook, parlor maid and all.' Yes'm—six summers, and a new lot never less than once a month. They won't stand for the country and the lonesomeness, I reckon."

But with the presence of the

"I Was Roused by a Revolver Shot."

"bunch" of servants my courage revived, and late in the afternoon came a message from Gertrude that she and Halsey would arrive that night at about 11 o'clock, coming in the car from Richfield. Things were looking up; and when Beulah, my cat, a most intelligent animal, found some early catnip on a bank near the house and rolled in it in a feline ecstasy, I decided that getting back to nature was the thing to do.

While I was dressing for dinner, Liddy rapped at the door. She was hardly herself yet, but privately I think she was worrying about the broken mirror and its augury, more than anything else. When she came in she was holding something in her hand, and she laid it on the dressing table carefully.

"I found it in the linen hamper," she said. "It must be Mr. Halsey's, but it seems queer how it got there."

It was the half of a link cuff button of unique design, and I looked at it carefully.

"Where was it? In the bottom of the hamper?" I asked.

"On the very top," she replied. "It's a mercy it didn't fall out on the way."

When Liddy had gone I examined the fragment attentively. I had never seen it before, and I was certain it was not Halsey's. It was of Italian workmanship, and consisted of a mother-of-pearl foundation, encrusted with tiny seed-pearls, strung on horsehair to hold them. In the center was a small ruby. The trinket was odd enough, but not intrinsically of great value. Its interest for me lay in this: Liddy had found it lying in the top of the hamper which had blocked the east-wing stairs.

That afternoon the Armstrongs' housekeeper, a youngish good-looking woman, applied for Mrs. Ralston's place, and I was glad enough to take her. She looked as though she might be equal to a dozen of Liddy, with her snapping black eyes and heavy jaw. Her name was Anne Watson, and I dined that evening for the first time in three days.

CHAPTER III.

Mr. John Bailey Appears.

I had dinner served in the breakfast room. Somehow the huge dining room depressed me, and Thomas, cheerful enough all day, allowed his spirits to go down with the sun. He had a habit of watching the corners of the room, left shadowy by the candles on the table, and altogether it was not a festive meal.

Dinner over I went into the living room. I had three hours before the children could possibly arrive, and I got out my knitting.

The chug of the automobile as it climbed the hill was the most welcome sound I had heard for a long time, and with Gertrude and Halsey actually before me, my troubles seemed over for good. Gertrude stood smiling in the hall, with her hat quite over one ear, and her hair in every direction under her pink veil. Gertrude is a very pretty girl, no matter how her hat is, and I was not surprised when Halsey presented a good-looking young man, who bowed at me and looked at Trude—that is the ridiculous nickname Gertrude brought from school.

"I have brought a guest, Aunt Ray," Halsey said. "I want you to adopt him into your affections and your Saturday-to-Monday list. Let me present John Bailey, only you must call him Jack. In 12 hours he'll be calling you 'Aunt'; I know him."

We shook hands, and I got a chance to look at Mr. Bailey; he was a tall fellow, perhaps 30, and wore a small mustache. I remember wondering why; he seemed to have a good mouth and when he smiled his teeth were above the average. One never knows why certain men cling to a messy upper lip that must get into things, any more than one understands some women building up their hair on wire atrocities. Otherwise, he was very good to look at, stalwart and tanned, with the direct gaze that I like. I am particular about Mr. Bailey, because he was a prominent figure in what happened later.

Gertrude was tired with the trip and went up to bed very soon. I made up my mind to tell them nothing until the next day, and then to make as light of our excitement as possible. After all, what had I to tell? An inquisitive face peering in at a window; a crash in the night; a scratch or two on the stairs, and half a cuff-button! As for Thomas and his forebodings, it was always my belief that a negro is one part thief, one part pigment, and the rest superstition.

It was Saturday night. The two men went to the billiard room, and I could hear them talking as I went upstairs. It seemed that Halsey had stopped at the Greenwood club for gasolene and found Jack Bailey there, with the Sunday golf crowd. Mr. Bailey had not been hard to persuade—probably Gertrude knew why—and they had carried him off triumphantly. I roused Liddy to get them something to eat—Thomas was beyond reach in the lodge—and paid no attention to her evident terror of the kitchen regions. Then I went to bed. The men were still in the billiard room when I finally dozed off, and the last thing I remember was the howl of a dog in front of the house. It wailed a crescendo of woe that trailed off hopefully, only to break out afresh from a new point of the compass.

At three o'clock in the morning I was roused by a revolver shot. The sound seemed to come from just outside my door. For a moment I could not move. Then—I heard Gertrude stirring in her room, and the next moment she had thrown open the connecting door.

"O, Aunt Ray! Aunt Ray!" she cried hysterically. "Some one has been killed!"

"Thieves," I said shortly. "Thank goodness, there are some men in the house to-night." I was getting into my slippers and a bath-robe, and Gertrude with shaking hands was lighting a lamp. Then we opened the door into the hall, where, crowded on the upper landing of the stairs, the maids, white-faced and trembling, were peering down, headed by Liddy. I was greeted by a series of low screams and questions, and I tried to quiet them. Gertrude had dropped on a chair and sat there limp and shivering.

I went at once across the hall to Halsey's room and knocked; then I pushed the door open. It was empty; the bed had not been occupied!

"He must be in Mr. Bailey's room," I said excitedly, and followed by Liddy, we went there. Like Halsey's, it had not been occupied! Gertrude was on her feet now, but she leaned against the door for support.

"They have been killed!" she gasped. Then she caught me by the arm and dragged me toward the stairs. "They may only be hurt, and we must find them," she said, her eyes dilated with excitement.

I don't remember how we got down the stairs; I do remember expecting every moment to be killed. The cook was at the telephone upstairs, calling the Greenwood club, and Liddy was behind me, afraid to come and not daring to stay behind. We found the living room and the drawing room undisturbed. Somehow I felt that whatever we found would be in the card-room or on the staircase, and nothing but the fear that Halsey was in danger drove me on; with every step my knees seemed to give way under me. Gertrude was ahead and in the card-room she stopped, holding her candle high. Then she pointed silently to the doorway into the hall beyond. Huddled there on the floor, face down, with his arms extended, was a man.

Gertrude ran forward with a gasping sob, "Jack," she cried, "Oh, Jack!"

Liddy had run, screaming, and the two of us were there alone. It was Gertrude who turned him over, finally, until we could see his white face, and then she drew a deep breath and dropped limply to her knees. It was the body of a man, a gentleman, in a dinner coat and white waistcoat, stained now with blood—the body of a man I had never seen before.

CHAPTER IV.

Where Is Halsey?

Gertrude gazed at the face in a kind of fascination. Then she put out her hands blindly, and I thought she was going to faint.

"He has killed him!" she muttered almost inarticulately; and at that, because my nerves were going, I gave her a good shake.

"What do you mean?" I said frantically. There was a depth of grief and conviction in her tone that was worse than anything she could have said. The shake braced her, anyhow, and she seemed to pull herself together. But not another word would she say; she stood gazing down at that gruesome figure on the floor, while Liddy, ashamed of her flight and afraid to come back, drove before her three terrified women servants into the drawing room, which was as near as any of them would venture.

Once in the drawing room, Gertrude collapsed and went from one fainting spell into another. I had all I could do to keep Liddy from drowning her with cold water, and the maids huddled in a corner, as much use as so many sheep. In a short time, although it seemed hours, a car came rushing up, and Anne Watson, who had waited to dress, opened the door. Three men from the Greenwood club, in all kinds of costumes, hurried in. I recognized a Mr. Jarvis, but the others were strangers.

"What's wrong?" the Jarvis man asked—and we made a strange picture, no doubt. "Nobody hurt, is there?" He was looking at Gertrude.

"Worse than that, Mr. Jarvis," I said. "I think it is murder."

At the word there was a commotion. The cook began to cry, and Mrs. Watson knocked over a chair. The men were visibly impressed.

"Not any member of the family?" Mr. Jarvis asked, when he had got his breath.

"No," I said; and motioning Liddy to look after Gertrude, I led the way with a lamp to the cardroom door. One of the men gave an exclamation, and they all hurried across the room. Mr. Jarvis took the lamp from me—I remember that—and then feeling myself getting dizzy and light-headed I closed my eyes. When I opened them their brief examination was over, and Mr. Jarvis was trying to put me in a chair.

"You must get upstairs," he said firmly, "you and Miss Gertrude, too. This has been a terrible shock. In his own home, too."

I stared at him without comprehension. "Who is it?" I asked with difficulty. There seemed a band drawn tight around my throat.

"It is Arnold Armstrong," he said, looking at me oddly, "and he has been murdered—in his father's house."

After a minute I gathered myself together and Mr. Jarvis helped me into the living room. Liddy had got Gertrude upstairs, and the two strange men from the club stayed with the body. The reaction from the shock and strain was tremendous; I was collapsed—and then Mr. Jarvis asked me a question that brought back my wandering faculties.

"Where is Halsey?" he asked.

"Halsey!" Suddenly Gertrude's stricken face rose before me—the empty room upstairs. Where was Halsey?

"He was here, wasn't he?" Mr. Jarvis persisted. "He stopped at the club on his way over."

"I—don't know where he is," I said feebly.

One of the men from the club came in, asked for the telephone, and I could hear him excitedly talking, saying something about coroners and detectives. Mr. Jarvis leaned over to me.

"Why don't you trust me, Miss Innes?" he said. "If I can do anything I will. But tell me the whole thing."

I did, finally, from the beginning, and when I told of Jack Bailey's being in the house that night he gave a long whistle.

"I wish they were both here," he said when I finished. "Whatever mad prank took them away, it would look better if they were here. Especially—"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

STRAIGHT TALK ON ALCOHOL

Great Majority of Men Must Learn Gradually to Like It, Because They See Others Drink.

Why do we drink? Because our bodies are walking aquariums, and we have to keep the protoplasm of our cells swimming in water, or it won't live. So long as we drink only water there is little danger of our taking too much—except by drowning ourselves; but when we begin to mix things with it trouble begins. Certainly on general principles it would appear that the simplest, cheapest, and most rational thing would be to take our necessarily daily three pints of water "straight," without mixture of any sort—clear, fresh, and sparkling from the spring; but for some strange reason, man has never been satisfied to do this, but must add something to the water before he will call it a drink, writes Woods Hutchinson, A. M., M. D., in Sunday School Tribune. And he doesn't appear to have been particularly lucky in his additions.

The first and commonest addition which he has made to his drinking water has been an unintentional one, sewage, which, though it may give the special flavor that we so much admire to the water of our own particular well, is neither appetizing nor wholesome, especially when it contains typhoid bacilli. Up to 50 years ago, 90 per cent. of civilized humanity drank, more or less diluted, sewage, and it was only recently that we discovered the damage that this innocent-looking mixture does, and began breaking ourselves of the habit.

Man's earliest and commonest intentional addition to the water he drinks was also the product of a germ—the toxin of the yeast bacterium, alcohol. He could hardly be considered ideally fortunate in this addition either; for, although it gave him a good deal more exhilaration and enjoyment, it was always at a price, both before and after taking. Just how heavy a price, and by how many paid, we are only beginning to discover and suspect. Sewage probably kills many more than alcohol, but there are other and crueler penalties than death.

A large part of our drinking water has always been taken in the form of mixtures with some other substances. These beverages are always much more expensive than the plain water, often quite troublesome to secure and prepare, have little or no food value, are of doubtful effect in moderation, and usually injurious in excess. Why they should ever have come into such universal use, in all races and in all ages of the world, is one of the standing puzzles of human nature.

There is, moreover, one most striking and, from a biological point of view, most significant fact, that eagerly as these beverages have been consumed, and constantly as they have been in use by the race for from 10 to 20 centuries, we have never developed an instinct or natural appetite for them. No child ever yet was born with an appetite or instinctive liking for beer or whisky; and very few with a real liking for the taste of tea or coffee, although they soon learn to drink them for the sake of the sugar and cream in them. Thus nature has clearly marked them off from all the real foods on our tables, showing unmistakably that they are not essential either to life or health; and, what is even more important from our point of view, that they are absolutely unnecessary and probably positively harmful, in childhood, and during the period of growth.

It is much to be doubted whether an appetite for alcohol would even develop naturally later in life, if we were left entirely to our own devices. Certain it is that the great majority of men have to learn gradually, if not positively to teach themselves, to like it, because they see everybody else taking it, and think it would be childish or unmanly not to be able to swallow, and at least pretend to enjoy it themselves. If no child ever drank alcohol until he really craved it, as he instinctively craves milk, sugar, meat, and bread and butter, there would be extraordinarily few drunkards in the world. Our other food instincts have shown themselves worthy to be trusted—why not trust this one, and let alcohol absolutely alone, at least until you have reached full maturity of mind and body, and acquired the precious privilege of making a fool of yourself if you wish?

Judge on the Curse of Drink.

Lord Coleridge, addressing the grand jury at the opening of the Clamorgan assizes the other day, said: "I have kept during the 12 months preceding January 1 this year a careful record of all the criminal cases brought before me, and I can tell you as a matter of fact that 44 out of every 100 of these crimes would never have been committed except for drink. I need hardly point out what happiness, what increased happiness, to the community, what lessening of expenditure in gaols and in asylums, what moral improvement would result from any improvement in the habits of the persons who come before me charged with crime."

What a need there is for effort and energy in the cause of God; for real religion and common sense.

Casey at the Bat.

This famous poem is contained in the Coca Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910, together with records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. This interesting book sent by the Coca Cola Co., of Atlanta, Ga., on receipt of 2c stamp for postage. Also copy of their booklet "The Truth About Coca Cola" which tells all about this delicious beverage and why it is so pure, wholesome and refreshing. Are you ever hot—tired—thirsty? Drink Coca Cola—it is cooling, relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere.

The Business Instinct.

An English farmer, taking his little son with him, was going to the polling station to give his vote. On the way he met a friend on the same errand, and the two entered into conversation. After an excited and heated argument about the budget they came to blows. The poor lad was much frightened, and, seeing that his father was getting the worst of it, suddenly called out to him:

"Hit him in the watch, father; that'll cost him something!"

STATE OF OHIO CITY OF TOLEDO, } ss.
LUCAS COUNTY. }

FRANK J. CHENEY makes oath that he is senior partner of the firm of F. J. CHENEY & Co., doing business in the City of Toledo, County and State aforesaid, and that said firm will pay the sum of ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for each and every case of CATARRH that cannot be cured by the use of HALL'S CATARRH CURE.

FRANK J. CHENEY.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence, this 6th day of December, A. D., 1886.

SEAL

A. W. GLEASON,
NOTARY PUBLIC.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for testimonials, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by all Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Reasoning of Youthful Mind.

A schoolmistress whose hair was of the blackest hue, was one day giving a lesson on a coal mine to a class in Suffolk, England. To make the lesson interesting as possible she went on to say she had herself been in a coal mine. A little lad put up his hand, and when pointed to said: "Please, teacher, is that what made your hair so black?"

Special Offer.

We will send you a beautiful picture suitable for framing absolutely free. Simply cut out this notice and mail it to us with two (2) Easy Task Soap wrappers (mention the name of this paper) to the Hewitt Bros. Soap Co., Dayton, Ohio. Our subjects consist of fruit, landscape, flower, religious and scenery pictures.

Jimmy's Definition.

"What is geography?" asked the father, who was testing his son's progress in study.

"Geography," replied little Jimmy Jiggs, "is what you put inside your trousers when you think you are going to get a whipping."—Sunday Magazine of Los Angeles Times.

Such a Polite Little Boy.

"We keep our own cow," explained the hostess, proudly. "So we're sure of our milk."

"Well," interrupted the small son of the guest, setting down his cup, "somebody's stung you with a sour cow."

Rather Personal.

Tallman—Only a fool makes the same sort of mistake the second time.

Shortman—Do you mean to insinuate that I am a fool?

Tallman—Certainly not.

Shortman—Well, I didn't know. I've been married twice.

An Economist.

"Do you mean to tell me you enjoy being fat?"

"Yes," answered the philosophic citizen. "I get more transportation for my money when I buy a railway ticket."

An Average.

"Doesn't it annoy you to be bald-headed?"

"Not at all," replied the genial citizen. "When we go out evenings my wife wears more than enough hair for two."

Some good men fear the world will forget they are shining if their lamps do not smoke.

You will not get to heaven any quicker by provoking your neighbors to wishing you were there.

A Taste

A Smile

And satisfaction to the last mouthful—

Post Toasties

There's pleasure in every package. A trial will show the fascinating flavour.

Served right from the package with cream or milk and sometimes fruit—fresh or stewed.

"The Memory Lingers"

Pkgs. 10c and 15c.

Sold by Grocers.

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

KODAK SAFETY FILM

Charm of Flowers

ALL in the merry month of June, the flower-laden leghorn hat blossoms forth, with the roses and other winsome things of young summer. This, and the beautiful hair-braid hats are perennial favorites, not more or less, but always more popular. Every season the clever milliner who delights in these really beautiful shapes, must bethink her of some new touch in trimming, some new turn to brim, or some novel feature in manner of decorating, in order that the summer girl may not tire of these hats and run after new goods whose virtues are untried in the realm of millinery.

Ever since the oldest modiste can remember, June has seen the heads of fair wearers crowned with these staple shapes, trimmed with roses and ribbon. This year the new touch is found in velvet facings and in velvet-covered crowns. New ideas are shown also in silk or tulle roses and in the way in which brims are turned or shaped.

One factor in the success of their hats, beside their beauty, is their durability. One does not buy a leghorn or hair-braid hat for one summer, but for several. Therefore, it falls to the lot of the milliner to remodel and retrim the same shape several times. Her chances of turning out something pleasing and successful were never better than they are this year. A velvet facing or a velvet crown added to last year's leghorn changes its appearance completely. If the shape is considerably worn, both may be used; for perfectly new patterns, like that shown in the picture, are made up in this way.

It is the charm of flowers, the new beautifully colored roses, which is so enchanting and finally makes the last year's hat "as good as new" and perhaps better. If a velvet-covered crown seems a little dark or heavy, a sash of light ribbon or perhaps of tulle are added.

Many kinds of flowers are used for these hats, although the rose is the first choice. One cannot make a mistake in selecting the rose garland. Wreaths made of roses, gardenas, forget-me-nots and other flowers, with an occasional wisp of grass introduced have trimmed some of the handsomest patterns.

Big bouquets of roses and lilies of the valley have been favored, and on black hair-braid small, exquisitely made corn flowers or deep blue forget-me-nots with velvet ribbon in the same color, have proved the color combination beautiful.

These hats can be worn with any sort of costume for summer. With pretty white dresses they give a flushing touch harmonious to the last degree.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

MASSAGE FOR TIRED FEET

Simple Home Remedies That Will Do Away With Fatigue and Relieve Discomfort.

The old East Indian method of giving scientific massage to the feet has been taken up again and is considered of great value to those who are fatigued.

First—The hands are moved upward, one after the other, on the raised feet, so that the blood is driven upward.

Second—The hand is moved in a rotary way from side to side, beginning at the toes and stopping at the middle of the calf.

Third—The palm of hand and the tips of fingers are applied in a rotary movement with great force and pressure.

Throughout all the massage the feet must be raised and supported. It is useless to do it when they are on a level with the head.

When the feet are burning, alcohol is one of the best tonics for them. It cools the skin and stimulates the muscles.

For aching feet nothing is better than hot vinegar and water. The feet should be allowed to stand in a basin of this for 15 minutes while the ankles are massaged with it.

GIRL'S SAILOR DRESS.

Either serge or linen would make up nicely in this style.

The skirt has a tight-fitting yoke cut with a point in front; the lower part is plaited and joined to yoke. The blouse is an ordinary sailor style, and has the collar and singlet edged with braid. A sailor's knot is tied below the collar.

Materials required: Six and one-half yards 46 inches wide, six yards braid.

Tied-In Skirts.

As far as the fashions have gone they show that we will continue to wear the skirt that is hampered in some way at the knees. It was originally called the aeroplane skirt—this model—and it now goes by the name of the tied-in skirt. That is an expressive description. The effect of being tied in is gotten through the sash or a stitched band or an ornament fold that holds whatever fullness there is at the knees.

Pumps for Street Wear.

The new pumps for street wear are made with ankle straps, which are an improvement over the pumps used last year, for they were scarcely practical for outdoor wear.

To be quite correct the stockings worn with pumps of this description should be plain and fine, of course.

This rule applies to the street only. For house wear any of the dainty styles in embroidered hose may be donned as suits the taste of the wearer.

Things to Know.

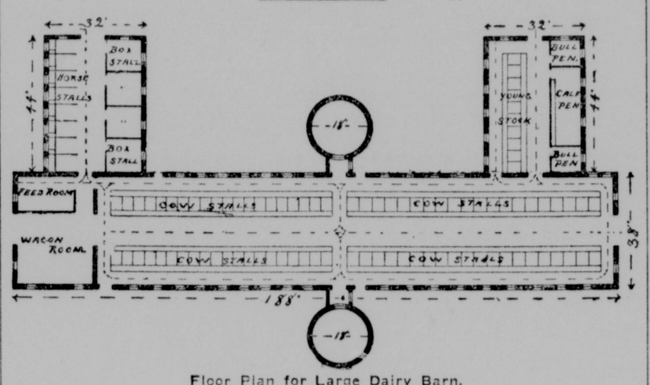
Lavender-scented sheets are said to induce slumber. Five cents' worth of dried lavender blossoms will scent the whole closet where they are kept.

When you have occasion to use plaster-of-paris mix it with vinegar instead of water.

Do not put away a glove that is still damp from the warmth of the hand.

MODERN COW-BARN TO SHELTER NINETY ANIMALS

Details of Complete Structure and So Designed That Its Capacity May Be Increased or Decreased at Will.



Floor Plan for Large Dairy Barn.

A plan is shown herewith of a modern dairy barn, with capacity for ninety cows. As will be seen by the floor plan, there are stalls for eighty milk cows, ten stalls for dry cows or young stock, two bull stalls, and a large calf pen in one wing of the proposed barn, says a writer in Farmers' Review. The opposite wing has eight single stalls, and four double stalls for the horses. Opposite the horse stalls or stable is a large feed room; also a large room for the wagons. The two silos are each 18x34 feet in the clear, and will hold 180 tons of silage each, or sufficient for feeding 100 cows. The barn is very complete, and so designed that its capacity may be increased or decreased, without affecting the general arrangement or the exterior architectural appearance of the barn. The two wings may be built later if desired. Possibly every dairyman would not want the horse barn in connection with the dairy barn. The main barn can be built larger or smaller, as required.

The barn as designed has a gambrel roof, or as some call it, a double or hip roof. The walls are twelve feet to the eaves, and the lower story eight feet in the clear. The stalls are built of gas pipe, and the pipe supports the ceiling. The cows stand back to back, but this may be reversed if desired. The entire floors, gutters and mangers are formed of cement. The walls and ceilings receive two coats of Portland cement, both exterior and interior. The mangers are arranged to be flooded when watering the stock and the floor has drain traps at convenient points for draining away the wash water with an ordinary one-inch hose. The entire barn, including the walls and ceiling, may be washed down in a short time. The gutters have four-inch drain tile leading to manure pits. The silos are of cement, as is the foundation. The roof is covered with manufactured roofing, and all exposed woodwork receives two or three coats of best paint.

Feed and litter carriers are installed and reach all parts of the barn. The walls have ventilating ducts or shafts between the studding at proper distances, leading to vent stacks in the roof. The studdings are 2x6 inch, and the ventilators are built between same. The stucco, or cement finish for the exterior walls, compares favorably with the wood construction, where sand is not too expensive, and it requires no paint, no repairs, is warm in winter and cool in summer. It will last practically forever.

SUCCESSFUL IN SHEEP RAISING

Beginners Should Study Carefully the Methods and Practices of Men Who Have Profited by Experience.

(By R. B. RUSHING.)

When you start with sheep or prepare to start you can approach some sheepmen with such questions as you desire information upon.

There are a lot of good sheepmen in the country. They are willing to tell you if you ask them what are the "rocks" you would wreck upon. Then is it not good judgment to consult such men?

The first question about environment and condition will be largely settled by the circumstances, financial and otherwise, of the beginner.

We suppose he is an average farmer with perhaps 70 or 80 acres of land and wishes to keep sheep—a small flock—in addition to his other stock. He has very little knowledge of sheep and consequently knows little about breeds and has little idea of what he would like best.

Would it be wise for him to be tempted to foolishly select some breed that his neighbors, who are making a success of sheep, do not have, or perhaps know nothing about, and for that sole reason?

We are safe in following the practise of men who have made a success of the business, with slight changes as conditions would demand. I should buy from one of the neighbors if his sheep were healthy and suited me. If I had very little money I would buy few at first.

A beginner once bought five ewes—and culls at that—paying $10. They had been bred to a pure bred ram. He put them in a field adjacent to a box stall where he fed them some oats during the winter.

They brought eight lambs. The best lamb he sold to a neighbor for five dollars, half the cost of the flock. Four buck lambs sold to the butcher for $15. The three ewe lambs were kept to increase the flock.

The next season the eight ewes with 13 lambs following were sold immediately after shearing for $55. A clear profit of course, counting wool and manure to balance keep of the flock.

The great secret of this success was care. This is only one of the many examples of just such kind of business that can be done when the man is determined to do the business.

Capacity of Milk Bottles.

The capacity of milk bottles is something which at the present time is occupying the attention of the city sealer in all the large cities. In graduating thousands of bottles recently all bottles that were found one or more drams under capacity were marked so much short and all bottles running over in capacity were marked O. K., which would leave the consumer to believe that none were over capacity and that they were being wronged by short measure. In fact, the consuming public were getting many thousand quarts of milk more than the number of bottles would indicate.

Pitfalls in Poultry Business.

There are many pitfalls in the poultry business just as there are in the mercantile world and we must at all times be prepared to guard against them. Begin in a modest way and by degrees grow.

ATTRACTIVE GUERNSEY BULL

The attractive Guernsey bull here pictured is Milford Lassy 2d's Anchor, owned by Grove farm in Maryland. This young Guernsey bull is deep in the body, of good length, and has Guernsey characteristics, says Orange Judd Farmer. The Grove farm Guernseys attracted much attention when on exhibit during a recent fair season.

WHY HE THOUGHT SO.

Willie—Is Mr. Jones near-sighted, mama?

Mama—Not that I know of, dear.

Willie—Well, he always sits so close to sister when they're in the parlor.

AN ACHING BACK

Means Weak Kidneys.

Well kidneys filter the blood of uric acid and other impurities. When the kidneys are sick, waste matter accumulates and backache, headache and urinary troubles result. To eliminate the aches and pains you must cure the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, and cure them permanently.

J. N. Markham, Montesano, Wash., says: "Kidney trouble came on me gradually and before long I was suffering from dropsy. My body bloated and my flesh was soft and flabby. I tired easily and suffered severely from pain in my back. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I am today in much better health."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A Child's View.

Scarlet fever was in the house next door and a little girl of eight had listened to the recital of what was happening. A caller came and the child attempted to entertain the stranger until her mother came into the drawing room.

She told about the trouble next door, but in the telling "broke in" and "broke out" got tangled in her child-brain.

"Johnny's got scarlet fever, because his face is all red and his chest is broken in!" she announced.

You Like Pictures.

One of the most marvelous inventions is that of reproducing in the actual colors the masterpieces of the greatest artists of all time. Another of the greatest inventions of the past half century is Easy Task soap, the soap that cuts laundry labor in half and does the washing better than any other. Twenty-five Easy Task soap wrappers and a two-cent stamp will bring to you from the manufacturers a beautiful picture, free, ready for framing.

His Pull.

"Does that 'ere thin, stoop-shouldered, dyspeptic-lookin' drummer that you bought so much from today sell any better or cheaper goods than the fat one ye turned down so hard yesterday?" inquired Hi Spry.

"D' know as he does," confessed the Squam Corners merchant, "but his views on the criminal rapacity of the trusts are a whole lot sounder."—Puck.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Let us be worthier of our friends, who trust us more than we dare to trust ourselves, and give them a better loyalty.—Kelman.

For Any Disease or Injury to the eye, use PETTIT'S EYE SALVE, absolutely harmless, acts quickly, 25c. All druggists or Howard Bros., Buffalo, N. Y.

Have goodwill to all that lives, letting unkindness die, and greed and wrath; so that your lives be made like soft airs passing by.—E. Arnold.

PERRY DAVIS' PAINKILLER
for all sorts of cuts, bruises, burns and strains. Taken internally it cures diarrhea and dysentery. Avoid substitutes. 25c, 35c and 50c.

Some choirs have the artistic temperament so bady they will sing a lullaby just before the sermon.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

For Women's Needs

Every woman should fortify herself against those weaknesses and derangements which are usually present at times when Nature makes extra demands upon the system.

For women's special ailments there is no known remedy so safe and reliable as

Beecham's Pills

These pills possess corrective and tonic properties which have a marked effect upon the general health and promptly relieve nervousness, sick headache, depression, backache, weakness and other unpleasant symptoms. Beecham's Pills establish healthy conditions and furnish

Help at the Right Time

Sold Everywhere. In boxes 10c. and 25c.

ABSORBINE

will reduce Inflamed, Swollen Joints, Bruises, Soft Bunches, Cure Boils, Fistula or any unhealthy sore quickly; pleasant to use; does not blister under bandage or remove the hair, and you can work the horse. $2 per bottle. Horse Book 7 E free.

ABSORBINE, JR., for mankind, $1 and $2 per bottle. Reduces Varicose Veins, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Goitre, Wens, Strains, Bruises, stops Pain and Inflammation. Your druggist can supply and give reference. Will tell you more if you write. Manufactured only by

W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

STOCKERS & FEEDERS

Choice quality; reds and roans, white faces or angus bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.

National Live Stock Com. Co.

At either

Kansas City, Mo. St. Joseph, Mo. S. Omaha, Neb.

6% vs. 4% Why accept 4% from a savings bank when you can buy

Six Per Cent Real Estate Bonds?

Besides sharing in the profits of a great corporation. Write for full particulars. Dept. K.

DEBENTURE CORPORATION OF NEW YORK

334 Fifth Avenue New York City

DELAWARE FARMS Best fruit-growing section. Productive soil, good markets, fine climate. Write now to WILLEY & RAWLINS, SEAFORD, DEL.

W. N. U., CLEVELAND, NO. 24-1910.

BURNS HERPES CHAFING ABRASIONS ERUPTIONS RING WORM

RESINOL

SCALDS ECZEMA ITCHING POISON IVY ERYSIPELAS NETTLE RASH

is a perfect ointment—stops itching instantly. Prescribed by leading physicians throughout the world. A few applications will cure the worst case of itching and inflamed piles. For sale by all druggists or sent direct on receipt of price, 50 cents per jar.

RESINOL CHEMICAL COMPANY, BALTIMORE, MD.

I am glad to say that Resinol Ointment has completely cured me of itching piles.
J. H. Kidall, Dentist, Mt. Washington, Ohio.

DEFIANCE COLLEGE DEFIANCE OHIO

A real college of the highest grade. A college that gives you standing in the educational world, with the great Universities, Public School Men, School Boards, etc. Graduates in demand.

DEPARTMENTS

Collegiate, Academic, Teachers', Manual Training, Engineering, Commercial, Music, Art, Elocution and Domestic Science.

EXPENSES

Board, $1.75 per week; Room rent, 75c to $1.00 per week, including the light and heat; Tuition and regular incidentals, $45.00 for the full year.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months..... .75
One copy three months..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to
THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 23, 1910.

STILL UNWILLING TO ADMIT ROOSEVELT'S STRENGTH.

There have been but a few notes of discord in the welcome extended to former President Roosevelt. Strange to say, they come in the shape of an endeavor to make it appear that there was nothing particularly remarkable about the greeting extended him, and that most of those who took part in it did not care to do so, but joined in just to be doing it. The behavior of the crowd is criticised, its lack of enthusiasm, and the impression is generally is given that unless somebody told you of it you wouldn't have known, had you been in New York, that anything unusual was happening.

One of the troubles with Mr. Roosevelt's enemies is that they persist in ignoring so many things that are true. One can understand them when they quarrel with his doctrines or assail his methods or objurgate his popularity. The thing which is entirely inexplicable is the studied effort to believe that this popularity has no real existence.

It is possible to think ever so meanly of the former President, to hate all of his works as the devil hates holy water, without disguising from one's self the extent of his hold on the people of this country. It is certainly one of the most remarkable phenomena in our political history that a man who for a year absolutely effaced himself in order not to embarrass his successor in office should return to find himself not only acclaimed but actually the most powerful individual in the land. Without political patronage, without power to reward or punish, he has a following which admittedly at this time can upset Congressmen, make or mar Governors in more than one State, put behind his policies, probably, irresistible impetus and determine largely the trend of political events.

One may regret to see so much authority lodged in one man's hands, but to deny it is there proves that one is either a very blind or a much prejudiced observer.

PRESIDENTS AND POLITICS.

No one would think of claiming that the President is infallible, but surely he should not be criticised for being honest! One of the fault finders says he made a political mistake in demanding so many things from Congress; that he should have confined himself to generalities in his messages, instead of demanding that certain laws be enacted; that he is too frank.

And what has he demanded? Nothing except what was demanded in the platform upon which he was elected. His frankness is what elected him. The people believed in him. Frankness means fairness. He stood for the platform as a candidate and stands for it as President. That is to his credit. He has not deceived the people. Roosevelt was for him because he knew he was frank. He may not be a politician as those who object to his action assert, but he is something better, because he is frank.

And, after all, those who think themselves judges of politicians may be mistaken. In the beginning of his career they thought Roosevelt wasn't a politician; that he had no strength or chance of advancement except through Senators Platt and Quay, yet he is greater than either of them as a politician. The only objection that Democrats had to Cleveland was that he "wasn't a politician." And nobody today knows the names of those who thought they were politicians who raised the objection. When a man reaches the presidency, he can afford to break away from political wiseacres and be frank and honest without fear. In that position he can't afford to give heed to the political fulminations of those who think they are politicians, but who have failed to prove it by what they have done for themselves, for what such people call politicians are for themselves first, last and all the time.

HE HAS ARRIVED.

Sustaining no harm to its equipoise, but rather getting a firmer grip upon its axle, the old earth that has never before seen such an outburst of unpent enthusiasm as greeted the arrival of the one who commands every heart and enlists every tongue to do him honor, spins merrily upon its course. No marvels have been noticed as incident to the celebration in New York, other than that the daily deluge of rain was timed to miss his demonstration. Marvels there were, and they will come to light later, when the inner meaning of the great outpouring shall be interpreted in the relation that the eminent one shall sustain to the world of thought and of action. The assetability of the New York reception is beyond computation.

He has arrived. He is here. He has breathed again the air of liberty-loving America. He has caused the windjammers to take a back seat while the harp, the zither, the psaltry and all the instruments of music have been sounding to the farthest heavens the melody of a tremenduous welcome.

It was a great day in Knickerbockerville, and all the Manhattanites who have never been outside the burg, as well as those who have traveled farther than to Jersey City, united in an accordant outburst. They were reinforced by brands of enthusiasm as varied and numerous as the states in the Union, its cities and communities. Into this concentration of ardor into the one word welcome went the hearts of the people of the nation.

Colonel Roosevelt, on his part, was conveyed through the teeming throngs of onlookers humming the melody of "Home, Sweet Home," as he dwelt upon the delights of Oyster Bay, with his family about him and those privileged reminiscences of the mighty trip and its pageantry sequel that could not be secured for a thousand dollars a word, to say nothing of his publishers' rates of a dollar. He is doubtless beaming with joy, and has placed his imprimatur upon the fact that one who goes into life for zest and fun finds it the fullest kind of experience. Optimism has gained mightily in the asset brought to it by the most exurberant advocate and most reliable exponent of the doctrine of "rejoice always."

"What Shall We Do With the American Sabbath?"

At the Baptist church in Deer Park last Sunday morning Rev. C. W. Hudson, the pastor, delivered a discourse full of patriotic sentiment, and had it been delivered on any other day than the Sabbath it would have been punctuated with applause.

"What shall we do about the Sabbath," said Mr. Hudson, "as Americans. The American nation is very nearly the only nation in the world that has a national day of rest, one in seven, and those of you who are acquainted with the trend of affairs know that efforts are being made to destroy this day of rest, and the argument is advanced by those who are trying to do it that they are working for personal liberty, as to whether a man has the right to limit another in the observance of a sabbath.

"A good many people, and particularly those who come here from abroad, have peculiar ideas of liberty. Some think it is a right to do as your please. That is not liberty, that is license. It is liberty for the individual so long as he does not intefere with the rights of any other person, and when we come to discuss the question of the observance of a day of rest, it does not hinge so much upon personal liberty, as upon the advisability of the matter as to whether or not it is good for the human race and good for you and me.

"During the French revolution they tried to annihilate Christianity, but it was not long before they realized the fact that unless they expected to destroy the physical being, Christianity must remain, and it would be necessary to have a day of rest as it was before the effort to dethrone it. All who know anything about the human system know that rest is absolutely necessary, otherwise there is a collapse. It is also absolutely necessary from a moral standpoint. Nations that do not observe a day of rest have a very low standard of morality.

"In San Francisco they have the European Sabbath, and the boast has been made that they expect to make that city the American Paris.

"You may not be aware of the fact that in our Legislature last winter ninety-one political and so-called fraternal organizations in the cities of Maryland petitioned that body to remove from the State constitution everything conflicting with their desires to observe the Sabbath in any way they saw fit. All honor to our honest legislators who prevented this consummation.

"I am an American," exclaimed Mr. Hudson, with much emphasis, "from the sole of my feet to the crown of my head, and with God's help I expect to stand up for America's rights, and I shall maintain this stand as long as God gives me breath. I do not stand for it simply because it is the Sabbath, but because God gave it, and because God knows what is best for us. If we expect to be a nation blessed of God we must give full observance to the Sabbath, and I beseech you as Christian men and women to maintain the sentiment before the world that the United States of America is a Christian nation, and that the Sabbath should be properly observed."

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Connelly, Mrs. Geo. E. Glaywell, Master Cecil Gramon, Miss Margaret Greene, Mr. Moses Robinson, Mr. E. T. Williams.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Our streets are torn up and present a very unsightly appearance to new comers, but the natives are not complaining knowing that every good that comes to mortals must come through a sacrifice, so we are willing to suffer an inconvenience for a short season for the comfort that will come through the introduction of natural gas, which will be turned on before July 1st.

Many cottagers have arrived since our last report, notably the Gouchers, Elliotts, Nihisers, McLains, Sharps and others.

Miss Eleanor Davis, daughter of Dr. W. W. and Mrs. Davis, returned from Baltimore last week where she had been attending school.

Prof. John P. Hillis, the noted vocalist, and Mrs. Hillis are here for the summer, occupying their cottage on E street.

Mrs. Susan Dawson, of Deer Park, came here yesterday morning.

The Mid-Summer Chautauqua Program is being printed in its usual attractive form at THE REPUBLICAN OFFICE, and will be ready for distribution next week.

Preaching in the M. E. church Sunday morning and evening. At 11 a. m. preaching followed by communion and at 8 p. m. preaching by Rev. Di Stefano, who has charge of the Italian work in Oakland District.

"Jacob's Well," in Chautauqua Park, has been concreted, an attractive wall erected on the street side and the surroundings on the park side sodded and the walk graveled.

The hotels and boarding houses are filling up and with a continuation of the present hot weather many will seek the grateful shade and cool nights of this delightful place.

Mrs. W. H. Gilbert arrived Saturday evening and opened her cottage yesterday.

Mrs. Mann and daughter Carrie are at home again after a three week's visit with old friends in and near Baltimore.

The large Maxwell cottage is being painted and the grounds made attractive. The Maxwell's were not here last summer on account of the serious illness of Mr. Maxwell. We are glad they are to be with us this season.

The outlook is for a heavy oats crop in this section. Corn is short, but favorable weather may yet bring a fair crop. Hay will be a light crop.

Mrs. M. M. Schrock is still confined to her bed with no apparent change in her condition.

Capt. J. A. Hayden returned Sunday evening after eight days travel through the state, having been in seventeen counties. He reports a good wheat crop with the prospect for a large oats crop. Corn has been retarded by cool and wet weather and the hay crop will be short. Apples will be a three-fourth crop and peaches will yield the largest crop in years.

Rev. J. P. McKee and family, of Pittsburg, Pa., will be here this week.

Mr. P. B. Gough will be employed in the refreshment stand in Chautauqua Park this season. He will occupy rooms with his family in the Spitzer cottage.

Mr. Lawrence Crane, son of B. F. Crane, Esq., was taken suddenly ill last Monday while attending the funeral of his niece, at Deer Park. Dr. H. W. McComas was called and decided that Mr. Crane was suffering from appendicitis, and the doctor accompanied his patient to the Western Maryland Hospital where he was operated on and is now said to be doing well.

The Armstrongs of Baltimore arrived yesterday and are occupying their cottage on F street.

Mrs. S. L. Allen and grand daughter, Miss Margaret Alcock, are here for a week or ten days.

The unsightly remains of the postoffice building at the station is being cleared away and will be nicely graded.

The Warren Rathbun residence in Loch Lynn is rapidly nearing completion, and will be one of the most cozy homes in that busy town.

Mr. E. E. Kesner has improved his business place by the erection of a convenient porch along the entire front.

An addition is being erected to the postoffice to be used as a suvenir stand by Mr. Robb, of Pittsburg, Pa.

Mr. Sterling, who taught the Loch Lynn school last winter, is assisting Mr. Sperry at the station.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

Church Services.

ST. PAUL'S M. E.
Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Children's Day Service at 10:30 a. m.
Preaching at 8 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.
G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

MT. LAKE PARK M. E.
Class meeting at 10 a. m.
Preaching at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.
Sunday school at 2.30 p. m.
Epworth League at 7:00 p. m.
P. Z. MUSGRAVE, Pastor.

ST. MARK S LUTHERAN.
Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 11 p. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.
E. MANGES, Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E.
Service every Sunday at 11 a. m.
Sunday School at 2:30 p. m.
W. H. SHEARER.

,,I thank you for recommending to me

DAVIS 100 PER CENT PURE PAINT

It was applied in an excellent manner and has turned out all you claimed for it. I consider it the first perfect job of painting I ever had.

J. L. DOWNS,
Baltimore, Md."

Davis Paint, properly applied, will please the most critical.

For sale by J. M. Davis & Sons,
Oakland, Md.

NOTICE OF FIRST MEETING OF CREDITORS.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.
In the matter of Charles C. Frederick, Bankrupt.

IN BANKRUPTCY

To the creditors of Charles C. Frederick, of Friendsville in the county of Garrett, and District aforesaid, a Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1910, the said party was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 1 Washington Street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 9th day of July, A. D., 1910, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

June 20, 1910.

Proposals For Building Three Wrought Iron Or Concrete Bridges.

Notice is hereby given that the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, will receive sealed proposals until

Monday, July 11th, 1910,

at 2 o'clock p. m., at their office in the town of Oakland, Md., for the building of three wrough iron or concrete bridges.

Bridge No. 1 to consist of one span 40 feet long and 12 feet wide. Same to be built over Yough River at Aml Foreman's 4 miles south of Oakland, Md.

Bridge No. 2 to consist of one span 25 feet long and 12 feet wide. Same to be built over Yough River at John Martin's 9 miles south of Oakland, Md.

Bridge No. 3 to consist of one span 16 feet long and 12 feet wide and to be built at Chisholm's Mill 2 miles from Gorman, Md.

Bids will be in lump sum for each structure completed according to plans and specifications on file.

The County Commissioners ask that bids for both iron and concrete be submitted for the above bridges and they reserve the right to let the contract for either. If iron is used concrete will be used for the substructures.

The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By Order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS Clerk.

Notice To Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, either in person or by deputy, will be in each of the Election Districts in Garrett county, Maryland, to collect and receive taxes at the time and places following:

July 15—Crellin—Company's Store, 8 to 3.
July 16—Ottoway—Carney's Store, 9 to 3.
July 18—Hoyes Run, 8 to 11.
July 18—Sang Run—Cuppett & Lytle's, 1 to 4
July 19—Friendsville—Crawford Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 20—Selbysport—Riley's Store, 9 to 3.
July 21—Accident—Ries' Store, 9 to 3.
July 22—Cove—Krouse's Store, 9 to 3
July 23—Grantsville—National Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 25—Thomas Layman's, 9 to 3.
July 26—T. H. Johnson's, 9 to 3
July 27—Avilton—Garlitz's Store, 9 to 3.
July 28—Strickland's, 9 to 12.
July 28—Walter Warnick's, 2 to 5.
July 29—Merrill's 9 to 3.
July 30—C. J. Otto's, 9 to 12.
July 30—Jenning's, 3 to 6.
Aug. 1—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 3—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 3—Beckman—Mellinger's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 4—Swanton—W. H. Lohr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 5—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 6—Red House, 9 to 3.
Aug. 8—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 9—Bloomington—Post Office, 9 to 3.
Aug. 10—Kitzmiller—Bank Building, 9 to 3.
Aug. 11—Kitzmiller—Wilson's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 12—Gorman—J. P. Parr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 13—Bloomington—Moody's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 15—Hoyes—W. A. Smith's Store, 9 to 12.
Aug. 15—McHenry, 2 to 5

By an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1902, being Chapter 556, Section 45, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of levy thereof; and all taxes paid on or before the first day of September a discount of three per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt for taxes so paid, but the discount allowed on the county taxes by this section shall not be made to any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due by such person or corporate institution for the current year be paid when the same is made.

ROBERT L. FRIES,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:
L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:
L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

D. E. BOLDEN'S Remodeling Sale

Contemplating extensive improvements to my store building, I offer my entire stock of Bed Room, Dining Room, Library and Parlor Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Pictures, Mattresses, Etc.

—AT—

10 Per Cent. Discount

For the Next 30 Days.

During the past few weeks the wholesale price on my lines have advanced ten per cent., but I am willing to give my customers the benefit of this advance in addition to the ten per cent. discount as above.

Some Rare Bargains will be included in this Special Sale

D. E. BOLDEN.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., June 23, 1910.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Monday, July 11, 1910,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Write E. S. West, Oakland, Md., the only licensed real estate dealer in Garrett county, for booklet describing all kinds of real estate for sale in this vicinity. Also valuable farms, coal and timber lands in other States, Mexico and Canada. 7-1-4t.

Something new in Talcum Powder; Babcock's Corylopsis of Japan, the most popular Talcum on the market today. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.

G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt	Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis	George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell	William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Miss Laura Pickens, of Terra Alta, is visiting the family of Mr. H. C. Sincell.

Miss Virginia Mayer, of Terra Alta, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Harland L. Jones.

Miss Lulu Fringer returned to Oakland from Evergreen, Alabama, last Monday.

FOR RENT—Furnished room; three minutes walk from station. Apply at this office.

Miss Delia Wolf has returned to Oakland from Washington where she spent the winter.

Mrs. Frank Jamesson and little son, of Piedmont, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder.

WANTED—A good reliable woman for general housework. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland.

Mr. J. D. Northrup, general manager of the Northern Natural Gas Company, spent Tuesday in Oakland and at Mountain Lake Park.

Misses Anita Poling and Mae Brown, of Zanesville, Ohio, are guests this week of Miss Prema Bolden at her home on Second street.

Rev. Charles A. Powers, pastor of the Friendsville M. E. church, was in Oakland yesterday, returning to his home this morning.

FOR SALE—A practically new six horse power engine and ten horse power boiler. Apply at Oakland Model Steam Bakery.

Mr. Charles McHenry Howard and family, of Baltimore, arrived in Oakland Tuesday afternoon and will remain during the summer.

Miss Grace Robinson, of Baltimore, who visited Mrs. M. C. Hinebaugh and other relatives for a week, returned to her home Sunday afternoon.

Messrs. William Bishop and Charles A. Miller, prominent residents and business men of Terra Alta, were in Oakland Monday afternoon for two or three hours.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

Miss Ann Shaffer, of Carmel, and Mrs. Arnold Scherr and little daughter, of Eglon, were guests for several days recently of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bush, of Oakland.

Try one of our Long Life Batterie onyour telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Ex-County Commissioner Z. T. Friend, of near Friendsville, who is in Oakland this week attending the teachers' institute, made this office a visit Monday afternoon.

Mrs. John F. Betts, two children and nurse, of St. Louis, Mo., arrived here this morning and will be the guests of Mrs. Betts' father, Mr. A. S. Howell, for several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Fraley spent last Thursday in Baltimore where the latter went to receive treatment at the hands of an oculist. Both returned to Oakland Friday morning.

Mrs. Fred. J. Schroeder left Oakland Saturday morning for New York City where she will spend a week with Mr. Schroeder and from that city they will go to Frederick, Md., their future home.

Mr. Lawrence Baker, of Cleveland, Ohio, is in Oakland on a visit to his sister, Mrs. J. M. Jarboe. Mr. Baker left Oakland more than thirty-five years ago and this is his first visit to his native town since that time.

Money to Loan—Secured by first mortgage on real estate. Terms easy. Renninger & Offutt. Attorneys Oakland, Md. 3t

Mr. Scott T. Jones, cashier of the Garrett National Bank, left Oakland Tuesday evening for the Blue Mountain House, where he is attending the sessions of the State Bankers' Association which meets there this week.

Dr. W. W. Davis went to Masontown, West Va., yesterday afternoon and last night he addressed the Morgantown District Epworth League convention in session at that place. Dr. Davis returned to Oakland this morning.

Mrs. W. F King was called to Elkins, W. Va., last Thursday on account of the critical illness of her sister, Mrs. C. C. Bond. The lady's death occurred Monday night after several weeks' illness of inflammatory rheumatism.

Sheriff Andrew Shartzer, accompanied by Mr. Charles A. Ashby, of Deer Park, took the prisoners, recently sentenced by the Court to serve time in the penal institutions of the State, to the Penitentiary at Baltimore Tuesday night.

At the adjournment of the Court last Friday afternoon Chief Judge Boyd announced the appointment of Messrs. George W. Legge, Jr., and A. Totten Matthews, members of the local bar, as examiners in equity for Garrett county.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

LITTLE BOY DROWNED

Eleven Year Old Son of Mr. E. M. Coddington Met Death in Bear Creek.

Last Monday afternoon about five o'clock Claude, aged eleven years, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Coddington, of near Friendsville, met with a tragic death by falling into Bear Creek, a stream passing close by his home, and it was not until the following morning at ten o'clock that the remains of the unfortunate boy were recovered.

The child had gone to a point near the creek for the purpose of bringing home the cows belonging to his father and was playing on a heap of drift wood in the bed of the stream when he fell off into the water which at the time was very high. Being unable to gain the bank on account of the swiftness of the water he was carried down stream more than a half mile where his body was recovered, it being found lodged against the piling of a bridge spanning the creek by Samuel Sisler, who with a large number of other men had worked incessantly from the hour the child disappeared under the water until the body was recovered.

The funeral took place from the home of the parents yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. Wade, of the Disciple church.

Mr. A. Spates Brady, superintendent and general manager of the Branard Coal Company, which corporation is now owner and operator of the mine at Steyer, this county, was in Oakland yesterday on business connected with his company.

Miss Anna Manges returned to Oakland last Friday afternoon from Cameron, W. Va., where she was engaged for a week directing the production of the Gibson Family Reunion which was presented for the benefit of Dr. R. B. Ward's church at Cameron.

Mr. J. E. Francis, road contractor, has ordered work suspended on the road until better weather conditions prevail. During the present month his engines have been idle except one day. With continued good weather, however, he hopes to resume work the latter part of this week.

Mr. Philip T. Peddicord went to Baltimore Sunday night where he is a patient in John Hopkins Hospital. After a slight surgical operation which will be performed he will return to his home in Oakland. During his absence his position in the post office is being filled by George H. Rodeheaver.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

Dr. Henry W. McComas accompanied Lawrence Crane, of Loch Lynn Heights, to Cumberland last Thursday, where the latter underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Western Maryland Hospital Friday. The operation was successful and the patient is doing very nicely.

Dr. J. L. B. Jones of Elkins, was in the city today on business. He is making arrangements to move to Lansing, Neb., where he has been transferred from the West Virginia M. E. conference, and he will take charge of the First M. E. church of that place.—Grafton Sentinel.

Fountain Syringes and Hot Water Bottles, household necessities, at prices ranging from 75c. to $1.50, at Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Among the young men of Oakland who have returned from school to their respective homes for the summer vacation we notice Messrs. Ralph T. Thayer, from West Virginia University; Edward Leary, from Western Maryland College; Joe McComas, from Charlotte Hall; Milton and Edward Sincell, from Gettysburg College.

For all chronic ailments where medicine has failed to relieve or cure you should consult Dr. Demarion, the osteopathic physician and he will help you and perhaps entirely cure you. Consultation free. Ladies treated at their homes. Office, second floor, opera house, Oakland, Md.

This office is in receipt of a magnificent calendar covering the remaining portion of the present year and all of 1911 from the Savings Bank of Libertytown, Md., of which Mr. R. C. McCandlish, formerly of Friendsville, is president. The new institution is meeting with much success under the direction of Mr. McCandlish.

Workmen have been engaged for several weeks past widening the cut of the Baltimore and Ohio right-of-way through Oakland. Heavy charges of dynamite are exploded at intervals of a hours which keeps the people living nearby in a nervous frame of mind. Tuesday a blast of more than ordinary severity was set off which was perceptably felt by officials at the court house, two blocks distant.

Dr. Hattie B. Jones, of Wheeling, W. Va., spent Sunday in Oakland with her brother, Mr. Scott T. Jones, and his family, leaving here Monday morning for New York from which city she sailed Tuesday for Europe, expecting to be abroad several weeks, during which time she will make a tour of several European countries, including France, Italy, Germany and Switzerland. Dr. Jones will witness the Passion Play at Oberammergau some time during the month of July.

Base Ball Team Organized.

A meeting was held at Hotel Frantz on Friday night for the purpose of organizing a base ball team for the summer months. The meeting was well attended by the players and "fans" of our city, and every one was in a good humor and willing to lend a helping hand. The meeting was called to order by Chairman Varina and the election of officers then followed. The officers elected were: J. E. Varina, Pres.; W. A. Gonder, vice-pres.; Charles Tower, sec'y; Perry Frantz, rec.-sec'y-Treas.; John J. Sweeney, manager, and William Newman, assistant manager.

Manager Sweeney has already started to arrange for games and hopes to give the city one of the best ball teams it has ever known. He has gotten the following players to try for the team: Holzman, Giessman, Chas. P. Frantz, Lawton, M. Boyle, W. Boyle, J. Bradley, G. Bradley, A. Dare, P. Collins, J. Collins, L. Fraley, J. Burns, Dawson and Niefherser.

It was decided to hold a minstrel show on the 1st of July for the benefit of the team. As the grounds need fixing and there will have to be a new grandstand built and fence built around the grounds, the boys hope to raise enough money from the show to pay for it all.

Messrs. Tower and Varina, of local fame, have volunteered their services to train the ministrels. Both men have had wide experience in this kind of work and they are working hard to give an up-to-date show. They have secured the best local talent to take part. This show will be the first of its kind in Oakland for many years and is entirely new and up to the minute. All of the songs are the latest and the jokes and dances are just from the press.

The ball team is badly in need of money and they are hoping that the citizens will lend them a helping hand to give our town a winning team this year.

The Work Finished.

Mr. John J. Stump, district census supervisor, Monday mailed the remaining portfolios to the Bureau of Census, thus completing the work of enumerating the population and gathering the agriculture statistics for the Sixth Congressional district of this State. All enumerators except seven finished in time allowed by law, and those unable to finish were very large agriculture districts and bad weather caused the delay. The department will not permit any figures or estimates to be given out by any of the supervisors. Mr. Stump is thus unable to state the population of Oakland no matter how much he would like to do so. The office will be closed shortly and the force dismissed. The Bureau paid all enumerators within three weeks after receiving their work.

BITTINGER.

This week begins with indications that promise better and more seasonable weather.

Mrs. Daniel Klotz, is reported to be seriously ill at the home of her parents near this village.

We hear many farmers threatening to sow buckwheat in their corn fields, as the continued wet, cool weather has so injured the corn as to make it questionable whether it will recover.

Prof. J. C. Beahm spent this week in Oakland, attending the Teachers' Institute in session in that city.

On last Saturday a most unusual electrical storm developed in this section, and for twelve hours or more there was almost incessant thunder and the display of lightening on Saturday was more than ordinary.

Cyrus Stark, of McHenry, made a business visit to this village last Saturday.

Mrs. Ida Yommer was on the sick list last week, but is said to be improving at this writing.

M. J. Durst, of New Germany, passed through this village last Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brenneman are the proud parents of a young daughter, born to them on Friday, June 17th.

Mr. Arthur I. Kelso, of Las Crucas, New Mexico, who arrived in Oakland last Wednesday for a visit to his sister, Mrs. D. M. Dixon, and also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Kelso, near Mountain Lake Park, left on Saturday for New York where he expects to spend a week on professional business. Before returning to the southwest Mr. Kelso will stop for two weeks with his Garrett county relatives.

Charley Shaw was married at Oakland to Miss Jane Goss Monday evening. He came home Tuesday and was celebrating with a pound of gun powder. He was putting off a blast and was striking a match on his trousers to light the fuse when the head of the match flew off and fell in the powder. There was an exqlosion and the young man's face was painfully burned. Dr. Rinehart attended him. He has been working for W. F. Kelly on one of the Kelly well drilling machines. His wife came up from Oakland Tuesday after the explosion.—Terra Alta Republican.

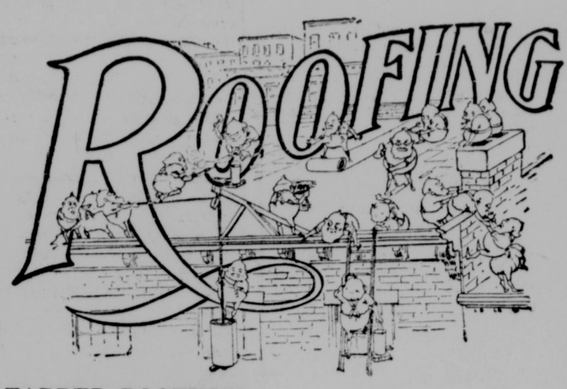
BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows: Elder Hill—Preaching at 11 a. m. Deep Creek—Preaching at 8 p. m. Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have a variety of kinds and at any price.



TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S

FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

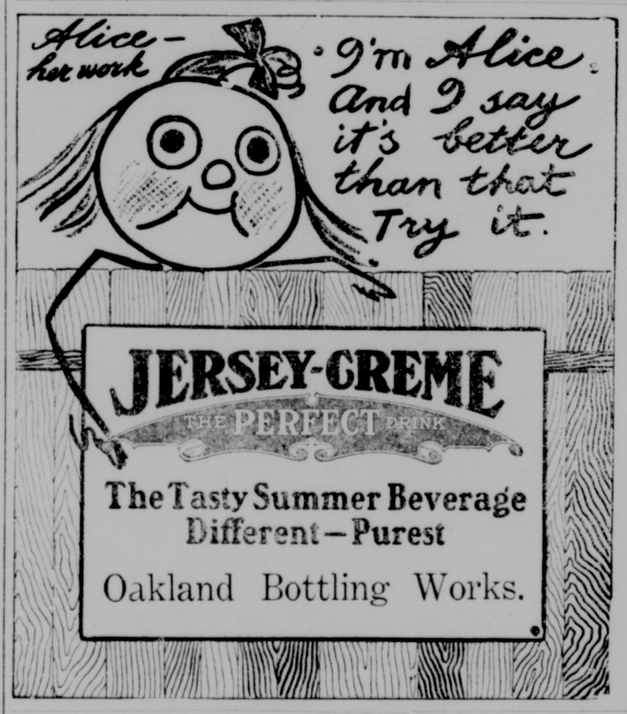
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Notice to The Public.

I have taken charge of the Fresh Meat Department of Creutzburg's store where I can furnish my trade with the best Fresh Meats at all times, and solicit a share of your patronage. Everything clean and up-to-date.

Farmers, bring your calves, mutton, lambs and beef and get the highest cash prices for them.

Yours to please,

HENRY SMOUSE.

The Up-to-Date Market.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said road commencing at or near the mouth of Crabtree Creek on Savage River by crossing said river from West to East side and passing through the lands of the Lonaconing Coal & Iron Company, Oss Brothers and others to intersect the County Road near Bloomington, a distance of about four and one-half miles, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of June, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said locating of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

P. P. MCANDREWS
P. H. RODEHEAVER
GEO. W. BROADWATER } Examiners.

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt

The dividend is at the rate of 2 13-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allow and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 29th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Pubr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

Chicago boasts 46 cemeteries, all well patronized.

Speaking of sunshine, the more you have the more you want.

The aristocrat germs on a $10 bill do not recognize the herd on a dollar bill.

Paying interest on the mortgage is one of the best cures for automobilousness.

In the matter of capturing a husband the girls should remember that coarse work is fatal.

Although cottonseed has gone up in price olive oil is useless for purposes of replanting.

Those New York hens that lay black eggs are infringing upon the province of the Easter rabbit.

And now they are mixing poker and bridge. The anti-adulteration laws should be strictly enforced.

German dirigibles have been making flights over Holland. This may be significant, for it beats the Dutch.

Farmers are organizing to cut out the middlemen. That old reliable end man, the consumer, will hold his job.

About this time of year the university alumnus, after trying to remember his college yell, gives it up as a bad job.

The man who stole a duck and was sent to Auburn for it must now realize that it is much cheaper merely to chase the duck.

According to a scientist, dreams are the fulfilment of wishes. At any rate they are all the fulfilment a lot of wishes ever get.

The college professor who insists that the dangers of kissing have been immensely overrated is making a strong bid for popularity.

Verily, the complications of life multiply. It takes enough men now to train a champion prize fighter to put a play on the stage with a large cast.

Viewed as peace preservers the new battleships, costing $6,000,000 each, ought to be put under bonds to furnish us with $12,000,000 worth of peace.

Berlin workingmen have taken a pledge not to eat butter for three months. That indicates one place where oleomargarine is likely to be sold for what it is.

Los Angeles school children have been ruining their little tummies by eating too much pie. The great American nation may have to establish a pie censorship.

A St. Louis woman who was dying asked to have her pet dog poisoned, that it might accompany her to the spirit world, or, probably, at least, until she was safely out of St. Louis.

A Chicago judge declares married men have a right to squander some of their money on themselves if they want to. Yes, judge, but how much? That's the real point.

The recent cannibalistic performances in the South sea islands seem to be a conclusive answer to the old charge that the cannibal natives of that part of the world don't like missionaries.

A blind singer of Massachusetts took a trip in a balloon in order to enjoy a new sensation. He made a totally new record in ballooning; he did not remark when he came down "how strange it was to see the earth dropping away from under him."

According to a New York dispatch wedding rings are passe, and "smart young matrons" no longer wear them. Perhaps this is because so many "smart young matrons" haven't room for their entire collection of wedding rings.

A new order of the treasury department prohibits the importation into the United States of the European starling, putting the bird in the same class with the mongoose, the English sparrow and fruit-eating bats. So far as this country is concerned, therefore, the cry of the starling will be, not, "I can't get out," but "I can't get in!"

Of late the shadow of the fatal microbe has hovered over the trembling lips of expectant lovers. They have been browbeaten, cowed, terrified. Intimidated by cold-blooded investigators their kisses have become of the intangible Tennyson kind, by "hopeless fancy feigned as lips that are for others." The cold-blooded bacteriologist has meanwhile buttressed the cry of that cynic of cynics, Dean Swift, who wrote: "Lord, I wonder what fool it was that first invented kissing."

Though a man dropped dead in a department store while shopping with his wife, it is doubtful if even this will break some women of the habit of taking their husbands along.

Several firms who have been selling fine Mocha and Java coffee which did not contain a berry of either of those coffees have been fined $10 on prosecutions by the government. Really it would not seem as though such a fine would act as a deterrent; maybe, however, it was intended merely to be a warning

GOATS ASSIST RAILROAD

ONE OF THE LEADERS

A BUNCH OF KIDS

THE Union Pacific railroad has discovered a new use for billy goats and every day at half a hundred stock feeding stations on the line of the big railroad system, solemn goats with long white beards act the part of Judas, luring unsuspecting sheep to their doom. Little did the grave members of the Interstate Commerce commission think when they made a ruling that live stock en route from the great western ranges to the packing houses along the Missouri river, should not be kept aboard railroad trains for more than 28 consecutive hours, but that, at the expiration of that period, the animals should be taken from the cars and given water and provender that the ruling would be responsible for the creation of a band of goats trained to ingratiate themselves into the confidence of innocent little lambs, matronly ewes and stately rams and bring these down to their death.

But such is the case. And the Union Pacific railroad has a flock of goats, each individual member of which can do better work along the lines for which it is trained than half a dozen men could do in twice the time.

When the 28-hour law went into effect the Union Pacific railroad found it necessary to build big feeding yards at numerous points along its line—in fact, these yards were installed about every 25 miles from end to end of the big system. During the shipping season that railroad brings hundreds of thousands of sheep from the great ranges of Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Oregon, Montana, California and the southwestern states to the packing houses at Omaha. Under the new law it was necessary that these sheep be unloaded, fed and watered, and then reloaded every 28 hours.

Those men who have ever attempted to drive sheep will remember how difficult the task is, especially to get the animals headed in the right direction. "As timid as a sheep" is a proverb, and its truth is proven every day and every hour wherever sheep are handled.

If the sheep are in the stock cars it is a big job to get them out. Efforts of the attendants to get them to leave the cars usually result in the whole bunch crowding up in one end and refusing to go out the door. Sometimes it was even necessary that each individual sheep be actually lifted up and taken from the car.

And sometimes this 28-hour limit expired in the dead of night, when the sheep were all lying asleep on the floor of the car. At such times it was almost impossible to unload except by the "hand" method. At times half an hour was consumed in unloading a single car.

After the sheep were fed and watered came the reloading, and again there was trouble, almost as much as when unloading.

The railroad found it necessary to maintain a large force of men at each feeding station, it being found more economic to do this than to spend hours and hours loading and unloading a train. This cost money, and lots of it, but there seemed no means of avoiding the expense. There stood the United States courts ready to inflict a $100 fine every time a car of sheep was not fed and watered every 28 hours. Employing the men was cheaper than fines.

One day a stockman who had come into South Omaha with a train of sheep dropped in at Union Pacific headquarters to see General Superintendent W. L. Park on business, and in the course of his conversation began telling of the trip down from Idaho. He had had lots of trouble loading and unloading, he said, until he reached North Platte, Neb.

"But there I saw the funniest thing in my life," he laughed. "The station agent there has a boy and that boy has a goat—just a plain old billy goat. And that billy goat has learned to chew tobacco.

"When we got ready to load our sheep, that kid took a plug of tobacco in his hand and started. Billy started after the tobacco. The kid walked through the sheep and old Billy followed him. And blamed if all those sheep didn't walk right after that old goat. They thought he was one of them, and you know a sheep will follow where another one leads.

"The boy walked up the chute into one of the cars. Billy was right behind him and sheep were simply falling over themselves to get in. The boys and Billy, remained near the door and when the car was filled with sheep they got out and the door was closed.

"That freckle-faced kid and that old billy goat did in five minutes what half a dozen men could not have done in ten."

The stockman saw only a funny occurrence in the work of the goat, but Park saw the solution of a big problem.

Two hours later a special train carrying the general superintendent left the Omaha yards, its destination being North Platte. On arriving there the boy proudly made Billy show off.

Within a month every feeding station on the Union Pacific system was equipped with a couple of billy goats and their training was begun.

Today, when a long line of stock cars, each filled with sheep, draws up at a feeding yard, one of these goats is sent up the chutes and into the car among the sheep. He quickly makes the acquaintance of the newly arrived animals and then calmly walks out the door. True to the idea of following a leader, the sheep fall in line and march out behind old Bill.

This action is repeated until all the cars are emptied—and then Bill gets his reward—a chew of tobacco.

The goats have learned to chew tobacco from the train men who pet and tease them whenever they have the opportunity, and the "chew" is usually given them as a reward when their task of unloading a train of sheep is completed. The railroad company makes a regular allowance to pay for tobacco for these goats.

When ready to reload, the goats are again sent among the sheep, with whom they frolic a few minutes, and then they start for the cars, followed by the sheep. When all cars are loaded the goats receive another chew of tobacco.

The feeding yards are all equipped with electric lights so that cars may be loaded and unloaded at night, thus saving much time. And when a train arrives at night, especially are the goats necessary. At such times they enter the cars where the sheep are lying on the floor and butt the sleeping animals around until they are thoroughly awakened—and then they lead them out into the feeding pens.

These goats are great favorites of the railroad men and seem to know every brakeman and train employee on their division. But not a single one of the railroaders is more necessary to the economical operation of the line than is one of the Bills, and none of them do more work for their salaries than the goats for their feed and tobacco.

The facility of the goat for this work has long been known at the packing houses, where they are utilized to lead animals to slaughter.

His Philosophy.

Hank Stubbs—Ambition ain't hardly wuth while.

Bilge Miller—Why not?

Hank Stubbs—Waal, ef you are behind the procession you hafter keep bumpin' into somebody, an' ef you git ahead you're liable to git teller-scoped.

An Independent Spirit.

"This earth gets a chance to see Halley's comet only once in 75 years."

"Well," replied the man who is strong on local pride, "we aren't getting any of the worst of it. That's as often as Halley's comet gets a chance to see the earth."

At the Beautiful Gate

By REV. C. A. S. DWIGHT, Ph. D.
Toronto, Can.

The lame man of old was laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called "Beautiful." The gate so described was probably the gate on the east which led from "the court of the women" to the inner court. While the other gates were overlaid with gold and silver this portal, according to Josephus, was made "of Corinthian bronze, and much surpassed in worth those enriched with silver and gold." The lame man was perhaps one of the most unfortunate individuals in Jerusalem, having no means of earning a livelihood, being quite friendless and certainly forlorn—yet he was well placed.

The situation at the door of the temple was both pathetic and promising. He could not walk in, but his thoughts could enter; he might not join in the praises of the worshipping hosts within, but he could catch something of the enthusiasm which brightened their faces as they came out. While he was outside the circle of inner, intimate communion he was yet in the line of blessing and could make daily proof of the fact that it was better to be a lame doorkeeper in the house of God than to dwell luxuriously in the court of a riotious Herod.

It is impossible to tell how pure were the motives of the lame man in habitually frequenting the door step of the Lord's house. He was certainly after money—but if all who are after money in some shape were excluded from the sanctuary congregations today would be much thinner than in many communities they are. To a degree the lame man needed coin, and to a certain extent every man needs it, but if his thoughts and desires had been wholly centered upon money it is not likely that Peter and John would ever have been attracted to him, or been empowered by the Lord to work in his case a miraculous cure. Let us suppose that the lame man had some sincere interest in the temple itself as well as in the tolls which he collected from the charitable, and that, while not indifferent to the silver and the gold, he cared most of all for the spiritual message which such men as Peter and John had to give.

It was a fine thing then that the lame man got as far as the Beautiful Gate. Rich or poor, men alike need in their lives the beautifying touch, and hard prosaic lives need it most of all. Even if the lame man could not enter the temple recesses he could look up and admire the architectural beauty about him, and the gleam of that Corinthian bronze brought a touch of brightness into his life. The geranium plant in the window of the city tenement, the tree struggling for stunted growth in a city street, all these are glimpses and gladdenings of the esthetic sense—the sense for color, for proportion, for harmony, which, often degraded to a godless "art," are yet susceptible of serving, when purified and idealized, the highest aims of the moral nature. The lame man was deformed in himself, but he was transformed by his daily look into the face of the beautiful above him.

All men, however athletic or vigorous or full of pride, are at some point weak—are somewhere in their being lame and impotent and in need of alms, or of a spiritual uplift far better than alms. There are beautiful gates unto which we all alike need to come. God has made, not one nor two nor six, as in the temple of old, but many such portals, in different parts of the pilgrim country of mortal sojourn, opening into fair reaches of truth and broad areas of higher experience.

There is first the Beautiful Gate of Faith. If the lame man had not in some degree had faith he would not have received from the miracle working apostles what was better than alms—new health and strength—and what was better than physical health and quickening—the recreating of his spiritual manhood, the renovation of his moral nature. Without faith it is impossible to please God, or to get anything worth while done. He who would be successful in this life must be much at the Gate of Faith.

There is secondly the Gate of Prayer. Prayer is faith's voice. Faith finds its expression through prayer. The prayerless man is always essentially a weak and resourceless man. The lame man was weak, but he knew how to use his voice in prayer, and so he did not remain weak.

There is the Beautiful Gate of Love. The lame man appealed to the love that was in Peter and John, and did not fail to receive a response. Love is the very atmosphere of that land of delight into which the Gate Beautiful opens. When love dominates and permeates a human life heaven itself at once begins to be realized on earth. There is always in love an inherent beauty, an indescribable charm, and just because it is so the devil tries hard to disseminate the spirit of hate, which tends to pull down and destroy all Gates Beautiful everywere.

Be sure to be often at the Beautiful Gate—not that which long ago fell into ruin at Jerusalem—but that which, even for the lowliest and lamest, offers its invitation of spiritual blessing, and promises a hope and healing both heavenly and forever.

GNAT CAUSES PELLAGRA.

Committee on Disease in Europe Says Corn Is Not to Blame.

London, May 14.—Dr. Sambon, a member of the Field committee which has been investigating the disease pellagra, telegraphs from Rome that the committee has definitely proved that maize or Indian corn is not the cause of pellagra.

The committee finds that the parasitic conveyor of the disease is the "simulium repans," a species of biting gnat.

Not the Reply He Expected.

"Do you object to smoking?" he asked.

"Not at all. Have you a cigarette?" she replied.

A Wonder Worker.

Sapleigh—Ah, speaking of electricity, that makes me think—

Miss Keene—Really, Mr. Sapleigh? Isn't it remarkable what electricity can do!

"Worn to a Frazzle."

When President Roosevelt popularized the word "frazzle" he reminded lots of women of the only expression that tells how they feel after the work of washday or housecleaning with common old yellow laundry soap. Easy Task laundry soap—the hard, white, pure, quick-action soap—cuts the work square in two and keeps women from getting frazzled out.

Made His Reputation.

Harker—That fellow Bilkins is an enthusiast, isn't he?

Parker—That's what! You know he likes to speak of himself as a sportsman?

Harker—Yes.

Parker—Well, the only thing he ever did in that line was to go on a wild goose chase three years ago.

Good Work Proceeds Slowly.

At the present rate of increase nearly forty-five years must elapse before sufficient hospital accommodations to provide for all the indigent consumptives in the United States will be provided, declares the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Although over 7,000 beds in hospitals, sanatoria, camps and wards for tuberculous patients were established last year, there are fully 300,000 indigent consumptives who ought to be placed in such institutions and a total of only 22,720 beds in the entire country. On May 1, 1909, there were 15,244 beds for consumptives and 294 institutions. The annual report of the national association shows an increase of 99 institutions and 7,500 beds.

Harvard College.

This celebrated institootion is pleasantly situated in the barroom of Parker's, in School street, and has poopils from all over the country. I had a letter yes'd'y, by the way, from our mootual son, Artemus, Jr., who is at Bowdoin college, in Maine. He writes me that he is a Bowdoin Arab, & is it cum to this? Is this boy as I nurtured with a parent's care into his childhood's hour—is he goin' to be a grate American humorist? Alars, I fear it is too troo. Why didn't I bind him out to the Patent Travelin Vegetable Pil Man, as was struck with his appearance at our last county fair, & wanted him to go with him and be a Pillist? Ar, these boys—they little know how the old folks worrit about 'em—From Life's Reprint From Artemus Ward.

A Horse Lover.

James R. Keene, who is noted no less as a horseman than as a financier, said at a luncheon at his Cedarhurst residence:

"My love of horses has been a great comfort to me all my life. I have always kept my horses in their place, though. I haven't allowed them to interfere with my business.

"Some men carry their love of horses altogether too far. Such a one was a young father who stood, with his fair wife, before the crib of their first born.

"'Isn't he wonderful?' the young mother cried. 'Did you ever see anything like him at twenty-six months?'

"'Maternal love is all very well,' the father retorted, impatiently, 'but please don't try to compare it with a two-year-old thoroughbred.'"

FEED CHILDREN

On Properly Selected Food. It Pays Big Dividends.

If parents will give just a little intelligent thought to the feeding of their children the difference in the health of the little folks will pay, many times over, for the small trouble.

A mother writes saying: "Our children are all so much better and stronger than they ever were before we made a change in the character of the food. We have quit using potatoes three times a day with coffee and so much meat.

"Now we give the little folks some fruit, either fresh stewed, or canned, some Grape-Nuts with cream, occasionally some soft boiled eggs, and some Postum for breakfast and supper. Then for dinner they have some meat and vegetables.

"It would be hard to realize the change in the children, they have grown so sturdy and strong, and we attribute this change to the food elements that, I understand, exist in Grape-Nuts and Postum.

"A short time ago my baby was teething and had a great deal of stomach and bowel trouble. Nothing seemed to agree with him until I tried Grape-Nuts softened and mixed with rich milk, and he improved rapidly and got sturdy and well."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

ON THE COLLEGE NINE.

"'Tain't no use talkin', Cyrus, thet boy of ourn certainly do love th' country. He writ me er letter yesterday an' sez he was overjoyed 'cause ther going ter put him in th' right field next summer."

16 YEARS OF SKIN DISEASE

"For sixteen long years I have been suffering with a bad case of skin disease. While a child there broke out a red sore on the legs just in back of my knees. It waxed from bad to worse, and at last I saw I had a bad skin disease. I tried many widely known doctors in different cities but to no satisfactory result. The plague bothered me more in warm weather than in winter and being on my leg joints it made it impossible for me to walk, and I was forced to stay indoors in the warmest weather. My hopes of recovery were by this time spent. Sleepless nights and restless days made life an unbearable burden. At last I was advised to try the Cuticura remedies [Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills] and I did not need more than a trial to convince me that I was on the road of success this time. I bought two sets of the Cuticura Remedies and after these were gone I was a different man entirely. I am now the happiest man that there is at least one true care for skin diseases. Leonard A. Hawtof, 11 Nostrand Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., July 30 and Aug. 8, '09."

Question of Precedent.

"What makes you doubt that all men are born equal?"

"The absolute confidence of every parent that his baby is superior to any other in existence."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

When a man dries up like a mummy he usually thinks he is a saint.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, BACKACHE, DIABETES.
R. 375 "Guaranteed"

WESTERN CANADA

What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:

"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 57th parallel 180 miles north of the International boundary. Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly

70,000 Americans

will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year.

1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item.

Cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as lands held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions.

Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, and good railways.

For settlers' rates, descriptive literature "Last Best West," how to reach the country and other particulars, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the Canadian Government Agent.

H. M. WILLIAMS
Law Building Toledo, Ohio
(Use address nearest you)

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

WANTED MEN AND WOMEN for quickest selling household specialities on earth. Every woman buys on sight. Experience unnecessary. Goods sell themselves. Write today. FISHBURN SPECIALTY CO., 160 E. 94th St., New York City.

Asthma and HAY FEVER CURE sent by express to you on Free Trial. If it cures send $1, if not, don't. Give express office. Do it now. NATIONAL CHEMICAL CO. 407 Ohio Avenue, Sidney, Ohio.

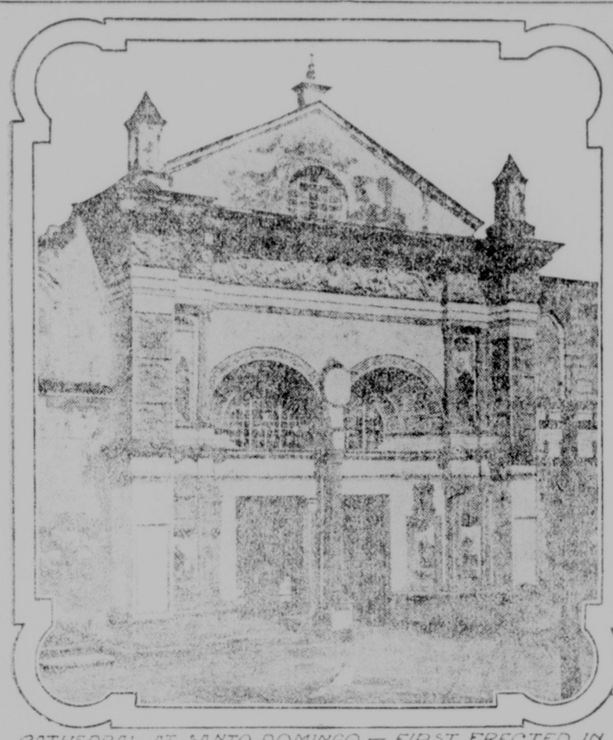
CANCERS NO CURE, NO PAY. Don't all advertise. Health Herald and testimonials FREE for the asking. Address Dr. E. M. Boynton, Lawrence, Mass.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

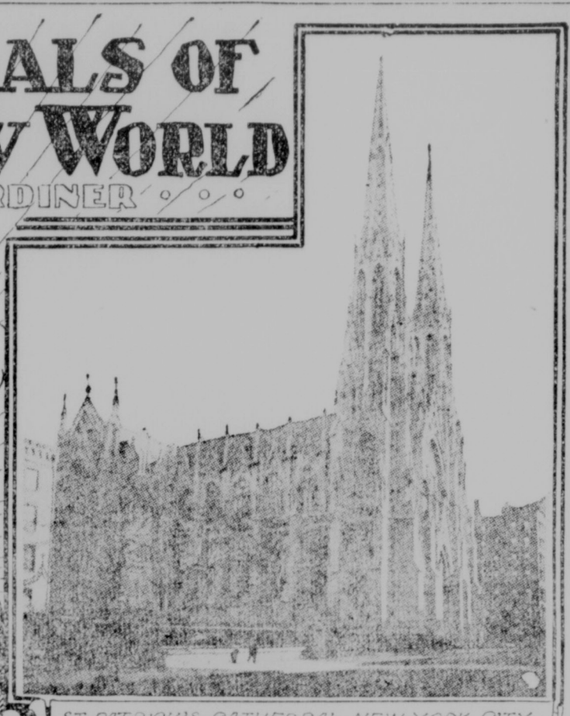
PATENT YOUR IDEAS. They may bring you wealth. 64-page Book Free. Est. 1869. Fitzgerald & Co., Pat. Attys., Box B, Washington, D.C.

CATHEDRALS OF THE NEW WORLD

by FANNY H. GARDINER



CATHEDRAL AT SANTO DOMINGO — FIRST ERECTED IN AMERICA



ST. PATRICK'S CATHEDRAL, NEW YORK CITY

CATHEDRAL OF THE CITY OF MEXICO

CATHEDRAL OF ST. PETER AND ST. PAUL, WASHINGTON, D.C.

INTERIOR OF THE CATHEDRAL AT ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

WHEN the Spanish discoverers and explorers of America drove the prows of their frail vessels through unknown seas in search of the India of their dreams they left Europe stirring with that new life which was to blossom in the renaissance. The dark ages were just closing and the wealth of knowledge and art so long hoarded in monasteries and castles, barred from the flow of human life, was about to burst forth like a flood to refertilize European civilization. Crumbling architecture was being restored, churches and palaces were being founded, great engineering works undertaken. In many respects, indeed, the wonderful activities and achievements of that time may be compared with those of our own, in spite of the differences in methods, materials and purpose. When Columbus left Palos in 1492 St. Peter's at Rome was in the hands of builders filled with the new ideas, but waiting for the genius of Bramante and Michel Angelo; the cathedral of his native Genoa was being greatly enlarged and embellished; that of Seville was nearing completion; that of Toledo was just finished. For 300 years the Gothic beauty of Burgos had been growing to its perfection in 1521, the year in which Cortez took the City of Mexico; and in the same year the beautiful cathedral at Granada, which enshrines the tombs of the Catholic kings and commemorates the deliverance of Spain from the Moors, was begun.

This passion for building crossed the ocean in the breasts of the Spanish discoverers and first colonists, who, although they celebrated their earliest religious services in tents by the seashore or beneath the branches of unfamiliar foliage, were impelled to erect as soon as possible temples big and splendid enough to express the master motives of their age—religion and art.

As Hispaniola, or the island of San Domingo, was the first land permanently settled, so Isabella, the capital now the city of Santo Domingo, founded in 1496, contains what is probably the oldest cathedral church in the new world, begun in 1514. Within it rested the body of Columbus until this part of the island was ceded to the French in 1785, when the Spaniards carried what they supposed to be his remains with them to Cuba. Since that time other remains have been found here which the people of Santo Domingo, with justice, claim to be the true relics of the discoverer, and as such they are revered and jealously guarded within a handsome modern monument.

At Port au Prince, Haiti, there is a cathedral, long under construction and yet unfinished, of mixed French Gothic and Romanesque style. The French cathedral at St. Pierre, Martinique, was destroyed by the eruption of Mount Pelee, and the bishop's seat was removed to Fort de France. Owing to the fact that the government of Cuba rested for nearly 40 years at Santiago, from 1518-1582, it happens that this town boasts a cathedral which antedates that of Havana, but it is not remarkable as compared with many of the Spanish colonial edifices. The cathedral at Havana, and indeed that at Santo Domingo, has much to inspire enthusiasm from the artistic standpoint, but Havana has been interesting as the temporary sepulcher of what were called the bones of the great admiral. His sarcophagus and the memorable inscription were set into the wall of the chancel at the left of the high altar until after the war of 1898, when his descendant, the Duke of Veraguas, removed the much-disputed bones to the family mausoleum in Seville.

Cortez landed and burned his ships on the beach near Veracruz in 1519, determined upon the conquest of Mexico in the name of Spain and of the Catholic church. He marked his subjugation of every town and province by founding substantial works of engineering and architecture, wonderful, indeed, when one considers his slight acquaintance with the materials, the labor and the climate that confronted him and the magnitude and beauty of the results. On entering the City of Mexico Cortez destroyed the teocalli, or Aztec temple, and erected on its site a small chapel for the Indians, traces of which still remain. In it was installed the seat of the first bishop of Mexico, who came out in 1528 as a suffragan of the bishop of Seville, but the cornerstone of the present cathedral was not laid until 1573. This is the most stupendous of all the Spanish colonial cathedrals, the largest in all the Americas, and said to be outranked only by St. Peter's in Rome and St. Paul's in London. It had cost at the time of its completion about $2,000,000, a sum as colossal in those days as the dimensions of the edifice itself.

Mexico has 22 dioceses and as many cathedrals, although not all the churches so designated were built for that purpose. Among the cathedrals of Mexico deserving mention is that of Puebla, which antedates that of the capital, having been founded by the first bishop in 1536. Its interior adornment is the richest of any in the country.

Central America was subjugated by Alvarado, the envoy of Cortez, in 1523. The capitals of the states into which this part of our continent is divided contain cathedrals for the local heads of the Catholic church. Some of them are very old, some are very imposing and carry out as far as possible the dominant ideas of the age of conquest.

We have in the United States two examples of Spanish colonial architecture, although they bear no comparison to those of Mexico in size or wealth of decoration. The earlier is that at St. Augustine, Fla., founded in 1682. It was partially destroyed by fire in 1887, but has been carefully restored so as to preserve the original style, and its ancient bells rehung. The second is that of New Orleans, which, while it occupies the site of two previous French edifices, one destroyed by hurricane in 1723, the other by fire in 1788, was rebuilt in 1794 at the entire charge of a Spanish nobleman resident in the city while the colony was under the dominion of Charles IV. of spain. This is the statement inscribed on his tomb before the altar of St. Francis and mass for his soul is celebrated every Saturday. Nevertheless, the cathedral is dedicated to St. Louis, patron saint of France, and the recent decorations illustrate his life. The original design was of the late heavy Spanish renaissance style, with three round towers, upon which steeples were raised in 1851 and the facade, fronting Jackson square, enlarged and improved.

We are indebted to the French for two large cathedrals on our continent. That of Quebec was founded in 1660 by Mons. Laval, the first bishop of New France. It is 216 feet long by 108 feet broad and its tower is lofty and well proportioned.

Facing the cathedral of the Roman Catholic church in Montreal is that of the Protestant Episcopal, or Church of England. It was begun in 1805 and is a conspicuous ornament to the city of Montreal, although as compared with its neighbor its size is inconsiderable.

The first English explorers of the new world were neither settlers nor builders and very different from the Spanish was the attitude of the Puritans toward the spirit and works of the renaissance. A few Episcopal churches in the south and a few of other denominations and of later date in New England and the old middle states are noble and dignified in their solidity and severity, but it is only recently that church architecture in the United States began to develop its present imposing and artistic proportions. Foremost among the denominations to enlarge and embellish their churches are the Episcopalians, whose traditions, derived from the Church of England, have never been lost sight of. This was wonderfully demonstrated when in September, 1907, the bishop of London visited Washington to assist in laying the cornerstone of the cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul. It is claimed that a vision of such a cathedral was an integral part of the scheme of the "federal city" planned by Major L'Enfant under President Washington.

The beautiful Roman Catholic cathedral in process of erection at St. Paul, Minn., is to have "chapels of the nations, six in number, dedicated to the apostles of the several races from which are derived the people of the northwest." The plan of this cathedral follows "the main lines of the original plan of St. Peter's in Rome as laid out by Bramante and Michel Angelo;" that is, the nave and transepts are shorter than usual and their intersection will be crowned with a great dome 96 feet in diameter, the cross over which will stand 280 feet high from the floor. "The main entrance is under a monumental arch which frames the rose window and the three front entrances leading to the vestibule located under the organ gallery. At each end of the vestibule under the towers are two chapels, one to be the founders' chapel, the other to contain the baptismal font," while at the ends of the transepts will be the two great chapels of St. Peter and St. Paul.

It seems to be a fact that American people and architects incline toward the Gothic style more than any other for church purposes and there is perhaps no purer and more pleasing example than the cathedral of St. Patrick, Fifth avenue, New York city. Its harmonious proportions and tones, without and within, charm both soul and sense, and it is one of the greatest ornaments to that city of magnificent constructions. The cornerstone was laid in 1850 and the building completed in 1879.

The cathedral of St. Paul, at Pittsburg, in much the same style, has the advantage of being set high and apart from other buildings, so that its beautiful spires pierce the air without competition from such skyscrapers as dwarf St. Patrick's, old Trinity, Grace and other churches in New York. Baltimore has a cardinal's cathedral, and the beautiful new building for the diocese of Richmond, Va., must be mentioned.

Many are the cathedrals of both the Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches whose foundations are being laid or planned in the various dioceses of our country.

The cathedral of Lima, Peru, is the earliest and the largest in South America. It was founded on the same day as the city by Pizarro himself. That a man of uncertain parentage and meager education, little acquainted with any phases of life besides those of the peasant and the rough adventurer should not only have developed a genius for leadership but conceived metropolitan ideas so splendid and complete as his plan of Lima, is nothing short of marvelous. He is comparable in kind if not in degree to some of the cowboy products of the early western life of the United States. In explanation of his vandalism it may be said that Pizarro had just seen his own country delivered from the Moors by the valiant Christian arms and probably he regarded the Inca people as another race of "heretic dogs" whose uncomprehended civilization and religion he destroyed with no more compunction than was shown by the cowboy in "shooting up" an Indian village and its snake dancers, to the regret of the modern ethnologist. In the place of what he destroyed Pizarro substituted one of the most fascinating settlements of the world. It took him 15 years to pacify the outraged people of Peru, but meanwhile he had laid out the city of Lima and dedicated the cornerstone of the cathedral on January 16, 1535. In it he lies buried before a great silver altar surmounted by an image of the virgin Mary. The interior of the cathedral is vast and dim and there are many side chapels and sacred pictures, some of which are by Peruvian artists of considerable merit. There is also a bronze fountain said to have been presented to the city in 1578, probably the oldest in America. Lima is a city of churches and the cathedral is more than equaled by several others in beauty and interest, if not in age.

Libby's Food Products

Libby's Cooked Corned Beef

There's a marked distinction between Libby's Cooked Corned Beef and even the best that's sold in bulk.

Evenly and mildly cured and scientifically cooked in Libby's Great White Kitchen, all the natural flavor of the fresh, prime beef is retained. It is pure, wholesome, delicious, and it is ready to serve at meal time. Saves work and worry in summer.

Other Libby "Healthful" Meal-Time-Hints, all ready to serve, are:

Peerless Dried Beef
Vienna Sausage, Veal Loaf
Evaporated Milk
Baked Beans, Chow Chow
Mixed Pickles

"Purity goes hand in hand with the Libby Brand."

Insist on Libby's at your grocer's.

Libby, McNeill & Libby
Chicago

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES

$5, $4, $3.50, $3, $2.50 & $2

THE STANDARD FOR 30 YEARS.

Millions of men wear W. L. Douglas shoes because they are the lowest prices, quality considered, in the world. Made upon honor of the best leathers, by the most skilled workmen, in all the latest fashions.

W. L. Douglas $5.00 and $4.00 shoes equal Custom Bench Work costing $6.00 to $8.00.

Boys' Shoes, $3, $2.50 & $2

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and the price on the bottom. Look for it. Take No Substitute. Ask your dealer for W. L. Douglas shoes. If not for sale in your town write for Mail Order Catalog. Shows how to order by mail. Shoes sent everywhere, factory delivered free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.

A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Nothing Too Good

for you. That's why we want you to take CASCARETS for liver and bowels. It's not advertising talk—but merit—the great, wonderful, lasting merit of CASCARETS that we want you to know by trial. Then you'll have faith—and join the millions who keep well by CASCARETS alone. 909

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

Solid Shaving Comfort
NO STROPPING NO HONING
Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, convenient, ornamental, lasts All Season. Will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, New York

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Workmen Needing Not to Be Ashamed.

"Study to Show Thyself Approved Unto God, a Workman That Needeth Not to Be Ashamed, Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth" (II Timothy ii, 15).

Louisville, Ky., June 19.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, New York, today addressed the International Bible Students' Association here, using the above text. He also gave a public address under the auspices of the association. He had crowded houses and earnest attention. On the above text he said in part:

I address you, dear friends, as Christians, students of God's Word, and not as sectarians. Although the world is full of denominations, each claiming to be the Church of Christ, we all admit that there is but the one "Church of the firstborns whose names are written in heaven" (Hebrews xii, 23). This conviction is being borne in upon us more and more as the days go by, and as the eyes of our understanding open more widely to the teachings of God's Word. We realize increasingly that our division means our shame in the eyes of the world, and that our Creedal contradictions imply that we are not all led in all things by the Holy Spirit, the teachings of which cannot be Yea and Nay upon the same subject. It is this sentiment which is taking hold of the ministry of all denominations and making them anxious for an outward show of Unity in Church Federation, which will shortly be effected. The Christian public, however, and especially Bible students, are not deeply sympathetic with the Federation idea. They realize that at most it would be a gloss of deception so far as doctrinal oneness is concerned; and that otherwise it is but a business or worldly combination.

Bible Students are more and more coming to prefer the Lord's way—the Scriptural way. They are coming to realize that what God's people need is not more organization but less organization, not more explicit creeds but the one standard of fellowship which the Bible sets up. They are learning that this simple creed is:—a turning from sin and acceptance of the Lord Jesus as the Redeemer from sin and death and the full consecration of the believer, mind and body, to know and to do the Lord's will to the best of his ability, under the Lord's Providential guidance. We all see that this simple bond of fellowship is the only one laid down in God's Word, and that whatsoever is more than this is injurious—bondage to men and to systems. We all see that "the Church of the Living God whose names are written in heaven" is composed exclusively of such as conform to the terms of this simple creed—that these alone will constitute "the Body of Christ which is the Church"—"the Bride, the Lamb's wife," whom he will accept and unite to himself in the end of this age. We all see that this class alone is referred to in the Scripture as "the elect," who are to be associated with the Savior in his glorious Spiritual Kingdom, which, invisible to men, is shortly to be established in power and great glory for the blessing of natural Israel and through her for the blessing of all the families of the earth—living and dead.

"Workmen Not Ashamed."

Let us consider the latter part of our text first: The Apostle's suggestion is that Timothy and all the ministers of the Gospel of Christ are professedly workmen, laboring under the guidance of God's Word. In the larger sense every Christian is a minister of the Gospel, or, as St. Peter declares of all the consecrated, "Ye are a Royal Priesthood, a Holy People, a Peculiar Treasure." In the end of the age will come a reckoning time, a showing of results, "Every man's work that he hath wrought shall be made manifest" (I Corinthians iii, 13).

Our text urges that Timothy, and every faithful servant of God should be so loyal to God and his message that in the great time of examination in the end of this age preparatory to the introduction of the Kingdom the showing shall be one of which we need not be ashamed. Let us, then, as Christian Bible Students of all denominations gathered here today, ask ourselves respecting our own work in the world, and how it must appear to God, to ourselves, and to our fellowmen—yea, how it must shortly be made manifest to all!

Let us call the roll. Baptist brethren, What have you to show as workmen who need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth? Methodist brethren, what say you? Presbyterians, next. Congregationalists, Lutherans, Catholics—all!

The answer of one is practically the answer of all: "We have—so many hundred Churches. They cost—so many millions of dollars. Their steeples are—so high. Their cost of maintenance is—so much. The number of ministers is—so many. The Church collections amount to so much. The amount collected for foreign missions is—so much. The amount expended on fine choirs and elegant organs is—so much. The aggregated debts of all our churches is—so much. The unpaid interest on many of these debts is—so much. The time and energy expended in fairs, bazaars, etc., to help pay the expenditures is—so much. The number of Church membership is—so many. The number in Sunday Schools is—so many."

Many of our dear Christian friends say, What lack we yet? Have we not really attained the goal of our Church ambition? Should we build finer edifices or pay larger salaries? Are we not straining ourselves with collections at every turn? What more could God ask of us? "We are rich and increased in goods and have need of nothing" (Revelation iii, 16-19).

In reply we may suppose the Lord to ask, Where did I give you instruction respecting these things? Where in my Word did you find the suggestion that what I desired you to do in the world was to erect great church edifices, piles of stone and iron and mortar, polished woods and stained glass? You are not rightly reading my Word. However good in intention, you have failed to "rightly divide the Word of Truth!" The Temple respecting which I gave instruction is the spiritual one, the Temple of the holy Spirit—the Body of Christ which is the Church. I fear that you have forgotten the true temple of God while rearing so many temples of earthly materials. Concerning the true Temple I instructed you that "the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are"—"living stones" being shaped and polished "for the habitation of God through the Spirit." Show me what you have accomplished in this way. Show me to what extent you have rightly divided my Word, and properly instructed mankind respecting my glorious character and my great Divine Plan of the Ages! Show me fruitage of the glorious message!

How many in all the millions that you report are "New Creatures in Christ Jesus," who "walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit?" Let me hear the message of my love and grace in Christ as you are proclaiming it! What mean these sectarian divisions amongst you? Why are there so many Church edifices and so few saintly worshipers? Who authorized you to put these creedal fences between my people to divide the flock? Know ye not that I said, there is one flock and one Shepherd? Why have you so neglected the spiritual interests of my flock and their instruction in righteousness? Why are you so unable to rightly divide my Word?

Instead of coming together as one Church of the Living God whose names are written in heaven you have divided into hundreds of sects and parties! Instead of taking my Word as a whole and rightly dividing its teachings as between the different ages and dispensations of my work, you have divided my Word in a sectarian manner. One sect has made one selection from my Word and another sect has made another selection. Thus ye array one part of my Word against another part of it, and hence get into confusion and conflict. What have you to answer for these things?

With shame of face we must all acknowledge that "We have done those things which we ought not to have done and have left undone those things which we ought to have done, and there is no help in us." The proper thing for us to do, dear Christian friends, is to get down upon our knees before the Lord and in contrition of heart to acknowledge that we have wrought no deliverance in the earth (Isaiah xxvi, 18); that our sectarian differences are our shame; that the ignorance that we have all been in respecting the Word of God is humiliating. Now that our eyes are open so that we can comprehend as never before the harmony of God's message from Genesis to Revelation, it means a rich feast and blessing to our souls. The Word of God becomes more precious to us daily as we become able to comprehend it. Our duty is to fly to the assistance of our dear brethren and sisters in Christ, of all denominations, and to call upon them to join with us in a determined stand for righteousness, for Truth, for God and for his Word.

We must show them that ignorantly we and they have dishonored our God by misrepresentation of his character and misrepresentations of the real teachings of the Bible. We must point them to the fact that the Bible does not teach that all mankind except the "Elect" saints will be consigned to an eternity of torture at the hands of fireproof demons. We must show them that the election of the Church during this age—a saintly little flock—does not mean injury to the non-elect. That, on the contrary, it is the Divine purpose that the elect saints with their great Redeemer in glory shall constitute God's Kingdom. That his Kingdom when established will bind Satan, put down sin, banish ignorance, error and superstition and uplift mankind by "restitution," by resurrection processes, up, up, up, to all that was lost in Eden by disobedience and to all secured for Adam and his race through the great transaction at Calvary (Acts iii, 19-21).

"Rightly Dividing the Word of Truth."

Alas, how many intelligent people have turned aside from following Christ and from hearing the voice of God through the Bible! Alas, how many are looking to Theosophy, to Spiritism, to Christian Science, to Higher Criticism, to Evolution—wandering farther and farther daily from the "faith once delivered to the saints" (Jude iii). We fault them no more than we fault ourselves. As a whole we have been workmen who need to be ashamed. We have dishonored God through misunderstanding and misrepresenting his Word and his Character. We have driven away from God and the Bible some of the most intelligent of our fellows, by reason of the contradictory nonsense of our creeds.

The Apostle urges, "Study to show thyself approved unto God." We are not to suppose, therefore, that the highest of all science, that which pertains to the Divine purpose and the Divine plan, can be acquired without study. We are not in this claiming that study alone would bring the desired results of proper knowledge. We heartily agree in the Scriptural proposition that "the world by wisdom knows not God." We are not therefore to study along the lines of worldly wisdom, but along the lines of "that wisdom that cometh from above"—along the lines of the inspired Scriptures. We must study! Whoever will not study will not know. "The secret of the Lord is with them that reverence Him." And reverencing him means the giving of our best thoughts and talents to the study of his Word, that we may "know the things freely given to us of God" (I Corinthians ii, 12).

We should note further as Bible students that we must not study to be approved of men, but to have the Divine approval. This will bring to us, as it did to the Master and his apostles, the disapprobation of the worldly-wise and nominally religious. It was the Chief Priests and Scribes and Pharisees, and not the common people of the Jews, nor the Roman soldiers, who were guilty of the crucifixion of our Lord. And we must expect similar conditions, because, as the Apostle says, "As he was so are we in this world." The class who called the Master Beelzebub is the same class which will oppose his footstep followers.

God permits all this with wise and loving foreintention. Nothing connected with the opposing forces is in any sense of the word interfering with his great Program. He set apart with Divine wisdom this Gospel Age of nearly nineteen centuries for the sole purpose of selecting from the world "the Church of the firstborns"—the antitypical Priests and Levites. The restriction of his message, the darkening of counsel, the clashing of creeds, the opposition of the world, the flesh and the Devil, are all wisely permitted with the foreintention on God's part that thus all through the Age the way of the cross—in the footsteps of Jesus—should be a "narrow way," so that comparatively few finding it would care to walk in it.

It is those few, that "little flock" zealous for God, for his Word, for righteousness, that he is now marking out as the prospective joint-heirs with Jesus in his glorious Kingdom, which is to bless the world with full opportunities for earthly salvation—"restitution." The trials of the faith, the patience, the love, the devotion of this "little flock" are all designed and not accidental. Satan and his hosts may think to thwart the Divine Plan and may mislead and use humanity as their tools, but it shall yet be seen that all of the Divine purposes shall be accomplished. The Word that has gone forth out of Jehovah's mouth shall prosper in the thing whereto he sent it.

St. Paul declared of earthly Israel, that they enjoyed "much advantage every way, because to them were committed the oracles of God." So now, dear friends, it seems to me that you and I and all sincere Christians the world around enjoy much advantage every way. Looking to the past we find great excuse for our dear forefathers who, with sincerity of heart, so misunderstood the Divine Word and so misinterpreted the spirit of the Master that they burned one another at the stake. We should not think so harshly of them for this—as though they lived today under the greater advantages which we possess. We should sympathize with them. We should consider them as blinded by the great Adversary as was Saul of Tarsus, when he, as a member of the Sanhedrin, authorized the stoning of St. Stephen. We should think of them sympathetically—as St. Peter spoke of the Jews who crucified the Lord. He said, "I wot, brethren, that in ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." So also we should kindly, lovingly cast a mantle of benevolence over similar conduct on the part of John Calvin and others of our forefathers. But as we would not go to the Jewish rulers, nor to Saul of Tarsus for religious instruction, neither should we go to Brother Calvin or others of our forefathers who were blinded, as he was, respecting the true character of God and the true Spirit of his Word.

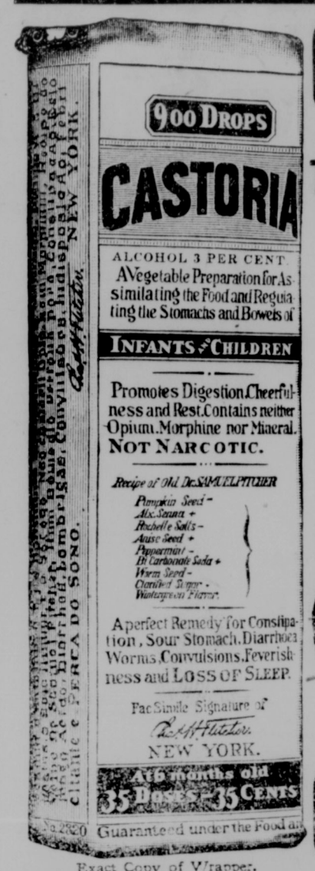
Only within the past century have the masses of God's people been able even to read the Bible, if they had possessed it. And only within the same time have they had the Bible to read. Our great hindrance has been that with Bibles in our hands and with ability to use them, we looked for instruction to our well-meaning fathers instead of going to God's Word itself. Now by God's grace the eyes of our understanding are opened. The wonderful Bibles of our day with their marginal references, their concordances, etc., and other assistances in Bible study are bringing us in touch with the whole message of God's Word. Now one passage of Scripture throws light upon another and thus with increasing brightness the Word of the Lord as a lamp gives light upon the pathway of his Church.

How to Save In Cutting Goods.

When you wish to know the exact amount of material required for a garment procure sample and width of material from the clerk, then use newspapers the exact width of material; if single width, place pattern on paper, being sure to remember which is up and down of the goods. Use enough newspaper for whole garment and then measure exact amount required is a good plan when expensive material is to be used.

How to Wash a Red Broadcloth Coat.

For washing a red broadcloth coat get 10 cents' worth of soap tree bark. Steep in two quarts of water on back of stove for about an hour. Strain into tub, put enough warm water in to wash the coat, let stand for a little while to soak the dirt out, then wash and rinse well. Hang out wet on coat hanger so it won't shrink and button up to keep in shape.



CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
C. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, C. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

OPERA HOUSE

School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE.

Opera House. OAKLAND, MD

TRUSTEE'S SALE

OF

Valuable Coal

AND

OTHER PROPERTY

Situate in Garrett County, Md., Known as the Gillespie Property.

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned Trustee, by decree entered on the 20th day of May, 1910, in the matter of C. D. Gillespie, bankrupt, pending in the District Court of the United State for the Northern District of West Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will, on the 23rd Day of July, 1910,

SATURDAY,

at Eleven O'clock A. M.,

at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, owned by C. D. Gillespie.

I

All the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying

315 Acres of Land.

being part of a tract known as "Elk Garden," situate in Garrett county, Maryland, together with 100 acres of the surface of said 315 acres and all the rights and privileges granted to the said C. L. Gillespie in connection with said coal property. Two-thirds of said property was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Ada A. V. Halterman, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, of record in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 45, folio 132, and the remaining one-third was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Austin Brown, Sheriff, by deed bearing date December 1, 1909, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 453, to which deeds reference is now here had for a more particular description of said property.

This property is situated very near the Western Maryland Railroad, near the station of Henry on said railroad and adjacent to the coal property now being operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Company at its mines at Henry. The coal underlying this property which is to be sold is very valuable.

II

All of the coal underlying a tract of land containing

68 1-2 Acres,

situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being known as a part of the "Elk Garden" tract and being the same coal conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Peter F. Snyder and wife, by deed bearing date October 27, 1906, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 364, to which deed reference is here had for a particular description of said 68½ acres, together with all the rights and privileges as to mining rights, surface and rights of way, as were vested in said Gillespie by said deed.

This 68½ acres of coal is considered very valuable. It is located a distance of about three or four miles from the railroad.

III

An undivided one half interest in ten acres of land, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being also a part of what is known as the "Elk Garden" tract, said undivided one-half interest having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry F. Marshall and wife, by deed dated the 11th day of August 1902, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 42, folio 300, to which deed reference is had for a particular description of said property.

IV

A tract or parcel of land containing one acre, more or less, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, on the Western Maryland Railroad, near Gorman, having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry C. Stemple and wife, by deed dated the 30th day of April, 1907, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 54, folio 454. There are situated, on this property, several buildings, one of which can be used for a combination dwelling house and store building.

All of the above described property will be sold free and acquit from all liens and incumbrances. The title to all of said property is considered good.

TERMS OF SALE. One-third cash in hand on day of sale and the residue upon a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to give interest bearing notes, with good personal security, for the deferred purchase money and the legal title to the property to be retained as additional security, until said deferred purchase money has been paid.

C. W. MAXWELL, Trustee.

DR. W. W. GRANT, DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-1y.

ORDER NISI.

Jane Roberts vs. J. Turner Lohr and wife. No. 1661 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 25th day of May, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by William R. Offutt and J. C. Renninger, attorneys named in the Mortgage, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of June, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 24th day of June, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $2210.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Alice Campbell, et al. vs. William Guard, et al.

No. 1657 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 15th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Norval Speelman, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 15th day of July, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 8th day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1800.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ¼ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not are vertised here. For particulars address

M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building.
Oakland, Maryland.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m.

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1910. NUMBER 18

OUR JULY WEATHER

According to the Forecast of Prognosticator Peter Rothermal Smith.

July is most likely to be supplied with refreshing rains up to the middle of the month. After that period the quantity will likely be much limited. The outlook to the above period is favorable, but later on in the month the showers are sure to break into narrow divisions running off into local showers. While some localities may have enough of moisture other places will be without any rain.

The clouds through the latter part of July and August will be charged with much bluster. The month will have two excessive heated periods. The first will be between the 2nd and 5th. The second hot wave will develop between the 25th and 29th.

A storm wave of much vigor will develop about the 2nd or 3rd and be on transit on the 4th, touching all parts of the country with wind, showers of rain and thunder as it moves on east. A cool wave will follow on the heels of the storm.

A wave of disturbance will develop on the 9th, 10th and 11th, which may discharge refreshing showers of rain which may be continued to the 12th. Westerly winds and cooler weather will follow the rain wave.

A period of weather disturbance will prevail from the 15th to the 18th. The general character of the period will be in the changes of temperature, direction of air currents, cloud formation and disruption, bluster and light scattering showers, and in places refreshing showers will show up. When these conditions pass on east the weather will become cooler.

On the 21st, 22nd and 23rd some disturbance will prevail, such as scattering thunder showers, wind and change of air currents.

A storm period will prevail from the 27th to the 30th, which will be a heated period. The conditions that will prevail will cause the air currents to flow for several days from the south, causing a heated wave. Thunder showers, wind and some rain will show up at a number of localities. When these conditions pass off the weather will be cooler.

Returned to Hospital.

Mr. Ersal Taylor, who recently returned to his home in Oakland from the Fairmont Hospital where he was a patient for several weeks after the accident which befel him near the Offutt mill site when train No. 55 ran him down, left here yesterday morning for Fairmont where he will again enter the hospital for treatment. One of his legs, both of which were broken, is not healing to the satisfaction of either the patient or the physicians and the probabilities are that the bones will have to be reset before permanent improvement will occur.

RELIEVED OF $5000 IN GARRETT COUNTY BONDS

Hiram M. Frazee, of Selbysport, Suffered Considerable Monetary Loss.

Mr. Hiram M. Frazee, retired merchant and farmer of Selbysport, Garrett county, suffered the loss of five thousand dollars worth of Garrett county court house bonds a few days ago by having the securities stolen from his residence at Selbysport by some party or parties unknown.

Mr. Frazee purchased the bonds from Cumberland and Frostburg financial institutions several months ago and kept them in his home instead of depositing them in a more secure place. Judging from the manner in which the theft was committed there is no doubt that the party who committed the crime was thoroughly acquainted with the place where the bonds were kept and that the work of the theft was adroitly done.

Mr. Frazee was in Oakland a few days ago but did not intimate to any one that he had suffered the loss of his property, but since that time the matter has leaked out. Detectives are at work on the case and the securities may be recovered.

L. F. GREEN IN JAIL

Gave Himself Up to Officers Yesterday and Will Stay in Jail 30 Days.

Lawrence F. Green, ex-Assemblyman from Garrett county, who was convicted at the December Term of the Circuit Court of this county for criminally libelling State Senator Speicher and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and serve thirty days in jail, but who appealed his case to the Court of Appeals which body dismissed the appeal thus confirming the verdict of the local court in a decision handed down a few days ago by Judge Briscoe, came to Oakland yesterday from Grantsville and gave himself up to Sheriff Shartzer. Green is now in jail and will serve out his sentence unless pardoned by Governor Crothers.

Laborer Killed By Train.

A Russian labored, known as "No. 58," was struck and fatally injured by B. & O. passenger train No. 2 at 7 o'clock Saturday morning, one-half mile above Bond station, on the 17 mile grade. He was placed aboard the baggage car and died before the train reached Piedmont. One leg and arm was mashed and his skull crushed in and his body otherwise mutilated. Letting fast express train No. 79 pass the unfortunate man failed to hear train No. 2 coming on the eastbound track and was run down. He was employed by a steam shovel contractor. His body was taken to Piedmont.

HAS BROUGHT FORTH WORDS OF COMMENDATION

"Another Contributor" Voices His Sentiments Concerning Oakland.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The article in your issue of the 23rd inst., criticising the calamity howler, the loafer, and calling attention to much needed industries, was read with considerable interest. So far, so good. The criticisms contained in that letter were not uncalled for. Now the question is, will the suggestions go unheeded?

I wish the author of the letter referred to had gone still farther in his forceful manner of criticising things and mentioned, for instance, the unsightly condition of our streets and dangerous conditions of the old dilapidated sidewalks throughout the town.

I do not know how many millenniums will be required for our people to advance far enough in civilization that the saloon and all its attendant and unnecessary evils will be abolished, but there certainly is sufficient civic pride and aesthetic taste in our little city to prevent the stacking of dirty, vile smelling beer kegs, empty boxes and other unsightly and unnecessary obstructions upon the sidewalks.

Again, young America has gone wild in anticipation of the glorious Fourth by congregating in public places, shooting off fire crackers, tooting their filthy vulgar bazoos, and engaging in scurrilous and obscene conversation to the annoyance and inconvenience of those who have legitimate business on the streets. If some of the money spent by the county in sobering drunks were spent in boarding some of these useless, vulgar little nuisances, their parents might find more profitable employment or other rendezvous for them.

The State road, which means so much to Garrett county, will soon be completed to the corporate limits of Oakland. I hope the city fathers and county officials will macadamize or pave the two or three blocks of our street connecting up with this State road before the snow flies again.

If these suggestions are good, let us see to it that something is done immediately to bring about a better state of affairs. If I am wrong just drop around some cold day and let me know.

ANOTHER CONTRIBUTOR.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. ELIZABETH A. STERLING.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Sterling was born Sept. 8, 1930, at Sand Spring, Garrett Co, Md, and died at the home of her son, John H. Sterling, at Elder, Md, June 17, 1910, of dropsy. She was married to Robert Sterling May 24th, 1850, to which union were born five sons and five daughters, all of whom preceded her to the other world except three sons: John H., who resides at Elder; S. J., of Kingwood, W. Va., and Geo. W., of Mountain Lake Park. She was converted and joined the M. E. church in December, 1850, of which she remained active member to the end of her life. Several times during her last illness she expressed herself as ready to leave this world. A few hours before she breathed her last she said to a niece that if she did not get well the Lord would be with her. She was never too busy nor was the night too dark or stormy for her to respond to a call to help any one who was sick. The funeral service was conducted June 20th at the Blooming Rose church by Rev. Powers, of the Friendsville charge.

ELI STANTON.

Eli Stanton, who was well and favorably known throughout Garrett county as well as over a large scope of Somerset county, Pa., passed quietly away at his home at Little Crossing on the National Pike, near Grantsville, on Monday evening. He suffered from a stroke of paralysis some weeks ago from which he never recovered. He succeeded his father, William Stanton, as proprietor of the widely known Stanton's Mill, at Little Crossing, many years ago, and only a few weeks ago relinguished ownership to his son, W. E. Stanton, of the third generation of Stantons to operate this mill.

MARY WILBA LILLER.

Mary Wilba, aged five weeks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Liller, died this morning after an illness of a few days and will be buried from the home of its parents this afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. G. R. Williamson officiating.

Write E. S. West, Oakland, Md., the only licensed real estate dealer in Garrett county, for booklet describing all kinds of real estate for sale in this vicinity. Also valuable farms, coal and timber lands in other States, Mexico and Canada. '11-4t.

Something new in Talcum Powder; Babcock's Corylopsis of Japan, the most popular Talcum on the market today. Harnill-Gonder Pharmacy.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE CONFERENCE

First Gathering of the Season at Mt. Lake Park Begins Tomorrow.

Tomorrow evening at eight o'clock the Lord's Day Alliance Conference, to be held under the auspices of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, will be opened with James Yearance, of New York City, president of the alliance, presiding.

The conference will continue until Monday night. The aim of this conference is to establish at Mountain Lake Park an annual conference in the interest of the Sabbath. All lovers of the observance of the Sabbath are invited to attend and take part in the discussions. A special invitation has been extended the Sabbath schools of Oakland to attend the afternoon session on Sunday.

The program for the three days' meeting is as follows:

Friday, July 1st—8 p. m., "The Sabbath Outlook in America," Rev. George W. Grannis, D. D.

Saturday, July 2nd—10 a. m., "The Sabbath in West Virginia," with special reference to Clarksburg, Rev. Henry T. McClelland, D. D.; general discussion on "The Sabbath in My Home Community." 3 p. m., General Conference of all persons interested in Sabbath Observance led by Rev. George W. Grannis. 8 p. m., "The Sabbath in the Keystone State," address by Dr. T. B. Mutchler.

Sunday, July 3rd—11 p. m., Sermon, Rev. Dr. J. T. McCrory, Pittsburg. 3 p. m., Sunday School Rally, Scott T. Jones, Esq., president; addresses by Dr. Grannis, Dr. Mutchler and Dr. McCrory. 8 p. m., "The Lord's Day Alliance, Its Object and Its Achievements," Dr. McCrory and other speakers.

Monday, July 4th—8 p. m., "The Sabbath the Keystone of American Civilization," speakers to be announced later.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Mrs. S. C. Speers, of Speers, Pa., is in her cottage for the summer and will be joined later by other members of her family and friends.

Mr. E. W. Williams, wife and three daughters, of Clarksburg, are in the Williams cottage near the drug store.

Mrs. Maxwell and a part of her family, of Clarksburg, are here. Mr Maxwell will be here during the summer as his extensive business interests will permit.

Mrs. Harriet Johns has opened Bethel cottage for the accommodation of summer visitors.

Mrs. Kate Hardy has leased her large residence again to Mrs. Horner Davis, of Clarksburg, and Mrs. Hardy has again leased the Laffey cottage for the season.

Mr. Wm. A. Mallette and family, of Pittsburg, are occupying their cottage opposite the Association office.

Rev. Nicola Di Stefano, who is in charge of the Italian mission work in Oakland district, West Virginia Conference, preached here Sunday evening to a large congregation. Rev. Di Stefano has been very successful in his field this spring, having witnessed the conversion not only of his countrymen but many Americans as well.

Rev. J. Ed. Kildow, superintendent of the Children's Orphans Home at Elkins, delivered a little girl to Mrs. Sarah J. Moon, of Loch Lynn, Tuesday. Mr. Kildow informed your correspondent that he had a number of children of both sexes for whom he desired to find good homes.

Mr. Peter Murdock, who has been attending college at Buckhannon, is here for the summer vacation.

Mrs. Schrock is believed to be slowly improving. This will be welcome news to the many friends of the family.

Gas was turned on Tuesday to the residences of Messrs. John L. Ruhl and E. E. Friend and by Saturday will be in many homes and business places in the Park. The church will also be lighted by gas next Sunday evening.

The first meeting as scheduled in the summer program is the "Lord's Day Alliance of America," which will commence Friday evening in the Tabernacle at 8 o'clock and continue over Sunday.

Tuesday, July 5th, the great camp-meeting will commence, under the direction of Rev. Joseph H. Smith, assisted by a large corps of ministers and evangelists.

Thursday evening the Ladies' Aid of the local church will hold an ice cream social on the veranda and lawn at Haydenhurst cottage.

Refused Cigarette License.

The city council of Elkins has refused to grant license for the sale of cigarettes for the next license year.

SAFE BLOWERS MADE A PRETTY BIG HAUL

Monday Night When They Robbed the Office of the Kendall Supply Company.

Last Monday night some time between the hours of midnight and daylight the massive safe in the office of Kendall Supply Company at Crellin, four miles southwest of Oakland, was blown to pieces by safe crackers and money and postage stamps amounting to about five hundred dollars carried off.

The room in which the safe was located was almost entirely wrecked, pieces of iron being blown through the ceiling and roof of the building, a new type writer demolished, and the safe reduced to scrap iron. The thieves also enter the store room and wreckrd a cash register in an attempt to get at the money contained therein, but secured only a portion of the contents.

As soon as the discovery was made that the theft had been committed bloodhounds were taken to Crellin from Fairmont and an effort made to track the thieves. The dogs followed a scent for about ten miles up the railroad track toward Conneway's from Crellin but lost the trail at the Miller place and all efforts to again pick it up were unsuccessful.

Aside from the actual money loss to the firm their building and its contents were damaged to an extent of about $500.

Old-timer Dying.

George Shaw, father of H. C. Shaw, of Salisbury, who lives on the Aaron Beachy farm on the National Pike, about two miles west of Grantsville, Md., is in very feeble health, and the prospect for his recovery, owing to his age, is not very encouraging. Mr. Shaw for many years conducted the State House farm at Little Meadows on the National Pike about two miles east of Grantsville, where he, with his sons, engaged extensively in stock raising. —Meyersdale Republican.

K. of P. Special Train.

The officers of the Uniform Rank of of the Knights of Pythias have secured a special train from this city to Milwaukee to convey the first Maryland Regiment of that organization to the annual encampment which will be held from August first to August 11th at Milwaukee. The train will be made up of Pullmans throughout. Companies 2 and 4 from Cumberland, Col. H. W. Russler and staff, and the companies from Frostburg, Lonaconing, Midland and Oakland, will make up the party.—Cumberland News.

The Republican for Job Printing

WHAT GARRETT HAS.

Mr. E S West, In a Letter to The Sun, Directs Attention to Garrett.

Mr. E. S. West, of Oakland, contributed the following letter to the Baltimore Sun of Tuesday:

During the last few weeks I have noticed in The Sun letters from Eastern Maryland setting forth the advantages of that portion of this Commonwealth. While I have seen nothing of that character from Western Maryland, nothing but exaggerated reports of a few spring frosts, I would not accuse the Baltimore paper of provincialism, for I believe anything of general interest to your readers and that which will help to bring the advantages of each particular locality before the people will as readily find space in your paper. I believe a letter from this part of Maryland will be of more than passing interest to many of the readers of your paper, and if you will permit me I will furnish the following information from Garrett, the extreme western portion of this State; the roof of the Alleghanies.

The price of land in this county ranges from $2 to $50 an acre, depending upon location, improvements and reservations of mineral, coal, etc. I predict that this portion of Maryland will soon be recognized as one of the best paying farming district in our land.

Oakland is near the centre of a comparatively level plateau 20 by 60 miles in extent. There are thousands of acres of rich glade land in our county with a deep black soil, until recently thought to be worthless, and much of which is still covered with hazel brush and alders. A considerable portion of this glade land requires more or less drainage to get the best results.

Hundreds of acres on this mountain top are being set in apple trees yearly, and our apples, other fruits and grains are carrying off first prizes everywhere they are exhibited. Our accessibility to Eastern cities (we are only six hours from the nation's capital) and the many summer resorts in this immediate vicinity gives us a market and prices for farm products second to none in the country.

Oakland has a population of 2,000 people; is the county seat of Garrett county and on the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Another line from Pittsburg has been completed to within 16 miles of Oakland via the Youghiogheny river. When completed this will open a splendid coal field and put us within three and one-half hours of Pittsburg. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company will surely complete this road in the near future, and if it does not we have some assurance that other interests will.

In addition to this being an excellent farming country, with almost unbounded resources, right in our midst are rich deposits of coal, kaolin, pure glass sand, iron ore, fire and potter's clay, an inexhaustible supply of brick and tile shale, an abundant supply of natural gas for lighting, heating and manufacturing purposes, and an abundance of fine timber.

We have a number of parks and famous summer resorts in this vicinity, and the principal one—Mountain Lake Park—is only one mile from Oakland. This summer resort, high in the mountains, is equally high in its aims, and is unquestionably the most superb and sensible summer resort in America. In this park more than $350,000 has been invested in improvements.

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO

Headquarters for the Best Shoe Made

THE

Hamilton-Brown

Shoes and Oxfords

FOR WOMEN.

The Crossett Shoes and Oxfords for Men.

Our line is complete now and new styles coming in every day.

One of our specialties for Women—Low Heel and Plain Toe.

For Men—Lace and Congress, Plain Toe.

Be convinced and buy your next pair here.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

Copyrighted.

TEDDY TAFTY

Teddy-Tafty Sundae

The Latest in Ice Cream.

Healthful

Delightful

Refreshing

Oakland Steam Bakery

Manufacturers of Ice Cream complying absolutely with the Pure Food Laws of the United States.

We Freeze our Reputation into our Ice Cream.

TEDDY TAFTY

TEDDY-TAFTY.

The WOOL INDUSTRY in THE AMERICAS

LOADED LLAMAS IN THE PERUVIAN HIGHLANDS

MAN'S first clothing was an animal pelt, and without doubt a sheep pelt. It may be suggested that the fig leaf antedates the sheepskin as an article of wear. This may be true, but the fig leaf can be considered only as a temporary expedient which was discarded with the first cool winds which swept over the Mesopotamian lowlands.

The sheep pelt or the wool plucked or sheared from it was the principal clothing of man from before the dawn of history down almost to the present day. Now cloth made from vegetable fibers, principally cotton, has a more extended use than wool. But this does not mean that cotton and linen are displacing wool as an article of human wear. Far from it; the use of wool constantly advances by enormous strides, and the even greater advance in the use of cotton is due in no small measure to the fact that the supply of wool can not meet the demand for clothing. Mankind must perforce wear the vegetable fibers or go unclothed. The same fact is true of the product of the silkworm; the supply can never equal the demand. Cotton, of course, has conquered for itself a new field, the clothing of the unclothed races of the earth. In addition it has supplied new articles of clothing to civilized man, whose ancestors wore but little else than wool. The European or American of today does not wear less wool; in truth he wears more, but he also wears more articles of clothing, and these, for the most part, are cotton. There is a close parallel all over the world between the cattle and the sheep industry, but there are some important differences as well.

It has rarely happened and can scarcely happen again that cattle will anywhere be raised primarily for their horns and hides, but the raising of sheep for their wool is one of the well-recognized steps in the industry. It is the fact that this can be done so as to pay a handsome profit that built up the great sheep industries in the western part of the United States, in Australia and New Zealand, in South Africa, and now is building up a greater industry in South America. Free or very cheap pasturage is the fundamental condition for this kind of sheep raising. Were it not for these new lands, where the cost of feeding the sheep is nominal, the price of wool would advance to a point where wool clothing would be beyond the means of any except the very rich. Sheep raising is a profitable industry in England, or Germany, or the eastern half of the United States, not because of wool, but because of mutton. The fleece is a by-product, just as the hide of the steer or of the dairy cow is a by-product; the principal value of the animal is its flesh. In the new sheep centers of South America the principal value of the animal is its wool, and fortunes were made from the flocks even when not a pound of mutton was exported or sold.

Wool, as the word is used in commerce, is not a product alone of the sheep. It may be wool, although it comes from the backs of several varieties of goats, from the camel, the alpaca, the guanaco, the vicuna, or the llama, as well as from the sheep. It is the thing itself and not the zoological classification of the animal which determines whether the fiber is wool, hair, or fur. Since the classification is commercial and not scientific the line between these three classes is necessarily vague and indistinct. For instance, the under covering of the camel may be camel's wool or camel's hair, and so we have alpaca hair or alpaca wool. From the sheep there are many varieties of wool, long and short, straight and curly, coarse and fine, and, what is generally more important than any of these, varieties in the serrations or imbrications appearing on the surface of the fibers.

It is important in considering wool as a commercial commodity to keep in mind the three different kinds of cloth made therefrom. These are commercially known in English as felts, woolens, and worsteds. The processes in making these three kinds of cloth are so different as to make them entirely different industries, employing entirely different machinery. Felt is made from the wool or fur in mass, the cloth holding because of the lock clutch of the imbricated fiber. Woolens and worsteds are spun from threads, but the threads in the two kinds of cloth are prepared in a different manner, and the weaving is entirely unlike. Formerly, entirely different kinds of wools were used for making the two kinds of cloths, or rather it is more accurate to say that only certain kinds of wools could be used in making worsteds. Almost any kind of wool could be used for making woolens, although some were much more suitable than others, and, as a rule, those least suitable for woolens were best suitable for worsteds. In effect, therefore, certain wools were used for woolens and certain other wools for worsteds. With the improved modern machinery used in worsted mills these limitations are fading away, so that worsteds can now be made from wools formerly not used for this purpose.

The wool used for making woolens is carded; that for worsteds is combed. The effect of these two processes is that in the first the wool fibers are crossed and interlocked as much as possible, and in the second they are drawn out to be parallel, as in cotton or linen. Woolen yarns, although hard-spun, look and feel light and fluffy. Worsted yarns appear finer and stronger.

The weaving of the two kinds of cloth is not unlike, at least not to the unskilled observer, except in one particular, and this is a most important one—woolens are fulled and worsteds are not. The fulling of the cloth, accomplished by heat, moisture and pressure, brings together and interlocks, by means of the imbrication of the fiber, the several threads entering into the cloth into a more or less felted whole. The cloth shrinks, sometimes as much as one-half, and in such material, as for instance the so-called doeskins and broadcloths, it appears and feels like felt.

It is this process of semifelting the cloth, made possible by the peculiar lie of the fibers in the yarn, that distinguishes woolens from worsteds. Formerly, entirely different classes of wool were used in the two cloths—for woolens, the short-staple, highly imbricated carding wool, merino for example; and for the worsteds the long-staple, slightly imbricated or smooth combing wools. By modern machinery it is possible now to use the short-staple wools in making worsteds.

In practise the raw wool, after being washed and scoured, is subjected to a series of combing processes, in each of which the particular fibers suitable for a certain purpose are extracted. The residuum after each combing is called a waste, although its value per pound may have been augmented by the extraction of the lower-priced fibers.

According to United States census reports, manufactures of wool rank tenth in the list of American industries. The total capital invested was $310,179,749 and with an output valued at $296,990,484 a year. In the classification adopted the manufacture of clothing is not included. Since 1900 there has been an enormous increase in the wool manufacturing industry, principally in the manufacture of worsteds. At the same census the number of sheep in the United States was 39,852,967. Since then there has been a 43 per cent. increase in the number of sheep, as appears by a report issued by the census office on January 1, 1910, which shows 57,216,000 sheep in the country at the present time. These are valued at an average of $4.08, giving a total value of $233,644,000. By the census of 1900 the country produces 276,567,584 pounds of sheep's wool and 961,328 pounds of mohair and goat hair. Estimating the same average clip of wool as at that time, the production of the country at the present should be about 400,000,000 pounds of wool. In reality it should be greater, on account of the improvement in sheep breeding.

There are several hundred varieties of sheep both in the domestic and in the wild breeds. The former have been under the dominion of man since before the dawn of history. Whether these are derived from any one of the existing wild species, or from the crossing of several or from some now extinct species is a matter of conjecture even to scientists. Variations in the different domestic breeds are very great and in no other particular greater than in the wool. Domestic sheep, not considering the Asiatic breeds, may be classed under two heads—the Spanish and the British breeds. The Spanish breed is the Merino, which has modified more or less the sheep of all Europe, including the British islands, North and South America, South Africa and Australia. The Merino has a very characteristic appearance, which easily distinguishes him from other breeds. He has a thick covering of wool over the forehead and cheeks, his horns are large, ponderous and convoluted laterally. The wool is long, soft, and twisted into silky looking spiral ringlets. The wool fibers are highly imbricated and possess in the highest degree fine felting qualities. The origin of the Spanish Merino is not very well known, but the breed is known to have as a foundation the original breed introduced into the Peninsula by the Romans upon which was crossed certain English sheep, most probably the Leicester or Lincoln sheep.

Up to the time of the Napoleonic wars, the position of Spain in the wool trade was at the head. Spanish wool went all over the civilized world and enjoyed a reputation for being the best. However, the peninsular wars, with the attendant evils following thereon, had a most disastrous effect on the wool trade of Spain and produced a depreciation in its quality and a consequent loss in exportation for the wool of the famous breed.

Spanish Merinos were taken to Hungary in 1775 and to France one year later—the most famous French Merino is the Rambouillet. Spanish Merinos were first brought to Rambouillet by Daubenton in 1782, and from this first importation the breed was developed. It is now known all over the world as one of the best of the Merino strains. Spanish Merinos were brought to the United States in the early colonial days, but the breed was lost in a promiscuous crossing with the earlier imported British breeds. The first Spanish Merinos whose descendants have been kept pure were brought to the United States in 1802.

Merinos were taken to the Spanish-American colonies almost with the first colonists, and are the foundation and almost the sole foundation of the so-called native breeds in all the American Latin republics, but the breed was not kept up, and consequently decayed even more rapidly than subsequently in Spain following the Napoleonic wars.

While Spain has the honor of having produced the most valuable single breed of sheep, bred for wool peculiarly suitable for clothing, the British islands have produced the greatest number of valuable breeds of sheep bred for wool suitable for all purposes, and even for the particular purpose for which Merino wool is best suited, but little inferior thereto. Of course in the mutton breeds Great Britain has always stood without a rival, but also in its long-wool breeds it is without rival in wool of this character. The British breeds are classified as long wool, short wool and mountain breeds. The long-wool breeds are the Leicester, Border Leicester, Cotswold, Lincoln, Kentish, Devon Longwool, South Devon, Wensleydale, and Roscommon.

The short-wool breeds—this class includes among others the famous mutton breeds—are the Oxford Down, Southdown, Shropshire, Hampshire Down, Suffolk, Ryeland, Somerset, and Dorset Horned.

The mountain breeds are the Cheviot, Blackfaced Mountain, Herdwick, Lonk, Dartmoor, Exmoor, Welsh Mountain, and Limestone.

All of these breeds are English except the Border Leicester, Cheviot, and Blackfaced, which are Scotch, the Welsh which belongs to Wales, and the Roscommon to Ireland.

The Leicester from an historical standpoint is the most important of the long-wool English sheep, and it was the great reputation of the wool of this breed that gave England in the past its prominent position as a wool-producing country. Most important of all, it is the Leicester blood which is the foundation of many of the other best English breeds and as such has extended itself over all the world. The wool is fine, white, and long-stapled.

The Lincoln is the largest and heaviest fleeced sheep. Many of the fleeces will weigh from 18 to 20 pounds, with a staple 20 inches in length. The Lincoln resembles the Cotswold, but has a less-pronounced tuft on the forehead and the wool is closer curled.

The wool of these sheep has a fine glistening appearance which has earned for it the name of "luster wool."

The Southdowns, Shropshire, Hampshire Downs, Oxford Downs, and Dorsets are among the better-known short-wool sheep. The Dorset staple is the shortest.

The Cheviot is the best known among the mountain breeds. The Cheviot is sometimes called a middle-wool sheep.

The French breeds best known are the Choletaise, which carry a good fleece, the Larzac, a short, thick-set animal with long-fibered but rather scanty wool, the Berrichome du Crevan, better known for its heavy milking qualities than for wool, and the Manchamp sheep, known as La Chamois, which produces a most excellent long and fine-fibered combing wool.

In addition to the domestic sheep introduced into America by the English, Spanish and Portuguese settlers, South America possesses a group of wool-bearing animals which are native to the country. This group, the auchenia, is one of the two branches into which the existing genera of the family of the camelidae is divided. The other branch is the camel (camelus) of the Old World.

Most authorities agree in dividing the auchenia into four species, the guanaco, the vicuna, the llama, and the alpaca. The two last named are not known in the wild state, but were domesticated by the native Indians long prior to the coming of the Spaniards to South America. There is no reason to doubt that the guanaco and the vicuna might also be brought under subjection.

The vicuna is a smaller animal, about the size of the fallow deer. It is found in the high mountains of Bolivia, Peru and Ecuador, seldom descending below 13,000 feet. Although it may be tamed, it is to all intents and purposes a wild animal. It yields an exceedingly fine and delicate wool of a reddish-yellow color, which is worth about twice as much as alpaca.

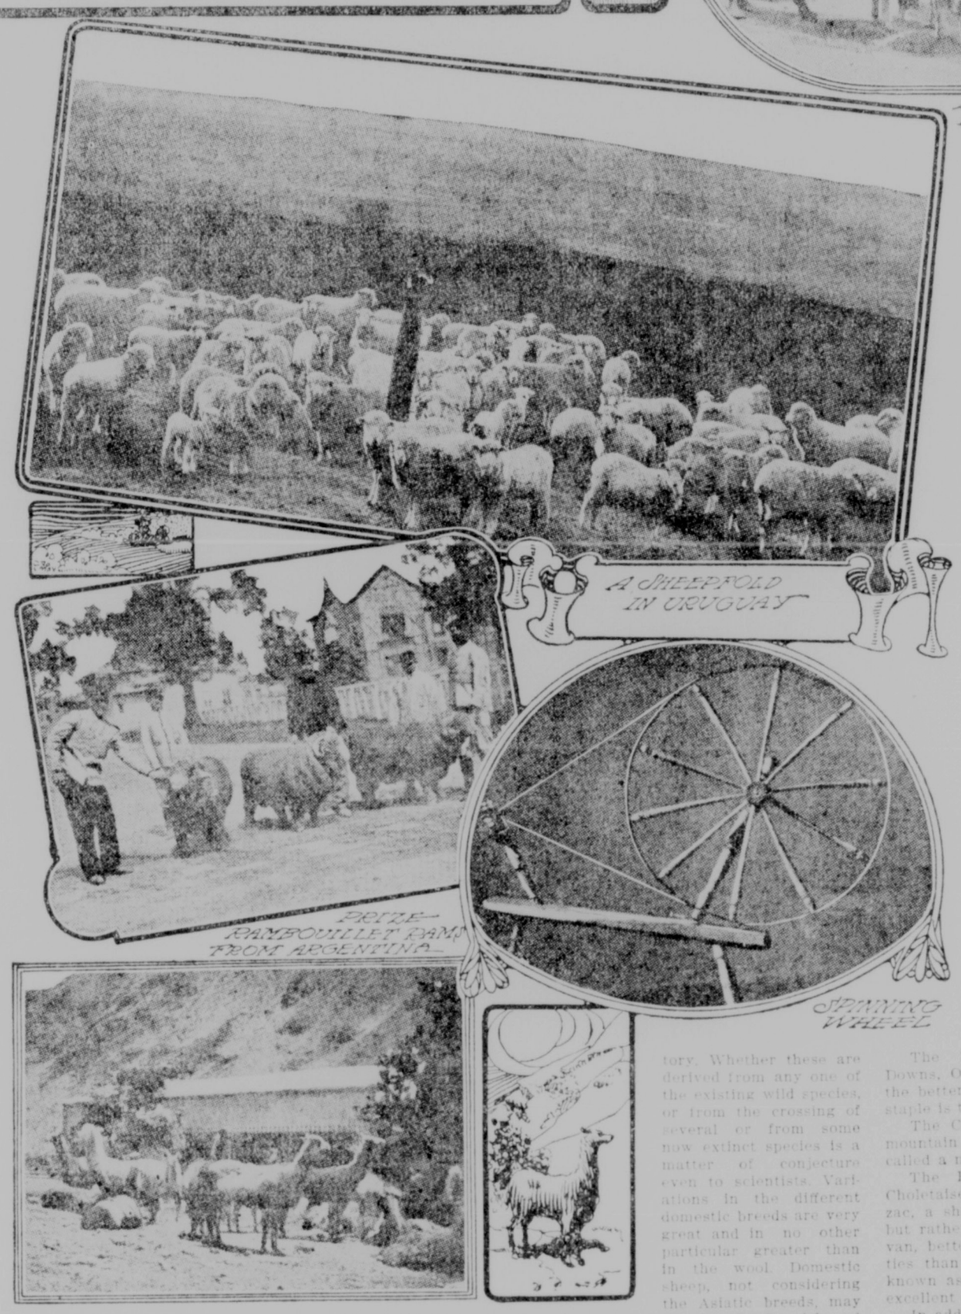
The alpaca was the wool-producing animal of the Incas, as it is yet of most of the people of the Andes and the west coast of South America. It is found principally in Peru and Bolivia, but does not thrive below about 5,000 feet.

All of the South American countries are producers of wool from the domestic sheep, and most of them are exporters to a greater or less degree; but the recent development of the sheep industry in Argentina, Uruguay, and Chile lends a particular interest to South America as a purveyor of this one of the world's staple articles of trade.

The annual wool clip of Argentina for the season of 1849-50 was 8,000,000 kilograms, 17,600,000 pounds. This was a respectable showing for the time and gave Argentina a position of importance in the wool trade. The wool, however, was a coarse grade, most of it what is known to the trade as Cordova, used by worsted spinners for carpet yarns. In 50 years the industry had increased thirtyfold so that the clip of the year 1899-1900 was 239,000,000 kilograms—525,800,000 pounds. This represented about one-fourth of the world's production. The quality of the wool meanwhile had improved.

A recent census of the country (1908) shows 67,211,754 sheep. It is almost impossible for the mind to grasp these figures, but some idea of their significance can be gained when it is stated that "if the animals were assembled in a gigantic drove, 12 abreast, they would reach across the continent from New York to San Francisco." This places Argentina second to Australia, which leads the world with over 83,100,000, the United States third, with about 56,000,000, and England fourth, with about 35,000,000.

The export of wool from Argentina for the year 1908 amounted to 386,183,000 pounds.



A SHEEPFOLD IN URUGUAY

PRIZE RAMBOUILLET RAM FROM ARGENTINA

SPINNING WHEEL

Hermann the Great.

Hermann the Great, the famous magician, could take a rabbit out of a silk hat and a bunch of roses out of an empty paper cone. Easy Task laundry soap takes the dirt out of clothes like magic. You don't have to boil the clothes; Easy Task gets after the dirt and sends it flying while the clothes soak. Our best housewives say it is the finest soap sold in Springfield.

Docile Cheese.

Andrew Carnegie, while eating with appetite and courage last month the dishes cooked by the young girls of the Margaret Morrison school in Pittsburg, said:

"I have no fear before these experimental dishes. He who has eaten in France learns to eat boldly.

"Think of the French cheeses alone!

"Why, one afternoon in a restaurant in the Boulevard des Italiens, I heard a guest shout angrily:

"'Waiter, look here, this cheese is walking all over the table.'

"'Ah, have no fear, monsieur. It won't escape,' the waiter replied. 'If it goes too far, just call "Jules, Jules!" It always answers to its name.'"

SAVED OLD LADY'S HAIR

"My mother used to have a very bad humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for it I had two different doctors. Her head was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out in spite of what they both did. One day her niece came in and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and the doctors did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment?' Mother did and they helped her. In six months' time the itching, burning and scaling of her head was over and her hair began growing. Today she feels much in debt to Cuticura Soap and Ointment for the fine head of hair she has for an old lady of seventy-four.

"My own case was an eczema in my feet. As soon as the cold weather came my feet would itch and burn and then they would crack open and bleed. Then I thought I would flee to my mother's friends, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I did for four or five winters, and now my feet are as smooth as any one's. Ellsworth Dunham, Hiram, Me., Sept. 30, 1909."

Something Lacking.

"Disappointed in Venice, with its romantic lagoons and canals?"

"Well, there wasn't any place to shoot the chutes."

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

No Alonzo, a silver cup never runs when it is chased.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
CURE ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
OR RHEUMATISM
OR BRIGHT'S DISEASE OR BACKACHE OR DIABETES
PAPER 375 "Guaranteed under"

WESTERN CANADA

Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, says:
"The stream of emigrants from the United States to Canada will continue."

Senator Dolliver recently paid a visit to Western Canada, and says: "There is a big hunger in the hearts of English-speaking people; this will account for the removal of so many Iowa farmers to Canada. Our people are pleased with its Government and the excellent administration of law, and they are coming to you in tens of thousands, and they are still coming."

Iowa contributed largely to the 70,000 American farmers who made Canada their home during 1909. Field crop returns alone during or added to the wealth of the country upwards of Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts. 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest, wood, water and building material plentiful.

$170,000,000.00

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Government Agent.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

H. M. WILLIAMS
Law Building Toledo, Ohio
(Use address nearest you.)

STOCKERS & FEEDERS

Choice quality; reds and roans, white faces or angus bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.

National Live Stock Com. Co.
At either
Kansas City, Mo. St. Joseph, Mo. S. Omaha, Neb.

6% vs. 4% Why accept 4% from a savings bank when you can buy

Six Per Cent Real Estate Bonds?

Besides sharing in the profits of a great corporation. Write for full particulars. Dept. R.

DEBENTURE CORPORATION OF NEW YORK
33 Fifth Avenue New York City

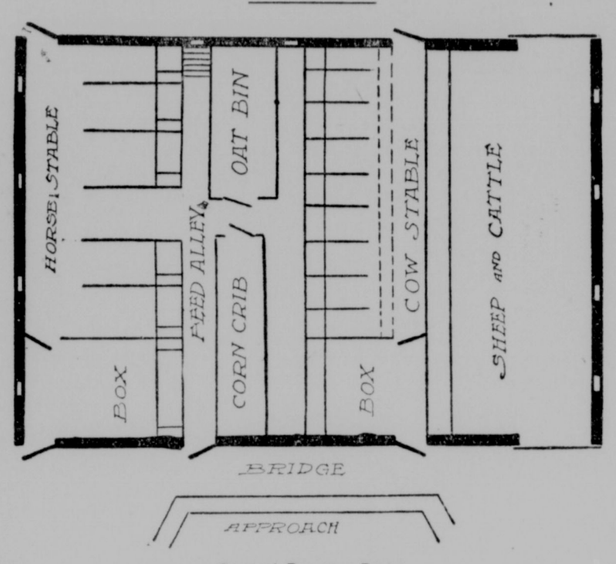
DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.

HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

OPIUM or Morphine Habit Treated. Free trial. Cases where other remedies have failed, specially desired. Give particulars.
Dr. B. G. CONTRELL, Suite 506, 40th St., 23d St., New York

ARRANGE FOR SPECIAL ATTENTION TO THE EWES

Animals Need Plenty of Exercise, Good Food and Clean, Comfortable Quarters—Ration Is of Greatest Importance.



General Purpose Barn.

If ewes have been well fed and are strong and vigorous at time of lambing the loss of the youngsters will be small.

Ill-fed ewes produce sickly lambs. A young lamb is very tender the first few days of its life.

If they come into the world weak and puny it requires but a breath of cold, wet weather to kill them.

The ration for ewes just prior to lambing is of the greatest importance.

An excellent grain ration is oats, bran and corn in equal proportions by weight. This of course makes bran much larger in bulk and some farmers seem to be afraid to feed bran. This is a great mistake because it is one of the best rations to use at this time. Alfalfa makes excellent roughage.

If bran is not available a little oil meal makes an excellent substitute. The ration mentioned will make plenty of milk without laying on too much fat and when the lambs are dropped the ewes will be in good condition to take care of them.

Good shelter for the ewes is also very important. They require plenty of ventilation, but their quarters must be perfectly dry and free from drafts. It is a mistake to confine sheep in a barn with large openings around the bottom and windows at the top because such an arrangement is sure to be drafty.

It is a good plan to build in front of the shed an extension roof of about six feet not sloping enough to prevent the sun from shining in but sufficient to carry off the rain. This will enable the ewes to have more light and air and it will be found that they will spend most of their time at the front of the shed. Sheep do not like damp, dark quarters.

It is highly important that pregnant ewes should have plenty of exercise. Confined in close quarters three weeks prior to lambing renders them weak and listless and is often, we believe, the cause of dead lambs at birth.

Clean, pure water should be provided always. An excellent arrangement is to have a trough running through the shed its entire length into which water can be discharged outside the shed. Sheep will actually starve before they will drink dirty water or eat unclean food.

Ice water will produce abortion in ewes if they are forced to drink it all the time and some arrangement should be made by which the water can be somewhat tempered.

The illustration shows a general purpose barn near Columbus. It is 40 by 56 and has five single horse stalls and one box stall. It has nine single cow stalls and one box stall. It also has a large open stable which can be used for either sheep or cattle. A large oat bin and a corn crib are on the basement floor, both of which are filled from the floor above. The main floor is entirely unobstructed.

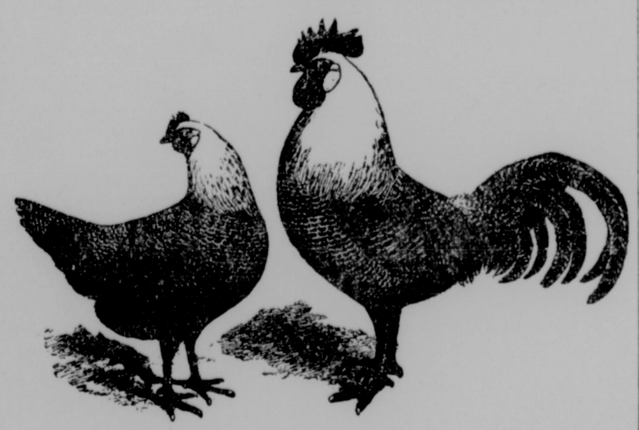
Quality in Cattle.

High-class animals always have the most quality. It is shown in a fine, silky coat of hair, in a mellow, elastic skin and in fine bones and neat joints. There is lots of difference in the coat of hair. One cow may have hair that is fine and soft and thick. There is a very fine and close undercoat and then longer, coarser hair. Such hair is a great protection in winter. Other animals, and they are the most common, have coarse, long hair. Their bones are also likely to be big and coarse. When an animal has plenty of quality you can easily take the skin in the hand between thumb and fingers and pull it out from the side of the body. It will be mellow and roll up somewhat in the hand. If the cow lacks quality her skin will be thick, tight, and not easily taken in the hand. Fine quality, as seen in the hair, skin and bone, means with the beef animal that when killed there will be much less waste of the carcass than if the conditions show lack of quality. So also the dairy cow with plenty of quality is a better producer of milk than if the quality is lacking.

Grit for Chicks.

One of the first things to be fed to chicks is coarse sand or suitable grit of some kind, which may be bought at supply houses or gathered at home, always selecting sharp, small substances. Dry bread crumbs, millet, seer, hard-boiled eggs, and after a few days, cracked wheat, oat meal and finely ground bone may be fed. Within reach of the chicks at all times should be grit, small bits of charcoal a fresh, clean supply of water, so provided that the chicks can not get their feet into it.

BREED OF SILVER CAMPINES



This breed is popular in Belgium, where conditions of soil and climate are not unlike portions of the desert areas of California. In type and habit they strongly suggest the Mediterranean and Dutch classes, especially the Leghorn or Hamburghs. They are rated as great foragers, the birds almost hustling their entire living; the hens are good layers of medium-sized hen fruit. They are non-sitters. The breed is represented by two varieties, viz., the Silver and the Golden. The breed takes its name from the Campine districts of Belgium—the dry sandy plains between Antwerp and Hasselt, where activity is essential if life is to be maintained. They are bred sparingly in this country. Cocks weigh 4½ to 5 pounds; hens 3½ to 4 pounds. The body, though small, is long, with a rather full breast, as in the Hamburgh, which type it much resembles, excepting in comb, which is single in both sexes.

Sanitary Dairy Barn Floors.

Concrete stable floors are now recognized as the most economical and sanitary for the dairy stable. They should be laid upon good foundations and finished with grooves to prevent and animal slipping upon them. The stalls should be provided with mats of lumber so placed that they may be frequently removed for cleansing. All parts of the stalls which are made of wood should be removable so that they may be readily replaced when worn out.

The HONEST MAN

By Rev. David James Burrell, D. D.
Montreal, Can.

What do we mean by an honest man? We want a definition to begin with; and let it be as simple as possible. An honest man is one who pays his debts. That covers the whole case. It will be seen that this definition, so simple apparently, is quite comprehensive, and it cuts deeper than we think. For when the matter of life's assets and liabilities is fully canvassed, it will appear that it is no easy matter to live and die with a clean balance sheet.

The question at the outset touches our relations with God. Are we debtors to God? Yes, by universal consent. In the bill of particulars there are three items, to-wit:

First: Creation. Is there any one who does not rejoice in the fact that he was made "but a little lower than the angels" and in the likeness of God? Is it nothing to stand erect, sensible of a divine birthright and of a divine inheritance? Is there no occasion for gratitude in the fact that I am able to dream dreams and see visions, and, as Kepler said, "think God's thoughts after him?" What do we owe in return for these? The least possible recognition of God's goodness, thus far, is in keeping ourselves on friendly terms with him.

The second item in the bill of particulars is Providence. In God we live and move and have our being. We slept in his arms last night, cared for as tenderly as children in their mother's arms. He feeds us, clothes us, and continually cares for us.

What shall we render unto him for these loving kindnesses? Do they lay no obligation upon us? The least that we can do is to bend our knees in thanksgiving. To the beggar who stretches out his hand saying: "I am hungry," you gave enough to buy himself a breakfast and he says: "I thank you." Could he do less and bear the semblance of a man? What then of the man who never prays, who takes God's gifts without a word of recognition? Is he an honest man?

The third item in the bill of particulars is divine grace. It matters not, so far as the question at issue is concerned, whether a man has accepted the overtures of God's mercy or not; it still remains that provision has been made for his deliverance from sin. You may not have accepted Christ, my friend; that does not affect the fact that God gave his only begotten Son to die in your behalf that you might be saved from sin. Here is an immeasurable obligation laid upon every man. How shall we pay it? The answer is in the words of the familiar hymn: "Here, Lord, I give myself to thee, 'tis all that I can do." Would that we might sing it, but once with heart and understanding! For it contains the sum total of the philosophy of duty; that is, of what we owe to God.

It is a startling fact that men are so prone to overlook their obligations to God, for here is the very root of honesty. "Will a man rob God?" Shall we withhold from God that which is his honest due? Nay, that is clearly impossible if one would be an honest man.

But the question touches, secondly, our relations with our fellow men. For no man liveth unto himself and no man dieth unto himself. It would appear that the angels were created one by one; but men are of one family, and "blood is thicker than water." We are mutually interdependent, as lenders and borrowers; and each is bound, in honesty, to balance his account with his fellowmen.

I am debtor to society; that is, to my fellow men en masse. The liberties, immunities and sanctities of my daily life come to me through the social organism; and, so far forth, I am a debtor to the community in which I live. How shall I meet that obligation? To state it as briefly as possible, I am bound to put more into the common exchequer that I draw out of it.

There are two kinds of people, consumers and producers. The consumer says: "The world owes me a living," and proceeds to exact it. An idler, rich or poor, living in pursuance of that dictum, is a dishonest man. The producer, on the other hand, is one who adds to the common fund by making something. He earns a livelihood, and something more. And when he makes his exit, he leaves the community richer from his having lived in it.

What are you producing, my friend? Make something, I pray you. Make a plow or a poem, make a house or a history, dig a well or build a stable; produce something that will remain as your memorial, leaving the balance on the right side when you have gone your way.

But my indebtedness is not merely to humanity en masse. "I am debtor to every man." The original break in the family circle was made when Cain asked: "Am I my brother's keeper?" I owe something to the next man. Get that in mind when you meet a drunkard reeling in the street, for he is a brother of yours. To such you are a debtor. What do you owe them? All the category of kindnesses marked out in the Golden Rule: "Do unto them as ye would be done by." Lend a hand! Be not an overreacher, like Jacob; buy no man's birthright for a mess of pottage.

I owe it to myself to be a clean man.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

POTATO WORSE THAN OPIUM

Habit of Smoking Dried Stems of Ordinary Field Tuber One of Most Vicious Practises.

"Even worse than opium smoking is the smoking of the dried stems of the ordinary field potato," writes an eminent physician in an exchange. "The potato vine is a poisonous growth. The apple or seed, which grows on the potato and looks like a small, undergrown green tomato, which it is in fact, for the potato and tomato are blood cousins, is especially potent in its baleful effects if one smokes it.

"Usually the vice starts in boyhood days on the farm, when the youngster of the family steals his father's pipe and hides with it and some matches down behind the garden fence or behind the barn next to the field of potatoes. He doesn't dare to take up the straight tobacco, but he tries out some dried potato stem in the pipe.

"The smoke sets the experimenter into a delicious dreamy state at first, but the heart action accelerates in a minute or two in an effort to throw off the poison through the lungs and skin. The dreamy state quickly disappears, the face gets flushed and the heart action rapidly increases to severe palpitation.

"If the dose has been large the victim feels a wild, fierce elation that impels him to action of any kind. In this state he may do anythnig, but the stage is reached much more quickly than with alcoholic liquors.

"The eyes become blind and clouded. The pupil dilates as though belladonna had been applied. The motor centers are affected and there is paralysis of the lower limbs, and the smoker's face gets pale, while drops of sweat stand out.

"At this stage the heart action weakens and there is either stupor or syncope, in which the victim of the potato poison lies practically paralyzed and unable to move, while his brain is in an insane whirl. This represents the height of the intoxication and it is followed by acute depression and melancholia and a slow return of the physical powers.

"The potato stem smoke speedily draws a victim down. He grows pale, is gaunt and emaciated, ends up with violent acute mania, usually with homicidal tendencies.

"I only had one case of the kind. A boy of 16 caught the habit trying to find a substitute for tobacco. He only lasted three years. There wasn't anything that could be done for him.

"This young chap couldn't be restrained by any of the usual drugs. He was kept in bed, roped down, during the maniacal stage that he went through. Morphine didn't seem to do any good. The moment he was freed, after recovering somewhat, he would make a rush for the nearest potato vines, trying to get and smoke the stems, which he secreted in many places cunningly hidden."

JUDGED BY COMPANY WE KEEP

Professional Burglars Induce Drunken Man to Assist in Attempt to Rob New York Store.

A man under the influence of liquor was passing along an up-town street in New York one night lately when he saw two men, one of whom apparently wanted to open a store, but was experiencing some difficulty. These semi-intoxicated man kindly volunteered to help him, and while he was doing so a policeman came along and arrested all three. In court it came out that two of the men were professional burglars, and the third—the drunken man—was merely a casual observer, whose brain was so muddled with liquor that he did not know what he was doing. The criminals pleaded guilty to attempted burglary, and the honest drunkard was warned by the judge, who suspended sentence, that if he ever got into trouble again within the next 25 years, he could be brought back to court and tried over as an accomplice. He left the court a different man, vowing to stay sober for the next quarter of a century.

Drugging Children.

If the charges are made good against the druggists who were arrested the other day for selling cocaine to children the utmost penalty permitted by the law should be instantly imposed upon—if convicted — men guilty of an unspeakably atrocious crime. The doctor who makes an invalid and suffering woman familiar with morphine, cocaine or any seductive opiate runs a very great risk. He has himself, in his student days, witnessed the ravages of chloral or morphine in the student body, and, if a worthy practitioner, is 'ware of the habit. The alleviation of pain becomes with certain suppliant temperaments an excuse for dissipation of time and dolce far niente. The pallid faces, the drooping eyelids of numberless men and women to be seen on the streets tell a ghastly story. Those who are responsible for the illegal sale of the cause of this should be made to suffer, says Philadelphia Press. But, above all, the man who aids and abets the drugging of a child is a scoundrel for whom no punishment known to the law can be too severe.

Try This, This Summer.

The very next time you're hot, tired or thirsty, step up to a soda fountain and get a glass of Coca-Cola. It will cool you off, relieve your bodily and mental fatigue and quench your thirst delightfully. At soda fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Delicious, refreshing and wholesome. Send to the Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells what Coca-Cola is and why it is so delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching. And send 2c stamp for the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910—contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities.

Aroused Sporting Instinct.

An Irish policeman who was also something of a sportsman, had been posted on a road near Dublin to catch the scorching motorist. Presently one came along at 20 miles an hour, and the policeman saw it pass without a sign. Next came a larger motor traveling at 40 miles an hour, and the eyes of the guardian of the public brightened. And then one passed at the rate of a mile a minute. "Begorrah," said Pat, slapping his thigh, "that's the best of the lot."

A diplomat is a person who has acquired the art of declining to take "no" for an answer to a request for a favor.

For Red, Itching Eyelids, Cysts, Styes Falling Eyelashes and All Eyes That Need Care Try Murine Eye Salve. Aseptic Tubes—Trial Size—25c. Ask Your Druggist or Write Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

A pessimist believes it a waste of time to argue with the iceman, as he's bound to have his own weigh.

A CERTAIN METHOD for curing cramps, diarrhea and dysentery is by using Painkiller (Perry Davis'). This medicine has sustained the reputation for over 70 years. 25c, 35c and 50c.

Nothing makes us richer that does not make us more thankful.

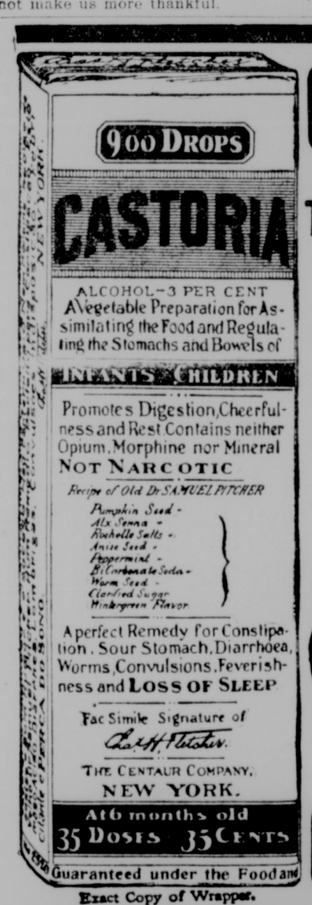
SYRUP OF FIGS AND ELIXIR OF SENNA
CLEANSES THE SYSTEM EFFECTUALLY; DISPELS COLDS, AND HEADACHES DUE TO CONSTIPATION. BEST FOR MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN—YOUNG AND OLD. TO GET ITS BENEFICIAL EFFECTS-ALWAYS BUY THE GENUINE.
MANUFACTURED BY THE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SOLD BY ALL LEADING DRUGGISTS ONE SIZE ONLY. REGULAR PRICE 50¢ A BOTTLE

DR. J. D. KELLOGG'S ASTHMA
Remedy for the prompt relief of Asthma and Hay Fever. Ask your druggist for it. Write for FREE SAMPLE. NORTHROP & LYMAN CO. Ltd., BUFFALO, N.Y.

KNOWN SINCE 1836 AS RELIABLE
PLANTEN'S (TRADE MARK) C & C OR BLACK CAPSULES
SUPERIOR REMEDY FOR MEN ETC. ETC
AT DRUGGISTS: TRIAL BOX BY MAIL 50¢
PLANTEN, 93 HENRY ST. BROOKLYN, N.Y.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

W. N. U., CLEVELAND, NO. 25-1910.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Glorious Colorado
No one can say he has seen the world until he has seen "Colorado."
Write for the books that picture and describe it
Electric block signals—dining car meals and service "Best in the World"
via the
Union Pacific
"The Safe Road"
Ask about our personally conducted tours to Yellowstone National Park
For full information, tickets, etc., address
E. L. LOMAX, G. P. A.
Union Pacific R. R. Co.
Omaha, Nebraska

DEFIANCE COLLEGE DEFIANCE OHIO
A real college of the highest grade. A college that gives you standing in the educational world, with the great Universities, Public School Men, School Boards, etc. Graduates in demand.
DEPARTMENTS
Collegiate, Academic, Teachers', Manual Training, Engineering, Commercial, Music, Art, Elocution and Domestic Science.
EXPENSES
Board, $1.75 per week; Room rent, 75c to $1.00 per week, including the light and heat; Tuition and regular incidentals, $40.00 for the full year.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months ..... .75
One copy three months ..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1910.

WHAT'S THE USE?

On page 348 of the minute book of the Garrett County School Commissioners, under date of June 24th, 1910, the following entry is made:

The Board decided to separate the high school and the grammer school and to put the high school in the old court house with H. A. Loraditch, principal, with Miss Emma Hamill, vice principal; Miss Lizzie Leary, assistant, and Miss Daisy Hanna teacher of commercial department. The manual training department to be filled by an appointment later. Miss Josephine Browning was appointed as an assistant in the grammer school.

On page 334 of the same book, under date of June 29, 1908, the following appears:

Prof. U. G. Palmer was appointed as principal of High School of Oakland at a salary of $1000.

The oft repeated question of County Superintendent Ed. A. Browning: "Why don't the people take more interest in the public schools of Garrett county?" had its answer at the meeting of the Garrett County Board of School Commissioners last Friday night when a majority membership of the Board, without just cause or excuse, but acting upon their own iniative, deliberately ignored a petition signed by more than four-fifths of the taxpayers and patrons of the public schools of Oakland asking that the efficient principal of the high school, Mr. U. G. Palmer, be retained in the position he has so ably filled for the past two years.

This action of the Board in ignoring the expressed desire of the great majority of the school patrons has been unqualifiedly condemned upon all sides and from present indications but one result will ensue—the educational interests of the community will suffer.

The School Board by ignoring the petition in Mr. Palmer's behalf sets themselves up as the masters of the public and not as the public's servants. They have insulted the intelligence of the community for which they must answer at the bar of public opinion.

We have no words of condemnation for the successor of Mr. Palmer, Mr. Loraditch as principal of the schools. He may be eminently qualified for the position—that remains to be seen, but all are acquainted with the qualifications of the gentleman he has superceded as head of the educational interests of Oakland, and it is taking a long chance just now to make a change. Ambition to go higher was no doubt the motive force behind the new man at the helm and for this he is to be commended, but the fact remains the people of the community directly affected have no voice in school matters where two members of the Board are controlled by motives that to say the least may be extremely dangerous for the future well-being of the schools of Oakland.

Mr. Chauncey E. Ellithorp, of Bittinger, voted to retain Mr. Palmer, while Mr. Charles Deffinbaugh, president of the Board, and Mr. P. H. Yost, Republican member of the body, voted for Mr. Loraditch.

THE WOMAN WHO SMOKES.

Miss Eleanora Sears, of Boston, comes forward as the champion of the women who smoke cigarettes. Mrs. Henry Steigner, of New York, supports her warmly. "The fact is that half of the New York society women and the majority of our most respected and revered clubwomen smoke," says Mrs. Steigner. However "prominent" Miss Sears or Mrs. Steigner may be in their own "set," whatever that is, we are reluctant to accept them as authorities. Mrs. Steigner's statement is palpably an exageration, but the very boldness of it indicates that the habit of smoking is growing amomg women. Miss Sears, while defending smoking, admits that drinking may be injurious.

Whenever a woman starts to smoke, whenever she begins to drink, even in moderation, she puts her feet in a dangerous path. To preserve purity of life and thought, to save womanhood, every bit of protection, every safeguard is needed. It will be a sad day when dignity, modesty, purity of thought and language are no longer expected of woman. Laxity of expression and conduct are all too closely associated with loose morals.

We need to raise the standard of morals and conduct rather than let down the bars: There is danger that the much-lauded "emancipation" of woman is likely to be disastrous for woman herself. Divorce is a crying evil, but it is a symptom of a deeper trouble. The destruction of the home is threatened, and only woman can save it. But it will not be saved by the women who smoke, the women who drink or the women who find a lure in "club life."

MARYLAND DEMOCRACY.

The Maryland oracles have spoken. The Senior and Junior Senators from this state have scanned the political horizon and from their lips have fallen prophecies and dicta. Democrats in Maryland and and elsewhere can now let the campaign bands play and the red lights burn. Chairman Murray Vandiver, of the state central committee, can complacently tackle the herculean task of formulating a platform on which his party's candidates can stand, a task rendered necessary by the introduction of direct primaries and the consequent abolition of convention, which, in former times, adopted if they did not frame platforms. General Vandiver's job will be an easy one, for Senators Rayner and Smith have sounded the tocsin and all that General Vandiver will have to do is use the scissors and paste pot.

For once Messrs. Rayner and Smith are in accord. They agree that a Democratic statesman named William Jennings Bryan must hie himself into the back ground and stay there. They also agree that the tariff must furnish the clarion cry of the Democrats in the congressional campaign this year, as well as in the presidential campaign two years hence. They also agree that the so-called Republican extravagence is an awful thing which must be checked and curbed. They do not go into details in exhibiting their indignation, nor do they give yea and nay votes on several expenditures which, perhaps, would reveal the presence of several Democratic hands in the "Pork Barrel."

It is with rate and exuberant nerve that Messrs. Rayner and Smith read Mr. Bryan out of the Democratic party. Senator Smith is a little more considerate of the "Peerless One" than is his colleague, for he confesses that the Nebraskan is a factor in the Democratic party who must be reckoned with. Mr. Rayner, while professing the highest admiration for Mr. Bryan as a citizen, and even going so far as to say that he that he has many of Mr. Roosevelt's qualites at the same time consigns him to utter and absolute political inactivity in naming the next Democratic presidential candidate and in framing the next Democratic national platform.

Of course, Mr. Bryan himself has not been consulted on the important personal question whether he will be lifted bodily from the Democratic party and tossed into a Nebraska sagebrush. Nor have the few millions of Democrats who for years have so strenuously hurrahed for him that they threatened to slip the larynxes of their throats, been consulted. If we remember rightly, Democrats of the type of Mr. Rayner and of Mr. Smith succeeded in nominating Judge Alton C. Parker for president in St. Louis in 1904. Again, if we remember rightly, the aforesaid Judge Parker as a presidential candidate made one of the most sorry spectacles ever witnessed in American political history. He was far outclassed by Mr. Bryan as a vote-getter. Mr. Bryan had twice been defeated for president, but he was at least good second. Judge Parker was left at the post.

If Messrs. Rayner and Smiths want to put the noose around their necks in Maryland by urging the tariff as the paramount issue in the campaign—well, that, too, is their affair, not the Republicans'. Certainly Mr. Rayner ought to have a recollection of his fate in 1888 when he was a candidate for re-election to Congress in the Fourth district, and when he nightly grew eloquent over the tariff. He was defeated. Both Senators Rayner and Smith ought to recall the effect of tariff agitation in their party in Maryland in years gone by. In 1888, when the tariff was shoved to the front, Mr. Cleveland's majority in Maryland of 11,118 in 1884, dwindled to 6,182. In the First district Mr. Gibson's plurality of 1,151 in 1886 fell to 482, and so it was all over the state. In 1892 the Democrats made the tariff their paramount issue, and won, not because of any intrinsic merit of the issue, but because it was agitated in a false light. The result was disastrious. Mr. McKinley swept Maryland in 1896, and again in 1900. Only the aid of the Wilson Ballot Law have the Democrats had a "peep in" at the presidential elections in Maryland 1892.

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

At the regular session of the Orphans' Court held on Tuesday with all members of the Court present the following business was transacted:

Letters of administration were granted Enoch A. Garlitz on the personal estate of Richard E. Garlitz, late of Garrett county, deceased.

The first account of John M. Davis, administrator of the personal estate of Mrs. Sarah J. Scott, late of Garrett county, deceased, was confirmed.

The first and final account of J. M. Spiker, administrator of Mary V. Spiker, late of Garrett county, was confirmed.

An order directing the sale of the personal property of the late Bridget Maroney, of Oakland, was passed.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Garrett County Institute.

Thursday was one of the interesting days of the Institute. The first grade examination was completed on that day and several second grade pupils completed their examination.

Mr. Joseph E. Harned, of Oakland, who is becoming very popular as a botanist, gave a very interesting lecture on the flora of Garrett county.

At the close of the session a hearty vote of thanks was extened to the various Institute instructors. Dr. Bartlett made a pathetic response. He has been promoted to the position of grandfather of the Garrett county teacher, while Prof. Gibson now occupies the vacancy of father.

A grand reunion was held at the school house Thursday night, which was enjoyed by all

School convened Friday at 8 a. m., in business session. The Garrett County Teachers, Association presented their report to the Institute. The entire corps of officers were reelected, except vice president, to which M. K. Welch was elected.

The following resolutions were reported to the teachers' institute last Friday morning by the committee on resolutions and unanimously adopted by the assembled teachers:

WHEREAS, The twenty-second annual teachers' institute, now closing, has proved to be one of the most profitable and successful in the history of the county; be it resolved

First, That we extend our heartiest thanks to Drs. Corson and Baer, and Professors Jones and Gibson for their most helpful lectures and addresses.

Second, That we extend to Professor Browning our thanks for his untiring efforts in trying to raise the educational standard of Garrett county, and for the many courtesies and kindnesses we are constantly receiving at his hand.

Third, That we, as students of the training school, extend to Professors Palmer and DeWitt our thanks for the many useful and helpful lessons received during the term just closed; also to Miss Callaghan, who so ably assisted Prof. Gibson with the music.

Fourth, That we as teachers extend our thanks to the school commissioners for their able management in conducting the schools and improving school conditions in general.

Fifth, That the device presented by Miss Kleinfelter for the purpose of teaching relation of numbers is a very good one, and further we think it advisable for the board to provide each of the graded schools of the county with a set of the blocks which she recommended.

Sixth, That we earnestly urge the board of school commissioners to raise the minimum salary to $30 per month, firmly believing that this is the first step toward the improvement of the corps of teachers and giving the work the dignity and standing of a profession in Garrett.

Seventh, That the training school is a great advantage to our teachers in the way of providing new methods and that we realize the necessity of such a school; but that a term of two or three weeks is too short a time for a teacher to learn a new method and be able to present it efficiently; so be it further

Resolved, That an effort be made in the near future to have a more lengthy term of training school, and further that during or within this term, teachers of some experience be required to teach in order to determine their ability as teachers, instead of being examined.

Married.

MOUNTAIN—BROWNING—On Sunday, June 26, 1910, at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Newark, N. J., by Rev. Father Whelan, Miss Frances Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Browning, of Oakland, and Mr. John R. Mountain, of Hollidaysburg, Pa. The bride, accompanied by her brother, Mr. Frank Browning, left Oakland last Saturday evening for Philadelphia where they were joined by the groom and the wedding occurred on Sunday. Mr. Mountain was a resident of Oakland for almost a year, being in the employ of a road contractor as foreman, recently going from here to Newark, where he holds a similar position. The couple will reside in Newark for the present.

BURNS—RODERICK—Mr. Edward S. Burns and Miss Hazel Roderick, of Mineral county, West Va., were married at the Baptist parsonage in Loch Lynn on Tuesday afternoon, June 28th, by Rev. C. W. Hudson, the pastor of the Loch Lynn Baptist church.

Terra Alta's New Mayor.

Terra Alta, the hustling neighboring town just over the border in Preston county, W. Va., has at last secured the services of one of its good citizens as mayor of the city, the new chief magistrate being Mr. Parley DeBerry, merchant, banker, farmer, etc.—a hustler in every sense of the word. His honor was a visitor to Oakland last Friday on business, returning home the same evening.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Annie E. Browning, who departed this life one year ago today, June 27, 1909. Gone, but not forgotten.

Her well remembered footsteps
We are listening for in vain,
And our eyes grow dim with watching
And our hearts are sad with pain.

No words will ever be so sweet
As the words she used to say;
No hour will ever be so sad
As the hour she passed away.

She never will be forgotten,
Never shall her memory fade;
Sweetest thoughts shall ever linger
Round the grave where she is laid.

Contributed by her daughters,
Mary and Josephine Browning.

Election Supervisors' Notice of Appointments OF Judges of Election and Registers of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., June 7, 1910.

The Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett County, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Registers of Voters and Judges of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 10 of Article 23, of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland, hereby give notice of the name and post-office address of each person so selected and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Election intends each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be prefered to them in wriitng against any person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable of discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials

District No. 1

W H Turner, Democrat, Judge and Register, Chaffee, W. Va.

J C Condon, Republican, Judge and Register, Swanton.

District No. 2

R E Friend, Democrat, Judge and Register, Friendsville.

B F Friend, Republican, Judge and Register, Friendsville.

District No. 3

Noah Warnick, Democrat, Judge and Register, Grantsville.

Phines C Boucher, Republican, Judge and Register, Grantsville.

District No. 4

Jessie E Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge and Register, Westernport.

Henry Barnard, Republican, Judge and Register, Bloomington.

District No. 5

Philip Bowman, Democrat, Judge and Register, Accident.

C C Speicher Republican, Judge and Register, Accident.

District No. 6

Wm G Browning, Democrat, Judge and Register, Sang Run.

J Alvin Friend, Republican, Judge and Register, Sang Run.

District No. 7

W H Bartlett, Democrat, Judge and Register, Oakland.

W S Friend, Republican, Judge and Register, Oakland.

District No. 8

John L Harvey, Democrat, Judge and Register, Gorman.

Guy Yutzy, Republican, Judge and Register, Oakland.

District No. 9

Floyd Crow, Democrat, Judge and Register, Frostburg.

Richard McKenzie, Republican, Judge and Register, Frostburg.

District No. 10

Franklin DeWitt, Democrat, Judge and Register, Deer Park.

B F Thrasher, Republican, Judge and Register, Deer Park.

District No. 11

Herman Robeson, Democrat, Judge and Register, Avilton.

Robert Crow, Republican, Judge and Register, Merrill.

District No. 12

John Hetrick, Democrat, Judge and Register, Bittinger.

A L Bittinger, Republican, Judge and Register, Bittinger.

District No. 13

L C Hamill, Democrat, Judge and Register, Kitzmiller.

Daniel Feichtner, Republican, Judge and Register, Kitzmiller.

District No. 14

John T Browning, Democrat, Judge and Register, Oakland.

B C Scott, Republican, Judge and Register, Hutton.

WILLIAM R OFFUTT, Pres.,
THOMAS J JOHNSON,
S LAWTON.
Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett County.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County.
Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:
L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:
L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, U. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Ed Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of
Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Notice To Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, either in person or by deputy, will be in each of the Election Districts in Garrett county, Maryland, to collect and receive taxes at the time and places following:

July 15—Crellin—Company's Store, 9 to 3.
July 16—Ottoway—Carney's Store, 9 to 3.
July 18—Hoyes Run, 8 to 11.
July 18—Sang Run—Cuppett & Lytle's, 1 to 4
July 19—Friendsville—Crawford Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 20—Selbysport—Riley's Store, 9 to 3.
July 21—Accident—Ries' Store, 9 to 3.
July 22—Cove—Krouse's Store, 9 to 3.
July 23—Grantsville—National Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 25—Thomas Layman's, 9 to 3.
July 26—T. H. Johnson's, 9 to 3.
July 27—Avilton—Garlitz's Store, 9 to 3.
July 28—Strickland's, 9 to 12.
July 28—Walter Warnick's, 2 to 5.
July 29—Merrill's, 9 to 3.
July 30—C. J. Otto's, 9 to 12.
July 30—Jenning's, 3 to 6.
Aug. 1—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 3—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 3—Beckman—Mellinger's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 4—Swanton—W. H. Lohr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 5—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 6—Red House, 9 to 3.
Aug. 8—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 9—Bloomington—Post Office, 9 to 3.
Aug. 10—Kitzmiller—Bank Building, 9 to 3.
Aug. 11—Kitzmiller—Wilson's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 12—Gorman—J. P. Parr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 13—Bloomington—Moody's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 15—Hoyes—W. A. Smith's Store, 9 to 12.
Aug. 15—McHenry, 2 to 5

By an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1890, being Chapter 556, Section 45, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of levy thereof; and all taxes paid on or before the first day of September a discount of three per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt for taxes so paid, but the discount allowed on the county taxes by this section shall not be made to any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due by such person or corporate institution for the current year be paid when the same is made.

ROBERT L. FRIES,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

NOTICE OF FIRST MEETING OF CREDITORS.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.

In the matter of Charles C. Frederick, Bankrupt.

IN BANKRUPTCY

To the creditors of Charles C. Frederick, of Friendsville in the county of Garrett, and District aforesaid, a Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1910, the said party was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 1 Washington Street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 6th day of July, A. D., 1910, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

June 20, 1910.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.

G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt — Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis — George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell — William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Come to Oakland on the 4th.

Mr. William A. Smith, of Hoyes, is in Oakland today on business.

Mr. N. U. Bond spent Friday evening and Saturday in Oakland on business.

Mr. George W. Loar, of Grafton, spent Sunday in Oakland with relatives.

Mr. William H. Pool, of Kitzmiller, was a business visitor to Oakland last Thursday.

FOR RENT—Furnished room; three minutes walk from station. Apply at this office.

Mr. William Miller, of Deer Park, visited Oakland Tuesday evening for an hour or two.

Mrs. Will Skinner, of Morgantown, West Va., is in Oakland as the guest of Mrs. D. M. Dixon.

Rev. J. Ed. Kildow, of Elkins, spent Tuesday in Oakland visiting his sister, Mrs. Sarah Leuthke.

Mr. B. F. Shoch, of Crellin, was in the city Monday on business when he made this office a visit.

WANTED—A good reliable woman for general housework. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland.

Attorneys Fred. A. Thayer and Edward H. Sincell were at Kitzmiller yesterday on professional business.

Mrs. Elizabeth Matthews has returned home from a visit of ten days to relatives and friends in Somerset county, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Thompson of Keyser, West Va., were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Dixon in Oakland.

Try the Rock Island Battery for your automobile and telephone. Will outlast any two ordinary ones. A. D. NAYLOR & Co.

Mrs. S. T. Downs, of Confluence, Pa., is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Shank, at their home on Liberty street.

Miss Katharine Shirer, who spent several months in Cape Charles, Va., returned to her home in Oakland last Saturday night.

Mr. Jerry Browning arrived home from Fayette county, West Va., Monday and will spend a short time here with his parents.

Let us fill your prescriptions. Lowest prices, quality considered. Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Mr. Frank Rathbun, superintendent of the Piedmont public schools, is spending his vacation with his mother at Mountain Lake Park.

Mrs. J. L. Pollock entertained a large number of her friends last Friday evening in honor of her guest, Mrs. Taylor, of Washington, D. C.

Mr. D. H. Shank, who is superintendent of the Krug stave mills located in Boone county, W. Va., is home for a week's visit to his family.

Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor, of Washington, D. C., who were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Pollock, returned to their home Saturday.

Try one of our Long Life Batterie on your telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mrs. R. R. Metheny and Mrs. Harry Taylor, of Terra Alta, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Taylor at their home on Fourth street Monday.

Messrs. D. E. Offutt, Jr., and Charles Glotfelty are on a business trip to points in Arkansas, expecting to return to Oakland the latter part of this week.

Mrs. Tina Taylor, of Century, W. Va., is in Oakland for a visit to relatives and friends before taking up her residence permanently at Romney, W. Va.

Miss Annie Manges left last Friday for Berkley Springs, W. Va., where she will train local people who will present the Gibson Family Reunion Saturday night.

Fountain Syringes and Hot Water Bottles, household necessities, at prices ranging from 75c. to $1.50, at Hamill-Gonder Pharmacy.

Mr. Ninian U. Bond has purchased a 30 Maxwell automobile from the Hoffman agency at Meyersdale, Pa., having received the machine here on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. James O. Cleveland, who has been doing contract work at and near Terra Alta, spent Sunday with his family in Oakland, returning to Terra Alta Sunday evening.

The little grandson of Mr. John T. Moon, of near Sunnyside, was taken to Cumberland Monday afternoon by Dr. H. W. McComas where he will be treated in the Western Maryland Hospital.

The Annual Meeting of the Community of Mountain Lake Park will be held in the Assembly Hall at the Park at ten o'clock on the morning of July 13th, in accordance with notices sent to property owners by the president and secretary of the Community.

CAPITAL $50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $29,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

FINGER SHOT OFF

Randall Ravenscroft Met With Painful Accident Tuesday.

Tuesday afternoon Randall Ravenscroft, aged about thirteen years, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Ravenscroft, met with a painful as well as serious accident while on a visit to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Ravenscroft, at Dawson, Allegany county, when a shotgun with which he was hunt ng squirrels was accidentally discharged, the load of shot passing through the boy's left hand and almost entirely severing the second finger.

The boy was nearly three-quarters of a mile from the home when the accident occurred but with more grit than is ordinarily displayed by one of more advanced years he made his way home and gave a detailed account of what had happened which was in effect that he was standing in the woods with his hand resting upon the muzzle of the gun, when he kicked at an insect flying nearby. His foot struck the hammer of the gun and the explosion followed with the result as above stated.

Shortly afterward Dr. Webster Ravenscroft, his uncle, was notified and he went from here to Keyser, to which point the injured boy had been removed and placed in the Hoffman hospital, where the wound was dressed, the finger being amputated well up in the palm of his hand. At last accounts the boy was resting quite comfortably.

Money to Loan—Secured by first mortgage on real estate. Terms easy. Renninger & Offutt. Attorneys Oakland, Md. 3t

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Freeland, of Terra Alta, spent last night in the city as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. Grant Smith, on Washington Street, en route to Newell to visit their daughter, Mrs. A. T. Fraley.—Grafton Repuplican.

Messrs. John Hart, Jr., and James Boyle, of Mount St. Joseph' College, and Michael Boyle, of the Maryland Deaf and Dumb Institute, Frederick, arrived home last Friday evening to spend the summer vacation with their parents.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mrs. Daniel Shaffer, of Fairmont, was in Oakland several days last and this week on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Hart. Mr. Shaffer spent Sunday in Oakland with his wife and friends, returning to Fairmont Sunday night.

The Baltimore and Ohio station here has been thoroughly cleaned, the windows given a much-needed bath and the unsightly old heating stoves polished and burnished up. The improvement is noticeable and has been favorably commented upon.

FOR SALE—A practically new six horse power engine and ten horse power boiler. Apply at Oakland Model Steam Bakery.

Mr. W. O. Ison, of Washington, D. C., formerly of Oakland, will sail Saturday from New York on the steamer Deutschland to visit England, Belgium and Germany and to see the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Mr. Ison expects to be abroad for probably two months.

Mr. Scott T. Jones, who attended the meeting of the State Bankers' Association held last week at Pen-Mar, returned to Oakland Friday afternoon. The meetings was well attended and the sessions of the Association were highly interesting.

Rev. G. R. Williamson, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, and Rev. A. Mick, pastor of the Terra Alta church, exchanged pulpits last Sunday evening. Rev. Mick was formerly pastor of the Oakland church and preached an excellent sermon Sunday night.

County Superintendent E. A. Browning is at Ocean City, Md., attending the sessions of the Maryland State Teachers' Association. By the death of the president of the association the local superintendent, by virtue of his office as vice president, is the presiding officer at the convention.

Oakland will be the Mecca of hundreds of Garrett county folks next Monday when the Fourth will be celebrated. The arrangements for the day's program are in charge of the Mountain City Band and an enjoyable outing is in store for all those who are present in Oakland upon that day.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

Mrs. Henry W. McComas left Oakland last Friday morning for Baltimore to attend the funeral of the late Herbert Lewis, a cousin of Dr. McComas, whose death occurred very suddenly on the afternoon previous. Dr. McComas was detained at home owing to professional business. Mrs. McComas returned to Oakland yesterday.

Ex-State Senator W. McCulloh Brown of near Bayard, came over to Oakland Sunday afternoon and left here Monday morning for Washington, D. C., where he will consult with the engineer appointed on the part of the Government to assist in running the line between the States of Maryland and West Virginia, work upon which will begin at an early date.

AN OUTRAGE UPON THE PUBLIC

Action of the Garrett County School Board Denounced.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I hope that with your usual disposition of thoroughness you will get at the bottom and publish in full the facts relating to this latest outrage perpetrated upon the people of Garrett county and especially upon the people of Oakland in the election of a principal of the Oakland high school. The public wants the facts and will be satisfied with nothing less, so it can place the responsibility where it belongs.

If the public school system of our county, together with the welfare of our children as to be prostituted and sacrificed to "the beast"—the political machine—it is about time we arise and and forever drive from power and position any who would dare attempt it.

A SCHOOL PATRON.

Oakland, Md., June 29, 1910.

A Card from Mr. Palmer.

Oakland, Md., June 29, 1910.

To the Editor of The Republican:

SIR:—I wish to emphatically deny the report current that I got what I wanted at the School Board meeting last Friday. I wished to be retained in the position to which I was elected two years ago and any statement to the contrary is false.

Yours truly,

U. G. PALMER.

Dr. W. W. Davis, superintendent of the Park, was at Hendricks, W. Va., yesterday afternoon and evening when he addressed the Oakland District Epworth League Convention, returning to the Park today. Rev. G. R. Williamson, of Oakland, was also present. The representatives from the Oakland Chapter at the convention were Misses Minnie Trickett and Ollie Nines and Mrs. Harry Pasche.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

Mrs. G. A. Bolden and two sons, Masters Connell and William, of Charleston, arrived in the city last evening and will spend several weeks as the guests of Dr. and Mrs. J. E. R. Ellis, and other friends. Mrs. Bolden and her sons were formerly of this place and their many friends are delighted to see them in the city again. They will remain in this city and section until about the first of September. Mrs. Bolden will also make a visit to her old home at Oakland, Md. —Grafton Sentinel.

James Lewis, who was indicted for robbing Zeller's jewelry store at Terra Alta about two years ago, was tried yesterday evening and found guilty and promptly sentenced to three years in the State Sanitarium at Moundsville. He has been in jail at Clarksburg since being arrested at Piedmont recently, but was brought here last week for trial. He escaped from the jail here nearly two years ago when first arrested for the robbery. He was easily identified and captured on account of only one eye. He seems to be a very slick article. He was taken to the Pen today, accompanied by James Williams, who goes up for three years.—Kingwood Argus.

Messrs. Hoblitzell & Price, who have the contract for building the State road from Sand Flat north to McHenry, started from Oakland last Friday afternoon with a new traction engine and a number of wagons loaded with machinery and tools to be used in the construction work for the point on the road where operations are to begin. Hoopole road south of the construction work already completed by Mr. Francis, was in such bad condition that it was deemed advisable to take another route so the road leading from Broadford was chosen. When about a mile from Broadford the massive engine slipped from the roadway and buried itself in the mud, requiring two days and one night of labor to replace it. The machinery finally reached Thaverville where the work has already been started.

Tax Department
LAST NOTICE

Oakland, Md., June 29, 1910.

All persons owing taxes for the years 1908 or 1909 will please make immediate payment. Kindly remit at once and save me the very unpleasant duty of advertising property as I must have money to meet claims now due.

Address W E HOLLINGER, Treasurer, Oakland, Md.

Green Must Go to Jail.

The Maryland court of appeals affirmed the decision of the lower court in the charge against Lawrence F. Green of criminally libeling State Senator Harvey J. Speicher, of Accident, Garrett county. The sentence imposed was $25 fine and thirty days in jail. The opinion was delivered by Judge Briscoe.

The counsel were: For the state, Messrs. J. C. Renninger, Albert A. Doub and Wm. R. Offutt; for the defendant, Ferdinand Williams and Gilmor S. Hamill.

Green is a Garrett county school teacher. He served in the House of Delegates of 1908.

Call for Your Letters.

Mgr. Shaw Mines No 1. Gardonde Bemminyer, Mrs. Flora Wolf, Savilla W. Miller, Wiebert Brown, W. McCulloh, B. A. McCullen.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have avariety of kinds and at any price.

TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S

FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

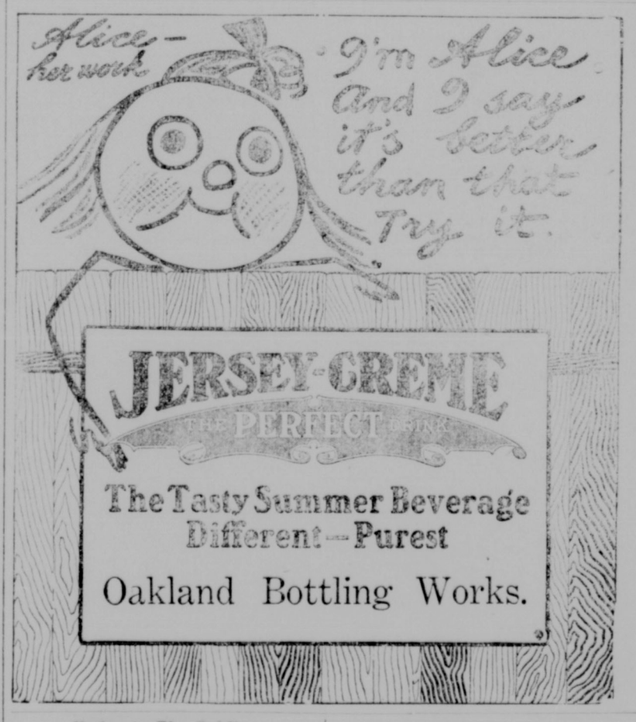
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Notice to The Public.

I have taken charge of the Fresh Meat Department of Creutzburg's store where I can furnish my trade with the best Fresh Meats at all times, and solicit a share of your patronage. Everything clean and up-to-date.

Farmers, bring your calves, mutton, lambs and beef and get the highest cash prices for them.

Yours to please,

HENRY SMOUSE.

The Up-to-Date Market.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said road commencing at or near the mouth of Crabtree Creek on Savage River by crossing said river from West to East side and passing through the lands of the Lonaconing Coal & Iron Company, Oss Brothers and others to intersect the County Road near Bloomington, a distance of about four and one-half miles, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of June, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said locating of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

P. P. MCANDREWS
P. H. RODEHEAVER } Examiners.
GEO. W. BROADWATER

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt.

The dividend is at the rate of 2 15-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allow and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 26th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Pubr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

Make the flies flee.

What's your score—on flies?

A slap on the wrist is worth two on the face.

All the signs point to a skyful of flying machines before long.

Paper money may be made smaller, in which case it will be just as hard to get.

Even the kaiser can't call students "boozefighters" and get away with the remark.

A Frenchman has been killed in a duel. Accidents will happen, even in a French duel.

If school children are opposed to the firecracker that leaves only the dealer as its friend.

Thousands of Albanian Turks are up in arms shouting for old Abdul to come back. There's no pleasing some people.

A Brussels surgeon wants $20,000 for an operation on King Leopold. Considering the results, is it worth the money?

Lord Kitchener, universally reputed to be a woman hater, surrendered to the American girl. His last words on sailing were in her praise.

The West Point cadets condemned to walk out their punishment for hazing will be prepared for endurance tests in the regular service.

Students of bird life who trudge through the parks before breakfast should note that the birds generally bring their lunches to class.

However, lemonade colored with poisonous dyes and ice cream stiffened with gum arabic are not properly parts of a perfectly sane Fourth.

If an aviator gets $50,000 for a trip of 186 miles, at the same rate he could earn some such a trifle as $51,360,000 by flying to the moon.

Crop reports are so favorable that the man with the hoe is expected to tickle the soil this year for a total of eight billion or nine billion dollars.

Darkest spots in darkest Africa are about to be united to the world by wireless. The colonel completed his restful and exclusive hunt just in time.

Again the joy rider has left death and sorrow behind him, and if he is ever caught he may be severely scolded, if not, indeed, fined at least $10 and costs.

"London wants New York's gold," the financial report says. And London is likely to get it, if the annual migration does not undergo an unusual shrinkage.

Birmingham, England, with a population of 500,000, has only six fire engines, and the fire loss there last year was $222,000. They do not build firetraps in Birmingham.

A Boston man claims to have bred a blue rabbit. Other gentlemen have announced green, pink and purple ones, but have not made much demand for scientific recognition.

The tidings brought to Seattle, by a barkentine, that cannibalism has been revived in several of the groups of islands in the South Seas, are to be received with doubt. There is nothing to show why there should be a sudden resumption of old-time religious practises, and the pressure of civilization in the South Seas is growing heavier, year by year. This barkentine brings a story of the eating of two missionaries by pagan natives on Savage island. It should be easy to investigate this.

Another cargo of 1,800 carcasses of mutton has arrived at Philadelphia from Australia by way of England. The meat will be sold to Philadelphia dealers, who promptly disposed of the first cargo. If the trade can be made profitable by indirect shipment, it ought to be far more so when the opening of the Panama canal cuts down the distance to the antipodes and establishes direct trade. Then the importation of Australian beef and mutton may keep meats within reasonable range.

The practical jokers in Panama who thought it would be very funny to start reports of a coming earthquake in that place, and who are said to have scared at least one person to death by these reports, belong to a class with which, unfortunately, the law cannot deal according to their deserts. Considering the trouble they have caused, there seems no good reason why these practical jokers should not be classed with criminals and a penalty provided for their distorted and dangerous sense of humor.

Abdul Hamid, ex-sultan of Turkey, has $3,000,000 on deposit in a German bank, which the Turkish government is trying to get. But the bank refuses to honor an order signed by Abdul, alleging that the order was issued under compulsion. The courts sustain the bank, and there the matter stands for the present. It seems to be a case where the ex-sovereign can neither get the money himself nor transfer it to any one else. But the striking fact is the manner in which the money was "soaked away" while collections were good.

Latest Parasol

(Photograph by Underwood & Underwood, New York.)

A PARASOL of palm fiber (raffia) made in the alluring form of a small square tent, with a natural fringe of the woven fibers, canopy top—loop of raffia to carry on arm. It is especially adapted for sea shore and outing, as the material is indestructible and water repellent.

FOR THE SUMMER BEDROOM

Simple But Attractive Furnishings That Make the Apartment a Delight.

Summer furnishings have a charm that is quite foreign to the more pretentious appointments of winter, and every season they seem to be more attractive. The new toilet china shown is extremely decorative. The quaintly shaped little bowls are adorned with equally quaint, conventional designs, and there are lovely foreign looking copper jugs, with wicker handles, for carrying the morning hot water. Colored and white tiles or squares of glass mounted on a flowered material matching the room hangings are provided to set the pitcher of ice water upon, and if a room is to have two occupants all these fittings are to be duplicated. For fastening back the window hangings the old-fashioned brass rosette has been revived.

Speaking of bedrooms suggests breakfast, for it is becoming more and more the custom to have the first meal of the day in one's own room, and thoughtful hostesses always provide one of the charming little breakfast sets which are now so common in the shops for the guest room, along with a tray of wicker, brass or wood.

High-Necked Gowns Passe for Evening

High-necked gowns are very much out of fashion for any evening affair, although white ones with lace yokes were acceptable for the theater and informal dinners, and restaurant wear; but one does not see them any more among women who dress well.—Delineator.

TENNIS DRESS

This is a style suitable to be made up in zephyr or casement cloth; the skirt has a little fulness at waist, and is trimmed below with two folds.

The bodice is trimmed with box-plaits stitched at each edge. The Peter Pan collar and cuffs are of lawn edged with a narrow plaiting.

Chip hat with full crown of spotted muslin, surrounded by a wreath of roses.

Materials required: Eight yards 28 inches wide.

CORRECT STYLES IN GLOVES

Black Is a Color Little Seen This Season, Tints Being Given the Preference.

The new gloves show a good many innovations over products of a year ago. Except for black costumes, where an all-black scheme is desired, black gloves are little used. Plain white gloves also are less in evidence than for some time, tints having taken their place. All the soft pastel shades such as pigeon gray, fawn, biscuit and champagne are especially popular. Just now suedes are liked far better than glace kids. This is a whim of the Parisiennes, who always go in for the smartest fit for everything, and suede certainly comes under that class in the matter of gloves. With the continued shortening of sleeves, more 12-button lengths than any other style are being sold. White gloves with black stitching are popular with black and white combination costumes. For the street with the plain tailor-made broad four-row stitchings in self tones are considered the correct thing.

A Lingerie Hat.

If you get a lingerie hat this year, be sure to choose the mob cap style, with large, high crown and double ruffles around the face.

This may be quite simple or of embroidery and lace. A pretty one in sheer Persian lawn has the crown outlined with three rows of oval eyelets. The upper ruffle is edged with embroidered scallop, while the under ruffle has a row of eyelets above scallops. These frills fall far down over the face and around the high crown are drawn folds of soft ribbon, ending in a huge six-looped bow without ends at the left side.

Where one does not wish to embroider, the crown can be outlined in three rows of German valenciennes insertion, and the two ruffles finished with a row of insertion and edging of lace.

Odd Names to New Shades.

Some of the new shades have exceedingly odd names. There is pheasant displayed in a number of tones, from pale-reddish brown to a brown so deep it is almost black. Ashes of violet, a color of dull, faded purple; king's blue, a cold Japanese-looking shade, toning to brown; argent, a gray like dull silver; drake, a bluish green that is attractive, and a pale green called almond that blondes of a delicate (not colorless) type find becoming. Chantecler is a rich, deep pink, almost red.

A Shining Nose.

Summer is a sorry time for the woman with nose shines. She usually resorts to powder, which coarsens the pores, or she mops with alcohols, which dries up the skin.

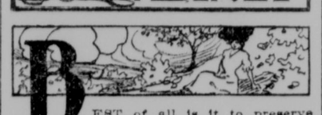
Instead of these, try bathing the nose with hot water, in which a teaspoonful of powdered borax has been dissolved to each pint.

Wiping the surface of nose with a soft flannel or piece of silk keeps down the shine. Do not rub hard or redness results.

Rubbers in Fancy Bag.

The traveler may not know that rubbers can be fitted into gay little plaid silk bags that are lined with rubber and fastened over with a pearl clamp. They are only about five inches long and take up so little room in a bag or a trunk that it is not worth measuring. A woman will not hesitate to travel around with her rubbers even in a dress suitcase when they are done up in such an attractive form.

The KITCHEN CABINET



BEST of all is it to preserve everything in a pure, still heart, and let there be for every pulse a thanksgiving and for every breath a song.

Do Two Things at Once.

The wise housekeeper plans to make every minute and bit of work count. She scorns the idea that it is impossible to do two or three things at once.

By doing an extra amount when once started at a piece of work one may save a great deal of time, than by making two jobs of it.

When preparing pastry for a pie, a larger quantity may be mixed except the water, which may be added when used.

When making a custard, leave the sugar out, and make enough to reserve a cupful to which add mustard, salt and pepper, and you have a salad dressing. The sugar may be added and the flavor desired and the custard is made.

By doubling a cake recipe and baking half in gem pans and the rest in a loaf. Change the flavoring, have one spiced, the other some other flavor. One fire bakes all and the cake will keep if put into a tight tin box. A nice sauce may convert these same small cakes into a delicious pudding if one has need of a dessert in a hurry. Steam the cakes in a sieve over the teakettle.

In cooking potatoes, prepare enough for several meals, even two days. Remove some for a salad after cooking, mash some of the rest, and as mashed potato may be reheated in a double boiler, the second day, it will pay to prepare a large supply.

In sewing this rule works as well. Cut out a number of garments at a time, for it saves time in the end.

Often it is the "getting at" a thing which is the hard part. So by doing a double amount we do not fritter our time by going from one piece of work to another, and we accomplish more with less worry and wear on the nerves. It is simply being forehanded.

Home Ideas.

A compressed yeast cake if a part is used and no one wishes to save it, may be kept for a week by immersing it in the flour bin or salt or cornmeal.

Keep an old teaspoon in the soda and baking powder cans, a tablespoon in the coffee can and a measuring cup in the sugar box.

THREE were invited, here come nine,
Water the porridge that all may dine.

Banana Sponge.

A cold dessert which is neither elaborate nor expensive, serves admirably for every day use: Line a mold, first dipped in cold water, with thin crosswise slices of banana and fill with the following mixture: Mix one-half cupful of cornstarch, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Add gradually one-fourth of a cupful of cold milk. Add to four cupfuls of scalded milk, stirring constantly until mixture begins to thicken, and afterward occasionally. Cook in double boiler 15 minutes. Add one teaspoonful of vanilla and the whites of three eggs beaten until stiff. Chill thoroughly, remove from mold, and garnish.

Sweet Potato Cases.

Wash and bake six large sweet potatoes. When done, cut a small hole in the top of each and scoop out the entire inside. Mash first in a saucepan over the fire, adding two tablespoonfuls of butter, a generous quantity of cream, salt and pepper, and beaten whites of two eggs. Fill up the skins with the mixture, set back in the oven, and serve hot.

Eggs on Tomato Toast.

Stew some tomatoes, adding shredded green peppers, chopped onion, salt and pepper. When smooth, spread on buttered toast; cook eggs in the shell long enough to hold their shape, and lay one on each piece of toast. Serve at once.

Cucumber Potato Salad.

One quart of boiled, sliced potatoes, two sliced cucumbers, three small onions, sliced, one cupful of chopped pecans, one-half cupful of browned bacon, one tablespoonful of sugar; add salt, pepper and vinegar to taste. Good.

Household Hints.

Clean the enameled bathtubs and sinks with a cloth dipped in kerosene. Nothing does the work better.

Eggs should be covered and kept from air as the shells are porous and bacteria easily pass through them.

Nellie Maxwell.

Asbestos.

More than four-fifths of the world's supply of asbestos comes from the province of Quebec, in what is known as the serpentine belt, running through the counties of Thetford, Coleraine, Robertson and Broughton, about 100 miles from Montreal. While the history of the industry dates back to 1877, it has only expanded to its present proportions during the last few years. The province has already produced over $25,000,000 worth of asbestos and is now averaging $2,000,000 worth a year.

AT A CRITICAL PERIOD

Of Peculiar Interest to Women.

Mrs. Mary I. Remington, Eigleberry St., Gilroy, Cal., says: "I suffered so severely from pain and soreness over the kidneys that it was a task for me to turn over in bed. My kidneys acted very frequently, but the secretions were retarded and the passages scalded. I was weak and run down. After taking other remedies without benefit, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was permanently cured. I was going through the critical period of a woman's life at that time and after using Doan's Kidney Pills there was a miraculous change for the better in my health."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Natural.

"And did your wife die a natural death?"

"Oh, yes. She was talking when the end came."

When Rubbers Become Necessary

And your shoes pinch, shake into your shoes Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet. Cures tired, aching feet and takes the sting out of Corns and Bunions. Always use it for Breaking in New shoes and for dancing parties. Sold everywhere 25c. Sample mailed FREE. Address, Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

How About "Lift Thine Eyes?"

The English Tourist—Excuse me, my friend and I cannot agree as to the name of that range of hills. Can you tell—

The Scot (severely)—Mon, the Sawbath is na the day for speiring hills whatever!—Sketch.

Resinol Ointment Is Used in Every Country of the World as the Best Remedy for Itching Piles.

I was terribly annoyed with Itching Piles for twenty-five years. I found such great relief with the first application of Resinol Ointment that in future I would not think of being without it. An occasional application is all that is necessary.

Christopher Holmes, Brookline, Mass.

An Embryo Emancipator.

A little miss riding on a Brooklyn trolley car the other day tendered the conductor half fare. "How old are you, little girl?" he queried, gingerly handling her fare.

She pursed her lips for a moment, then calmly opened her purse, dropped two more pennies into the conductor's extended palm, snapped her purse and demurely replied: "You have your fare, sir; my statistics are my own!"

Would Mean a Better Show.

"Johnny," said the teacher, "here is a book. Now, stand up straight and sing like a little man."

The song was "Nearer, My God." No sooner had the school commenced to sing than a little girl waved her hand frantically. Stopping the singing, the teacher inquired the cause.

"Please, teacher, I think Johnny will get nearer if he whistles."—Judge.

Up in the Air.

"I have been at the top of Pike's Peak, which is more than 14,000 feet above sea level. What was the greatest height you ever reached?"

"I don't know just what the altitude was, but it must have been much greater than that which you mention. I made the ascent shortly after I had stepped with my bare feet on a bumble bees' nest."

Casey at the Jet.

"What's this I hear about Casey?" asked McGinnis.

"He's been trying to asphyxiate himself," said O'Reilly.

"G'wan! What did he do?"

"He lit every gas jet in the house and sat down and waited."—Everybody's.

A DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE

Medicine Not Needed in This Case.

It is hard to convince some people that coffee does them an injury! They lay their bad feelings to almost every cause but the true and unsuspected one.

But the doctor knows. His wide experience has proven to him that to some systems, coffee is an insidious poison that undermines the health.

Ask the doctor if coffee is the cause of constipation, stomach and nervous trouble.

"I have been a coffee drinker all my life. I am now 42 years old and when taken sick two years ago with nervous prostration, the doctor said that my nervous system was broken down and that I would have to give up coffee.

"I got so weak and shaky I could not work, and reading your advertisement of Postum, I asked my grocer if he had any of it. He said: 'Yes,' and that he used it in his family, and it was all it claimed to be.

"So I quit coffee and commenced to use Postum steadily and found in about two weeks' time I could sleep soundly at night and get up in the morning feeling fresh. In about two months I began to gain flesh. I weighed only 146 pounds when I commenced on Postum, and now I weigh 167 and feel better than I did at 20 years of age.

"I am working every day and sleep well at night. My two children were great coffee drinkers, but they have not drank any since Postum came into the house, and are far more healthy than they were before."

Read "The Road to Wellville," found in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MOTHERS WHO HAVE DAUGHTERS

Find Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hudson, Ohio.—"If mothers realized the good your remedies would do delicate girls I believe there would be fewer weak and ailing women. Irregular and painful periods and such troubles would be relieved at once in many cases. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is fine for ailing girls and run-down women. Their delicate organs need a tonic and the Compound gives new ambition and life from the first dose."—Mrs. GEORGE STRICKLER, Hudson, Ohio, R. No. 5, Box 32.

Hundreds of such letters from mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

Young Girls, Heed This.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by its use.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

The Army of Constipation

Is Growing Smaller Every Day.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS are responsible—they not only give relief—they permanently cure Constipation. Millions use them for Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Sallow Skin.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

Sore, Tender and Aching FEET

instantly relieved and permanently cured by

Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil

A soothing antiseptic discovered by an Old Railroad Surgeon. All Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c, 50c & $1.

Paris Medicine Co., St. Louis, Mo. Dryden, Maine.

Dear Sirs: I am bathing my feet with DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL as I stand a greater part of the day causing large lumps of callous to form. I tell every one who suffers with any kind of skin trouble, how wonderfully DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL heals.

(Signed) MRS. LAURA DUNTON.

Made by

E. W. Grove

Maker of

Laxative Bromo Quinine

Poor Appetite

indicates weakness of the stomach nerves which control the desire for food. It is a sure sign that the digestive organs need the help of

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Sold Everywhere. In boxes 10c. and 25c.

Seldom See

a big knee like this, but your horse may have a bunch or bruise on his Ankle, Hock, Stifle, Knee or Throat.

ABSORBINE

will clean them off without laying the horse up. No blister, no hair gone. $2.00 per bottle. Book 8 E free.

Before After

ABSORBINE, JR., for mankind, $1 and $2. Removes Painful Swellings, Enlarged Glands, Goitre, Wens, Bruises, Varicose Veins, Varicosities, Old Sores. Allays Pain. Your druggist can supply and give references. Will tell you more if you write. Book free. Manufactured only by W. F. YOUNG, P.D.F., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Big Assets

Four hundred thousand people take a CASCARET every night—and rise up in the morning and call them blessed. If you don't belong to this great crowd of CASCARET takers you are missing the greatest asset of your life. 910

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

DEFIANCE STARCH never sticks to the iron.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared.

CHAPTER IV.—Continued.

"Especially what?"

"Especially since Jack Bailey and Arnold Armstrong were notoriously bad friends. It was Bailey who got Arnold into trouble last spring—something about the bank. And then, too—"

"Go on," I said. "If there is anything more, I ought to know."

"There's nothing more," he said evasively. "There's just one thing we may bank on, Miss Innes. Any court in the country will acquit a man who kills an intruder in his house at night. If Halsey—"

"Why, you don't think Halsey did it!" I exclaimed. There was a queer feeling of physical nausea coming over me.

"No, no, not at all," he said with forced cheerfulness. "Come, Miss Innes, you're a ghost of yourself, and I am going to help you upstairs and call your maid. This has been too much for you."

About six o'clock Gertrude came in. She was fully dressed, and I sat up nervously.

"Poor Aunty!" she said. "What a shocking night you have had!" She came over and sat down on the bed, and I saw she looked very tired and worn.

"Is there anything new?" I asked anxiously.

"Nothing. The car is gone, but Warner"—he is the chauffeur—"Warner is at the lodge and knows nothing about it."

"Well," I said, "if I ever get my hands on Halsey Innes I shall not let go until I have told him a few things. When we get this cleared up, I am going back to the city to be quiet. One more night like the last two will end me. The peace of the country—fiddlesticks!"

Whereupon I told Gertrude of the noises the night before, and the figure on the veranda in the east wing. As an afterthought I brought out the pearl cuff-link.

"I have no doubt now," I said, "that it was Arnold Armstrong the night before last, too. He had a key, no doubt, but why he should steal into his father's house I cannot imagine. He could have come with my permission easily enough. Anyhow, whoever it was that night left this little souvenir."

Gertrude took one look at the cuff-link and went as white as the pearls in it; she clutched at the foot of the bed and stood staring. As for me, I was quite as astonished as she was.

"Where did—you—find it?" she asked finally, with a desperate effort at calm. And while I told her she stood looking out of the window with a look I could not fathom on her face. It was a relief when Mrs. Watson tapped at the door and brought me some tea and toast. The cook was in bed, completely demoralized, she reported, and Liddy, brave with the daylight, was looking for footprints around the house. Mrs. Watson herself was a wreck; she was blue-white around the lips, and she had one hand tied up. She said she had fallen downstairs in her excitement. It was natural, of course, that the thing would shock her, having been the Armstrongs' housekeeper for several years and knowing Mr. Arnold well.

Gertrude had slipped out during my talk with Mrs. Watson, and I dressed and went downstairs. The billiard and card rooms were locked until the coroner and the detectives got there, and the men from the club had gone back for more conventional clothing.

I could hear Thomas in the pantry alternately wailing for Mr. Arnold, as he called him, and citing the tokens that had precursed the murder. The house seemed to choke me, and, slipping a shawl around me, I went out on the drive. At the corner by the east wing I met Liddy. Her skirts were draggled with dew to her knees and her hair was still in crimps.

"Go right in and change your clothes," I said sharply. "You're a sight, and at your age!"

She had a golf stick in her hand, and she said she had found it on the lawn. There was nothing unusual about it, but it occurred to me that a golf stick with a metal end might have been the object that had scratched the stairs near the cardroom. I took it from her, and sent her up for dry garments. Her daylight courage and self-importance, and her shuddering delight in the mystery, irritated me beyond words. After I left her I made a circuit of the building. Nothing seemed to be disturbed; the house looked as calm and peaceful in the morning sun as it had the day I had been coerced into taking it. There was nothing to show that inside had been mystery and violence and sudden death.

In one of the tulip beds back of the house an early blackbird was pecking viciously at something that glittered in the light. I picked my way gingerly over through the dew and stooped down; almost buried in the soft ground was a revolver! I scraped the earth off it with the tip of my shoe, and, picking it up, slipped it into my pocket. Not until I had got into my bedroom and double-locked the door did I venture to take it out and examine it. One look was all I needed. It was Halsey's revolver. I had unpacked it the day before and put it on his shaving stand, and there could be no mistake. His name was on a small silver plate on the handle.

I seemed to see a network closing around my boy, innocent as I knew he was. The revolver—I am afraid of them, but anxiety gave me courage to look through the barrel—the revolver had still two bullets in it. I could only breathe a prayer of thankfulness that I had found the revolver before any sharp-eyed detective had come around.

I decided to keep what clues I had, the cuff-link, the golf stick and the revolver, in a secure place until I could see some reason for displaying them. The cuff-link had been dropped into a little filigree box on my toilet table. I opened the box and felt around for it. The box was empty—the cuff-link had disappeared!

CHAPTER V.

Gertrude's Engagement.

At ten o'clock the Casanova hack brought up three men. They introduced themselves as the coroner of the county and two detectives from the city. The coroner led the way at once to the locked wing, and with the aid of one of the detectives examined the rooms and the body. The other detective, after a short scrutiny of the dead man, busied himself with the outside of the house. It was only after they had got a fair idea of things as they were that they sent for me.

"One Look Was All I Needed."

I received them in the living room, and I had made up my mind exactly what to tell. I had taken the house for the summer, I said, while the Armstrongs were in California. In spite of a rumor among the servants about strange noises—I cited Thomas—nothing had occurred the first two nights. On the third night I believed that some one had been in the house; I had heard a crashing sound, but being alone with one maid had not investigated. The house had been locked in the morning and apparently undisturbed.

Then, as clearly as I could, I related how, the night before, a shot had roused us; that my niece and I had investigated and found a body; that I did not know who the murdered man was until Mr. Jarvis from the club informed me, and that I knew of no reason why Mr. Arnold Armstrong should steal into his father's house at night. I should have been glad to allow him entree there at any time.

"Have you reason to believe, Miss Innes," the coroner asked, "that any member of your household, imagining Mr. Armstrong was a burgair, shot him in self-defense?"

"I have no reason for thinking so," I said quietly.

"Your theory is that Mr. Armstrong was followed here by some enemy and shot as he entered the house?"

"I don't think I have a theory," I said. "The thing that has puzzled me is why Mr. Armstrong should enter his father's house two nights in succession, stealing in like a thief, when he needed only to ask entrance to be admitted."

The coroner was a very silent man; he took some notes after this, but he seemed anxious to make the next train back to town. He set the inquest for the following Saturday, gave Mr. Jamieson, the younger of the two detectives, and the more intelligent looking, a few instructions, and, after gravely shaking hands with me and regretting the unfortunate affair, took his departure, accompanied by the other detective.

I was just beginning to breathe freely when Mr. Jamieson, who had been standing by the window, came over to me.

"The family consists of yourself alone, Miss Innes?"

"My niece is here," I said.

"There is no one but yourself and your niece?"

"My nephew." I had to moisten my lips.

"Oh, a nephew. I should like to see him, if he is here."

"He is not here just now," I said as quietly as I could. "I expect him—at any time."

"He was here yesterday evening, I believe?"

"No—yes."

"Didn't he have a guest with him? Another man?"

"He brought a friend with him to stay over Sunday, a Mr. Bailey."

"Mr. John Bailey, the cashier of the Traders' bank, I believe." And I knew that some one at the Greenwood club had told. "When did they leave?"

"Very early—I don't know at just what time."

Mr. Jamieson turned suddenly and looked at me.

"Please try to be more explicit," he said. "You say your nephew and Mr. Bailey were in the house last night, and yet you and your niece, with some women servants, found the body. Where was your nephew?"

I was entirely desperate by that time.

"I do not know," I cried, "but be sure of this: Halsey knows nothing of this thing, and no amount of circumstantial evidence can make an innocent man guilty."

"Sit down," he said, pushing forward a chair. "There are some things I have to tell you, and, in return, please tell me all you know. Believe me, things always come out. In the first place, Mr. Armstrong was shot from above. The bullet was fired at close range, entered below the shoulder and came out, after passing through the heart, well down the back. In other words, I believe the murderer stood on the stairs and fired down. In the second place, I found on the edge of the billiard table a charred cigar which had burned itself partly out, and a cigarette which had consumed itself to the cork tip. Neither one had been more than lighted, then put down and forgotten. Have you any idea what it was that made your nephew and Mr. Bailey leave their cigars and their game, take out the automobile without calling the chauffeur, and all that at—let me see—certainly before three o'clock in the morning?"

"I don't know," I said, "but depend on it, Mr. Jamieson, Halsey will be back himself to explain everything."

"I sincerely hope so," he said. "Miss Innes, has it occurred to you that Mr. Bailey might know something of this?"

Gertrude had come downstairs and just as he spoke she came in. I saw her stop suddenly, as if she had been struck.

"He does not," she said in a tone that was not her own. "Mr. Bailey and my brother know nothing of this. The murder was committed at three. They left the house at a quarter before three."

"How do you know that?" Mr. Jamieson asked oddly. "Do you know at what time they left?"

"I do," Gertrude answered firmly. "At a quarter before three my brother and Mr. Bailey left the house, by the main entrance. I—was—there."

"Gertrude," I said excitedly, "you are dreaming! Why, at a quarter to three—"

"Listen," she said. "At half-past two the downstairs telephone rang. I had not gone to sleep, and I heard it. Then I heard Halsey answer it, and in a few minutes he came upstairs and knocked at my door. We—we talked for a minute, then I put on my dressing gown and slippers, and went downstairs with him. Mr. Bailey was in the billiard room. We—we all talked together for perhaps ten minutes. Then it was decided that—that they should both go away—"

"Can't you be more explicit?" Mr. Jamieson asked. "Why did they go away?"

"I am only telling you what happened, not why it happened," she said evenly. "Halsey went for the car, and instead of bringing it to the house and rousing people, he went by the lower road from the stable. Mr. Bailey was to meet him at the foot of the lawn. Mr. Bailey left—"

"Which way?" Mr. Jamieson asked sharply.

"By the main entrance. He left—it was a quarter to three. I know exactly."

"The clock in the hall is stopped, Miss Innes," said Jamieson. Nothing seemed to escape him.

"He looked at his watch," she replied, and I could see Mr. Jamieson's eyes snap, as if he had made a discovery. As for myself, during the whole recital I had been plunged into the deepest amazement.

"Will you pardon me for a personal question?" The detective was a youngish man, and I thought he was somewhat embarrassed. "What are your—your relations with Mr. Bailey?"

Gertrude hesitated. Then she came over and put her hand lovingly in mine.

"I am engaged to marry him," she said simply.

I had grown so accustomed to surprises that I could only gasp again, and as for Gertrude, the hand that lay in mine was burning with fever.

"And—after that," Mr. Jamieson went on, "you went directly to bed?"

Gertrude hesitated.

"No," she said finally. "I—I am not nervous, and after I had extinguished the light, I remembered something I had left in the billiard room, and I felt my way back there through the darkness."

"Will you tell me what it was you had forgotten?"

"I cannot tell you," she said slowly. "I—I did not leave the billiard room at once—"

"Why?" The detective's tone was imperative. "This is very important, Miss Innes."

"I was crying," Gertrude said in a low tone. "When the French clock in the drawing room struck three I got up and then—I heard a step on the east porch, just outside the cardroom. Some one with a key was working with the latch, and I thought, of course, of Halsey. When we took the house he called that his entrance, and he had carried a key for it ever since. The door opened and I was about to ask what he had forgotten, when there was a flash and a report. Some heavy body dropped, and, half crazed with terror and shock, I ran through the drawing room and got upstairs—I scarcely remember how."

She dropped into a chair, and I thought Mr. Jamieson must have finished. But he was not through.

"You certainly clear your brother and Mr. Bailey admirably," he said. "The testimony is invaluable, especially in view of the fact that your brother and Mr. Armstrong had, I believe, quarreled rather seriously some time ago."

"Nonsense," I broke in. "Things are bad enough, Mr. Jamieson, without inventing bad feeling where it doesn't exist. Gertrude, I don't think Halsey knew the—the murdered man, did he?"

But Mr. Jamieson was sure of his ground.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A New Sun-Defying Cloth.

A new cloth is being made in Calcutta, India, which is manufactured on scientific principles to conform to nature's plan of warding off the sun's rays, as exemplified in the color of the skin and the pigments under the skin. It is the belief of physicians that one of the chief reasons for the many deaths recorded in hot weather is that of improper clothing. The designers of what we must wear to be of the elect may ordain a color or texture thoroughly unsuited to the prevailing climatic conditions, and safety and comfort are often jeopardized in consequence.—Van Norden Magazine.

LAND IN CANADA AN INVESTMENT

WORK IT, AND SECURE 20 PER CENT. ON THE EXPENDITURE.

Farm lands in Canada increased in value this Spring from fifteen to twenty per cent, and as a result of this increase thousands of those who have gone there within the past few years have had that much more value added to their holdings. There is proof here that as a field for investment there is nowhere to be found a more profitable one than in purchasing farm lands in Canada. And, as a field for occupation and working the farms there is nowhere on the continent where more satisfactory return is given. The crops are always sure and the prices are always good. With railroads entering and traversing all the settled parts, there are very few districts in which the farmer will be more than from ten to twelve miles from a railway station. Roads are good, and big loads are easily handled. The price of getting grain to the primary market is low on this account, and then in reaching the world's markets the railways have their rates controlled by the Government, and what may be considered a fair deal is certain. Good prices for all kinds of grain is the rule, and if the investor has made good money by the increased value given to his unworked land, it is not difficult to understand that the profit to the man who works his land is just that much more, and there will be no depreciation. The man who holds a free homestead of one hundred and sixty acres of land, which he got for $10 as an entry fee, has land which at its lowest estimate is worth $10 an acre—yes, $15 an acre—the moment he has completed his three years' residence duties. It will continue to increase in value until its earning power gives a reasonable interest on a certain sum. That is, if he takes off the land fifteen to twenty dollars per acre clear profit each year, his land is worth to him, at a fair rate of interest, $200 an acre. If he only realizes $10 an acre clear profit, it is worth $100 per acre. Now, thousands of farmers are duplicating these figures. The price of land in Canada to-day is much less than its realizing value. The fact that the fifty thousand Americans who went to Canada year before last were followed by one hundred thousand last year offers some evidence, and good evidence, too, that there is getting to be a pretty fair knowledge that money is to be made in Canada lands. As an investment money is to be made, but more by living upon the land, secured either by homestead or purchase. The one hundred thousand of last year will be one hundred and fifty thousand this year. These comprise people from every state in the Union, and it is just being realized the asset that awaits the homeseeker in Canada. The large numbers that have gone, though, makes no appreciable difference in the supply of land. There is still left vast quantities of the best of it. But the longer a delay is made in arriving at a decision, the price will advance proportionately, and the more desirable homesteads near the railway lines become more difficult to secure. The Government publishes interesting literature, which may be had on application to any of the agents whose offices are located at different points through the States, and they (the agents) will be pleased to assist in any way possible in the choice of location.

Children.

Listen to this opinion from David Starr Jordan:

"There is nothing in all the world so important as children, nothing so interesting. If you ever wish to go in for some philanthropy, if you ever wish to be of any real use in the world, do something for children. If you ever yearn to be truly wise, study children. We can dress the sore, bandage the wounded, imprison the criminal, heal the sick and bury the dead, but there is always a chance that we can save a child. If the great army of philanthropists ever exterminate sin and pestilence, ever work out our race's salvation, it will be because a little child has led them."—Nautilus.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, Price, 75c. per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Fletcherite Loses His Count.

"Bobby," said his mother, "sit up straight, and don't tuck your napkin under your chin. I've told you hundreds of time—"

"There!" exploded Tommy, "you've made me lose the count! I don't know now whether it's 256 or 356 times I've chewed this clam!"

"That Place Needs a Picture."

This is something you have often said about a certain blank spot on the wall. Modern methods of art reproduction make it possible for the Hewitt Brothers Soap Company of Dayton, Ohio, to send you a beautiful picture for twenty-five wrappers from Easy Task soap and a two-cent stamp. This clean, pure laundry soap is the one that makes a half day's work of a whole day's washing.

Circumstances are beyond the control of man, but his conduct is in his own power.—Beaumont.

Libby's SOUPS

Tomato

Chicken

Vegetable

and ten other kinds. Delightful natural flavor and made from the very best materials, with the care of experienced chefs, in the great White Enameled Kitchens.

Libby's Soups are ready for immediate use by adding an equal portion of hot water

Ask your grocer for Libby's Soups

Libby, McNeill & Libby

Chicago

NATURALLY.

Biffs—How did the baby show turn out?

Bings—Oh, it was a howling success.

After the Horrible Example.

"Does a minister to China, pa, have to take a queue with him?"

"He gets a cue not to talk too much."

For Proper Care of Tuberculosis.

According to the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, New York state leads in the number of beds for consumptives provided up to May 1, with 5,476 beds; Massachusetts is second with 2,403 beds; Pennsylvania, third, with 2,347 beds; Colorado, fourth, with 1,489 beds; and New Mexico fifth, with 1,104 beds. As yet, not one state in the country has made adequate provision for its consumptives. New York has set itself the task of having "No uncared-for tuberculosis in 1915," and several cities in other parts of the country have adopted similar programs. The national association says that tuberculosis will not be stamped out until all cases of this disease are cared for either in their homes or in institutions. With this end in view, efforts will be made to increase the number of hospital beds in this country to at least 35,000 by May 1, 1911.

A Happy Day

Follows a breakfast that is pleasing and healthful.

Post Toasties

Are pleasing and healthful, and bring smiles of satisfaction to the whole family.

"The Memory Lingers"

Popular Pkg. 10c.

Family Size 15c.

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson I.—Third Quarter, For July 3, 1910.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xiii, 31-33, 44-52—Memory Verse, 44—Golden Text, Rom. xiv, 17—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Having considered two of these seven parables, we are asked in this lesson to take up the remaining five. We conclude from verse 53 that all the seven formed one discourse, spoken at one time, four publicly and three, with the explanation of the second, more privately to the disciples only (verse 36). We must remember that He is in the whole discourse describing different phases of this present age from His rejection until His coming again, the mysteries of the kingdom. Whatever symbol or figure He explains stands good for the whole discourse—as, for example, "the field is the world," the birds represent the wicked one, the enemy is the devil, the harvest is the end of the age. In the first parable only perhaps a fourth part of the seed bears fruit, at least only a part without saying how much. In the second the children of God and of the wicked one continue side by side throughout the whole age. In the third there is the unnatural growth from the least of all seeds, not only of an herb, but of a tree, in the branches of which the birds of the air lodge.

In the fourth, the parable of the leaven, a woman is seen leavening, or corrupting, her food, for from Ex. xii, where the houses had to be searched and all leaven put away, all through the Bible leaven is without exception a symbol of evil. Our Lord taught to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees (xvi, 6), and Paul taught to put away the leaven of malice and wickedness and use the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth (I Cor. v, 8). The rule in all the sacrifices was "burn no leaven nor any honey" (Lev. ii, 11), but there was one exception made in reference to a thanksgiving offering, and leaven was commanded to represent the evil that was in their thanksgiving (Lev. vii, 12, 13, and Amos iv, 5). This woman evidently represents the professing church thoroughly corrupting her teaching, and it is even now, as was foretold in II Tim. iii, 5; iv, 3, a form of godliness denying the power and a refusal to endure sound doctrine. Unitarianism and infidelity are in many a pulpit where only the pure gospel ought to be preached. Sarah did better when she took three measures of meal and baked unleavened cakes for her visitors (Gen. xviii, 6). With the devil catching away the seed or hindering the fruit, sowing tares, entering the church, causing false doctrine to be taught, it does not look encouraging, but we are glad that He is not discouraged and that He has told us what to expect (Isa. xlii, 4).

Let us hear the other parables spoken in the house to the disciples. First there is a field with treasure hidden in it which a man buys, having sold all that he had in order to buy it (verse 44). This cannot represent the sinner obtaining salvation, for salvation cannot be bought. It is wholly and only of free grace. Neither money nor good works can obtain it. And where is there even a hint that salvation is to be hidden? Is it not rather to be proclaimed to all people? Let us hold fast the teaching of the previous parables and all will be clear and easy. The field is the world, and there is only one who can buy it, and it is written of Him that, though He was rich, for our sakes He became poor. Why should He need to buy it or redeem it? Because, although he created it, He gave it to Adam, and Adam mortgaged it to the devil, who was bold enough to say to our Lord that he owned it (Matt. iv, 8, 9). Rom. viii, 21; Rev. xxii, 3, and other texts teach that it shall yet be fully delivered. Ex. xix, 5, and references teach us that the treasure is Israel, through whom He will yet bless all nations. Up to the present, through all this age, she is a hidden treasure, and few preachers make any reference to her or look for any future for her, but such should give heed to Jer. xxxiii, 24-26; iii, 17; Isa. lxi.

In the parable of the pearl it must be the same man who gave up all that he had in order to obtain it. As pearls come from the sea, this pearl must represent the church gathered from the sea of nations and in due time to be a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, holy and without blemish (Eph. v, 27)—a perfect pearl, but perfect only because united to Him who purchased her. He said of Israel, "Thy beauty was perfect through my comeliness which I had put upon thee" (Ezek. xvi, 14).

When the time of the mystery has passed the pearl—the church—shall be manifestly one with Him, and Israel shall be manifestly His treasure in the eyes of all nations. While the parable of the net may have some reference to the gathering at the end of the age, we must remember that He said to some of His first followers, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men" (Matt. iv, 19). Through all the age the net has been gathering good and bad, not taking all the fish in the sea and not gathering only the good ones, but gathering of every kind, a great separation to take place at the end of the age. Some consider verses 51 and 52 an additional parable.

PLEASANT VALLEY.

Plowing corn and sowing buckwheat is the order of the day.

Mr. George T. Kerins was visiting his parents at this place Sunday.

Miss Queen Bernard returned Saturday from Pennsboro, W. Va., where she had been visiting relatives.

Mr. Robert Gauer has completed Mr. W. S. Friend's barn.

Mr. Nelson Custer, of Accident, was in this community on business the past week.

W. H. Smouse purchased a fine team of horses from W. S. Friend last week.

Mr. Gale Gorell was seen on his way to Mr. D. S. Davis' last Sunday evening.

Mr. Geo. DeWitt took a fine team of horses to Thayerville for Senator Harvey J. Speicher one day last week.

Mr. Harvey Bittinger is working for Mr. D. H. Riley.

Mr. Shumaker, of Meyersdale, Pa., was visiting his daughter, Mrs. Lakin Friend, last week.

Mr. Otho Friend met with a painful accident last Tuesday by cutting his knee with an axe.

There will be preaching at the M. E. church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. All are invited to attend.

BITTINGER.

All the farmers in this neighborhood are busy at work in their corn fields, and the last week of warm weather has made a decided change for the better in that crop.

Mrs. Jane Boucher, of Rockwood Pa., and Miss Sophia Broadwater of Minnesota, were visiting at the home of C. E. Ellithorp, last week.

C. D. Hershberger, of Grantsville, and William Livingood, of Springs, Pa., were in this section last week, taking options on coal lands. We learn that nearly the entire section was optioned for a period of six months, and it is believed that this is not a sham boom, but a real proposition.

Mrs. K. A. Bittinger entertained a number of people at an ice-cream and strawberry supper at her home in this village on last Saturday evening.

Harry Wiley who attended the Normal and training school at Oakland, returned to his home at this place last Friday.

Dr. Robison, of Grantsville, was making professional calls in this neighborhood last Monday.

Thomas H. Brenneman has begun erecting a concrete foundation for his new barn.

P. F. Mellinger, of Beckman, spent last Sunday with friends at this place.

Croft Lumber Company.

Croft Railroad Company, of Alexander, Upshur county, W. Va., has been chartered to build a railroad from a point near Alexander in Upshur county, W. Va., to or near the Zenders' farm in the same county. Capital $8,000. The incorporators are: J. H. Henderson, J. L. Kendall, S. A. Kendall and Milton J. Henderson, of Pittsburg; J. Gibson McIlvain, Hugh McIlvain and W. B. McIlvain, of Philadelphia.

Entertainment For Benefit of Chruch

The young ladies and gentleman of Deer Park will give a play and festival in Laughlin's Hall, Saturday evening, July 9, the proceeds to be use to pipe the Union church for Natural Gas. The play is entitled "For Love or Money." Everbody come and bring your friends and your pocket books. Admission 10 and 15 cents.

MYRTLE GEORGE,
MAUD SHAFFER,
LULU MARLEY,
Committee.

2t

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:

Loch Lynn—Preaching at 11 a. m., subject "Are the American People Free?" Miss Mazie Prevost will sing; Mr. Richardson of Piedmont, acting as accompanist.

Deer Park—Preaching at 8 p. m.

The choirs of the churches will render special music at both services.

Everybody invited.

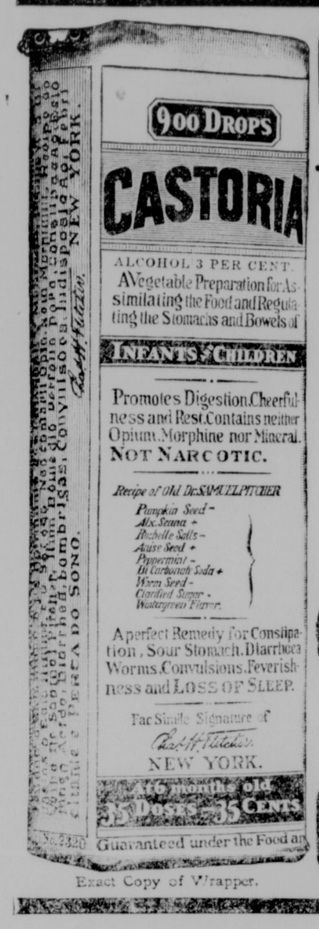
C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

A Grand Picnic.

There will be an enjoyable time in Dewitt's Grove, one and one-half miles north of Deer Park, on Saturday, July 2nd. Dancing all day and in the evening. Music will be furnished by Prof. Althers, A. S. Browning and William Carr. Refreshments of all kinds will be furnished on the grounds and dinner at the house. A grand tournament will also be held in connection with the picnic.

Knights of Pythias Elect.

The semi-annual election of officers of Garrett Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of Oakland, occurred at the regular session of the lodge held last Friday evening when the following were elected: Wade H. Hinebaugh, chancellor commander; Paul Mitchell, vice chancellor; Dr. William W. Grant, prelate; Wellington Crane, master at arms; Arthur Lawton, master of work; Julius C. Renninger, trustee.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Marriage Licenses.

The following marriage licenses have been issued by Clerk E. Z. Tower since our last report:

Harry Linwood White and Etta May Shartzer, both of Oakland.

Joshua Layton, of Tunnelton, W. Va., and Idela Grimes, of Rowlesburg, W. Va.

Russell William Summers and Grace Elizabeth Marshall, both of Morgantown, W. Va.

William Hammond Frush and Jemina Anna Meredith, both of Weston, W. Va.

Ralph Coalman Ringler and Minnie Ellen Gerkins, both of Grafton.

Thomas Root and Leola Liller, both of near Eglon, W. Va.

William Ambrose Hoaleraft and Allie Williams, both of West Union, W. Va.

John Elva Conner, of Roseby's Rock, W. Va., and Ora E. Richmond, of Fork Ridge, W. Va.

David Earle Field and Mattie Oliver Taylor, both of Masontown, W. Va.

James Otho McCann, of Fairmont, W. Va., and Maud Crumline, of Morgantown, W. Va.

Desty Thompson, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Bessie Cottrill, of Broad Oaks, W. Va.

Eddie Peters and Emma Post, both of near Buckhannon, W. Va.

Earl Clifford Brewer and Sadie Uphold, both of Swanton.

Asher Ingram Sutton and Clara Theodora Asher, both of Salem, W. Va.

Francis M. Bendure and Georgia Anna Murphy, both of Holloway, W. Va.

Armand Cyril Tricot, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Hallie Hardman Wildman, of Piedmont, W. Va.

Byrum Blosse Hughes and Elsie Coffindaffer, both of near Salem, W. Va.

John Marvin Campbell and Mary Irone Harter, both of Metz, W. Va.

Carl Clark Richards and Mary Roberts, both of Rinehart, W. Va.

Edward Trenton Mauck and Violet Belle Madden, both of Luray, Va.

Don Cameron Keck, of Clayville, O., and Jessie May Zinn, of Reedville, W. Va.

John Arthur DeWitt and Sadie Elizabeth Friend, both of Hoyes.

Archie Thomas Barnes, of Shinnston, W. Va., and Lillie Nell Freeman, of Enterprise, W. Va.

Clarence Beachy and Bertha Yommer, both of Jennings.

Lawrence Cleveland Biggess and Laura Moore, both of Fairmont, W. Va.

Lawrence Vincent Byrnes and Mary Josephine Timperley, both of Philadelphia, Pa.

Clarence Arthur Bennett and Margaret Moon, both of Fairmont, W. Va.

Carl Wesley Davisson, of Parsons, W. Va., and Julia Dove McDaniel, of Kingwood, W. Va.

Emmet Earl Pyles, of Austen, W. Va., and Lulu Fourtney, of Blaine, W. Va.

Edward Ball and Ettie Wigner, both of Ellenboro, W. Va.

Charles Ross Boyer, of Cranesville, and Mattie M. Riley, of Selbysport.

William Ray Talbott and Erma Jean Smith, of Clarksburg.

Charles Frederick Schmitz and Minnie Ogden, of Clarksburg.

John Monroe Pugh and Nellie Rebecca Davis, of Rowlesburg.

Hassell Wade Corder, of Philippi, and Auddece Lena Love, of Berryburg.

Cecil Glenwood Morris and Mary Elizabeth Turner, of Fairmont.

John Harvey Wagner and Ora Nay, of Clarksburg.

Joseph Allen Burch and Edith Sisler Guthrie, of noar Friendsville.

Beason Daniel Glotfelty and Vinnie Lauretta Kamp, of Accident.

Columbus Martin Gainer and Bessie Lutz, of Nestorville.

Perry Hugh Williams and Bessie L. Lynch, of Mannington.

Clarence Cleveland Williams, of Durant, Ohio, and Lucy Dale McIntyre, of Coon's Run, W. Va.

Jessie Herman Weese and Bertha Milvina Baxley, of Bayard.

John C. Clelland and Louise Katharine Sexton, of Buckhannon.

Clarence Adams and Nora Bennett, of Clarksburg.

Nine with request not to publish.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Subscribe for The Republican.

STORAGE OF APPLES.

How to Keep Them In Good Condition In an Apple Cellar.

An apple cellar should be the tidiest and sweetest corner of the house. Nothing else should ever be stored in it. Its walls should be at least twenty inches thick, and it should have abundant light. All summer it should be open to drafts of air and kept free of any decay.

There should be no moldy boards or any smell of mildew. In other words, the air should be fit to breathe. When the apples are stored the drafts should be stopped, and when steady cold sets in you should shut the cellar tight and let it stay tightly closed until May.

You can place such a cellar as this conveniently under part of your barn or under your carriage house, only there should be no stable adjacent. The floor overhead should be covered with autumn leaves spread thickly to prevent any change of atmosphere below. The thermometer all winter should stand at about 33, just above freezing. Put your apples in shallow bins, cement the floor to keep out rats, and if barrels are used set them up somewhat from the floor.—Outing Magazine.

How to Manage a Life Preserver.

"The worst trouble about a life preserver," said an old sailor, "is that few people know what to do with one when it's thrown to them. Many a man would drown in trying to get a life preserver over his head. The average person struggling about in the water would try to lift up the big life ring and put it over his head. That only causes the man to sink deeper and take more water into his lungs. The proper way to approach a life preserver in the water is to take hold of the side nearest you and press upon it with all your weight. That causes the farther side to fly up in the air and down over your head, 'ringing' you as neatly as a man ringing a cane at a country fair. After that mister drowning man can be rescued."

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., June 25, 1910.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Monday, July 11, 1910,

to transact any business that may be brought before them.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

OF

Valuable Coal

AND

OTHER PROPERTY

Situate in Garrett County, Md.,

Known as the Gillespie Property.

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned Trustee, by decree entered on the 20th day of May, 1910, in the matter of C. D. Gillespie, bankrupt, pending in the District Court of the United State for the Northern District of West Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will, on

SATURDAY,

the 23rd Day of July, 1910,

at Eleven O'clock A. M.,

at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, owned by C. D. Gillespie.

I

All the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying

315 Acres of Land.

being part of a tract known as "Elk Garden," situate in Garrett county, Maryland, together with 100 acres of the surface of said 315 acres and all the rights and privileges granted to the said C. D. Gillespie in connection with said coal property. Two-thirds of said property was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Ada A. V. Halterman, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, of record in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 45, folio 152, and the remaining one-third was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Austin Brown, Sheriff, by deed bearing date December 1, 1909, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 59, folio 483, to which deeds reference is now here had for a more particular description of said property.

This property is situated very near the Western Maryland Railroad, near the station of Henry on said railroad and adjacent to the coal property now being operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Company at its mines at Henry. The coal underlying this property which is to be sold is very valuable.

II

All of the coal underlying a tract of land containing

68 1-2 Acres,

situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being known as a part of the "Elk Garden" tract and being the same coal conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Peter F. Snyder and wife, by deed bearing date October 27, 1906, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 364, to which deed reference is here had for a particular description of said 68½ acres, together with all the rights and privileges as to mining rights, surface and rights of way, as were vested in said Gillespie by said deed.

This 68½ acres of coal is considered very valuable. It is located a distance of about three or four miles from the railroad.

III

An undivided one half interest in ten acres of land, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being also a part of what is known as the "Elk Garden" tract, said undivided one-half interest having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry F. Marshall and wife, by deed dated the 11th day of August 1902, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 42, folio 300, to which deed reference is had for a particular description of said property.

IV

A tract or parcel of land containing one acre, more or less, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, on the Western Maryland Railroad, near Gorman, having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry C. Stemple and wife, by deed dated the 30th day of April, 1904, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 54, folio 454. There are situated, on this property, several buildings, one of which can be used for a combination dwelling house and store building.

All of the above described property will be sold free and acquit from all liens and incumbrances. The title to all of said property is considered good.

TERMS OF SALE.—One-third cash in hand on day of sale and the residue upon a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to give interest bearing notes, with good personal security, for the deferred purchase money and the legal title to the property to be retained as additional security, until said deferred purchase money has been paid.

C. W. MAXWELL, Trustee.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-ly.

Proposals For Building Three Wrought Iron Or Concrete Bridges.

Notice is hereby given that the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, will receive sealed proposals until

Monday, July 11th, 1910,

at 2 o'clock p. m., at their office in the town of Oakland, Md., for the building of three wrough iron or concrete bridges.

Bridge No. 1 to consist of one span 46 feet long and 12 feet wide. Same to be built over Yough River at Aml Foreman's 4 miles south of Oakland, Md.

Bridge No. 2 to consist of one span 25 feet long and 12 feet wide. Same to be built over Yough River at John Martin's 9 miles south of Oakland, Md.

Bridge No. 3 to consist of one span 16 feet long and 12 feet wide and to be built at Chisholm's Mill 2 miles from Gorman, Md.

Bids will be in lump sum for each structure completed according to plans and specifications on file.

The County Commissioners ask that bids for both iron and concrete be submitted for the above bridges and they reserve the right to let the contract for either. If iron is used concrete will be used for the substructures.

The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By Order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS Clerk.

OPERA HOUSE
School of Music
First Door Upstairs to Right.
Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.
Terms arranged on application.
MRS. K. R. RASCHE,
Opera House. OAKLAND, MD

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1553 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland

Ordered this 25th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by the Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelph, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of July, 1910, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Alice Campbell, et al. vs. William Guard, et al.

No. 1657 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 15th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Norval Speelman, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 15th day of July, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 8th day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1800.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not are vertised here. For particulars address

M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

The man Who Makes
A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building.
Oakland, Maryland.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m

GEORGE W. LEGGE, Jr.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910. NUMBER 19

MR. HAGNER'S POSITION

Congressional Candidate Is In The Field To Win.

To the Editor of The Republican:

It has been stated in several of the counties in the Sixth Congressional District that I entered the race for Congress in the interest of some one of the candidates and not for myself. I here declare that such is not the case. I announced my candidacy, believing that I could harmonize the Republican party in the Sixth Maryland District and be elected in November. I am anxious for the nomination and shall leave no stone unturned to secure it. I shall fight till the last minute of the last day and if nominated shall continue an aggressive campaign with all the power I possess till the election is over. I am in the contest for myself alone, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding.

I am in favor of the government of the United States rehabilitating the old National Turnpike from Baltimore to Wheeling, West Virginia, and thence from Wheeling to Springfield, Illinois—making it a great National thoroughfare right to the place where the great Abraham Lincoln became famous as a lawyer and at which city he began a career that brought him to the White House to preside over the Nation at a time when he was needed to save the integrity of the United States. A great National military and post road would be the result of the construction of this old National turnpike and to carry it on to Springfield, Ill., would be on behalf of Congress the building of a great memorial to the immortal Lincoln. The expenditure of the costs of one or two battleships would be sufficient to build the great road, for no doubt those through whose lands a great deal of the route passes would be glad to give their land to have such a great national internal improvement pass their homes. A number of the counties in those States through which this road would pass own the pike and would readily transfer their right to the United States free to be relieved of the costs of maintaining it. I believe this government should in time of peace be ready for war. Proper coast defenses and a reasonable number of battleships and torpedo boats must be ready for the Nation's defense, but the expenditure by the Government of sufficient funds to rebuild the old National Pike, the pride of the people, would be money well spent. The route from Wheeling, W. Va., to Springfield, Ill., (if one will examine the map of the United States) passing through Columbus, Ohio, and Indianapolis, Ind., is almost a straight line and would not be difficult to construct. The United States can well afford to make this great national improvement and those States which have gone into road building can very materially aid the counties by taking off the taxpayers some of the county roads which would lead into the National Turnpike and make them fine macadam thoroughfares. The idea of the building of the National Turnpike was just what its name indicates. Let this nation follow the examples of the great Eastern countries and have a military and post road through the centre of the country and at the same time immortalize the name and deeds of President Lincoln. I am heartily in favor of this great National project and if nominated and elected will do my utmost to secure an act of Congress looking to the consummation of this great public improvement and do hereby pledge myself to the people of the Sixth Congressional District of Maryland to labor unceasingly to have it accomplished.

ALEXANDER R. HAGNER.

BOUNDARY LINE SURVEY WILL BEGIN TUESDAY

When the Commissioners Will Meet in Oakland. Going from Here to Fairfax.

Ex-State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, of Garrett county, representing the State of Maryland, Mr. Julius K. Monroe, rapresentative of the State of West Virginia, and Mr. Henry W. Gannet, of Washington, D. C., chief of the U. S. Geological Survey, will meet in Oakland on next Tuesday, the 12th inst., and go from here with a corps of engineers to Fairfax Stone, the beginning of the boundary line between Maryland and West Virginia, and make the survey of the line as directed by the United States Supreme Court in its decision recently handed down.

The surveying party will camp, moving from place to place as the work progresses, for the greater part of the distance. It is probable that three months will be consumed in making the survey. The line to be run will be east of the Michler line and will be well and permanently marked by stone monuments and will forever settle the long controversy between the States.

Log Train Brakeman Hurt.

Mr. Benj. Wilt, of Bond, while braking on the log train, was badly injured. The brake broke, throwing him under the train and crushing one leg to a pulp. He also received internal injury. He was removed to the Western Maryland Hospital in Cumberland. Mr. Wilt is married and has two children.

Bought Ginseng Farm.

Messrs. Oscar and Alfred Broadwater have purchased a ginseng farm, in district No. 11, from Mr. Charles Merrill for $300.

THE RIGHT OF PETITION

Has Been Denied the People of Oakland by the School Commissioners.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The old saying that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty" holds good today and needs continued emphasis.

Human liberties are the results of a long and painful struggle for inherent rights. Each victory won in asserting humanity's rights and freeing the human conscience has cost too much in blood and treasure to be lightly treated or bartered to the whim of the demagogue. To say that our liberties are in danger and are frequently trampled upon by unscrupulous men who should be their guardians is the expression of a truth familiar to all informed American citizens. "Vested rights," "special privileges," "political chicanery," are a constant menace to free institutions.

In a democratic form of government the people are the government, otherwise our boasted liberty is a farce. Officers elected by the ballots of a free people are chosen to carry out the will of the sovereign people. The people are not their servants, but they are the servants of the people.

This being true the people must of necessity have some way of making known to their public servants what the will of the majority is. Back in the early days of England when democracy began to develop and monarchy and despotism began to decay, "the right of petition" was recognized by the people as the most effective way of bringing before their rulers a redress of grievances or other demands for their welfare, and often their wishes were granted at the point of the bayonet.

America inherited this love of liberty, and it is woven into the very fabric of our national life. In the United States the right of petition is secured by the following words: "Congress shall make no law abridging the right of the people to peaceably assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

The first article in the Constitution of Maryland says, "that all Government of right originates from the people."

No man has any moral right in the country to accept an office who is not willing to abide by the will of the sovereign people and who will not in the capacity of that office do his utmost to carry out the people's expressed will.

It is absolutely legitimate, fair and honest to exact promises and get expressions from candidates for political office that we may vote intelligently and know the intentions of all such candidates. The aspirant to office who refuses to openly commit himself on vital questions that the people may know in advance of the election how he stands is not worthy to receive the vote of a free people, neither should he expect it.

The same holds good in all official positions whether elective or appointive, for back of the appointive office is somewhere the electorate.

The same principles hold and are worthy of the same respect whether the petition is to Congress, the State Legislature, a School Board or the town council to clean an alley or abate a nuisance.

There is too much of a tendency in this country to assume that we are a peaceful and liberty loving people, therefore it is better to suffer and endure than to have any trouble. Had that spineless sentiment prevailed Bunker Hill, Yorktown and Appomattox would never have been heard of, and the old liberty bell never have been rung.

The American people need today to assert and demand their rights as of old. In Article 6 of Maryland's Constitution we read: "The doctrine of non-resistance against arbitrary power and oppression is absurd, slavish and destructive of the good and happiness of mankind."

This community has passed through what is one of the most striking examples of its kind to be found anywhere. Ninety per cent of the voters and taxpayers honestly and in good faith petitioned their School Commissioners to return to them a well tried, competent and wholly acceptable principal of their High School for the ensuing year.

This petition is scorned, ignored and not given a decent consideration. The act is all the more reprehensible because commissioners living outside the interested community turn a deaf ear to an almost universal demand.

If this action is right the Declaration of Independence is wrong; if it is right the Constitution of the United States is a farce and Maryland's Constitution a pitiful burlesque and human liberty a mere sham. But the action of the commissioners is not right. Public sentiment says it is not; common decency says it is not; and no amount of sophistry or imbecile explanation will ever make it right in the public mind.

If a petition is turned downed it is at least worthy of decent consideration. If turned down common courtesy would demand an explanation. But both courtesy and decency have been denied the public, and those responsible for the act stand forever condemned at the bar of public opinion.

Such public servants should be called to give an account of their stewardship and pay the penalty of their rash folly and then relegated into forgetfulness save as the memory of this unholy and unenviable deed follows them.

G. R. WILLIAMSON.

CONSERVATION WITHDRAWALS.

President Taft, acting under the new conservation law giving the chief executive legal warrant for withdrawing public lands, has taken out from location nearly 8,500 acres embracing power sites, phosphate soils and petroleum lands. The importance of these withdrawals does not rest in the fact that they have been made, but in the fact that they are the first to be legally authorized. President Roosevelt, in the absence of specific laws, acted upon the broad warranty of the executive office, with the wide sanction that this gives in view of many constitutionalists. He acted upon the question of the absorption of public lands by private interests in a manner that he conceived to be thoroughly justifiable. He acted upon the belief that there should be inherent authority in the office itself for the executive to do any executive act, even though there was no law to point to as the particular warranty for the action. The order of withdrawal made by President Roosevelt on November 12, 1906, has also found full ratification by the action of the President in confirming and continuing in force these important Alaskan coal and mineral land withdrawals.

When it is considered that the water power sites withdrawn by the act of the President embrace thousands of acres important in relation to the development of hydro-electrical power, and that the phosphate and petroleum lands are of value difficult to computate, but that will be greatly productive of wealth for the nation, the act amounts to an era in the admisistration of the public domain by law. Behind such measures it will be impossible to establish the cavil that they were not specifically guaranteed by statutes as was done in the case of the Poosevelt withdrawals. Mr. Taft, armed by authority, has retraced some of the important steps of his predecessor and has placed upon them the seal of Congress. He has also gone out in new directions with that authority of the people's representatives.

Hardly less important in relation to the public domain is the order designating engineering officers to carry out the reclamation projects provided for by Congress, which entails the expenditure of $20,000,000. There is no jobbery here and every acre will be carefully inspected, surveyed, the business cost of reclamation gauged and the work entered upon with the fidelity and economy of private enterprise. Maryland will share in the reclamation work and much of its marsh lands, reclaimable through drainage, will be brought into the market. It is impossible to estimate the value of the project to the country and to the states of the work of reclamation that has been well inaugurated by the act of the President. Mr. Taft is the final arbiter in all that relates to the expenditure of the sum provided by the lawmakers. No project shall secure the sanction of the board that has not been approved by the President as feasible and in every way worthy. Thus the extension of the legal warrant for federal control of public lands and appropriations for the reclamation of unprofitable soils will result in the broadening of the powers of the executive, yet in a way to make the central government co-ordinate more closely than ever with particular states.

Money spent in such matters of domestic economy are worthiest forms of investment and will tend to perpetuate to the people the wealth of soil and minerals, as well as of oil and electrical power that inhere in their vast legacy of public lands. Mr. Taft has demonstrated the fact that he has the capability to appreciate the legal necessities of the conservation question.

Lawn Fete.

A lawn fete and ice cream festival Episcopal church of New Germany Satwill be held on the lawn of the Methodist urday night, July 16th. Refreshments and all the delicacies of the season will be served. All are cordially invited. Don't forget the date.

Kicked By Horse.

Mr. Jefferson Broadwater, of New Germany, was kicked by his horse sustaining a fractured hip. This is a serious injury to Mr. Broadwater, he being seventy years old.

TWO YOUNG MEN LOST THEIR LIVES ON THE RAIL

James Perril, of Newburg, Killed in Oakland, Ward Feather Died at Keyser.

The railroad took its toll of human lives in this section of the country during the past few days when one young man was instantly killed in Oakland, and another was so badly injured at a point midway between Hutton and Corinth that he died the following day at Keyser, to which place he was taken for treatment.

The man killed in Oakland was James Perril, of Newburg, who came here on a freight train Monday evening and attempted to get off while the train was going at a rapid rate of speed. Perril's body was severed at the waist and his death was instantaneous. His remains were prepared for burial at the Bolden undertaking rooms and shipped to his father's home at Newburg Tuesday.

Ward Feather, son of Samuel Feather, of Chidester, Preston county, W. Va., was so badly injured Saturday night by being struck by a freight train at a point near Hutton that he died Sunday night at the Hoffman hospital, Keyser, to which institution he was taken for treatment.

NEW GERMANY.

"When the milkin' has been finished
And the cows are turned to pasture
There's a joyous kind o' period
That's sublime.
Th' old dairy's full o' sunshine,
Everywhere there's daisies bloomin'
An' Dan Cupid is busy
Workin' overtime."

Prospects seem good for fair crops.

A few of our young people spent the Fourth at Jennings, a few at Salisbury and a great many at home.

Eldridge Durst is at home for several weeks with an injured arm.

Rev. Friend preached an interesting sermon Sunday night.

Rev. Moon preaches next Sunday at 10.30 a. m.

Orville Stark and Ernest Wiland, who are employod in West Virginia, were home for the Fourth.

Jesse Merrill, of Avilton, was seen in our midst Sunday.

In spite of the small crop many of our people secured cherries.

Miss Bertha Broadwater spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Marshall Durst.

Salem Broadwater passed through this place Tuesday.

MADE AN ASSIGNMENT.

J. N. Robinson Voluntarily Assigned for the Benefit of Creditors.

Mr. J. N. Robinson, who has for a number of years conducted the Yankee Notion Store in the Ravenscroft building on Second street, made a voluntary assignment for the benefit of his creditors on Monday to Messrs. J. C. Renninger and W. R. Offutt, attorneys.

While no statement has been made by the attorneys it is understood that the liabilities are about fifteen hundred dollars and the assets will total probably half that amount.

Since Mr. Robinson has been a resident of Oakland he has made many friends who will regret to learn of his failure.

BITTINGER.

Many of the residents of this village spent Monday at neighboring towns where Independence Day was appropriately celebrated. Mrs. Peter G. Stark and Mrs. A. J. Oester prepared a dinner and a supply of ice cream and strawberries which they served to the smaller boys and girls of the village who were denied the privilege of attending a picnic elsewhere, and we venture to say that the little folks enjoyed the day immensely and they as well as their parents are grateful to the good ladies who contributed to their pleasure.

A party of capitalists, accompanied by William Merrill, of Garrett, Pa., made a tour of inspection through this neighborhood last week. These gentlemen are interested in the development of the coal in this section, and it is said that their representatives have already secured options on more than twenty thousand acres of the best coal territory in this part of the county.

Charles Buckel received a splendid new buggy last week from a factory in Indiana, and we take that as good evidence that some one will go out for a drive many pleasant summer evenings.

Mr. John Holman, of Friendsville, was calling on Miss Lizzie Orendorf at this place last Sunday.

Charley Stark, who is employed at Chaffee, W. Va., came to his home here last Saturday and after fitting himself out with a handsome suit at one of our merchants returned post haste to Chaffee and it is rumored that there is a wedding on hand.

William Stanton, of Grantsville, recently completed the erection of a new line of telephone wire from this village to Grantsville for the Mutual Telephone Company.

Lewis Maust and family, of Springs, Pa., spent last Sunday with Mrs. Maust's parents at this place.

The Republican for Job Printing

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO

Headquarters for the Best Shoe Made

THE

Hamilton-Brown

Shoes and Oxfords

FOR WOMEN.

The Crossett Shoes and Oxfords for Men.

Our line is complete now and new styles coming in every day.

One of our specialties for Women—Low Heel and Plain Toe.

For Men—Lace and Congress, Plain Toe.

Be convinced and buy your next pair here.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

Copyrighted.

TEDDY TAFTY

Teddy-Tafty Sundae

The Latest in Ice Cream.

Healthful

Delightful

Refreshing

Oakland Steam Bakery

Manufacturers of Ice Cream complying absolutely with the Pure Food Laws of the United States.

We Freeze our Reputation into our Ice Cream.

TEDDY TAFTY

TEDDY-TAFTY.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Pubr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

And about those flies—!

There are no good flies except dead ones.

Some straw-hat symptoms are manifesting themselves.

Astronomers, on the other hand, learn something new every day.

Judging by some of the recent fiction, more novelists are of unsound mind than are legally declared so.

Candidates for parliament in Hungary are being pelted with stale eggs. Has Hungary no cold-storage houses?

Soon some nervous people will begin worrying about what the comet will do when it returns seventy-five years hence.

The "Chantecler" cocktail is the latest, but the man who drinks it probably does not feel like crowing the next morning.

The price of skunk skins has advanced 100 per cent., so expect a big rise in several kinds of mink, seal and ermine next winter.

Kissing is safe, says a Boston physician. The young man's fancy will turn this spring, no doubt, with far more than its usual intensity.

New York suburban railroads have raised the rate to commuters. Here is a new incentive for the flying-machine man to continue his activities.

From Lynn comes a story of bread buried in dry sand and kept sound and sweet for 25 years. This seems to be another hint for cold-storage men.

"Do not tell a boy how bad he is," says the superintendent of a boys' school. No, he might get haughty over having achieved such distinction.

Kansas will continue to raise corn and put money in the bank without getting jealous or excited over diamond discoveries in the neighborhood.

Railroads are having trouble fixing transportation charges on women's hats. They are not heavy enough to go by weight. Why not charge by the acre?

Thanks to the California experimenters it is now possible to eat cacti and roses. It'll be long before this prickly fodder takes the place of meat and 'taters.

The scientists may prove or disprove the dangers in kissing, but it will take all the king's horses to stop it—and no one seems to be rounding up horses, either.

The Husbands' union should investigate the case of the man whose wife beat him with her fists, a stove poker, a hammer, and then had him arrested for assault and battery.

An engineer who ran his engine into a train ahead of him says that the Lord ordered him to do it, thus predicating another case of orders gone awry in transmission.

School children in various cities are voting against the firecracker and the insane type of Fourth of July. The children see the point when you present it to them in the right way.

Somebody has found out how to make coffee from dandelion roots, but there is no immediate danger that the dandelion crop will be a failure owing to the fact that a use has been found for it.

The Ornithologists' union of New York has undertaken to try to restore the wild pigeon. Perhaps members of the Ornithologists' union have nothing else that may be regarded as worth while to do.

It is an interesting and noteworthy fact that since the promulgation of the law of June, 1907, the effect of which is to simplify the formalities which are the necessary preliminaries to marriage, there have been more weddings in France than at any period since the beginning of the last century, with the exception of the year 1813 and 1872, in the former of which men contracted unions to escape being sent off to fight, while in the latter many wedding took place which had been delayed by the war with Germany.

That submarine vessels can make extended trips is shown by a recent experience with the Viper, owned by the United States, which, in command of a midshipman, ran 487 miles, from a point off the North Carolina coast to Annapolis. Hitherto no such attempt has been made. Of course, the voyage was made on the surface, as submarines dive only when such action is considered necessary. But that the Viper could go safely for such a distance, unaccompanied by any convoy, is taken to show that such craft are capable of more independent service than was supposed.

In Zurich, Switzerland, the people have a custom of burning an effigy of winter in the streets. If it would help to bring winter to an end the custom might well be adopted in other places.

China has taken another great step toward western civilization and the emancipation of its women. The daughters of the Chinese minister at Washington have learned to make fudge. When the American schoolgirl atmosphere gets into any home, however orientalized, things are bound to be changed.

NECESSITY FOR MILLENIUM

By REV. T. C. RUSSELL
Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Respecting two matters there can be no question:

1. That the early church thoroughly believed in a millennial kingdom, hoped for it, prayed for it—"Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in Heaven."

2. It is equally certain that today the doctrine of the millennium is tabooed as "out of date"—out of harmony with the views of the higher critics and evolutionists, who are filling practically all the chairs in our colleges and the majority of the pulpits of Christendom.

The present day concept of the Church of Christ is that God planted it amongst men as leaven in a batch of dough with the intent that it should propagate itself until the entire mass would be leavened.

The two views are so radically opposite that none should confuse them in their minds. If one is right, the other is wrong. If one is Scriptural, the other is unscriptural. The safe, the proper, the right course is to go back and take up afresh the doctrine of the millennium—the doctrine that the faithful of the church now being tried and tested will constitute the glorious Kingdom of God's dear Son after their change from earthly to spirit conditions in the "First Resurrection" (1 Corinthians, 15:42-44).

"Christian people have been fooling themselves long enough!" Yes, it is as absolutely irrational to think of converting the world, as it is unscriptural to believe that God ever gave us that impossible commission. The United States census reports show that there are twice as many heathen today as there were a century ago. The word heathen carries to many a very wrong impression. Many noble-hearted Christians have gone as missionaries to the heathen wholly unprepared for what they met—intelligent reasoning ability, etc. They found that the heathen were full of questions, logical questions, too, which they as Christians had never thought of, and which they were wholly unprepared to answer. Comparatively few of the missionaries are able to hold their own in argument with intelligent people in India, China and Japan. There is no danger of their converting those people. There is more danger of their losing their own faith in the Bible, because of their misapprehension of some of its teachings—respecting the mission of the church, the hope of the church and the hope of the world!

Missionaries are thus handicapped! Full of commendable zeal they leave our shores to tell the heathen that their forefathers have gone to eternal torment and that they are going there, too, unless they accept Christ. It is a rude awakening to be asked where hell is? and why God should have condemned them and their forefathers to such a horrible eternity? and how this could be true and yet he be a God of pity, compassion, love? The heathen ask, Why the different denominations—the different theories of the terms of salvation—by water, by election, by free grace, by joining the church, etc. The missionary, wholly unable to answer the adult native, gathers children about him, starts a school and does all he is able, perhaps, to justify his presence in a foreign land—helping the sick and doing many other acts of kindness which are very commendable, whether from a religious or humanitarian standpoint.

Next let us note that the millennium itself is an absolute necessity for the world, according to the statistics of the world-wise. Many college professors and D. D.'s are inclined to speak glibly of the second coming of Christ being far in the future—"50,000 years yet," say some. But evidently these learned gentlemen have not used their educational advantages in connection with such statements. Any school boy can figure up what the population of the earth would be 1,000 years from now, taking the present population as per the census at sixteen hundred million and the ratio of increase as shown by the census reports at 8 per cent. in ten years. The total would show 3,375,325,000,000 population for the year 2900 A. D.—more than 2,000 for each person now living.

What would humanity do if the earth were crowded to that extent? Where would the necessary food, fuel and clothing be found? Computing all the tillable portion of the earth at twenty-five million square miles or sixteen billion acres would give but one acre for the support of 210 people, or less than five square yards each. At the close of a second such period, 2900 A. D., at the same rate, there would be ten persons for each square foot of standing room. In other words they would stand 15 deep on each other's heads. What shall we think of the wisdom that tells us that the millennium is 50,000 years off? The answer is found in Isaiah's prophecy (29:14).

Are we asked how the millennium if at once introduced would avert the difficulties of the first statement, 210 people for each acre of the habitable earth? We reply that the Scriptures clearly intimate that the rapid increase of our race is associated with man's fallen condition; as our Creator declared to Mother Eve after her disobedience: "I will greatly multiply thy sorrows and thy conception," (Genesis 3:16).

Pictures of the Kingdom

Sunday School Lesson for July 3, 1910

Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT.—Matthew 13:31-33, 44-52. Memory verse, 44.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."—Rom. 14:17.

TIME.—The autumn of A. D. 28.

PLACE.—In a house in Capernaum on the shore of the Sea of Galilee.

Suggestion and Practical Thought.

The Parable or Story of the Mustard Seed.—Vs. 31, 32. "Another parable," showing another aspect of the kingdom of heaven, which the Great Sower had sown in the field of the world.

"The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man," representing the Son of man as in the previous parables, "sowed in his field." It was therefore good seed, living seed that could produce the harvest.

"Which indeed is the least of all seeds." Not the least of all seeds which botanists know, but the smallest of the seeds the people daily used; and the smallest of these in contrast with the plant which grows from it. "Greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree." Not massive like a fir tree of Lebanon, or oak, but an herb so large "that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof."

The Teaching of this Parable. (1) The growth and success in God's field of this world of the kingdom he has planted. I heard a statesman missionary from India say within a week that the religions of India looked upon the present as the iron age, with their golden age in the past. But with Christianity the golden age is in the future, the kingdom is growing toward its ideal and goal, and growing more and more rapidly.

The Parable of the Leaven.—V. 33. Showing the Method by Which the Kingdom Grows. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven." Some of the later writers argue from the fact that leaven is usually the symbol of evil, a corrupting thing, a species of putrefaction, that therefore this parable represents "the fellowship of God in service seen to be marred during the present age by the introduction of a corrupting influence."—G. Campbell Morgan.

"Which a woman took." The Son of man who puts this leaven into the meal is here represented by a woman because breadmaking usually devolved upon women.

This Parable Teaches that besides all the visible manifestations of the Gospel represented by the growth of the mustard seed, there is a deeper underlying progress of the Gospel which operates silently, without observation, but with constantly increasing pervasiveness till the whole mass of mankind, all hearts, all nations, all commerce and business, social life, and political institutions, shall be transformed. The leaven works by personal contact with those who are to be leavened, from individual to individual. It is personal work, personal soul in touch with other souls. The leaven that does the work is a living organism.

Two Stories of Finding Treasures.—Vs. 44-46. These two parables were told to the disciples in the house to which they returned from the seashore.

The Hid Treasure. "The kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field." The hiding of treasure is necessary where there are no banks, where the country is frequently overrun by marauders and robbers, where no one can trust another to hold his treasures or to use them in business, and where the rulers are rapacious to obtain the wealth of their subjects. In the unsettled state of the country often the owners never returned, and all knowledge of the treasure was lost.

The Spiritual Treasures in These Two Parables. There are two quite different interpretations of these parables, both of which are natural, both of which may be true, and each one may imply the other. The movement of the parables depends on what is represented by the Treasure and the Pearl, and who by the one who gave all he had to obtain them.

The common interpretation is that we are the seekers for the treasure, and the Treasure and Pearl are the blessings which are found in the kingdom of heaven and only there. They are the treasures of character, usefulness, happiness, and peace; treasures of eternal life, growing more and more in every good quality of the soul till we become "angels excelling in strength," with all the glories, external and internal, that are portrayed in the description of heaven.

The Parable of the Draw Net.—Vs. 47-52 contain explanation of the mystery that good and bad are found in the visible kingdom of God, instead of only the good, and a warning that merely being a member of the visible kingdom will not save him. There will be a separation of the good from the bad, and each will go of necessity to his own place, and the fate which is the fruit of his faith and character.

Another interpretation of the hid treasure, skilfully advocated by Dr. Wolcott Calkins in his brilliant "Parables for Our Time," and by Dr. Morgan, is that Christ is the seeker after the Treasure and the Pearl, which represent the precious souls of men. The treasure is often hidden, like the lost sheep from the ninety and nine, hidden in publicans and sinners and heathen. It is not the search for good men, but for the lost, for human nature in its moral quality and in its spiritual capacity. To find this treasure, Jesus made his whole life subordinatet to his finding the treasure."

CZAR'S SPIES ALERT

Every Russian in New York Under Espionage.

Emperor's Hirelings Haunt the Libraries and Make Note of What Is Read by Supposed Revolutionists.

New York.—If a Russian Jew dwelling in an East side tenement house spends his evenings in a public library reading the history of his fatherland or poring over books on democracy or socialism, the secret police of the czar of Russia will know about it, sooner or later. The name, age, sex, New York address, and occupation of the library reader will in the course of routine business be inscribed on the official records at St. Petersburg, together with a description of the listed person's physical appearance.

According to Bourtseff and the local leaders of the movement with whom he is working, this city harbors many secret agents of the home government whose business it is to keep the police informed of the revolutionary activities here, and especially to cable information whenever a revolutionist leaves New York for a visit to Russia. His departure is known in St. Petersburg before his ship is half way across the Atlantic, and if he ventures to cross the Russian border some pretext is found for arresting him.

It is optional with each spy in this city what ostensible occupation he shall have. He may push a peddler's cart, or keep a shop, or print books, or have a job in some city department. Anything will do so long as his neighbors do not suspect him and admit him to membership in one or more of the many little organizations of the revolutionists. He attends the meetings of these various "circles," takes part in their debates, often as not is a leader and noted for the earnestness of his denunciation of the czar. His real business is to report to the chief of the spies in New York, who in turn communicates with the Russian police and makes a call at the office of the Russian consul general credited to this city.

Spy in a Library.

This chief agent is supposed to be Alexander M. Evenlenko, who calls himself a publisher, and who declares that he is loyal to the same cause that his accusers are working for. But it is said that Evenlenko makes too many calls at the consulate, and he is specifically charged with informing St. Petersburg of the coming of Matushenko. Matushenko was one of the conspirators who brought about the mutiny on the Russian warship Potemkin. He escaped to this country, where he was harbored by Evenlenko, and then returned to Russia upon the latter's advice. He was captured at the border and hanged three days later.

For every drop of blood spilled in this revolutionary work there are oceans of printer's ink involved. Bomb throwing is infrequent, but pamphlets attacking the czar and printed in New York and Paris are smuggled over the Russian border every day by the cartload. So, in the opinion of the secret police, the first step toward disloyalty to the government is reading about it. That is why the spies in New York have their instructions to watch the libraries. One of these agents is an old man with a long white beard. He is a great reader himself. He spends most of his time in the branch public libraries on the East side.

But he never forgets that he is on duty, and looks away from his fiction pages from time to time to see who is reading the heavier books of philosophy and history and political economy. If he sees that some other reader is there regularly he will walk behind him to get a glimpse at his book. If it is of the sort of literature supposed to breed discontent with monarchies in the mind of the reader, the old spy will find some way of learning that reader's name and address. He will report to the chief agent, who will give the name of the suspect to the spy assigned to the student's particular neighborhood. The second spy will learn what organization, if any, the library patron belongs to, and then attend a meeting to learn how much of what has been absorbed from the books is poured out in speeches denouncing the czar. Then, after this investigation, if the watched man or woman is considered at all dangerous by the agent, the name is forwarded to Russia.

LIQUOR EVIL IS STRONG FOE

Arguments for Its Existence Are Surprisingly Few, Weak and Specious—Three of Them.

The liquor evil is a strong and mighty foe to everything that is pure and good and true. And yet strong and mighty as it is, the arguments for its existence are surprisingly few and weak and specious. Only three are worthy of even a passing notice:

The first is the personal liberty plea. Of course ours is a free land; but free for what? Not for a man or set of men to injure other men and the community. But this is exactly what the saloon is doing. It is an unmitigated evil. Freedom in such a case becomes only a license that should and must be curbed, writes Rev. Charles B. Chapin, D. D., in Christian Work and Evangelist.

The "poor man's club" is another specious argument. But, it may be replied, in return for the warmth and sociability and good cheer furnished the poor man by the saloon, he is dragged down physically, mentally, morally, spiritually, and at the same time he worse than wastes his money. Thus the cost is too great. And, then, what of the wives and children? Are they to be utterly disregarded? Is it not better and less selfish for the man to make his home livable and attractive for those whom he is bound to love and cherish and support? Let him put into his home the wages he spends for rum, and there will be less need for a "poor man's club."

But there is the revenue which the city, county and state receive from the license system, which, it is asserted, is an essential thing. In reply, it may be said, and it can be clearly and convincingly proved by facts and figures, that more is actually paid out for police and criminal courts and prisons and poorhouses because of the saloon than is received from such a revenue.

What, then, can be done to down this foe, which, when looked squarely in the face, has not a single justifiable argument for its existence?

Four things may be suggested:

First, conviction. Some few have deep convictions against this unholy evil because they have been injured by it in their hearts and homes, and others because they are active against it. But the great majority of good people are lukewarm. All such need to be aroused. If they would only make an intelligent study of this monstrous curse, as it is their duty to do, they would soon realize how it ruins the individual and leads to pauperism and crime in the state, and as a result their convictions would stir their very souls and lead to some sort of action.

Second, charity. Most of the foes of the saloon are Christians, and charity is a Christian grace; but the lack of this grace is lamentable. Instead of attacking the saloon, too many temperance people aim their shafts against each other, simply because other methods than their own are being used.

Third, concentration. Temperance sermons and addresses are good, but unless such bring on some definite action the saloon only snaps its fingers and laughs. We need to do as the little girl did who prayed that God would not let her brother catch birds in his trap. When asked why she was so confident that her prayers were answered, she replied, "Because I smashed the trap." If we answer our own prayers by voting against the saloon, by defeating legislators who are allied with this evil, and by enacting laws against it, then the liquor interests become truly frightened.

Fourth, co-operation. This is the tendency of the age, but temperance and church people have not yet sufficiently caught the spirit of it. Temperance organizations are too far apart. There is thus a wicked waste of power. We need to get together, to work and fight as one man, to present a united front. To quote some wise and true words from former District Attorney Jerome: "The reason why the church's wishes and demands find so little consideration at the hands of politicians, legislaters and executive officials is because they so rarely agree among themselves on any specific and definite demands, and they do not go about their reform work in a way to command the attention and co-operation of practical men. No party in city or state could, or would, resist them if they acted together with earnestness, sincerity and true unity of purpose."

Because of a compliance with these four essentials, there are sure signs of success in the temperance campaign in many places.

Abstinence Absolutely Safe.

Gen. Fred Grant tells us that in early life, because of the greatness of his father, he had an unusually large number of invitations to drink. He says: "I tried to drink with extreme moderation, because I knew that alcohol is the worst poison a man can take into his system; but I found out it was impossible to drink moderately. For that reason I became an absolute teetotaler—a crank, if you please. When a man can say, 'I never drink,' he never has to drink, is never urged to drink, never offends by not drinking."

MIGHT HELP HIM.

"Do you think Miss Pink would marry me if I should ask?"

"She might. Women are proverbially foolish."

SKIN BEAUTY PROMOTED

In the treatment of affections of the skin and scalp which torture, disfigure, itch, burn, scale and destroy the hair, as well as for preserving, purifying and beautifying the complexion, hands and hair, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are well-nigh infallible. Millions of women throughout the world rely on these pure, sweet and gentle emollients for all purposes of the toilet, bath and nursery, and for the sanative, antiseptic cleansing of ulcerated, inflamed mucous surfaces. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Boston, Mass., sole proprietors of the Cuticura Remedies, will mail free, on request, their latest 32-page Cuticura Book on the skin and hair.

Grief is the agony of an instant. The indulgence of grief is the blunder of a life.—Dunegan.

Stimulate the heart to love and the mind to be early accurate, and all other virtues will rise of their own accord, and all vices will be thrown out.—Coleridge.

Right Name at Last.

"Let me show you our latest novelty," said the clerk in the haberdashery. "Here is the 'north pole' collar button. Named in honor of Cook and Peary."

"By Jove!" laughed the humorous customer. "They couldn't find a better name for a collar button."

"Why not?"

"Because it is so hard to locate."

Good Scheme.

"It's a shame," commented the friend of the restaurant proprietor.

"What's a shame?" asked the restaurant man in surprise.

"Why, that you should give that pretty waitress all the tough steaks for the patrons at her table."

"Oh, I pay her extra for that. You see she is so pretty not one man would kick if the steaks were so tough they pulled his teeth out."

Paired.

She was an amiable old lady, and volunteered much information to the fair stranger who had come down to see an important event in the country town—the laying of the foundation stone of the new church.

"Yes," prattled the old lady, "that is the duke and duchess, and the couple behind them are the mayor and mayoress; and those two to the right are the vicar and—er—vixen."—Ideas.

A Tart Tongue.

Col. Robert C. Carter, at a Nashville banquet, was talking about campaign comrades.

"Then there was Dash of Company A," he said. "Dash had the reputation of being the nastiest-tongued man in the regiment.

"It was Private Dash, you know, who, out foraging one evening on a rich estate, came accidentally upon the owner's wife, a grande dame in evening dress.

"Dash asked her for food. She refused him. He asked again. But, still refusing, she walked away.

"'No,' she said, 'I'll give you nothing, trespassing like this! I'll give you nothing. My mind is made up.'

"'Made up, is it?' said Dash. 'Like the rest of you, eh?'"

Post Toasties

with strawberries and cream.

A delightful combination that strongly appeals to the appetite.

The crisp, fluffy bits have a distinctive flavour and are ready to serve from the package without cooking.

Convenient,

Appetizing,

Healthful food.

"The Memory Lingers"

Popular pkg. 10c.

Family size, 15c.

Postum Cereal Co., Ltd.
Battle Creek, Mich.

OUR DECLARATION of INDEPENDENCE

5

THE IMMORTAL instrument which was signed by John Hancock on July 4, 1776, has meant more than the growth and development of an independent nation on this side of the Atlantic. It was in itself the re-enactment of the greatest bill of human rights ever penned, which received the signet of an unwilling king at Runnymede, and the birth of constitutional liberty. In these days of peace and plenty the Fourth of July is given to "salutes of cannon and the ringing of bells and to the feu de joie," with variations, as John Adams predicted that it would be, yet the observance of the Fourth as an occasion for recalling memories past and giving thanks for the deeds of the patriot forefathers is sporadic rather than general in the United States. The Declaration of Independence is not read from the rostrum, as it once was in every community and the orators to the links have gone.

So much has been taken here as a matter of course that it seems hard to realize that this anniversary is celebrated in the very England from which liberty was wrested and that observances of it are officially ordered in many lands beyond the seas. The Fourth of July has become international in scope, for it has changed the governments of nations whose capitals are far from Independence hall. So widespread have its effects become as studied in the light of the present day that in order to get the true value of all that the declaration signifies to the world in 1910 it is necessary to go back to the very beginning of American liberty.

Had not the ideas of government held by the colonists been essentially British there would probably never have been any Declaration of Independence. It is as natural for the Briton to demand his rights as it is for him to live. The War of the Revolution was largely due to the fact that the two thousand miles of water between London and the colonies caused parliament to lose sight of the ties of consanguinity and of race.

Although the original thirteen colonies were so essentially English in thought and feeling they had never actually been established by England as a national enterprise. The only one which had ever received any official aid whatever was Georgia, and that was not sufficient to carry any such feeling of dependence as is essential for the preservation of intimate colonial relations. The right to colonize the North American continent had been granted by charters from a British king. According to the feudal system, which was then rapidly becoming effaced, the king owned all the land and distributed it among various favored vassals.

SIGNING THE DECLARATION of INDEPENDENCE

INDEPENDENCE BELL

INDEPENDENCE HALL PHILADELPHIA

The sovereign in the same way regarded the new world as if it had been won by the sword. The most extravagant ideas prevailed with regard to the wealth of the American lands. It was at one time soberly believed in England that gold and silver and precious stones could be had for the taking and that the natives were the possessors of fabulous wealth. The king gave the charters in most cases with the idea that he would profit greatly from mines which would yield enormous returns to the royal exchequer.

When the colonists came here they found it necessary to make good their titles either by peaceful bargains with the Indians or by force of arms. From the very first the spirit of independence was fostered, for fiefs which had to be maintained by constant vigilance and negotiations and by show of force did not carry with them a deep sense of obligation. Indeed, even at that early day, although for the throne the colonists entertained feelings of loyalty and devotion, a shrewd idea was abroad that the king did not really own the land which he had bestowed by his charter. The conquest of nature and of the savages begot a rugged independence which as the years went by became more and more distasteful to the authorities in England.

Yet the idea of separation from the crown was of slow growth. The forefathers maintained that they were British subjects, although not living within the realm, as indeed was specified in some of the royal charters. The Massachusetts charter, for instance, sets forth that the colonists shall be considered "as if they and every one of them were born within the realm of England." As British subjects, then, they maintained that they should be entitled to representation, and therefore each colony had its assembly, which determined upon all matters of the common weal and established rates of taxation. It was one of the principles expressed in the Magna Charta that the common council of the kingdom "was to assess an aid or to assess a scutage," and again, in 1688, it was declared by the British people, then well on their way to constitutional liberty, that "no money was to be levied for the crown without grant of parliament."

The Declaration of Rights was a forerunner of the Declaration of Independence. There is nothing more essentially British than the dictum that there shall be no taxation without representation. Of the early American statesmen only Franklin and Otis wished to have representation in the British parliament. The others considered that their own assemblies should be the legislative bodies entirely and that if any taxes were to be imposed they should be collected only with the consent of the colonial assemblies.

The question of taxation, however, did not enter into any controversies, for it was not until the middle of the eighteenth century that Great Britain, exhausted by many wars and seeking to replenish the national treasury, sought extraordinary means for raising revenue and her ministers proposed that the colonies, which had been growing in wealth and importance, should be made to contribute to the impoverished exchequer. The French and Indian war had shown the power of the colonies and their force and had given a very definite idea of their growing wealth and importance.

Having reached the decision to tax the colonies, the ministry did not spend any time in preliminaries. It was decided that parliament had the right to levy the taxes and the fact that the colonies had no representation in that body was not taken into account. Such a matter would ordinarily have been considered a subject for delicate negotiation, but, the decision to tax having once been made, no time was lost in levying it.

England had in effect been a constitutional monarchy since the signing of the Magna Charta in 1215 and in taxing the colonies not represented in the common council of the kingdom she had violated one of the oldest of the rights which every Briton claims.

Such was the situation in 1764, when the struggle began which 12 years later brought forth the Declaration of Independence, and the next year brought into being the first congress of the American colonies, which decided that the assembly had the power to fix taxes. The stamp act was the first heavy impost levied by the mother country, which provided for the stamping of various legal instruments and papers and contracts of all kinds, as well as dice and playing cards.

The news of the passage of this act roused the colonists to fury. A gallows was erected in what is now City Hall park, New York, and the British governor was hanged in effigy, and the house of Major Jones, in command of the British regiment, was sacked. Then came the rising of the "Sons of Liberty" and the raising of the liberty poles. Boston and Philadelphia were vortices of the storm. So emphatic was the protest that much of the act was repealed and duties were established on tea, which accounted for the sudden rain of tea in Boston harbor. Then came the burning words of Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty or give me death!" before the Virginia in 1773. The year later brought the promulgation of the "Declaration of Rights and Privileges," in which it was declared that every man had "the right to" life, liberty and property and that most ancient right granted at Runnymede, trial by his "peers of the vicinage."

Throughout all this time of storm and strain the protests were made as British subjects, and that congress which met in Carpenter's hall in 1774 was still loyal to the crown. It petitioned the king, remonstrated with parliament and appealed to their brethren in England. Then came Lexington and Concord. The congress of 1775 made provisions for an army, with Washington as commander, and still petitioned. Its petition was refused and mercenaries were hired from petty German princes to—quoting the words of Lossing—"butcher British subjects for asserting the rights of British subjects."

Richard Henry Lee of Virginia offered the independence resolution in June, 1776, and a committee was appointed to draft the declaration, consisting of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston. Jefferson wrote the document and alterations were made principally at the suggestion of Franklin and Adams. The paper was submitted to congress on June 28. It was laid on the table until July 1, when nine colonies voted in favor of it.

The independence resolution was actually adopted on July 2 and promulgated to the world on July 4, when John Hancock of Massachusetts affixed to it his bold signature.

The other members of the congress did not sign it until August 2, and the impressive scene connected with the signing was not witnessed until nearly a month later, although it is popularly associated with the Fourth of July.

Centuries of the progress of the rights of man bear witness in the Declaration. That "all men are created equal and are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," was not new, for it was recognized at Sinai. That governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed had been stated and restated in many ways since the beginning of the colonies Thomas Jefferson was criticized at the time for lack of originality in the declaration. The document gained all the greater force from its statement of self-evident truths. Never was there a more masterly presentation of a bill of grievances than is contained in the Declaration, which "submits the facts to a candid world."

Arraigning the British king for acts of tyranny, it sets forth that he refused "his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good," meaning that George III. had prevented the issue of colonial currency and had refused representation to his American subjects.

It was desired on the part of the New York assembly to enter into a treaty with the Six Nations, but the governor prevented the negotiation of the treaty until he could obtain the consent of the king.

He did not proceed further because he feared that such an act would lead to independence. Hence the expression, "He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance."

Grievances of the Massachusetts colony, which was deprived of representation and suffered interference in popular elections because of its wish to trade with Nova Scotia, suggested the paragraph:

"He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people unless those people should relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only."

To further humble the Massachusetts colony and to punish the participants in the tea party of 1773 the assembly was called in Salem, and not in Boston. Hence the words of the document, "He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable and distant from the depository of their public records."

Massachusetts colony and others had adopted resolutions in their assemblies that there should be no taxation without the consent of the governed. The Massachusetts assembly was asked to rescind its resolution in 1768 and on its refusal to do so was dissolved. The assemblies of Virginia and North Carolina met the same fate. This state of affairs is summed up in the Declaration in the words, "He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly for opposing with much firmness his invasion on the rights of the people."

The Declaration protests against the judges being dependent on the will of the king for their salaries, and, indeed, in some of the colonies many of the judges had been impeached for declaring that they would receive their salaries from the royal treasury.

Graphically the authors of the document tell how the erection of a multitude of new offices had impoverished the country, referring to the collectors appointed to carry out the provisions of the stamp act. The quartering of troops in times of peace was a substantial grievance complained of, for the king insisted on retaining British regiments here after the French and Indian war at the expense of the colonists, ostensibly for defense but in reality to suppress a growing democracy.

The words, "He has affected to render the military independent of and superior to the civil power," refer to the position taken by General Gage, who, with several regiments of British troops, was in Boston. By order of the king he had been made superior to the civil government.

Here and there through the colonies Americans had been killed in altercations with British soldiers, who were subsequently put on trial and acquitted. The Declaration accuses the king of quartering large bodies of armed troops and of "protecting them by mock trial from punishment for any murders which they may commit."

Such were the principles enunciated in the Declaration, and how well they were sustained by the arbitrament of war the world knows. The nation began celebrating the glorious Fourth from the very beginning. Salutes of 13 cannon were fired by the army in 1777, and the new republic was pledged in wine.

West Point saw a significant celebration in 1779, when General Washington issued a pardon for all prisoners in the army under sentence of death. The last celebration of the army of the Revolution as such took place on both shores of the Hudson river and a grand salute was fired.

More of the nature of a festival dominated the Fourth after 1783, for then came parades, free dinners, toasts, the reading of the Declaration in public by citizens and more and more the participation of the younger generation. Dignity and solemnity marked these early celebrations and eloquent speeches were made.

The Fourth is a statutory holiday in every state and its fame has gone beyond the seas.

Libby's Food Products

Libby's Vienna Sausage

is distinctly different from any other sausage you ever tasted. Just try one can and it is sure to become a frequent necessity.

Libby's Vienna Sausage just suits for breakfast, is fine for luncheon and satisfies at dinner or supper. Like all of Libby's Food Products, it is carefully cooked and prepared, ready to serve, in Libby's Great White Kitchen — the cleanest, most scientific kitchen in the world.

Other popular, ready-to-serve Libby Pure Foods are:

Cooked Corned Beef
Peerless Dried Beef Veal Loaf
Evaporated Milk
Baked Beans Chow Chow
Mixed Pickles

Insist on Libby's at your grocer's.

Libby, McNeill & Libby
Chicago

W. L. DOUGLAS SHOES
$5, $4, $3.50, $3, $2.50 & $2

THE STANDARD FOR 30 YEARS.

Millions of men wear W. L. Douglas shoes because they are the lowest prices, quality considered, in the world. Made upon honor, of the best leathers, by the most skilled workmen, in all the latest fashions.

W. L. Douglas $5.00 and $4.00 shoes equal Custom Bench Work costing $5.00 to $8.00.

Boys' Shoes, $3, $2.50 & $2

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it. Take No Substitute. Fast Color Eyelets.
Ask your dealer for W. L. Douglas shoes. If not for sale in your town write for Mail Order Catalog, showing how to order by mail. Shoes ordered direct from factory delivered free. W. L. Douglas, Brockton, Mass.

30 ft. Bowels—

Biggest organ of the body—the bowels—and the most important—It's got to be looked after—neglect means suffering and years of misery. CASCARETS help nature keep every part of your bowels clean and strong—then they act right—means health to your whole body. 911

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment. All druggists. Biggest seller in the world—Million boxes a month.

Readers of this paper desiring to buy anything advertised in its columns should insist upon having what they ask for, refusing all substitutes or imitations.

Do You Want to Sell Your Farm If so give me price, description, and state when possession can be had. Not particular about location. I wish to hear from owner only, who will sell direct to buyer.
Rex K. Leonard, Andover, O.

STOCKERS & FEEDERS
Choice quality; reds and roans, white faces or angus bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.
National Live Stock Com. Co.
At either
Kansas City, Mo. St. Joseph, Mo. S. Omaha, Neb.

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.
HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

A Welcome Gift for Any Man
NO STROPPING NO HONING
Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c and $1.00 at Druggists.

PATENT your ideas. 64-page book and advice FREE. Established 1856. Fitzgerald & Co., Box K, Washington, D.C.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months ..... .75
One copy three months ..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910.

WOMEN AND NEWSPAPERS.

Did you ever watch a woman read a newspaper? If not, try it today. Observation will show that to womankind the news of the retail stores as seen in the advertising makes an intimate personal appeal—because it is closely related to home interests. Women look with avidity to see who is cutting prices, who has the most fetching styles, who has some novel offering. They weigh every word the merchant has to say to them.

Retail advertising is to the homekeeper what the crop news is to the farmer, what the wholesale market reports are to the grocer. Women naturally feel this alert interest in the advertising because it is full of information essential to their efforts to make family incomes accomplish the largest results. Merchants who fail to cooperate with this effort by an adequate public statement of prices and values, are simply ignored in the apportionment of domestic expense.

When a politician's name is rarely seen in the newspapers, the voters assume that he is out of the game. When a merchant's name rarely appears in the advertising, the women assume he is lost in the shuffle. No business enterprise can afford to ignore the women.

MAKE MEAT BARONS EXPLAIN.

According to J. Ogden Armour, meat baron, against whom the United States government has carried on a most unsuccessful prosecution as one of the heads of the Beef Trust, there is some chance for a slight fall in meat prices before the year ends. He declares that if the country produces bountiful crops of wheat, corn and oats this year there will be an abundant supply of cattle and prices should come down. If on the other hand, the grain crops run short the cattle supply will follow suit and prices will remain as they are or go even higher. All this is not very comforting to a man who knows he is paying nearly two prices for every pound of meat he buys.

The chances now are that the crops will be at least fairly good and possibly abundant, but the people are convinced that the beef barons will not allow anything to interfere with their determination to keep up prices. They cannot make the people believe that there is any shortage in the cattle supply, unless it be of their own making. Mr. Armour himself by his own words adds strength to his conviction when he says: "The meat export business from the United States to Europe is dead. South America is furnishing the meat that Europe consumes. The United States cannot compete to advantage with the country south of the Equator. Cattle conditions there are as they were in the West twenty-five years ago. Cattle can be raised cheaper, and, as ship transportation costs but little, if any, more than from the United States, they can be marketed at a much cheaper price. As a cattle producer South America is rapidly outdistancing the United States. The broad plains of the former country are undeveloped. Especially in Argentina the facilities are much better. The class of cattle is not as good, but the meat is good, and that is what Europe wants."

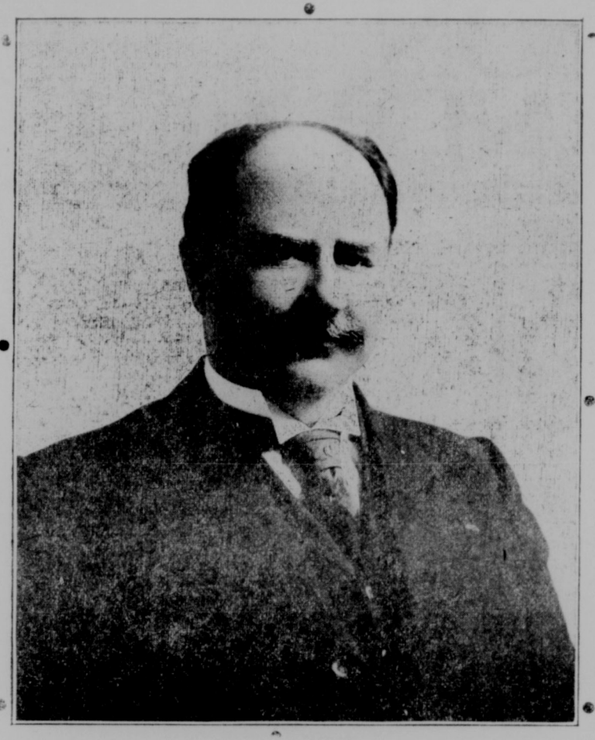
If these be facts, if Europe wants no more meat from the United States, it stands to reason there should be a greater supply for home consumption. The government should compel the beef barons to explain this and force them to discontinue the highway robbery that they have practiced on the public for over a year past.

WOULD BE TRUE TEST.

It would be an appropriate inauguration of the direct primary election law in nominating candidates for state officers if Governor Crothers and Senator John Walter Smith call their respective clans in the Democratic party to battle next year. It would be a struggle which would shake the Democratic party in Maryland to its foundations, for both are resourceful, stragetic, and both know the game well. They are not mollycoddles in politics.

The result of such a fight would demonstrate in Maryland, as it has in other states, that the primary election law is on the side of the man with the better organization and with the heavier artillery. Perhaps, also, the result would induce the Democrats to join the Republicans, after an unsuccessful experiment of giving the "inner people" an opportunity to nominate their candidates, to return to the old safe and sane plan of naming candidates by delegates assembled in convention. The primaries will demonstrate that the best citizens will hold aloof, as they have in other states where the direct nomination plan has been tried, and the politicians will be as influential as ever in making nominations.

By all means let the fight between Governor Crothers and Senator Smith take place next year, in order that the failure of the system of direct nominations may be early proved.



ALEXANDER R. HAGNER.

Mr. Alexander R. Hagner, of Hagerstown, Washinpton county, who is not unknown in Garrett county, made a visit of two days to Oakland last week in the interest of his candidacy for the nomination on the Republican ticket for Congress. While in Oakland Mr. Hagner met many of his old friends and also quite a number of voters whom he had never before seen. Mr. Hagner returned to Hagerstown Saturday morning and expects to make another visit to Oakland and Garrett county generally the latter part of the present month.

MORE DISGRACEFUL THAN THE PRIZE FIGHT.

If there is anything which ought to make the American people feel more ashamed than that a brutal prize fight like that of Monday with all its disgusting and demoralizing surroundings could have been held in this country, it is the hideous outbreak of race hatred that followed because a negro won

When the white man and the negro agreed to fight racial lines were eliminated. The negro fought fairly and won fairly. He whipped Jeffries because he was the better man. He struck no blows below the belt. He carried himself decently in his hour of victory. Yet, because he showed more strength and skill and courage than his antagonist, when the news of the fight was received white men hunted and beat and killed negroes as if they were wild beasts.

Dispatches tell us that in a dozen cities riots were imminent. In New York unoffending black men were dragged from cars and brutally assaulted. Men and boys formed themselves into mobs to chase them. The shame of it is unspeakable. It violated every instinct of decency and humanity. It disregarded every law of sportsmanship. It put a stigma on the whole country. When a white man fights a negro and loses, at least the lower race might be shown that their superiors know how to accept defeat.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The camp meeting opened Tuesday evening with a song service led by Dr. Gilmour and sermon by Rev. Babcock. The attendance was larger than the usual first service which would indicate an increased interest in this great meeting. Besides the old workers quite an array of new faces appear at this meeting and by Sunday a very strong force will occupy the platform, including a Bishop.

The electric light plant broke down Sunday night and we were in darkness Monday and Tuesday nights, but the repairs came Wednesday morning and we are again happy. In order to light the Tabernacle where the camp meeting is being held Supt. Davis had the building piped and the natural gas turned on and the electric light was not missed.

We are expecting a great crowd here Sunday from all sections of the county. Our people should remember that this meeting extends over but one Sunday and if they desire to come on Sunday they will have to come next Sunday.

Rev. E. J. Westfall, wife and little daughter are attending the meeting and will be here until its close.

Mr. Peter Murdock has been employed by the Association.

Mrs. Hast and daughter Miss Effie, of Cumberland, are here for a vacation of two weeks.

There will be no services in the M. E. church next Sunday except Sunday School at the usual hour.

Mr. Upton Cuppett has charge of the meat department of Cuppett, Leighton & Co.'s store.

All the mains have been laid for natural gas and connections to cottages are begin made as rapidly as five gangs of plumbers can make them. About one-half of our people will be using gas in a week or ten days.

We understand the management contemplate piping the Auditorium to provide against a failure of the electric light during the Chautauqua.

The ladies of the Civic Club gave a reception at the bowling alley Monday night. A large crowd was present and light refreshments were served.

Mrs. M. M. Schrock is still improving and will soon be able to go out.

General satisfaction is expressed at the appointment of Miss Vernie Schrock as assistant teacher of our public school. We count ourselves highly favored in having such excellent teachers as Misses DeBerry and Schrock.

Stperintendent Echard has been unjustly criticised for the condition of our streets, when it has been occasioned by the laying of the gas mains and excessive rains. The streets will be put in good condi ion in a few days.

Hon. Alex. R. Hagner, of Hagerstown, a candidate for congress for this district, was in the Park last week.

OAK HILL.

The weather for the past week has been very pleasant.

The people of this place have been busy plowing corn and sowing buckwheat.

Mr. Joseph Teats and family are visiting relatives and friends in this section.

Mr. J. W. Schroyer and son Dennis have been very busy hauling store goods the last month for the merchants at Accident.

Our Sunday school at Oak Hill is getting along very nicely under the good care of Messrs. Roy Turney and George Ault, superintendents.

There will be preaching at this place July 21st by Rev. Powers, also preaching Monday night, the 25th inst., by Brother Wampler.

Constable Silas Teats, of Accident district, has been very busy and is much annoyed because his telephone won't ring. He expects to buy a new one in a few days.

Mr. J. S. Teats has his lime kiln smoking for wheat.

Mr. Martin Rush, our enterprising horse dealer, sent some horses and cattle to Uniontown for Mr. John Clark.

Mr. B. F. Turney raised his large barn several weeks ago.

Mrs. Mary A. Bittner and son expect to move from this section to a point west of Friendsville shortly.

Mr. Joseph Groer and Mr. John Miller had some sheep killed by the lightning.

Saloons Again Open in Fairmont.

After the city having been "dry" for two years, the saloons of Fairmont, W. Va., opened Saturday morning. The saloonkeepers promise to conduct their places on the model liceese basis. There will be no back-bars, no selling to minors and habituals and no opening after hours. The saloons open at six and close at eleven.

Election Supervisors' Notice of Appointments OF Judges of Election and Registers of Voters.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTION FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., June 7, 1910.

The Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett County, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Registers of Voters and Judges of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 10 of Article 23, of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland, hereby give notice of the name and post-office address of each person so selected and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Election intends each of said persons to represent, respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be prefered to them in writing against any person whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable of discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials

District No. 1

W H Turner, Democrat, Judge and Register, Chaffee, W. Va.

J C Condon, Republican, Judge and Register, Swanton.

District No. 2

R E Friend, Democrat, Judge and Register, Friendsville.

B F Friend, Republican, Judge and Register, Friendsville.

District No. 3

Noah Warnick, Democrat, Judge and Register, Grantsville.

Phines C Boucher, Republican, Judge and Register, Grantsville.

District No. 4

Jessie E Fazenbaker, Democrat, Judge and Register, Westernport.

Henry Barnard, Republican, Judge and Register, Bloomington.

District No. 5

Philip Bowman, Democrat, Judge and Register, Accident.

C C Speicher Republican, Judge and Register, Accident.

District No. 6

Wm G Browning, Democrat, Judge and Register, Sang Run.

J Alvin Friend, Republican, Judge and Register, Sang Run.

District No. 7

W H Bartlett, Democrat, Judge and Register, Oakland.

W S Friend, Republican, Judge and Register, Oakland.

District No. 8

John L Harvey, Democrat, Judge and Register, Gorman.

Guy Yutzy, Republican, Judge and Register, Oakland.

District No. 9

Floyd Crow, Democrat, Judge and Register, Frostburg.

Richard McKenzie, Republican, Judge and Register, Frostburg.

District No. 10

Franklin DeWitt, Democrat, Judge and Register, Deer Park.

B F Thrasher, Republican, Judge and Register, Deer Park.

District No. 11

Herman Robeson, Democrat, Judge and Register, Avilton.

Robert Crow, Republican, Judge and Register, Merrill.

District No. 12

John Hetrick, Democrat, Judge and Register, Bittinger.

A L Bittinger, Republican, Judge and Register, Bittinger.

District No. 13

L C Hamill, Democrat, Judge and Register, Kitzmiller.

Daniel Feichtner, Republican, Judge and Register, Kitzmiller.

District No. 14

John T Browning, Democrat, Judge and Register, Oakland.

B C Scott, Republican, Judge and Register, Hutton.

WILLIAM R OFFUTT, Pres.,
THOMAS J JOHNSON,
S LAWTON.
Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett County.
EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County.

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank

Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper Your Secrets Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department

Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Notice To Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, either in person or by deputy, will be in each of the Election Districts in Garrett county, Maryland, to collect and receive taxes at the time and places following:

July 15—Crellin—Company's Store, 9 to 3.
July 16—Ottoway—Carney's Store, 9 to 3.
July 18—Hoyes Run, 8 to 11.
July 18—Sang Run—Cuppett & Lytle's, 1 to 4
July 19—Friendsville—Crawford Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 20—Selbysport—Riley's Store, 9 to 3.
July 21—Accident—Ries' Store, 9 to 3.
July 22—Cove—Krouse's Store, 9 to 3.
July 23—Grantsville—National Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 25—Thomas Layman's, 9 to 3.
July 26—T. H. Johnson's, 9 to 3.
July 27—Avilton—Garlitz's Store, 9 to 3.
July 28—Strickland's, 9 to 12.
July 28—Walter Warnick's, 2 to 5.
July 29—Merrill's, 9 to 3.
July 30—C. J. Otto's, 9 to 12.
July 30—Jenning's, 3 to 6.
Aug. 1—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 3—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 3—Beckman—Mellinger's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 4—Swanton—W. H. Lohr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 5—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 6—Red House, 9 to 3.
Aug. 8—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 9—Bloomington—Post Office, 9 to 3.
Aug. 10—Kitzmiller—Bank Building, 9 to 3.
Aug. 11—Kitzmiller—Wilson's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 12—Gorman—J. P. Parr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 13—Bloomington—Moody's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 15—Hoyes—W. A. Smith's Store, 9 to 12.
Aug. 15—McHenry, 2 to 5

By an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1890, being Chapter 556, Section 45, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of levy thereof; and all taxes paid on or before the first day of September a discount of three per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt for taxes so paid, but the discount allowed on the county taxes by this section shall not be made to any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due by such person or corporate institution for the current year be paid when the same is made.

ROBERT L. FRIES,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

NOTICE OF FIRST MEETING OF CREDITORS.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.

In the matter of Charles C. Frederick, Bankrupt.

IN BANKRUPTCY

To the creditors of Charles C. Frederick, of Friendsville in the county of Garrett, and District aforesaid, a Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1910, the said party was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 1 Washington Street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 6th day of July, A. D., 1910, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may property come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

June 20, 1910.

KODAK SAFETY FILM

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.
G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt — Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis — George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell — William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Mr. Fred. A. Thayer spent yesterday in Cumberland on business.

Dr. S. A. Kendall, of Meyersdale, was in the city yesterday on business.

Mr. A. L. Gabie, of Baltimore, spent Monday at "Uplands," near Deer Park.

Mrs. C. F. Schroeder, of Grafton, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Peddicord.

Mrs. William R. Offutt spent Tuesday in Cumberland with relatives and friends.

Mrs. J. Wilson Humbird, of Cumberland, is on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Offutt.

Mayor Parley DeBerry of Terra Alta, spent a few hours in Oakland last Monday on business.

Mrs. Joseph E. Harned and two children are on a visit to friends in Cumberland and Pittsburg.

Try the Rock Island Battery for your automobile and telephone. Will outlast any two ordinary ones. A. D. NAYLOR & Co.

The stork visited Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lawton Sunday afternoon and left a handsome little daughter.

Mrs. Baughn, of Lynchburg, Va., is in Oakland on a protracted visit to her mother, Mrs. F. W. Chase.

Misses Corinne DeBerry, of Terra Alta, and Nellie Taylor, of Century, W. Va., are guests of Miss Ellen Connell.

Mrs. Mary Emory, of Morgantown, W. Va., visited her aunt, Mrs. Delia Totten, in Oakland a few days last week.

Attorney Thomas J. Peddicord was in Cumberland last Friday on professional business, returning to Oakland the same evening.

Try one of our Long Life Batterie on your telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mrs. William C. Davis and daughter, Miss Marguetite, of Morgantown, West Va., are here on a visit to Rev. John M. Davis and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gerkin and children, of Cumberland, were guests of Miss Alice Hesen and other relatives in Oakland on Monday.

Mr. Ed. Offutt returned to Oakland Tuesday night from Arkansas, where he spent two weeks in company with Mr. Charles Glotfelty and Mr. James S. Lakin, inspecting a large body of timber land with a view to purchasing it.

Mrs. Marguerite Whitwam and children, of Keyser, West Va., were guests of Mrs. Margaret Lawton in Oakland a day or two last week.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawton & Sons.

Mr. Joe Helbig, of Oakland, Md., left for his home in Oakland last night after a visit of several days with relatives here.—Grafton Sentinel.

Howard C. Thrasher, of Gassawav, W. Va., spent last Sunday and Monday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thrasher, at Deer Park.

Mr. C. F. Hammond has received a Maxwell touring car from a Meyersdale (Pa.) dealer, the delivery being made to Mr. Hammond yesterday.

Mrs. L. B. Brydon and two little daughters, Susan and Mary, returned today from a visit to friends at Bloomington, Md.—Grafton Sentinel.

Miss Alma Turney, one of Garrett county's prominent teachers, left Oakland last night for Douglas, Wyo., where she will reside indefinitely with heroldest brother.

Hon. George C. Sturgiss, of Morgantown, was renominated for Congress at the Keyser convention yesterday. On his way home from the convention he stopped off in Oakland and visited his brother, Col. A. G. Sturgiss.

FOR SALE—A practically new six horse power engine and ten horse power boiler. Apply at Oakland Model Steam Bakery.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Bond and two children, of Thomas, have been guests at the Commercial Hotel for a number of days. Their youngest child—a little girl—has been quite ill since their arrival here but is somewhat improved at present.

Messrs. James Bell, Mark White and Wallace Brown, members of the Oakland band, went over to Kingwood last Friday and accompanied the band of that place to Terra Alta Saturday where they participated in the celebration of the Fourth.

Miss Irene Haulenbeek, at her summer home at Deer Park, on Sunday and the Fourth, entertained Mr. J. Fred Kriel, Jr., of Baltimore City. Mr. Kriel has traveled extensively, but never before visited Garrett county. He was very much pleased.

Subscribe for The Republican.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

THE First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Pays 3 Per Cent.

on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

Minstrel Show.

The minstrel show for the benefit of the Oakland base ball team was postponed last Friday night on account of the sickness of some of those to take part until tomorrow night, July 8th. Messrs. Tower and Varina have been working hard to make this show one of the best ever seen in Oakland and have secured the services of the best singers and players in town. The ball team has gone to a great deal of expense in putting up a good grandstand and expect to have the grounds in first class condition in about a week's time. The tickets for the minstrel are on sale at Harned's Pharmacy.

Mr. Mike Boyle, of Oakland, Md., who played successfully for several years past with the college team at Frederick, Md., arrived in Grafton today and will hold down a place in the infield for Grafton on the team. Mike neither talks nor hears, but he can play baseball. And he's fast as lightning—Grafton Sentinel.

Mr. Hice R. Laughlin, superintendent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company at Grafton, W. Va., paid a visit to his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Laughlin, at their Deer Park residence on Sunday and the Fourth. Mr. Laughlin is a Deer Park boy and was warmly greeted by his many friends and former associates. He intends now to repeat the Sunday visit as often as convenient.

Sheriff Andrew Shartzer has been instructed to summon a jury of condemnation on the part of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to condemn a right of way through the Connell home farm at Ottaway, the jury to meet some time next week. The surveyed route of the railway company will cut through a corner of the old home and take the site of the store building now occupied by Carney & Pendergast.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

Mr. B. W. Harvey, of near Deer Park, has our thanks for a box of strawberries which came from his farm a few days ago. Last August Mr. Harvey set out a thousand plants of the Kansas and Marshall varieties and this being the first crop grown it was rather light. He gathered about three hundred quarts, however. The berries were highly colored and of delicious flavor.

Messrs. Samuel Lees, of Chester, Pa., and Isaac Lees, of Media, Pa., are in Oakland on a visit to their sister, Mrs. Margaret Lawton, at her home on Second street. This is the first visit made to Oakland by these gentlemen in a number of years and is also the first time for nearly a third of a century that the sister and two brothers have been together at the same time. The occasion is a very happy one.

Mrs. D. E. Offiutt returned to her home in Oakland Tuesday night from her old home in Allegany county to which point she was summoned Friday night by a telegram announcing the death of her nephew Herbert Seymour, who was drowned in the Potomac river that evening. The young man was aged 17 years and was buried Sunday, the funeral being attended by a large number of relatives and friends among the former being Mr. W. R. Offutt of Oakland.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

The Fourth of July in Oakland was pretty generally observed by the people of the town. Quite a number of residents of the county were in Oakland on that day, many of them bringing baskets containing their dinners and made the day a pleasant one. The Mountain City Band, under whose auspices the program was arranged and carried out, realized quite a tidy sum as a result of the dance, tournament and other amusements. Blaine Giessman won the first prize as a tournament rider.

Elmer P. Shillingburg, son of T. E. Shillingburg, of Gormania, who graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, June 2nd, has accepted a position as physcian for a company building a railroad in Bolivia, South America, for a term of three years, and sailed from New York on the "Magdelina" June 25th. He was at home but a few days after his graduation. This is a high tribute to one of the most deserving young men of Grant county.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cheuvront have as their guest Mr. Cheuvront's mother, Mrs. M. B. Cheuvront, of Buckhannon, W. Va., who is a daughter of the late Rev. R. L. Brooks, a leader of the M. E. church in this section of the country half a century ago. On the spot where Mountain Lake Park now stands Rev. Brooks and number of other ministers including the late Rev. J. J. Dolliver, conducted the first camp meeting held in what is now Garrett county and it is related that the success of the gathering was of such great magnitude that it was talked of for years. Mrs. Cheuvront is a most amiable lady and relates many interesting things which occurred hereabouts when the county was sparsely settled.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Fall May Prove Fatal.

Luke Kitzmiller, an aged and highly respected citizen who lives near Schell, W. Va., met with a serious if not fatal accident at Stephen Dixon's. He fell down some stone steps and fractured his skull besides receiving internal injuries.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Lost.

A Gold Watch, Open face, Waltham movement, black fob, gold charm, initials, N. C. C. Finder will be rewarded. C. B. CROPP.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First Natinal Bank,

AT OAKLAND,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, June 30, 1910.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$197,835 70
Overdrafts, secured and unsecured		33 84
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
U. S. Bonds to secure U. S. Deposits		1,000 00
Premium on U. S. Bonds		3,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc		13,634 57
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		42,997 19
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents		924 57
Due from State Banks and Bankers		48 20
Due from approved Reserve Agents		44,554 22
Checks and other Cash Items		109 07
Notes of other National Banks		1,025 00
Fractional Paper Currency, Nickels and Cents		267 74
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$16,027 85	16,027 85
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation		2,500 00
Total		$374,457 95

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000 00
Surplus fund	25,000 00
Undivided Profits, less expenses and taxes paid	3,677 03
National Bank Notes outstanding	50,000 00
Due to other National Banks	2,667 62
Due to State and Private Banks and Bankers	1,518 55
Due to Trust companies and Savings Banks	243 16
Dividends unpaid	36 00
Individual deposits subject to check	229,001 58
Time certificates of deposit	11,210 93
Certified Checks	78 08
Cashier's checks outstanding	25 00
United States deposits	1,000 00
Total	$374,457 95

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, R. E. Sliger, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

R. E. SLIGER, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of July, 1910.

JAMES P. TREACY, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: F. A. THAYER,
E. H. SINCELL,
A. G. STURGISS,
Directors.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT FRIENDSVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, June 30, 1910.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$127,342 14
Overdrafts secured and unsecured		311 94
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		25,000 00
Premiums on U. S. Bonds		1,734 37
Bonds, securities, etc		63,997 60
Banking house, furniture and fixtures		6,098 51
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		1,359 98
Due from State Banks and Bankers		421 80
Due from approved reserve agents		15,745 44
Checks and other cash items		672 52
Notes of other National Bn'ks		105 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and cents		45 09
LAWFUL MONEY RESERVE IN BANK, VIZ:
Specie	$ 2,867 75
Legal-tendernotes	5,769 00	8,636 75
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. of circulation		1,250 00
Total		$252,721 14

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	26,000 00
Undivided profits less expenses and taxes paid	4,636 30
National Bank notes outstanding	25,000 00
Due to Trust Companies and Savings Banks	61 79
Individual deposits subject to check	63,125 87
Time certificates of deposit	108,897 18
Total	$252,721 14

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, Orval A. Welch, Cashier of the above bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 2nd day of July, 1910.

R. M. HOLMAN, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: W. W. SAVAGE,
WM. H. H. FRIEND,
L. E. FRIEND,
Directors.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have avariety of kinds and at any price.

TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S

FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

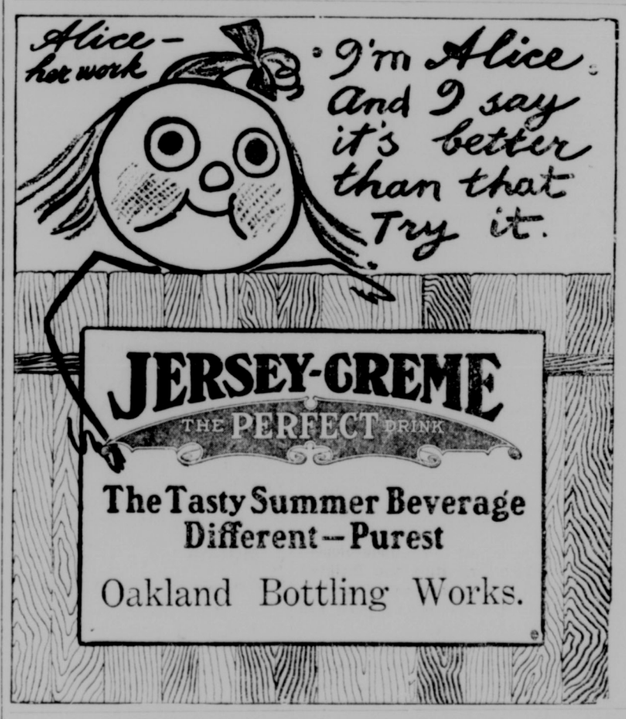
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Tax Department
LAST NOTICE

Oakland, Md., June 29, 1910.

All persons owing taxes for the years 1908 or 1909 will please make immediate payment. Kindly remit at once and save me the very unpleasant duty of advertising property as I must have money to meet claims now due.

Address W E HOLLINGER, Treasurer, Oakland, Md.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the new county road is to be located, said road commencing at or near the mouth of Crabtree Creek on Savage River by crossing said river from West to East side and passing through the lands of the Lonaconing Coal & Iron Company, Oss Brothers and others to intersect the County Road near Bloomington, a distance of about four and one-half miles, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of June, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said locating of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

P. F. MCANDREWS,
P. H. RODEHEAVER,
GEO. W. BROADWATER, } Examiners.

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt.

The dividend is at the rate of 2 13-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allow and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 26th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WHITFORD

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

"The quarrel, I believe," he persisted, "was about Mr. Armstrong's conduct to you, Miss Gertrude. He had been paying you unwelcome attentions."

And I had never seen the man!

When she nodded a "yes" I saw the tremendous possibilities involved. If this detective could prove that Gertrude feared and disliked the murdered man, and that Mr. Armstrong had been annoying and possibly pursuing her with hateful attentions, all that, added to Gertrude's confession of her presence in the billiard room at the time of the crime, looked strange, to say the least. The prominence of the family assured a strenuous effort to find the murderer, and if we had nothing worse to look forward to, we were sure of a distasteful publicity.

Mr. Jamieson shut his note-book with a snap and thanked us.

"I have an idea," he said, apropos of nothing at all, "that at any rate the ghost is laid here. Whatever the rappings have been—and the colored man says they began when the family went west three months ago—they are likely to stop now."

Which shows how much he knew about it. The ghost was not laid; with the murder of Arnold Armstrong he, or it, only seemed to take on fresh vigor.

Mr. Jamieson left then, and when Gertrude had gone upstairs, as she did at once, I sat and thought over what I had just heard. Her engagement, once so engrossing a matter, paled now beside the significance of her story. If Halsey and Jack Bailey had left before the crime, how came Halsey's revolver in the tulip bed? What was the mysterious cause of their sudden flight? What had Gertrude left in the billiard room? What was the significance of the cuff-link and where was it?

CHAPTER VI.

In the East Corridor.

When the detective left he enjoined absolute secrecy on everybody in the household. The Greenwood club promised the same thing, and as there are no Sunday afternoon papers, the murder was not publicly known until Monday. The coroner himself notified the Armstrong family lawyer, and early in the afternoon he came out. I had not seen Mr. Jamieson since morning, but I knew he had been interrogating the servants. Gertrude was locked in her room with a headache, and I had luncheon alone.

Mr. Harton, the lawyer, was a little, thin man, and he looked as if he did not relish his business that day.

"This is very unfortunate, Miss Innes," he said, after we had shaken hands. "Most unfortunate—and mysterious. With the father and mother in the west, I find everything devolves on me; and, as you can understand, it is an unpleasant duty."

"No doubt," I said absently. "Mr. Harton, I am going to ask you some questions, and I hope you will answer them. I feel that I am entitled to some knowledge, because I and my family are just now in a most ambiguous position."

I don't know whether he understood me or not; he took off his glasses and wiped them.

"I shall be very happy," he said with old-fashioned courtesy.

"Thank you. Mr Harton, did Mr. Arnold Armstrong know that Sunnyside had been rented?"

"I think—yes, he did. In fact, I myself told him about it."

"And he knew who the tenants were?"

"Yes."

"He had not been living with the family for some years, I believe?"

"No. Unfortunately, there had been trouble between Arnold and his father. For two years he had lived in town."

"Then it would be unlikely that he came here last night to get possession of anything belonging to him?"

"I should think it hardly possible," he admitted. "To be perfectly frank, Miss Innes, I can not think of any reason whatever for his coming here as he did. He had been staying at the club house across the valley for the last week, Jarvis tells me, but that only explains how he came here, not why. It is a most unfortunate family."

He shook his head despondently, and I felt that this dried-up little man was the repository of much that he had not told me. I gave up trying to elicit any information from him, and we went together to view the body before it was taken to the city. It had been lifted on to the billiard-table and a sheet thrown over it; otherwise nothing had been touched. A soft hat lay beside it, and the collar of the dinner-coat was still turned up. The handsome, dissipated face of Arnold Armstrong, purged of its ugly lines, was now only pathetic. As we went in Mrs. Watson appeared at the card-room door.

"Come in, Mrs. Watson," the lawyer said. But she shook her head and withdrew; she was the only one in the house who seemed to regret the dead man, and even she seemed rather shocked than sorry.

Before Mr. Harton left, he told me something of the Armstrong family. Paul Armstrong, the father, had been married twice. Arnold was a son by the first marriage. The second Mrs. Armstrong had been a widow, with a child, a little girl. This child, now perhaps 20, was Louise Armstrong, having taken her stepfather's name, and was at present in California with the family.

"They will probably return at once," he concluded, "and part of my errand here to-day is to see if you will relinquish your lease here in their favor."

"We would better wait and see if they wish to come," I said. "It seems unlikely, and my town house is being remodeled." At that he let the matter drop, but it came up unpleasantly enough, later.

At six o'clock the body was taken away, and at seven-thirty, after an early dinner, Mr. Harton went. Gertrude had not come down, and there was no news of Halsey. Mr. Jamieson had taken a lodging in the village, and I had not seen him since mid-afternoon. It was about nine o'clock, I think, when the bell rang and he was ushered into the living room.

"Sit down," I said grimly. "Have you found a clew that will incriminate me, Mr. Jamieson?"

He had the grace to look uncomfortable. "No," he said. "If you had killed Mr. Armstrong, you would have left no clews. You would have had too much intelligence."

After that we got along better. He was fishing in his pocket, and after a minute he brought out two scraps of paper. "I have been to the clubhouse," he said, "and among Mr. Armstrong's effects, I found these. One is curious; the other is puzzling."

The first was a sheet of club notepaper on which was written, over and over, the name "Halsey B. Innes." It was Halsey's flowing signature to a dot, but it lacked Halsey's ease. The ones toward the bottom of the sheet were much better than the top ones. Mr. Jamieson smiled at my face.

"His old tricks," he said. "That one is merely curious; this one, as I said before, is puzzling."

The second scrap, folded and refolded into a compass so tiny that the writing had been partly obliterated, was part of a letter—the lower half of a sheet, not typed, but written in a cramped hand.

——by altering the plans for——rooms, may be possible. The best way, in my opinion would be to——the play for——in one of the——rooms——chimney.

That was all.

"Well?" I said, looking up. "There is nothing in that, is there? A man ought to be able to change the plan of his house without becoming an object of suspicion."

"There is little in the paper itself," he admitted; "but why should Arnold Armstrong carry that around, unless it meant something? He never built a house, you may be sure of that. If it is this house, it may mean anything from a secret room—"

"To an extra bathroom," I said scornfully. "Haven't you a thumb-print, too?"

"I have," he said with a smile, "and the print of a foot in a tulip bed, and a number of other things. The oddest part is, Miss Innes, that the thumb-mark is probably yours and the footprint certainly."

His audacity was the only thing that saved me; his amused smile put me on my mettle, and I ripped out a perfectly good scallop before I answered.

"Why did I step into the tulip bed?" I asked with interest.

"You picked up something," he said good-humoredly, "which you are going to tell me about later."

"Am I, indeed?" I was politely curious. "With this remarkable insight of yours, I wish you would tell me where I shall find my four-thousand-dollar motorcar."

"I was just coming to that," he said. "You will find it about 30 miles away, at Andrews Station, in a blacksmith shop, where it is being repaired."

I laid down my knitting then and looked at him.

"And Halsey?" I managed to say.

"We are going to exchange information," he said. "I am going to tell you that, when you tell me what you picked up in the tulip bed."

We looked steadily at each other; it was not an unfriendly stare; we were only measuring weapons. Then he smiled a little and got up.

"With your permission," he said, "I am going to examine the card room and the staircase again. You might think over my offer in the meantime."

He went on through the drawing room, and I listened to his footsteps growing gradually fainter. I dropped my pretence at knitting and, leaning back, I thought over the last 48 hours. Here was I, Rachel Innes, spinster, a granddaughter of old John Innes of revolutionary days, a D. A. R., a Colonial Dame, mixed up with a vulgar and revolting crime, and even attempting to hoodwink the law! Certainly I had left the straight and narrow way.

I was roused by hearing Mr. Jamieson coming rapidly back through the drawing room. He stopped at the door.

"Miss Innes," he said quickly, "will you come with me and light the east corridor? I have fastened somebody in the small room at the head of the card room stairs."

I jumped up at once.

"You mean—the murderer?" I gasped.

"Possibly," he said quietly, as we hurried together up the stairs. "Some one was lurking on the staircase when I went back. I spoke; instead of an answer, whoever it was turned and ran up. I followed—it was dark—but as I turned the corner at the top a figure darted through this door and closed it. The bolt was on my side, and I pushed it forward. It is a closet, I think." We were in the upper hall now. "If you will show me the electric switch, Miss Innes, you would better wait in your own room."

"The Quarrel, I Believe."

Trembling as I was, I was determined to see that door opened. I hardly knew what I feared, but so many terrible and inexplicable things had happened that suspense was worse than certainty.

"I am perfectly cool," I said, "and I am going to remain here."

The lights flashed up along that end of the corridor, throwing the doors into relief. At the intersection of the small hallway with the larger, the circular staircase wound its way up, as if it had been an afterthought of the architect. And just around the corner, in the small corridor, was the door Mr. Jamieson had indicated. I was still unfamiliar with the house, and I did not remember the door. My heart was thumping wildly in my ears, but I nodded to him to go ahead. I was perhaps eight or ten feet away—and then he threw the bolt back.

"Come out," he said quietly. There was no response. "Come—out," he repeated. Then—I think he had a revolver, but I am not sure—he stepped aside and threw the door open.

From where I stood I could not see beyond the door, but I saw Mr. Jamieson's face change and heard him mutter something, then he bolted down the stairs, three at a time. When my knees had stopped shaking, I moved forward, slowly, nervously, until I had a partial view of what was beyond the door. It seemed at first to be a closet, empty. Then I went close and examined it, to stop with a shudder. Where the floor should have been was black void and darkness, from which came the indescribable damp smell of the cellars.

Mr. Jamieson had locked somebody in the clothes chute. As I leaned over I fancied I heard a groan—or was it the wind?

CHAPTER VII.

A Sprained Ankle.

I was panic-stricken. As I ran along the corridor I was confident that the mysterious intruder and probable murderer had been found, and that he lay dead or dying at the foot of the chute. I got down the staircase somehow, and through the kitchen to the basement stairs. Mr. Jamieson had been before me, and the door stood open. Liddy was standing in the middle of the kitchen holding a frying pan by the handle as a weapon.

"Don't go down there," she yelled, when she saw me moving toward the basement sairs. "Don't you do it, Miss Rachel. That Jamieson's down there now. There's only trouble comes of hunting ghosts; they lead you into bottomless pits and things like that. Oh, Miss Rachel, don't—" as I tried to get past her.

She was interrupted by Mr. Jamieson's reappearance. He ran up the stairs two at a time, and his face was flushed and furious.

"The whole place is locked," he said angrily. "Where's the laundry key kept?"

"It's kept in the door," Liddy snapped. "That whole end of the cellar is kept locked, so nobody can get at the clothes, and then the key's left in the door, so that unless a thief was as blind as—as some detectives, he could walk right in."

Bolted Down Stairs, Three at a Time.

"Liddy," I said sharply, "come down with us and turn on all the lights."

She offered her resignation, as usual, on the spot, but I took her by the arm, and she came along finally. She switched on all the lights and pointed to a door just ahead.

"That's the door," she said sulkily. "The key's in it."

But the key was not in it. Mr. Jamieson shook it, but it was a heavy door, well locked. And then he stooped and began punching around the keyhole with the end of a lead pencil. When he stood up his face was exultant.

"It's locked on the inside," he said in a low tone. "There is somebody in there."

"Lord have mercy!" gasped Liddy, and turned to run.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Where It Goes.

"That man made an immense fortune out of a simple little invention." "Indeed! What did he invent?" "Invent? Nothing, you dub! He was the promoter!"

BEYOND POWER OF MAN.

Gayboye—Men are no good, eh? Wasn't it man that made us smokeless powder, horseless carriages and wireless telegraphy, eh?

Mrs. Gayboye—Yes, and I'd think more of man if he'd make you smoke less tobacco, drink less wine and spend spend less money!

IN A SERIOUS CONDITION.

A Case of Terrible Kidney Trouble.

Henry Palmer, Cole and Walnut Sts., Barnesville, O., says: "My kidney trouble was caused by hardships and exposure in the army. The awful pains across my back gradually became more severe until I was in constant misery. My feet and hands were swollen to twice their natural size. The kidney secretions were in a terrible condition—for months I voided what seemed to be clear blood. I became so dizzy everything seemed to whirl. My condition was alarming when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Before long I improved and was soon strong and well."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Barberous Humor.

Barber—How would you like your hair cut, sir?

Stude—Fine. Do you think I came in here to discuss the tariff?

Not Transferable.

Miss A. had on a skirt of delicate fawn color, which the others coveted.

"Do bequeath that skirt to me, Miss A.," said one friend; "it matches a waist of mine exactly."

"I don't see what you want of this old skirt," Miss A. replied. "It's on its last legs now."—Success Magazine.

Conditional Piety.

Two Scotch fishermen, James and Sandy, belated and befogged on a rough water, were in some trepidation lest they should never get ashore again. At last Jamie said:

"Sandy, I'm steering, and I think you'd better put up a bit of prayer."

"I don't know how," said Sandy.

"If ye don't I'll chuck ye overboard," said Jamie.

Sandy began: "Oh, Lord, I never asked anything of ye for fifteen years, and if ye'll only get us safe back, I'll never trouble ye again, and—"

"Whist, Sandy," said Jamie. "The boat's touched shore; don't be beholden to anybody."—Short Stories.

Didn't Know the Purpose.

Mark Twain, as an example of unconscious humor, used to quote a Hartford woman who said one day in the late spring:

"My husband is the dearest fellow. 'Jim,' I said to him this morning, 'are you very hard up just now?'

"'I certainly am hard up,' he replied soberly. 'This high cost of living is terrible. I don't know what I'm going to do.'

"'Then, Jim,' said I, 'I'll give up all thought of going to the country for July and August this year.'

"But the dear fellow's face changed, and he said:

"'Indeed, then, you won't, darling. I thought you wanted to buy a hat with an aigrette or some such foolishness. No, no, my darling—Jim can always find the money to let his dear little wife go to the country.'"

A DETERMINED WOMAN

Finally Found a Food That Cured Her.

"When I first read of the remarkable effects of Grape-Nuts food, I determined to secure some," says a woman in Salisbury, Mo. "At that time there was none kept in this town, but my husband ordered some from a Chicago traveler.

"I had been greatly afflicted with sudden attacks of cramps, nausea, and vomiting. Tried all sorts of remedies and physicians, but obtained only temporary relief. As soon as I began to use the new food the cramps disappeared and have never returned.

"My old attacks of sick stomach were a little slower to yield, but by continuing the food, that trouble has disappeared entirely. I am today perfectly well, can eat anything and everything I wish, without paying the penalty that I used to. We would not keep house without Grape-Nuts.

"My husband was so delighted with the benefits I received that he has been recommending Grape-Nuts to his customers and has built up a very large trade on the food. He sells them by the case to many of the leading physicians of the county, who recommend Grape-Nuts very generally. There is some satisfaction in using a really scientifically prepared food."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

To Make Table Cloths Last.

Table linen is expensive. It costs more today than it did five years ago. When it begins to wear in holes, to come from the wash with worn spots that tell how soon it will be no good, no wonder the housewife despairs. Cheap, common soaps full of caustics that eat the linen are greatly to blame. Easy Task laundry soap is an enemy to dirt and stains and a friend to the table linen. Get two five cent cakes; try it, and if it does not surprise and satisfy you the makers will return your money.

Honored by the Governor.

Effusive compliments have been paid to Governor Marshall many times, but it remained for an old Irish woman to cap the climax.

The governor met her at a funeral which he attended the other day and she was full of reverence for the Indiana executive.

"Ah," she said, "an' 'tis the guv'nor," and she swallowed up the governor's slim right hand in her own right hand, made large and muscular by many days of toil. "Yis, 'tis the guv'nor, an' it's glad I am to see ye, guv'nor, an' indade the corpse is honored by your prisince."—Indianapolis News.

How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligations made by his firm.

WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN,
Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Similarity.

Eva—Then you are not fond of pressed flowers?

Jack—No, they always remind me of a kiss through a telephone.

Eva—Gracious! In what way?

Jack—They have lost their sweetness.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Not a Musician.

"What is a man called who plays on a saxophone?"

"You mean what does he call himself or what do his hearers call him?"

PERRY DAVIS' PAINKILLER

Is the best, safest and surest remedy for cramps, colic and diarrhea. As a liniment for wounds and sprains it is unequalled. 25c, 35c and 65c.

It is quite useless expecting to find perfection when we do so little to promote it ourselves.—Royston.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM
FOR BRIGHT'S DISEASE
FOR BACKACHE FOR DIABETES.

NUMBER 375 "Guaranteed"

WESTERN CANADA

What J. J. Hill, the Great Railroad Magnate, Says About its Wheat-Producing Power:

"The greatest need of this country [United States] in another generation or two will be the providing of homes for its people and producing sufficient for them. The days of our prominence as a wheat exporting country are gone. Canada is to be the great wheat country."

This great railroad magnate is taking advantage of the situation by extensive railway building to the wheat fields of Western Canada.

Upwards of 125 Million Bushels of Wheat were harvested in 1909. Average of the three provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba will be upwards of 23 bushels per acre.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3 per acre, are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured; mixed farming a success. Write as to best place for settlement, settlers' low railway rates, descriptive illustrated "Last Best West" sent free on application, and other information, to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to the Canadian Government Agent.

H. M. WILLIAMS
Law Building Toledo, Ohio

(Use address nearest you). (6)

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.

Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.

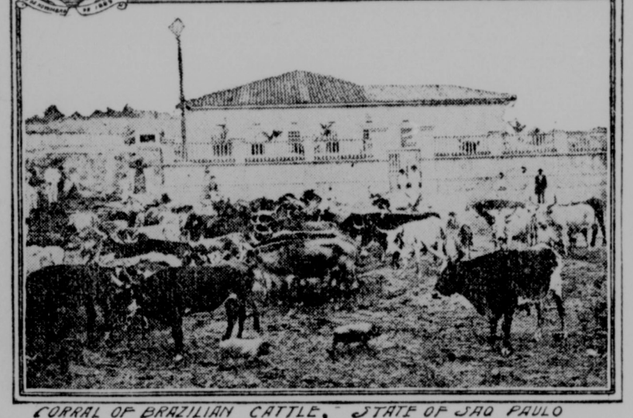
PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.

A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

EMPIRE STATE OF BRAZIL



CORRAL OF BRAZILIAN CATTLE, STATE OF SAO PAULO

Washington.—Fully four and a half out of every five pounds of coffee drunk in the United States comes from Brazil, and the proportion is growing steadily higher, principally because the Brazilian bean is of a superior quality and flavor. The generality of coffee drinkers have a hazy idea that "Mocha" and "Java" enter largely into the morning beverage, but it is a fact that all the Mocha and Java that reach this country in a year would not supply St. Louis for six months.

It is generally known and understood that the greater proportion of fine Brazilian coffee comes from the state of Sao Paulo in that country, and the statement that Sao Paulo, the richest state in the Brazilian Union, is "one vast coffee estate" has been made so frequently that the general impression has gone abroad that little else but coffee is produced in the state. It is true that Sao Paulo alone, last year, produced 1,716,000,000 pounds of coffee that had a value of $140,000,000, and that this vast aggregate found its way outward through the greatest coffee port in the world, Santos; but it is also true that Sao Paulo has a host of other industries that are developing at a rate that is astonishing. It is in Sao Paulo that the great wheat growing concessions have been granted; it is from Sao Paulo that the enormous shipments to Europe of live cattle will be made; it is Sao Paulo that now maintains three hundred factories engaged in a truly remarkable array of industries. These factories alone represent an investment of over $40,000,000 and are employing 50,000 workmen.

It is true that coffee is the staple, but these factories are turning out cotton and woolen fabrics; they are making rope, twines and papers. There are breweries, marble quarries, metal industries of various natures; vast estates that are devoted to the culture of rice, and square miles of territory that produce enormous quantities of fruits that are shipped in all directions. Sao Paulo has gone extensively into grape culture, and is turning out wines that are becoming vastly popular in several countries Agriculture of a general nature has engaged the attention of the residents of the state to a greater degree in the last few years, and as a consequence the railways are extending in every direction throughout the state. As an indication of the volume of business transacter through the port of Santos it last year reached a grand total of five and a half million tons, which compares very favorably with the trade of Rio de Janeiro or Buenos Ayres, the two largest South American ports.

In great measure this progress is due to the far-sighted and patriotic efforts of those statesmen who have directed the destinies of the state, and it has been recently stated by a South American historian that the history of the State of Sao Paulo was the history of all Brazil.

HONOR RESTED WITH AUTHOR

How the Late Popular Writer, O. Henry, Outwitted Unscrupulous Editor.

A friend of the late O. Henry writes of him: "He was reckless in spending money, and frequently gave elevator boys and bellboys $5 and $10 notes. But he wasn't 'easy,' despite his financial regardlessness. His friends narrated an incident showing the man's shrewdness. A magazine noted for 'slow pay,' they say, contracted with him for a three-part story, for which he was to receive fifteen hundred dollars. He got a five hundred dollar advance before starting to work, and when he turned in the second installment (none of it had been printed yet) got five hundred dollars more, and asked for the third five hundred dollars as an advance before finishing the tale. The editor, in an effort to save money, apparently, declared that, after all, the story didn't appear to be worth more than one thousand dollars—this when he had the two installments in his office. 'All right,' said O. Henry. 'I won't write the third one then.' And he didn't. He laughed at the editor. 'Well then,' said the latter, 'I'll run the two parts and then let our readers have a guessing contest as to how the story ends—and put up, perhaps, a five hundred prize to the winner.' For a moment the author thought he was outwitted. Then he said: 'Go ahead—and I'll win the prize.' He intended to win it, too."

An Office Business Only.

A young man called at the office of a justice of the peace and with some hesitation made known his business, which was to be married. The justice replied that he thought he could perform the service, and asked if the young man had his license.

"Yes, sir," the youth replied.

"Well, where is the young lady?"

"She—she's at her father's."

"Well, bring her here."

"She'd rather be married at home, squire."

"And you expect me to go there and marry you?"

"Yes, sir, if you please."

"Young man," said the justice, "this office of mine is like a department store. We sell matches here, but we don't deliver them at the house."—Youth'sCompanion.

Slightly Confused.

Marie was making her first visit to the beach. She was fearless of the water, and spent as much of her time in bathing as she was allowed. One morning there was an unusually strong undertow, and many of the bathers spoke of it. Marie, hearing them, stowed away the new phrase in her mind.

When she came in from her bath, she told how fine the water was, and told of the fun she had had. Then, assuming her grown-up manner, she remarked: "Oh, but the undertaker was strong this morning!"

His Real Calling.

There is a writer in New York who has achieved little success, but who, being amply supplied with worldly goods, refuses to be discouraged. So he keeps turning out books the merits of which he earnestly attests by word of mouth and heavy purchases from the publishers. He is a long time friend of Simeon Ford, boniface, wit and philosopher. That Mr. Ford is the only one who ever read all of his friend's books probably furnishes a reason why the attentuated hotel man is one of the most solemn looking of humans.

They were at dinner recently when the author said: "Sim, you've been awfully kind to me—you are my real audience, for you've suffered like a friend and read all I have written. Sometimes I think that I have made a great mistake and I am not really an author after all."

"I think you're right," assented Mr. Ford. "You're a born chemist."

"How's that?" suspiciously asked the author.

"Well," remarked Simeon, "every book you write becomes a drug on the market."

Putting It Up to Uncle.

Henry G. Brooks, the well-known New York lawyer, talking about domestic troubles, has had his share of the servant problem, though he won't admit it. However, he is frank enough to tell one on himself, as he did recently at the Waldorf-Astoria.

"We have a mighty good girl who got word that her uncle was very ill. She asked to be allowed to go away for a few days and go to the funeral. After a week had passed we commenced to get nervous. So a note was sent to her inquiring when she would be able to return and how her uncle was.

"We got a reply something like this: "'Dear Sir: I will be back as soon as possible. Uncle is getting weaker and weaker. Ma has told him I can't stay here much longer, and I know he don't want me to lose my job.'"

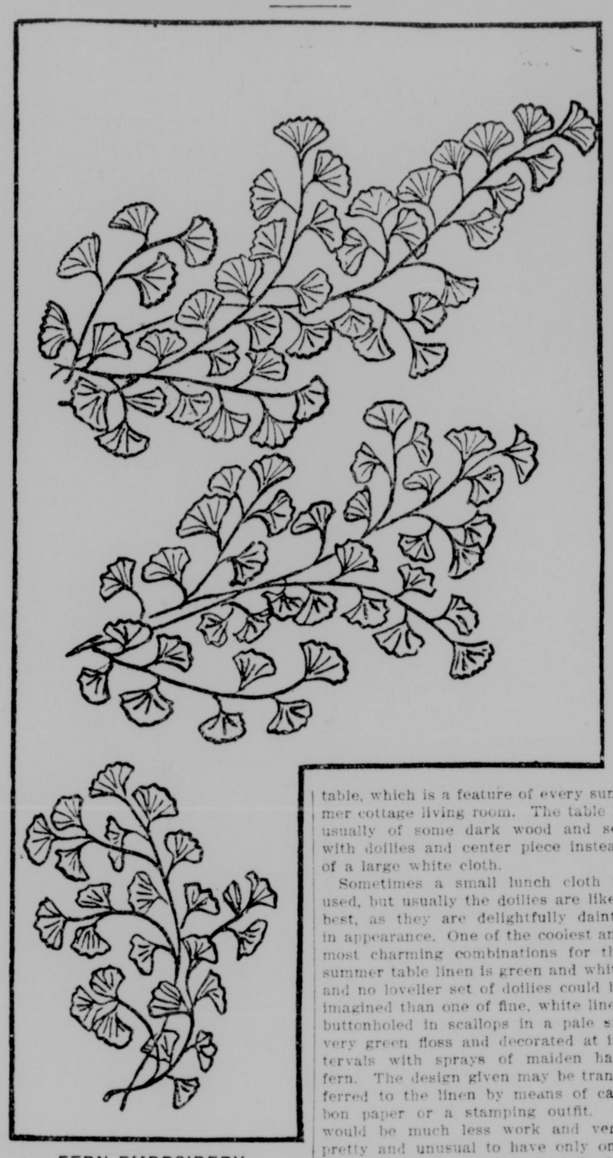
Adornment.

To adorn ourselves seems to be a part of our nature, and this desire seems to be everywhere and in everything. I have sometimes thought that the desire for beauty covers the earth with flowers, paints the wings of moths, tints the chamber of the shell and gives the bird its plumage and its song. O, daughters and wives, if you would be loved, adorn yourselves; if you would be adored, be beautiful.—Robert G. Ingersoll.

Vanity of Life.

How small a portion of our life it is that we really enjoy. In youth we are looking forward to things that are to come. In old age we are looking backward to things that are gone past; in manhood, although we appear indeed to be more occupied in things that are present, even that is too often absorbed in vague determination to be vastly happy on some future day when we have time.

In Maiden Hair Fern



FERN EMBROIDERY.

One of the Prettiest Summer Decorations for the Vacation Season Table Linen.

In nearly every summer home the living room is used as dining-room, the meals being served on the center table, which is a feature of every summer cottage living room. The table is usually of some dark wood and set with doilies and center piece instead of a large white cloth.

Sometimes a small lunch cloth is used, but usually the doilies are liked best, as they are delightfully dainty in appearance. One of the coolest and most charming combinations for the summer table linen is green and white and no lovelier set of doilies could be imagined than one of fine, white linen buttonholed in scallops in a pale silvery green floss and decorated at intervals with sprays of maiden hair fern. The design given may be transferred to the linen by means of carbon paper or a stamping outfit. It would be much less work and very pretty and unusual to have only one spray of the fern on each doily instead of several, as very simple things are best in the summer. Three sprays of fern are given, one large one for the plate and tumbler doilies.

To embroider the fern use wash silks of different shades of green. Embroider in long-and-short stitch and Kensington outline for the stems.

NEAT IDEAS IN TUB DRESS

Costumes That Will Be Just the Thing When the Really Warm Weather Is With Us.

The first costume is in old blue linen; three tucks are made at the side of both skirt and bodice, the latter has one wide tuck standing out over the shoulder. Buttons in sets of four trim both bodice and skirt. The cuffs are tucked all over, so is the collar band.

Straw hat turned up at the side and trimmed with large flowers.

Materials required: 7 yards 42 inches wide, 3½ dozen buttons.

The other design, although made in linen for summer wear, is a style that may be reproduced just as well in any firm woolen material

The color of our model is sky blue; in style, it is a semi-princess, the front forming a panel.

The skirt is trimmed with a band of wide broderie anglaise, from under which the linen is cut away. The yoke is of piece embroidery, and is outlined with a fold of darker blue linen under the edge. The oblong pieces of embroidery form a further trimming.

Hat of pale blue fancy straw trimmed with a feather mount.

Materials required: 7 yards 40 inches wide, 3 yards wide embroidery, ½ yard piece embroidery for yoke, 1½ yards narrower insertion.

Strawberry Face Lotion.

A good vegetable lotion to soften and whiten the skin is made by hulling a quart of strawberries, mashing them through a sieve, then adding two tablespoonfuls of strong vinegar to each quart of berries. Let it stand until it draws plenty of juice and strain through a fine muslin. Bottle tightly and keep in a cool place.

FANCIES OF FASHION

Tucking is used a great deal on the summer gowns.

Swiss fabrics are often worn with a colored slip.

This season one finds entire coats and wraps of cretonne.

The elastic belts, in different widths, are more popular than ever.

Coarse Russian braid is used a great deal for trimming coats and capes.

The chanteeler is found embroidered on the instep of the latest silk hosiery.

The tiniest of roses are used for trimming caps of muslin or lace for the baby.

The shoulder seam on the new shirt waists is much longer than that of last season.

Lingerie embroidered with the all-pervading chantecler is one of the fads of the hour.

Many of the summer coats have long revers that cross and button below the waist line.

A box-plaited quilling of net is the finish at the wrist of a pretty sleeve seen recently.

Ribs of brass as well as of gilt and white enamel are seen in some of the summer sunshades.

Separate blouses of black net with lace insertion are worn over an underblouse of white.

Going-away Coats.

An enterprising English dressmaker fills in her spare time making "going-away coats" for little dogs. This would indicate that the American belle, who carries in her arms the small mite of a dog is not the only foolish woman in existence.

It is said that these little coats are fashioned of velvet or cloth to match the bride's traveling gown, but to the practical they suggest only those very wonderful blankets we made in our little-girl days for brother's wooden horse.

Pockets, we are told, for the handkerchief and for four gutta-percha shoes for doggie finish the coat.

Cold Water Only.

When the kitchen wall is darker than it should be and you strongly suspect that part of the general grayness is soot, there is a ready remedy in cold water, provided the wall be painted or covered with enameled paper.

The paper should first be dusted down with a feather or a clean cloth wrung out of cold water until clean. Do not use warm water, as it is likely to turn the paper yellow. Be sure to rinse the cloth as it gets dirty and also to change the water frequently if you would secure the best results.

A LITTLE AFRAID OF IT.

Tickson Klicks—Give you a tip, the matrimonial bonds are pretty good!

Oldebatch—Not for me, Klicks. I'm not doing anything in speculation.

A Protection Against the Heat.

When you begin to think it's a personal matter between you and the sun to see which is the hotter, buy yourself a glass or a bottle of Coca-Cola. It is cooling—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Wholesome as the purest water and lots nicer to drink. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Send 2c stamp for booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" and the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910. The latter contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues, and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. Address The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Wrong Diagnosis.

A drummer was taken ill suddenly. He went to see a physician of considerable standing, and the following conversation ensued: "I feel very sick," declared the drummer. "What's the trouble?" asked the physician. "Severe pain in my side." "Humph," said the doctor slowly, "I think you have appendicitis." "You have made a mistake, doctor," replied the salesman. "I'm not a millionaire, just a plain drummer." "Well, I guess you just have the cramps, then," replied the indignant personage. "Five dollars, please."

Thomas Hood's Oversight.

Thomas Hood gave to literature the undying "Song of the Shirt," but he might have written an even sadder song, that of the washtub. Easy Task laundry soap was unknown in his day. It is only for the last quarter century that it has been relieving women of backaches and bruised hands. It takes the dirt out of or off of anything—actually does most of the work itself. Your grocer has it.

According to Her Count.

"Yes," said the young wife; "Philip and I have lived together a whole year, and we've never had the slightest quarrel."

"What are you talking about! You and Philip were married seven years ago!"

"To be sure we were, but you forget that he's a traveling salesman."

There is a conscience of the head as well as of the heart, and in old age we feel as much remorse if we have wasted our natural virtues.—Lord Lytton.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

What can harm us if we are true to ourselves and do what we think is right?—Black.

YOUR BACKACHE WILL YIELD

To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Bloomdale, Ohio.—"I suffered from terrible headaches, pains in my back and right side, and was tired all the time and nervous. I could not sleep, and every month I could hardly stand the pain. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health again and made me feel like a new woman. I hope this letter will induce other women to avail themselves of this valuable medicine."—Mrs. E. M. Frederick, Bloomdale, Ohio.

Backache is a symptom of female weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so safely and surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Cure the cause of these distressing aches and pains and you will become well and strong.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has restored health to thousands of women.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

Make the Liver Do its Duty

Nine times in ten when the liver is right the stomach and bowels are right.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS gently but firmly compel a lazy liver to do its duty.

Cures Constipation, Indigestion, Sick Headache, and Distress after Eating.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

LAMENESS from a Bone Spavin, Ring Bone, Splint, Curb, Side Bone or similar trouble can be stopped with

ABSORBINE

Full directions in pamphlet with each bottle. Does not blister or remove the hair, and horse can be worked. $2.00 a bottle. Horse Book 9 E free.

ABSORBINE, JR., for mankind, $1 and $2 a bottle. Removes Painful Swellings, Enlarged Glands, Goitre, Wens, Bruises, Varicose Veins, Varicosities, Old Sores, Allays Pain. Your druggist can supply and give references. Will tell you more if you write. Manufactured only by W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

JUST THE PLACE you are looking for—an irrigated farm in the Sacramento Valley, Cal. Write today for free information. Fruit, poultry, hogs, alfalfa. Ideal climate. Easy terms. H. L. HOLLISTER & CO., 205 LaSalle St., Chicago

Asthma and HAY FEVER CURE sent by express to you on Free Trial. If it cures send $2. If not, don't. Give express office. Do it now. NATIONAL CHEMICAL CO. 407 Ohio Avenue, Sidney, Ohio.

Be Wise in Time —

You cannot keep well unless the bowels are regular. Neglect of this rule of health invites half the sicknesses from which we suffer. Keep the bowels right; otherwise waste matter and poisons which should pass out of the body, find their way into the blood and sicken the whole system. Don't wait until the bowels are constipated; take

BEECHAM'S PILLS

They are the finest natural laxative in the world—gentle, safe, prompt and thorough. They strengthen the stomach muscles, and will not injure the delicate mucous lining of the bowels. Beecham's Pills have a constitutional action. That is, the longer you take them, the less frequently you need them. They help Nature help herself and

Keep the Bowels Healthy Bile Active & Stomach Well

In Boxes 10c. and 25c. with full directions

THE FIRST APPLICATION OF

ITCHING ERYSIPELAS NETTLE RASH POISON IVY EOZEMA SCALDS

RESINOL

CHAFING ABRASIONS RING WORM ERUPTIONS HERPES BURNS

in itching and irritable conditions of the skin produces a feeling of comfort to the sufferer never before experienced. It is the recognized specific for itching piles and the standard remedy in eczema. 50 cents a jar all druggists, or sent direct on receipt of price.

RESINOL CHEMICAL COMPANY, BALTIMORE, MD.

As an application for Eczema, Burns and Scalds, I consider Resinol Ointment better than anything else. Mrs. George H. Brash, Beatrice, Neb.

DEFIANCE COLLEGE DEFIANCE OHIO

A real college of the highest grade. A college that gives you standing in the educational world, with the great Universities, Public School Men, School Boards, etc. Graduates in demand.

DEPARTMENTS

Collegiate, Academic, Teachers', Manual Training, Engineering, Commercial, Music, Art, Elocution and Domestic Science.

EXPENSES

Board, $1.75 per week; Room rent, 75c to $1.00 per week, including the light and heat; Tuition and regular incidentals, $18.00 for the full year.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

Three Men and Two Women Whom Jesus Loved.

Text, "Lord, He Whom Thou Lovest Is Sick."

Chicago, June 26.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle preached here twice today in Orchestra Hall. As usual he had a large and attentive audience. We quote one of his discourses in part as follows:

All men who have any knowledge of Jesus esteem him—Christians, Gentiles, and Jews. All men whatever their religious convictions are ready to admit the surpassing personality of the great Nazarene and his wonderful words of life. It is as respects his Messiahship that they differ. However, we submit that if he were not the special servant of Jehovah, the Son of God, as he claimed, sent into the world on a special mission, then he must of necessity have been either a deceived man or a wicked impostor. His wonderful personality and words of justice and wisdom and love contradict the thought that he was either ignorant or a deceiver. Hence the only tenable ground is that he was a deceived man or else that he was indeed the Son of God who acted and spoke and performed miracles under Divine direction and power. We hold that the evidences of his teaching overwhelmingly corroborate the truth of his claims. But here we make a distinction between the claims which our Lord Jesus made for himself and other claims which have been made for him without his sanction and without apostolic or other inspired corroboration.

Let it not be supposed that we are forgetting the length and breadth of Jesus' love for all humanity and a special love for all of his disciples, yea, for all who loved righteousness and sought, as he did, to do the Father's will. In keeping with this was his prayer for his disciples on the night before his crucifixion, in connection with which we read, "Jesus having loved his own, loved them unto the end" (John xiii, 1). And again his statement "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" (John xv, 13). And again his statement, "Who is my mother, and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand to his disciples, and said, Behold my mother, and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in Heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother" (Matthew xiii, 48-50). These expressions give us a glimpse of the length and breadth of the love of Jesus. But for the present occasion let us consider those persons whom Jesus is said to have specially loved.

"Jesus Beholding Him Loved Him."

The rich young nobleman who came to the Lord said, Rabbi, what good thing shall I do that I may inherit the Kingdom of God? Jesus saith unto him, Thou knowest the commandments . . . and he said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth. Then Jesus beholding him, loved him. Jesus lovingly admired the young man who was thus desirous of being in full accord with the Heavenly Father's will. That young man had very much of the Master's own spirit. He wanted to do right and he desired to have the gift of God, eternal life. He thought that he must have merited this by his faithful attention to the Law. Yet he knew that he had not attained to eternal life, that the death sentence was still upon him. He sought counsel of the greatest Rabbi, the greatest Teacher. That Teacher loved so earnest a spirit and proffered him advice on what he still lacked of coming fully up to God's requirements of those who will be granted a place in the Messianic Kingdom, which in "due time" is to bless Israel and, through Israel, all the families of the earth.

In no uncertain terms the Master gave the young man to see that while he had been keeping, probably to the best of his ability, the commandments of the decalogue, he had only imperfectly discerned the meaning of the Divine requirement of love for his neighbor as for himself. The young man was very rich. And to fulfil the requirements of the Law to love his neighbor as himself would have meant not the hoarding of wealth, nor necessarily the distribution of it all, but the wise use of it in the interest of his fellowmen. But to gain a share in the Kingdom would require even more than this. He must take up his cross and become a follower of Jesus—walking in the steps of full obedience to the Divine will. The price was too much for the young man, and he went his way. Jesus merely answered the question but did not urge the young man to thus present himself a living sacrifice to God and his service. Indeed in no case did Jesus ever do more than invite—never did he urge. On the contrary he advised, Sit down first and count the cost of discipleship.

What could we surmise respecting the eternal destiny of this young man who had been striving so earnestly to keep the Law and to gain eternal life, and who turned from Jesus and declined to take up the cross and follow him? Could we suppose that Divine Justice would send such a man to eternal torment under these conditions? If there were such a penalty over him could we suppose that Jesus would have allowed him to go without urging him strenuously, without at least warning him, that by his course he was making the choice of eternal torment? Can we suppose that our Master knew that all the people whom he addressed and who failed to accept his message would be consequently consigned to eternal torture, and that he let them go without urging the matter upon them? We could not so think! Thank God we are gradually getting free from the bondage of error fastened upon us by those who mistranslated certain words in our Bible.

We get the proper view when we remember that Jesus' message at that time was "The Gospel of the Kingdom." He was merely inviting whoever might have the ear to hear and the heart to appreciate the privilege to become associated with himself in the glorious Kingdom for which he told his disciples to pray, "Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." What the rich young man lost was the special privilege of becoming a joint-heir with Christ in that Kingdom which, in due time, will be established and whose mission will be the blessing of Israel and the world. It will bring to them "times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began" Acts iii, 19-21.)

"He Whom Thou Lovest Is Sick."

Our text stands related to a very wonderful chapter in our Lord's ministry. Jesus with his disciples was about three days' journey from Bethany, the home of Lazarus, Martha and Mary. But they knew his whereabouts, for he was a special friend and their home was his home whenever he was near Jerusalem. Lazarus took seriously ill. But the two sisters, Martha and Mary, feared nothing, since they had such great confidence in Jesus, even to belief in his ability to awaken sleepers from death. They thought it proper to send the Master word respecting Lazarus, but not proper to dictate to him what should be done in the case. Rather they left to himself to decide whether he should speak the word and rebuke the disease or whether he should come to Bethany and take the sick by the hand and say, Arise. The simple message they sent was, "Lord, he whom thou lovest is sick." The beautiful, childlike, simple faith which they exhibited must have been very precious in the Master's sight. Nevertheless Jesus said nothing, and did nothing in the matter for three days. Then he said to his disciples, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth." They did not grasp his meaning until he said to them plainly, Lazarus is dead; and I am glad for your sakes that I was not there. I am glad because it will give me an opportunity to demonstrate to you and through you to all who shall be my disciples in the future the great power of God that is vested in me in respect to the resurrection of the dead.

All Bible Students surely have noticed how frequently in the Scriptures the word "sleep" is used as a poetical synonym for death. "Abraham slept with his fathers." "David slept with his fathers." Prophets, priests and kings are said to have slept with their fathers, whether good or bad. Likewise the New Testament uses the same figure of speech. We read that St. Stephen the martyr, stoned to death, "fell asleep." St. Paul speaks of the Church as falling asleep in death and refers to all of our friends, good and bad, who go down into death, as being "asleep in Jesus." He tells us that we need not sorrow for them as others who know not the resurrection hope. All who fall asleep in death because of Adam's transgression and its death sentence have in Jesus a Divinely appointed Redeemer who in God's due time is to awaken all the sleeping hosts of Adam's race. "All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and come forth." They that have done good (who have secured Divine approval as worthy of eternal life) shall come forth unto the resurrection of life [full perfection]; and they that have done evil [that have not secured the Divine approval as being worthy of eternal life] shall come forth in the resurrection for judgment (John v, 28, 29) or trial, for discipline, for correction in righteousness during Messiah's reign of 1,000 years.

Coming forth in that judgment time or trial time, all the willing and obedient will eventually be lifted out of sin and death, while those disobedient to the light and opportunity will be again consigned to death—Second Death, everlasting extinction (John v, 28, 29, R. V.).

We have read our Bibles too carelessly in the past and have given too much heed to those who, with less opportunities than ourselves, grossly misinterpreted its teachings. What did we think respecting this word "sleep" anyway? Did we suppose that both the good and the bad "sleep" in heaven? We were told that the bad would go to a place too warm for sleep. But our own brains and our own Bibles we never thought of using in connection with the subject. Now, when we hearken to the Word of God, how plain, how simple, how reasonable, are its teachings! The dead are dead and not alive. However, in view of God's plan that there shall be a resurrection of the dead "in due time" he speaks of the dead not as extinct like the brute, but as merely asleep. They are waiting for the morning—the glorious morning of Messiah's Kingdom, when "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in its beams," when Satan shall be bound for a thousand years and deceive the peoples no more. Instead of the reign of Sin and Death the reign of Righteousness and Life everlasting shall begin. How beautifully the Scriptures answer the question of where the dead sleep. "Many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake" (Daniel xii, 2).

"Lazarus, Come Forth."

Jesus and his disciples turned their steps toward Bethany. Poor Martha and Mary meantime were sorely disappointed. Not for a moment did they suppose that their mighty Friend would allow this trouble to come upon them—that he would neglect to come or to use his power to save Lazarus from dying. So grief-stricken and so heart-broken were they that Martha only came to meet the Master, and her first words were those of gentle reproach reminding him of their disappointment in him: "Lord, if thou hadst been here—if thou hadst come when we sent thee word—our brother had not died."

What message of comfort did Jesus express? Did he say, Martha, Lazarus is far better off in heaven! He is with the angels! He is singing and very happy! Surely you would not bring him back to earth again! Were these the words of Jesus? No. He merely said, "Thy brother shall rise again." He thus implied that her brother was not alive but really dead. How could he rise again if he had not ceased to live? Martha's reply indicates that she understood what were the teachings of Jesus and of the prophets. She said, "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." But Jesus wished to draw her attention to the present and to have her ask him even at this time to call Lazarus back from the sleep of death. So he said, "I am the resurrection and the life." You, Martha, recognize me as the Messiah, the Son of God. You believe that eventually when the resurrection does take place, God's resurrection power will be exercised through me. And now I am here with you. Why do you not ask me to exercise some of this power in advance? Where have you laid him?

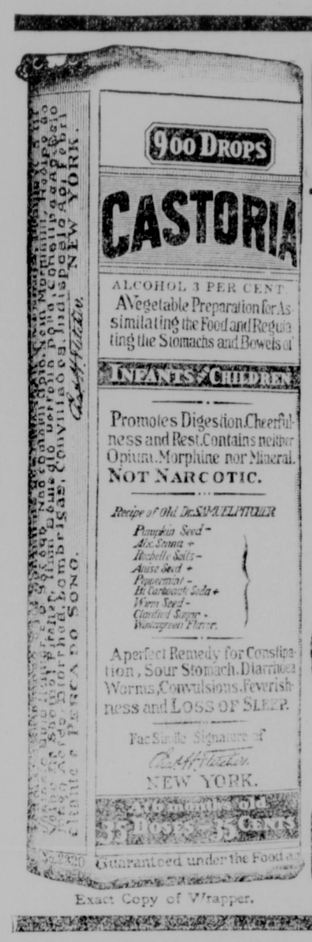
Martha finally caught the thought, but replied, No, no, Lord, it is too late now. By this time he stinketh, for he has been dead four days. If you had come when I sent you word, or even had gotten here within a day or so, there would have been some hope, but now it has gone too far for that; for decomposition has set in. No miracle could possibly reorganize broken-down tissues. But Jesus insisted that they should show him the place. When he came to the tomb, what did the Master do? Did he command Lazarus to lay aside his crown and harp in heaven and bid the angels goodby and come back to earth life? No! Did he call for him to come up from Purgatory, the location of which nobody knows? No! What did he say? Addressing the tomb, he said, "Lazarus, come forth!" And what occurred? The dead one came forth. He was not alive at all! He was dead!

The Beloved Family.

We read again, "Now Jesus loved Martha and her sister, and Lazarus." Some have thought that they discerned Lazarus amongst later disciples of Christ—possibly Barnabas. But anyway he was one whom Jesus loved, even though he was not one of the apostles who followed with the Lord. And Martha has come down to us as a synonym of bustling, energetic hospitality, "busied about many things." Yet surely she was loving and loyal to the Master. Jesus loved Martha and we may be sure therefore that he loves all of similar character. But he loved Mary also. And we do not forget that when she gave up some of her housework that she might sit at the feet of Jesus and learn of him the Master declared that she had "chosen the better part." This was the same Mary who anointed the Master with the precious spikenard ointment five days before his burial. Martha and Mary both loved and were loved of the Lord, yet, evidently, Mary's love and the form it took was specially approved of the Master.

Finally we come to John the loving disciple of whom it is said that he was "that disciple whom Jesus loved." What a glorious testimony was John's! We remember that he and his brother loved the Lord so dearly that they desired that in his Kingdom in the future they might be next to him, one on his right hand, the other on his left hand. We remember that the Master answered that only by drinking of his cup of shame and ignominy, and by being baptized into his sacrificial death could they hope to sit in his throne at all. And we recall how loyally they agreed to these terms.

In proportion as we are desirous of having the Master's aproval and smile, let us each seek to cultivate his character-likeness. The Apostle tells us that such copies of God's dear Son are to be honored with a share with him in his Kingdom glory on the heavenly plane. To such will come the honor and privilege of blessing and uplifting mankind in general—to an earthly salvation in Paradise restored—by and by. As we note the special features of character which called forth the Master's love we will more and more be able to copy them in reaching our goal.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

THE DEATH RECORD.

MRS. MARY VIRGINIA WEST.

Mrs. Mary Virginia West, died Saturday morning, July 2, after a lingering illness at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George C. Walter, near Loch Lynn Heights. Her husband died about two years ago, but she leaves several sons and daughters to mourn her dsparture. She had been a Christian for some time and with childlike simplicity and faith trusted in her Lord for salvation. She was a member of the Deer Park Baptist church. She was buried in the Deer Park cemetery Sunday afternoon, the funeral services being conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. W. Hudson, assisted by Rev. J. G. McEndoe. A large concourse of friends and relatives followed her to her last resting place and as the sun was sinking in the west her body was lowered into the grave to await the resurrection. The sympathy of a host of friends is extended to the bereaved ones in their sorrow.

May the God of mercy wipe away al tears from their eyes and soothe their grieving spirits. C. W. H.

Call for Your Letters.

Oakland Hotel (2), Wm. Winters, Mrs. Lucy Waddell, J. R. Hughes (2), Thos. Johnson, Homes Parsons, Philip Reese Niatherly.

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Ferndale—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Everybody invited.
C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF Valuable Coal AND OTHER PROPERTY

Situate in Garrett County, Md., Known as the Gillespie Property.

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned Trustee, by decree entered on the 29th day of May, 1910, in the matter of C. D. Gillespie, bankrupt, pending in the District Court of the United State for the Northern District of West Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will, on SATURDAY, the 23rd Day of July, 1910,

at Eleven O'clock A. M.,

at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, owned by C. D. Gillespie.

I

All the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying

315 Acres of Land.

being part of a tract known as "Elk Garden," situate in Garrett county, Maryland, together with 100 acres of the surface of said 315 acres and all the rights and privileges granted to the said C. D. Gillespie in connection with said coal property. Two-thirds of said property was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Adda A. V. Haiterman, by deed dated the 4th day of June, 1909, of record in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 43, folio 152, and the remaining one-third was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Austin Brown, Sheriff, by deed bearing date December 1, 1909, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 433, to which deeds reference is now here had for a more particular description of said property.

This property is situated very near the Western Maryland Railroad, and adjacent to the coal property now being operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Company at its mines at Henry. The coal underlying this property which is to be sold is very valuable.

II

All of the coal underlying a tract of land containing

68 1-2 Acres,

situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being known as a part of the "Elk Garden" tract and being the same coal conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Peter F. Snyder and wife, by deed bearing date October 27, 1906, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 364, to which deed reference is here had for a particular description of said 68½ acres, together with all the rights and privileges as to mining rights, surface and rights of way, as were vested in said Gillespie by said deed.

This 68½ acres of coal is considered very valuable. It is located a distance of about three or four miles from the railroad.

III

An undivided one half interest in ten acres of land, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being also a part of what is known as the "Elk Garden" tract, said undivided one-half interest having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry F. Marshall and wife, by deed dated the 11th day of August 1902, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 42, folio 200, to which deed reference is had for a particular description of said property.

IV

A tract or parcel of land containing one acre, more or less, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, on the Western Maryland Railroad, near Gorman, having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry C. Stempie and wife, by deed dated the 30th day of April, 1907, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 54, folio 454. There are situated, on this property, several buildings, one of which can be used for a combination dwelling house and store building.

All of the above described property will be sold free and acquit from all liens and incumbrances. The title to all of said property is considered good.

TERMS OF SALE.—One-third cash in hand on day of sale and the residue upon a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to give interest bearing notes, with good personal security, for the deferred purchase money and the legal title to the property to be retained as additional security, until said deferred purchase money has been paid.

C. W. MAXWELL, Trustee.

DR. W. W. GRANT, DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-ly.

Proposals For Building Three Wrought Iron Or Concrete Bridges.

Notice is hereby given that the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, will receive sealed proposals until at 2 o'clock p. m., at their office in the town of Oakland, Md., for the building of three wrought iron or concrete bridges.

Monday, July 11th, 1910,

Bridge No. 1 to consist of one span 40 feet long and 12 feet wide. Same to be built over Yough River at Ami Foreman's 4 miles south of Oakland, Md.

Bridge No. 2 to consist of one span 25 feet long and 12 feet wide. Same to be built over Yough River at John Martin's 9 miles south of Oakland, Md.

Bridge No. 3 to consist of one span 16 feet long and 12 feet wide and to be built at Chisholm's Mill 2 miles from Gorman, Md.

Bids will be in lump sum for each structure completed according to plans and specifications on file.

The County Commissioners ask that bids for both iron and concrete be submitted for the above bridges and they reserve the right to let the contract for either. If iron is used concrete will be used for the substructures.

The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By Order of the Board.
A. G. ROSS Clerk.

OPERA HOUSE
School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,
Opera House. OAKLAND, MD

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1553 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

Ordered this 27th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by the Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelph, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of July, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

Alice Campbell, et al. vs. William Guard, et al.

No. 1637 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County.

Ordered this 15th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale made and reported in the above cause by Norval Speelman, trustee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 15th day of July, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 8th day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1800.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 10 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,[illegible]
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not are vertised here. For particulars address
M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE

Is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.

All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

JAMES BROCK,
Dixon Building,
Oakland, Maryland.

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS J. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

EASTERN BRANCH BALTO FREE LIBRARY
Register of Wills

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1910. NUMBER 20

A STATEMENT ASKED.

School Commissioners Should Give Reason For Ignoring People's Demand.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The writer has confidence in the ability and integrity of the members of the School Board and knows that the intelligent, thinking people would appreciate it if they would each come out in a statement frankly giving the reasons for ignoring the request of such a large majority of our citizens in making a change in the head of our schools.

If they have acted in good faith and with "the greatest good to the greatest number" as their aim, the only way to put themselves right in the eyes of their constituents is to candidly state their reasons for their official actions, and a failure to do so means the acknowledgement of some ulterior or undue influence.

If the reasons are just and tenable the public should submit, and if they are not only one way they can escape public condemnation and that is to reconsider their action of June 24th and correct this outrage.

The public school question is the most vital issue before us today. Upon it depends our future welfare and destiny. Neither a shade or shadow of politics or religion should be tolerated as touching it. And this is a family matter all our own. If any official should dare to attempt to stir up religious prejudice or political bigotry he should be promptly ostracised as an enemy of our institutions.

A HIGH SCHOOL PATRON.

Oakland, Md., July 11, 1910

He Is Disappointed.

To the Editor of The Republican:

I am one of those who believed that with the inauguration of Mayor Hart and the new Council that some improvement would be brought about in the sanitary conditions of the town of Oakland. Perhaps we are not to be entirely disappointed in this respect for possibly before the snow flies again the paper lying in the streets may be gathered up, and the weeds growing along the sidewalks may be cut down, but don't you think the Mayor should get a move on himself?

If the Mayor and Council feel that the work is too onerous, would it not be a good idea to have the ladies of the town form a Civic Club and turn over to them the business of keeping the town clean?

Yours for health,

CIVILIAN.

Oakland, July 12, 1910.

Lawn Fete.

A lawn fete and ice cream festival will be held on the lawn of the Methodist Episcopal church of New Germany Saturday night, July 16th. Refreshments and all the delicacies of the season will be served. All are cordially invited. Don't forget the date.

MINE AT KITZMILLER CLAIMS ANOTHER VICTIM

Cleaver H. Pool Killed at Pleasant Valley Mine Yesterday.

Cleaver H. Pool, aged about thirty-five years, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pool, of Kitzmiller, was killed yesterday afternoon at the Pleasant Valley mine near Kitzmiller while in the performance of his duties as wheelman on the plane at the mouth of the mine.

No particulars, other than those above mentioned, can be learned of the man's death, the telephone service from Oakland to Kitzmiller being entirely knocked out this morning on account of the storm of a day or two ago.

Mr. Pool was married several years ago to Miss Gertrude Laing, formerly of England, and leaves two children. He was a nephew of Mr. M. R. Hamill, of Oakland, and also of Messrs. E. J. and Lewis C. Hamill, of Kitzmiller.

"Square Deal" Denied.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The people are entitled at all times to a "square deal" at the hands of those who have been elevated to positions of public station, whether such elevation come through the electorate or by appointment from higher authority.

In the matter of administering the school affairs of the county the people are entitled to be dealt with in the utmost candor by the School Commissioners and their wishes as expressed by petition or in any other manner selected by them as a means of voicing their desires are entitled to a "square deal."

As a Republican, I feel that our party's representative on the School Board has not regarded the wishes of the people as conveyed to the Board by their petition asking for the retention of Prof. Palmer as the head of the High School, and in turning down the request of our citizens in this matter, he has brought justly merited condemnation upon our party.

When a public servant is no longer willing to listen to the voice of the people, but rather assumes to know what is better for their interests and welfare than they themselves, it is time for him to vacate the office and let someone fill it who is willing to give the people a "square deal," and by so doing relieve his party of the opprobrium which his act has brought upon it.

Better get out, Mr. Yost, while the walking is good.

SQUARE DEAL.

Oakland, July 13, 1910.

OSTEOPATHIST.

Dr. Isabel Garrison Eller, a graduate of the full three years course as required by the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, will be at the Roslyn Cottage, Mountain Lake Park, for the summer. it

BARONESS SEEKS HER HUSBAND

Russian Claims She Is Wife of Percy Procter, of Cincinnati.

In New York Tuesday a handsome young Russian woman who says that she married a member of the wealthy Procter family of Cincinnati in London last fall appeared at police headquarters and asked that an officer be sent with her to Cincinnati, where she proposed going in an endeavor to find her husband. She was told that the New York police had no authority outside of the city limits.

The woman says that her husband came to America four months after their marriage, and that she subsequently followed him to the United States. He is much older than she and according to the woman's story is being kept from her by relatives. A civil suit involving stock that her husband is alleged to have given her is now pending in the Cincinnati courts.

With reference to the above a telegram dated Cincinnati, July 12th, which appeared in yesterday's Baltimore Sun, says: That relatives in this city do not seek the Russian Baroness von Kliefuss, alleged wife of Percy Procter, and that they "have no interest whatever in her," was the statement made tonight by William C. Procter, brother of Percy Procter, and head of the wealthy Procter family.

The Baroness first came into public view here several weeks ago, when she arrived from Europe and through counsel entered as an intervening petitioner in a civil suit, in which stocks held by Percy Procter figured. She set up the claim that she was married to Mr. Procter in Europe several years ago and that the determination of the suit involving the stocks would affect her dowry.

The case is still pending. Percy Procter is about 64 years old and has lived abroad for several years.

Representatives of the Procter family say they have no personal knowledge "as to whether the Baroness was married to Percy Proctor."

BITTINGER.

Our esteemed friend, Joseph Hostettler, a former Garrett county school teacher who is following that profession in the state of Washington, was a pleasant caller in this village last Monday.

Messrs. Asa Bittinger and Charles Seehler, have purchased a new Plano binder for use on their farms.

Columbus Brenneman returned to his home at this place last week after several weeks treatment at the University Hospital at Baltimore, and is rapidly regaining his normal health.

Prof. I. N. H. Beahm, of Nokesville, Va., spent a day or two this week with his brother, Prof. J. C. Beahm, at this place.

The German Baptist brethren held an outdoor meeting in the grove near the residence of Jonas C. Beachy on last Sunday morning. The services were conducted by Rev. Samuel Miller.

Dennis Brenneman is the owner of a cow, from which he asserts he gathers a gallon of cream daily.

John Holman, of Friendsville, was a caller at Joel Orendorf's last Saturday evening.

Merchant O. C. Buckel has installed a handsome soda water fountain in his general store.

AVILTON.

Misses Fannie Skidmore and Nellie Harvey, of Frostburg, have been the guests of friends here this week.

Mr. Geo. Weitzell is attending camp meeting at Mountain Lake Park.

Mrs. David Emerson, of Lonaconing, is spending this week with relatives here.

Miss Violet Johnson, of Garrett, Pa., is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Merrill.

Misses Jessie and Edith Merrill and Messrs. Lewis Warnick and Mahlon Railey visited in Salisbury, Pa., last week.

Miss Annie Broadwater has returned to her home after spending some time at Jennings, Md.

Miss Carrie Simpson, of Fairview, is the guest of the family of Lewis Broadwater.

Lewis Warnick, of New Germany, was the guest of friends here last week.

Porch Party.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Matthew's Episcopal church have issued invitations for a porch party to be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Pollock, on Second street, Friday evening, the 15th inst., for the benefit of the church. Refreshments will be served from seven to eleven o'clock.

CONDEMNATION JURY AT HUTTON

Part of the Connell Homestead Will Be Taken by B. & O. R. R. Co.

This morning a special train bearing Sheriff Shartzer and a jury, court officers, lawyers and Baltimore and Ohio Railway officials, left Oakland for Hutton, six miles west of here, where the jury, after being sworn in, will view the old Connell homestead prior to hearing evidence concerning its value which is being sought by the railway company for the purpose of laying its tracks through a portion of the farm.

The jury, after viewing the property, will return to Oakland, accompanied by the witnesses in the matter, who number about twenty-five, and this afternoon at the court house the evidence will be taken and arguments made by counsel.

It is understood that the railway company has made an offer of $1500 for the property, which has been refused by the owners, $6,000 being asked.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The camp meeting will close tonight to the regret of many. This has been the best attended meeting in years, and the crowd on last Sunday was probably larger than ever before in the history of the camp meeting. The spiritual tide was high from the opening meeting and never ebbed until the close. The preaching and teaching was of a high order. Two Bishops occupied the pulpit during the meeting and the attendance of ministers, evangelists and other Christian workers was larger than usual. Many testified that they had received a spiritual uplift that would make them more efficient workers in the Master's vineyard in the future.

Among the ministers present who a vet known in this neighborhood we note th following: Revs. W. D. Reed, G. R. Williamson, E. P. Idleman, J. L. B. Jones, W. S. Davis, A. Mick, J. P. McKee, M. W. Rider, H. E. Friend and E. J. Westfall.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society will hold a convention beginning tomorrow and continue until Monday evening. These meetings will be interesting and profitable to those who may attend.

At the Annual meeting of the Community of Mountain Lake Park, held yesterday the following officers were elected: President of the Annual Meeting, L. P. Carr, of Fairmont, W. Va.; Secretary of Community, Rev. J. Sumner Stone, of New York; Street Commissioner, Thos. H. Cuppett, of Mt. Lake Park; Chief of Police, Adam Long, of Mt. Lake Park; Treasurer, R. G. Richardson, of Piedmont; Annual Committee, Thos. H. Cuppett, of Mt. Lake Park and J. M. Dare, of Parkersburg, W. Va. The all-year residents generally refrained from participating in the election. Mr. E. E. Friend declined the nomination for Treasurer as did also Mr. Jacob L. Echard for Street Commissioner.

Miss Carmichael has closed her millinery store in Loch Lynn and will visit friends in Ohio and elsewhere until fall when she will return with a large fall and winter stock of millinery and continue business in the room she occupied this spring.

Messrs. Joseph and William Harner, of Morgantown, W. Va., and Mr. Edward Harner, of Terra Alta, W. Va., were visiting friends in this neighborhood this week.

Miss Rose Howe was a recent guest at Loch Lynn Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. McCrum, of Uniontown Pa., visited the Park this week.

The services next Sunday in the M. E. church will be class meeting at 10 a. m. and Sunday School at 2.30 p. m. Rev. Carl Doney, D. D., president of the West Virginia Wesleyan College, Buckhannon, will address the school.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smouse is dangerously ill at the residence of Mrs. Smouse's sisters in the Park.

Mrs. E. C. Stone celebrated the 85th anniversary of her birth at her large residence here Tuesday. Her children, grand children and great grand children were with her in large numbers.

Messrs. C. J. and F. E. Rathbun just returned from a fishing trip to Belgrade Lakes, Maine, taking in on the trip the cities of New York, Boston, Portland, Fall River and Newport. They were absent two weeks and enjoyed the trip and the excellent fishing in the lakes. Should you wish to hear some good fish stories call on "Joe."

Miss Maria Douhan, Deaconess, who has been located in Brooklyn, N. Y., for several years, will arrive at the Park tonight for an indefinite stay, the guest of Mrs. J. A. Hayden.

FOR SALE—A practically new six horse power engine and ten horse power boiler. Apply at Oakland Model Steam Bakery.

GRANTSVILLE WILL HAVE A NEW STATE BANK

With a Capital of $15,000 Which Has Been Subscribed by Home People.

Grantsville, on the old National Road, with one National Bank, which has been successfully managed for a number of years and is considered a money maker for the stockholders, will have another bank within the next sixty days, which will have be chartered by the State of Maryland under the new banking laws recently enacted by the Legislature.

The new bank will have a capital of $15,000, all subscribed by people who reside either in or near Grantsville, and will be managed by a competent board of directors.

Mr. John O. Getty, until last Friday cashier of the National Bank at Grantsville, when he resigned, will be the cashier of the new bank. Others interested in the National bank there, who resigned from the board of directors with the cashier and who will be stockholders in the State bank, are Messrs. Dr. G. C. Keller and Jacob J. Bender.

Contracts have been made for the furniture, vaults, etc., for the new bank and it is expected that it will be open for business in less than two months.

St. Swithin's Day Tomorrow.

According to tradition, tomorrow will determine those regions of the world that will be wet and those that will go dry for the next 40 days from July 15.

The way of forecasting the summer weather does not come from the modern weather bureau, but goes back to centuries. St. Swithin was chaplain to Egbert, King of England, and was tutor to Egbert's son Ethelwulf. He was afterward bishop of Winchester, and died in 862. He was buried, according to his own wishes, outside the cathedral of Winchester, where the rain of heaven could fall upon his grave.

But when the Bishop was canonized as St. Swithin, about a century after his death, the monks thought his grave too lowly for so great a man, and they prepared to move his body to a handsome crypt inside the cathedral. July 15 was the day set for the removal of his remains but on that day a heavy rain set in and prevented any attempt to move the body.

The rain continue intermittently for 40 days, and the monks took this as a sign of the displeasure of heaven at the proposed removal and allowed the body to remain where the saint had decreed and requested before his death.

The Republican for Job Printing

THE DEATH RECORD.

REV. JAMES H. DAUGHERTY.

Rev. James H. Daugherty, 53 years old, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of West Union, W. Va., died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Parkersburg, W. Va., Monday morning after an illness lasting only a few hours. Before going to West Union Rev. Mr. Daugherty had charge of Methodist Episcopal churches in Baltimore, Md., Huntington and Wallace, W. Va. He officiated at the laying of a corner stone for a handsome new church building at West Union just one week before his death. In addition to his widow, Rev. Daugherty is survived by two sons, Rev. Dr. C. L. Daugherty, pastor of Trinity Methodist Protestant church, Bidwell street, Northside, Pittsburg, and Henry Daugherty, of Cumberland, formerly of Oakland.

Music at the Bible Conference.

We are planning to have the very best singing at the Mountain Lake Park Bible Conference that it is possible to have. We invite all the singers from the various churches in Oakland, and surrounding towns and community, as well as all the singers located in the Park for the summer. Each singer will be furnished a book free, and the special chorus will sing at the Tabernacle each evening at 7:30 o'clock, also at the Sunday services, morning, afternoon and evening. Let all who will assist in this work report at the Tabernacle at 8 p. m. Thursday, July 21st, for the organization of the chorus, and for a short rehearsal.

JOHN P. HILLIS,
Director of Music.

Will Erect Jacobs' New Residence.

The Lonaconing Construction Company has been awarded the contract for the erection of the new residence of Hon. William H. Jacobs, at "Oak Springs," Garrett county, near Lonaconing, and work was commenced this week. It will be recalled that the Jacobs residence was destroyed by fire early in May last, and in which an infant grandchild lost its life.

It is understood the new residence will be of modern architecture and the Lonaconing Construction Co. and Tomlinson Bros. builders will make an excellent job of it. When completed it will be one of the finest residences in this section.—Lonaconing Star.

Married.

MOOMAW—LEE—At the Glossman Hotel in Oakland, Wednesday afternoon, July 13th, by Rev. C. W. Hudson, of Loch Lynn Heights Baptist church, Miss Della O. Lee and Mr. Benjamin Franklin Moomaw, both of Loch Lynn Heights.

Subscribe for The Republican.

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO

Have purchased a large stock Best Quality

BINDER TWINE

which we offer at 8 1-2c. lb. for cash; 9c. on time or for trade.

HARVESTING OIL.

1 gallon cans 35c.

Have Big Stock Scythes, Grain Cradles, Forks, Rakes, etc.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

Copyrighted.

TEDDY-TAFTY

Teddy-Tafty Sundae

The Latest in Ice Cream.

Healthful

Delightful

Refreshing

Oakland Steam Bakery

Manufacturers of Ice Cream complying absolutely with the Pure Food Laws of the United States.

We Freeze our Reputation into our Ice Cream.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Pubr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

Fishing tackle catalogues are ripe.

Vacation plans progressing nicely?

Flies are not a habit; they are an infliction.

Dirt, flies, disease, death; each follows the other.

Rocking the boat is still a spring pastime for fools.

Four kisses brought $20 in Omaha. Let's hope they were worth it.

Fresh air is fine, but if you would live long open the window from the top.

Edison says that one could live entirely on canned goods. But would one?

Have a garden if you will, but don't give all your profits to the wardware man.

A Poughkeepsie girl was ostracized for marrying. This item has no moral.

If Wisconsin frogs can eat Florida alligators, frog legs may solve the meat problem.

As soon as we are rid of the winter, we are confronted with the tornado and the mosquito.

If you hear a buzzing sound and see a black object in the air—kill it—it's a fly and dangerous.

Manure is best applied with a manure spreader on clover sod or other sod that is to be broken for corn.

An Oregon man cured himself of dyspepsia by fasting 40 days. He will never again have dyspepsia or anything.

What does the New York newsboy who is going to cross the country on roller skates think the country roads are like?

The man who told a St. Louis convention that husbands are a necessary part of the family has a great future before him.

The man who marries the girl with the two heads will get his when she becomes angry enough to talk with both at once.

Physicians who are watching that Patterson boy who swallowed a $5 ...'d piece say that they can see no nge in him.

The next man who succeeds in flying across the English channel will ave to be satisfied with a "Spark-'ron-the-Wires" item.

A New Jersey man lights his pipe in an oil tank. When he gets out of the hospital he intends to try his stunt in a powder mill.

According to a scientist, dreams are the realization of our wishes; at any rate they are all the fulfilment some of the wishes seem to get.

A heap of rubbish around your house is a tombstone to your self-respect, a death blow to your civic pride and a breeding place for flies.

It will be some time, however, before men with flying machines will sleep in England every night and go to work on the continent every morning.

Who knows why it is that the most interesting astronomical attractions always occur for the benefit of the Zulus and the savages who aren't interested?

Professor Munsterberg says that it is easy to detect crime. True, but mighty hard sometimes to detect the criminals, as even our police department will testify.

Young ladies who expect to graduate from one of the prominent eastern colleges this year are preparing to do so in very simple gowns. Education seems to help, after all.

The Nebraska woman who was indicted for refusing to divulge her age to the census taker evidently is one of those persons who dislike to lie a little even to save themselves trouble.

The killing of five German bluejackets of the mine-laying division of the German navy, while they were maneuvering for practise, is an accident which reveals the dangers of peace for men who must be prepared for war. Fatal gunnery accidents are not rare, and even the maintenance on shipboard of heavy magazines of high explosives that are not needed except during actual hostilities is a menace to the ship's entire compliment.

Somehow the French are the ones who are crossing the English channel by the airship route. Rather an international affair, that.

The report from Professor Alessandrini of the University of Rome that he has discovered the bacilus of pellagra in water will lift a burden of accusation against moldy corn, which has long been supposed to be the source of the disease. The report from Rome makes the urgency of the pure drinking water problem more obvious than ever.

THE KING'S SALARY

George V. Gets $2,350,000 for Annual Expenses.

In Addition His Queen, the Princes and Princesses of Royal Family Are Liberally Supplied With Pin Money.

London.—The king of England and the president of the United States are alike in one respect—they are both dependent on their respective peoples for their salary and allowances, the purse strings being held by parliament in one case and by congress in the other. The methods of doing things differ in the two countries, but they amount to the same in the end, and the people foot the bills. But kings cost much more than presidents. Some people thought it a "big raise" when the president's salary was increased from $50,000 to $75,000 a year, with $25,000 a year for traveling expenses, but the British king and royal family cost a good many times as much.

At the beginning of every reign an annual sum is settled on the king by parliament and in addition allowances are made for each member of his family and for all the expenses pertaining to the royal household and to maintaining the honor and dignity of the crown. Under the British system these expenditures constitute "the civil list" and the account is kept separate from the ordinary expenses of the government. Formerly certain sources of revenue, called "hereditary revenues" were settled on the crown, out of which not only the royal expenditures proper, but the expenses of the civil service, everything except the army and navy, were to be paid. Under this system the king could use the revenues as he liked and if he saved anything it went to swell his private purse, while if he ran in debt or created a deficit parliament paid it. The accumulated debt at the end of a reign sometimes amounted to many millions of dollars.

The present system of making what might be called specific appropriations for the crown dates from the reign of George III., when the national debt was so enormously increased by the American war that the people demanded reform, especially in the abuses of the civil list, and in the practise of conferring life pensions on royal favorites. In 1782 parliament passed a civil list act abolishing many useless offices, reducing the pension list and providing for closer supervision of the royal expenditure.

King George V.

At the beginning of Queen Victoria's reign the annual grants for the crown were fixed and sums voted as follows: Privy purse, $300,000; salaries of household, $656,300; expenses of household, $862,500; royal bounty, $66,000; contingent, $40,000; total, $1,925,000. In addition the queen might grant life pensions not to exceed $6,000 a year in any case, to persons whom she might consider worthy, provided that all pensions granted should be reported to parliament by the twenty-ninth of July each year.

On the accession of King Edward VII. (1901) it became necessary to readjust the civil list and a committee was appointed to investigate and report on the subject. The committee reported a bill which was passed increasing the annual appropriation for the civil list from $1,925,000 to $2,350,000, distributed as follows: Their majesties' privy purse, $550,000; second-class salaries of royal household, $629,000; third class expenses of royal household, $965,000; repair and decoration of royal palaces, $100,000; royal bounty and alms, $66,000; contingent, $40,000. In addition parliament granted an annual allowance of $100,000 to the prince of Wales, $50,000 to his wife and $40,000 each to the king's three daughters and other special grants. By the death of King Edward Queen Alexandra comes into a life pension of $350,000 a year and all of the surviving children of Queen Victoria continue to draw life pensions.

It is not likely there will be any material reduction in the civil list granted George V. from that of King Edward, which totaled $2,350,000 a year. Compared with this the president's salary of $75,000 a year with $25,000 for traveling expenses does not seem excessive.

ESCAPED INDIAN MASSACRE

Col. Warner Lewis of Missouri Only Survivor of Butchery by Osages in '63.

Montgomery City, Mo.—Through a mere incident it develops that Col. Warner Lewis, prominent attorney of this city, father of Robert Lewis, Republican candidate for governor in 1896, is the erstwhile "unknown" confederate soldier who escaped the bloody conflict with the Osage Indians in 1863. In that fight 16 comrades were killed, scalped and their heads cut off.

There were only 18 in the company and it was thought that all were killed, but there were two survivors, Colonel Lewis and John Lafferty, who met death shortly after his escape.

Colonel Lewis gives the following account of the battle:

"Yes, it is true that I am the only survivor of that awful battle. I have just told a few friends of my remarkable experience and escape, but it has not reached the public until now, nearly a half century after.

Col. Warner Lewis.

"The story comes to the surface through a magazine article published in Oklahoma, which it seems is gathered from some Indians who have heard of the massacre. This magazine story, telling of the death of these confederates, says:

"'Down on the sandbar in the Osage country in a space of some four rods square, were found the almost nude bodies of the dead comrades. Their heads, besides being scalped, had been, according to the Osage custom, severed from their bodies. Afterward their heads were all collected, some being at a considerable distance from their remains, and, being placed with their bodies, they were all buried.'

"Leading from these dead bodies were the foottracks of two men walking side by side and close together, as if one might have been supporting the other. It is probable that these two men were shot while in the water attempting to cross a stream near by and it is also probable that they made good their escape."

"You see, this magazine writer comes pretty near guessing correctly when he says that it is possible that two of this fatal company made their escape. Myself and John Lafferty were the lucky ones, but Lafferty was killed before the war closed."

BARNES, CHICAGO CAPITALIST

Head of Illinois Voters' League, Who Filed Charges Against Lorimer, Former Pastor.

Chicago.—Clifford W. Barnes, president of the Illinois Voters' league, who, acting as a citizen, laid formal charges of bribery in the election of William Lorimer before the United States senate, is a Chicago capitalist whose home is in Lake Forest. He has taken an active interest in legislative affairs and social questions for several years.

Born in Corry, Pa., in 1864, he was graduated from Yale and then took the degree of master of arts at the Clifford W. Barnes.

University of Chicago. He has been a pastor and social settlement worker and general secretary of the Religious Association of America. From 1900 to 1905 he was professor of sociology in Illinois college.

Why Should Indians Swear?

Some writer says Indians don't swear. Why should they? They do not have to hook their wives up, they do not have to endure rotten telephone service, they do not have to hang on the car straps, they do not sit behind vast millinery creations at the theater and few of them have to work.—Houston Post.

Disappointments of Our Lives

By REV. F. R. MARSH
Pastor First Congregational Church
Houston, Texas

What we see, largely determines what we are. The books we read and the sights we witness furnish much of the foodstuff out of which character is made. Indeed, we say broadly: "Seeing is believing," and limit the field of man's activities to the boundaries of his horizon.

It is not without significance that the children of Israel, dying from fever caused by the fiery serpents, were told that everyone who looked should live. Surely the principle is of wider application than this isolated incident. It can be truly said that only those who look really live. Here is a blind man. He never had the incentive to work that comes to every man at the sight of thousands of his fellows thronging our city's streets, intent upon their business. Standing on some mountain peak, he never saw the crimson bars falling behind the king of day; never knew the glory of God as skies with sun and stars and constellations unfold his mighty acts; never felt the inspiration when the night was passed and on the morning sky clusters of purple cloud began to ripen in the crimson dawn—that man does not know nature, nor life nor God. Vision has value.

Years have passed. You have not been living on the tower. You have plunged in the valleys. You have waded deep waters. You have scaled steep heights. Sometimes it has been hard, God knows. Down the highways of the years you have come struggling, crying, cursing, sometimes praying, but the ideal has not been realized. Disappointment means the failure of one of two parties to keep an appointment. The vision has failed.

Here is where a prophet on a tower is needed. He can see some things which you can not. You, in the depths below! You, in the darkness behind! You, disappointed at the appointed place, hear what the Lord God says to Habakkuk on the tower: "The vision is yet for an appointed time. . . . though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come."

Life's disappointments are a universal experience. Some disappointments must succeed the certain delusions of youth. The man higher up has spoken a word to us and our cherished plans have crumbled like a jig saw puzzle. Joys we have sought are crowded back into the future. Stern reality has driven beyond today into that vast tomorrow blessings that seemed almost within our grasp.

It is equally true of the moral life. In the darkness of some depression we have had a vision of what we might be, of what we ought to be and of what we said: "By the grace of God, we will be."

But we haven't. At least I hope we have not attained that ideal. I say "hope so," because if we have achieved that ambition it means, not that we have made wonderful progress, but that the vision was too insignificant to have lasting value.

The disappointments of life, be they in secular business, Christian work or Christian character, may produce one of two results. One is despair. Hope deferred makes the heart sick. Disappointments are like eggs, which, brooded over and hatched, produce the serpents of despair. When a man begins to ask: "What's the use?" he ought to stop and find out.

The other effect of disappointment may be to call up reserves of strength and new battalions of energy.

Within the past year three notable biographies have been published of an actor, a soldier and a reporter. Richard Mansfield, autocrat, of haughty spirit, at the beginning of his career was offered an important part in a play. He fainted because he had been two days without food, which he was too poor to buy, and was immediately dismissed. Disappointment of poverty. Tecumseh Sherman, forty years old, wrote: "I look upon myself as a dead cock in the pit, not worthy of further notice." Disappointed ambition! A little English boy, whose father was dead, whose mother had abandoned him, ran away from the poor house, drifted to America, fought as a confederate soldier at Shiloh and eventually crowned disappointments with the laurels of success. His real name was John Rowlands; the world knows him, by the grace of the queen of England, as Sir Henry M. Stanley.

Think of the disappointments of these men and a host of others who have endured as seeing an invisible vision. Paul wrote: "We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed." We are perplexed, but not altogether without help. Persecuted but not forsaken. Cast down, but not destroyed.

This means that with a vision to be attained, there must also be added a vision to secure attainment. This means that with an ideal there must also be added a force to realize that ideal.

Now, with this added help, though the vision tarry, wait for it. Do not discard the ideal. Do not even cramp the ideal to fit the real. Grow to its dimensions. Do not shirk the task to fit your past efforts. Redouble your efforts. Be absolutely sure you have the right idea before you make it your ideal.

Then, though it tarry, your disappointment will prove heaven's appointment for a future day and God will be on time

YOU NEVER CAN TELL.

Oh, the primmest little maid,
Just the most precise of misses;
Never thought of love, she said,
Took no sort of stock in kisses.

Quite immune to Cupid's darts,
Laughed at hosts of suitors sighing
When they told of aching hearts
All such symptoms still decrying.

But all this was long ago—
Well, I should say, 'twas last summer;
You read the account, I know,
In the papers—'twas a hummer.

How she managed to elope
With a curly-headed actor,
In this stunt of hers, I hope,
Common sense was not a factor.

Two Reasons.

Seymour—I don't intend to marry until I reach the years of discretion.

Ashley—In that case you'll never marry.

Seymour—How do you make that out?

Ashely—In the first place, you would never reach the years of discretion, even if you lived a thousand years; in the second place, if you did reach the years of discretion you would know enough not to marry.

DOWN, NOT UP.

Henderson—Does your wife ever call you up at your office?

Henpeck—No; she waits until I get home and then she calls me down.

Not Much More.

She wore a most ravishing smile,
This maiden so trim and so cute,
And a little bit more, 'twas down at the shore—
She had on a bathing suit.

Naturally.

Higgins—How were the aeroplane races yesterday?

Wiggins—Good, only for the fact that the track was too heavy for making records.

Higgins—What do you mean?

Wiggins—They were pulled off over Pittsburg, you know.—Puck.

An Unfair Advantage.

"Oh, they have lobsters!" exclaimed the fair maid as she glanced over the restaurant menu card. "And I dearly love them."

"I'm glad of that," replied the young man in the case, "as I have frequently been accused of being a lobster."

A Born Diplomat.

His Wife—John, yesterday was my birthday and you never even thought to bring me a box of candy.

Her Husband—I'm sorry, my dear, but there isn't a thing about your appearance to remind me that you are a day older than you were a year ago.

THE CAUSE OF IT.

Tim—I see dat Joe Simpson's goil's gone back on him.

Tom—Huh! dat's easy. Der feller she's goin' wid now, his mudder keeps er candy store.

Back to the Soil.

"Have you joined the back-to-the-soil movement?"

"You bet; I'm tired of artificial flies and wooden minnows, and I'm going to dig some good old worms for bait."

The Fearless One.

"With all your wealth are you not afraid of the proletariat?" asked the delver in sociological problems.

"No, I ain't," snapped Mrs. Newrich. "We boil all our drinkin' water."

All Off.

"War in the east was very imminent in the magazine I take."

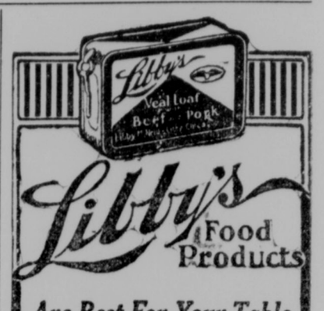
"Well?"

"But the darn thing changed editors."

Getting Acquainted.

"If you suddenly found yourself face to face with President Taft, what would you do?"

"Oh, I guess I'd ask him for a match."



Libby's Food Products

Are Best For Your Table

Because they are made of the choicest materials and guaranteed to be absolutely pure.

Libby's Veal Loaf makes a delightful dish for luncheon, and you will find Libby's

Vienna Sausage
Corned Beef
Pork and Beans
Evaporated Milk

equally tempting for any meal.

Have a supply of Libby's in the house and you will always be prepared for an extra guest.

You can buy Libby's at all grocer's.

Libby, McNeill & Libby
Chicago

WESTERN CANADA

What Governor Deneen, of Illinois, Says About It:

Governor Deneen, of Illinois, owns a section of land in Saskatchewan, Canada. He has said in an interview:

"As an American I am delighted to see the remarkable progress of Western Canada. Our people are flocking across the boundary in thousands, and I have not yet met one who admitted he had made a mistake. They are all doing well. There is scarcely a community in the Middle or Western States that has not a representative in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta."

125 Million Bushels of Wheat in 1909

Western Canada's field crops for 1909 will easily yield to the farmer $170,000,000.00 in cash.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres, and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Railway and Land Companies have land for sale at reasonable prices. Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop. Splendid climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates, wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

For pamphlet "Last Best West," particulars as to suitable location and low settlers' rate, apply to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to Canadian Gov't Agent.

H. M. WILLIAMS
Law Building Toledo, Ohio
(Use address nearest you.) [1]

Cures The OLD SORES That Other Remedies Won't Cure

The worst cases, no matter of how long standing, are absolutely cured by

Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil

Discovered by an Old Railroad Surgeon. All Druggists positively refund money if it fails to cure. 25c, 50c & $1.00

Paris Medicine Co. Celina, Ohio.

Gentlemen: We are requested to say to you that a prominent citizen here—an old soldier—has had a running sore on his leg for a number of years and your DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL cured him. He is prepared to make a sworn statement to this effect. (Signed) WYCKOFF BROS., Druggists.

Made by

E. W. Grove

Maker of

Laxative Bromo Quinine

STOCKERS & FEEDERS

Choice quality; reds and roans, white faces or angus bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.

National Live Stock Com. Co.
At either
Kansas City, Mo. St. Joseph, Mo. S. Omaha, Neb.

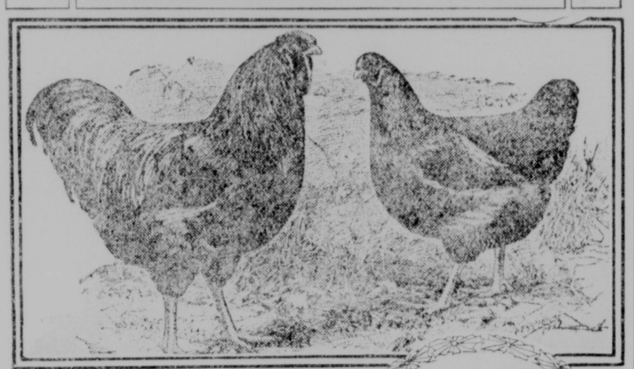
Work While You Sleep

Millions of people have CASCARETS do Health work for them. If you have never tried this great health maker—Get a 10c box—and you will never use any other bowel medicine. 917

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

A FLORIDA CHICKEN FARM



PAIR OF RHODE ISLAND REDS

FOR the last four years I have earned my pin money out of chickens. My hens give me a profit of more than five dollars a head. You think that an enormous yield for chickens? So do I, for I had been raising a few chickens ever since I was a small girl; but I have my account book and so I know just what I spend and what I take in.

My chickens are Rhode Island Reds and bred from the best layers. I have found that there is more in the strain than in the breed of chickens. I carried my chickens with me when I went to Florida, so I know all about them for generations.

Years ago I sold all my other breeds, keeping only the Plymouth Rocks and Rhode Island Reds, because I had proved to my satisfaction that these two breeds gave most eggs in the winter when eggs are scarce and fetch the highest prices. I finally discarded the Plymouth Rocks because I found the Rhode Islanders hardier and lighter feeders, or perhaps I should say better foragers.

This characteristic of their being good foragers has had a good deal to do with my large profits in Florida. I never have given my flock meat. They find insects enough for their own meat supply. Since the first season down there I have never given them a bit of meat except the few morsels that are mixed in the table scraps which they have regularly every day.

In Florida I have not raised my own feed but have bought it in small quantities at the regular retail prices. I have been forced to hire all labor done, such as building and repairing the houses, coops and fences. At my home in Massachusetts, being then a comparatively strong woman, I was able to do all such things myself, and yet my chickens never netted me more than $1.50 a head all the years that I struggled with them.

There in the winter the birds had to be housed and supplied with green and meat food besides their regular rations of grain. In Florida they run in the yards all the year long and get their green food from the small patch of grain which I keep for them at the back of their yard and their own meat by catching insects.

Northern friends who have come to visit me ask if there is not a difference in the prices which I now receive for my chickens and those I sold while in Massachusetts. I am forced to reply that I formerly received somewhat higher prices than are paid in Florida. Most of my eggs and dressed fowls are bought by the largest hotel and though it is run by a northern manager, he expects and gets southern prices. All that the hotel does not take is readily sold to private families, so I never have the expense of shipping.

I do not think any other breed would do as well as my Rhode Island Reds. I let my hens sit on their own eggs. I have found this best in a small flock. A hen must have some time for rest from laying. I never allow a hen to sit more than once in each year, because it is not necessary where all are equally good mothers and where there is a good demand for fresh eggs.

Before the chickens are a month old the mother invariably has begun to lay again. I have four hens that give me 200 eggs each year. They are mother and three daughters. As the mother is now four years old I am looking forward to the time when her yield of eggs will drop off, but even then I think it will pay me to keep her, not only because of the strain, but also because she is an excellent brooder and mother. The ordinary hen I do not think it pays to keep after it is two ears old.

I have found that in Florida the houses have to be much more carefully attended to than in Massachusetts because of the extreme difficulty in keeping down vermin. My houses are all of wood built for ventilation more than warmth. For the first four feet the boards are put on solid to prevent the depredations of what the negroes down here call varmints, that is, minks, 'coons, foxes and stray dogs and cats that may slip through your fence. Above this solid line a space of two inches is allowed between the boards until on a line with the roosts. There again is a solid belt to prevent the chickens from roosting in a draft.

Besides the usual enemies here a chicken raiser has to fight snakes. They slip into the nests and not only swallow the eggs, but often devour young chicks. To fight them a Florida friend told me to get a pig and give her the run of the yard, but to make sure she had no Berkshire blood in her veins. It seems that in Florida, if nowhere else, the Berkshire hog has a reputation of eating flesh and being especially fond of young poultry.

I succeeded in getting a pig of no particular breed, and since then have had no trouble with snakes; indeed it is seldom that one is seen in the place. That pig and her succession of families have driven away all that they haven't eaten up. Oh, yes, the snakes fight for their lives, striking the pigs repeatedly, but this doesn't appear to interrupt the feast. They are calmly caught and chewed up. They say the snake diet doesn't injure the quality of the pork or affect the taste in the slightest, but I much prefer to sell my pigs to serving them on my own table.

I feed my poultry only once a day; I mean the grown fowls. The chicks are fed just as I did in Massachusetts. This one meal is given at night and they have all they will eat up. In the fall months when the grass seeds are ripe the fowls eat very lightly. At the beginning of my venture here I did give a morning feed, but I soon found that the chickens preferred to go to the grain patch and the orange grove when they first jumped down from their roosts.

If I were stronger and able to do all the work myself I am sure I could easily make eight dollars a head. I have heard of several instances down here in which such a profit is made regularly and without a great amount of work.

MARY FINNY URMSTON.

RELATED BY OLD SETTLER

Just a Little Happening in Which He and a Big She-Bear Had Parts.

Senator Boies Penrose, at a dinner at the Philadelphia club, said of a movement that he opposed:

"It promises incredible things. In fact, it makes me think of Jack Travers of Pike county. Jack is an old man now. He remembers the time when bears were as plentiful on the barren mountains as rattlers still are. Once, when I was fishing at Porter's lake, I asked him if he had ever had any remarkable adventures with bears.

"'Well, no, senator,' said the old man, as he filled his pipe with cut plug; 'I can't say as I ever had much to do with bears hereabouts. Wunst, in my sparkin' days, me and a bear got together—twa'n't nothin', though.

"'It all come about over old Sukey, our cow. She had a bad habit of stayin' out late at night. Then I'd have to go to the woods and fetch her home to the milkin'.

"'Well, one night when I wanted to go sparkin', Suke was late agin, and it certainly riz my dander. I started out after her, cussin' a blue streak, and in about an hour I heerd her snortin' and puffin' in the thicket.

"'I'd missed my gal by that time, and I was riled clear through. I cut a saplin' and went for old Sukey. It was too dark to see, but I knew her snuffle, and I grabbed her by the ear and began to lay on with my stick just about proper.

"'The old cow showed fight. She wrestled me around considerable. But I was mad—mad all over—and I half-pushed and half-drug and half-carried her to the barn, and there I tied her up tight and fast, and I milked her in the dark. Afterward I went to bed.

"'I certainly did have to laugh, though, when I come down the next mornin'. G— durned if I hadn't fotched home and milked a big she-bear.'"

Antiquated.

"Man wants but little here below," quoted the poetic person.

"On the contrary," rejoined the practical party, "the classified columns of the modern newspaper prove conclusively that his wants are numerous."

The beauty of the doughnut is the fact that the hole always agrees with the dyspeptic.

When Fate Relented

By Ellen Heney

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

"Oh, it's a sweet little room," said Miss Stiles ironically.

Her gaze roamed pensively over the little hall room she dwelt in, from the plump divan cushions to the book shelf above her cretonne-concealed washstand. A trunk bumped on the landing outside her door and then proceeded with a series of smaller bumps up the stairs and landed with a final crash overhead.

"Some one new." Faint hope flickered up, to die instantly. "But of course no one worth while would come here to live," she mumbled scornfully. Bitter distaste of her surroundings, of her daily grind, of her colorless days arose within her and jogged her momentarily out of the rut of dogged cheerfulness and acceptance of environment that she had forced herself into.

"I hate 'em," thumping her head into the pillows viciously. "I hate everybody." Rising, she faced herself accusingly in the wavy-surfaced mirror. "I hate myself, too. I'm even beginning to crook my little fingers like them—they'll be calling me genteel next. Ugh, I'd rather be bad—downright horrid—than genteel, with a cotton wool brain and a sawdust heart."

A soft wind stirred the ruffled curtain and whisked her hair, and, turning, she thrust her head out into the sunshine.

"Pooh, Sally girl, but you've got the blues," she informed herself, sniffing the crisp air eagerly.

With the stirring of spring sap comes an eagerness in the blood mayhap, but it's the fall for the recklessness and zest of adventure, with its insistent warning whisper of departing days, its urge to make haste, that opens one's eyes to fleeting youth, its fanning breath charged with the last faint scents of summer sweetness. And it moved unwontedly in Sarah Stiles's heart as she sniffed the keen air and softened the repression of her lips.

"Gird up your loins and put on your tan pumps, Sarah, and fare thee forth," she murmured, "and perhaps adventure will hit you on the shoulders, you poor, lonesome thing, and introduce you to an affinity. Any way, the fall air is glorious."

From the woods came the tingling scent of autumn leaves and sun-warmed mosses and cool-shaded depths. A woodpecker accentuated the silence in sharply tapped measures and a squirrel darted across the sun-flecked road.

Miss Stiles kicked her heels against the fence she was perched on and in uncontrollable abandon threw back her head, pursed her lips and poured forth a lilting, whistling refrain of her long ago school days.

Faintly floating from the distance another whistle chimed in, and she paused, the edges of her soul shell drawing together instinctively, but a smile lingered on her lips. Plaintively rising and falling, the notes came nearer. Softly the girl crept to the fringe of bushes overhanging the road and watched the whistler swinging along, his head tilted back, his hands buried in his pockets.

"I wonder," she whispered nervously, "if I dare—um. He looks—er—intelligent—and nice. I believe I will."

Her sweet, shrill whistle joined his; breathlessly she peered out, when suddenly the earth crumbled beneath her feet and laughing, hair-blown, clutching the willowy saplings in her path, she descended into the very arms of the approaching whistler.

While she put straight her hat and tucked in stray hairpins he picked up the scattered crimson leaf clusters and presented them to her.

"Did you learn 'The Farmer Boy' in a little red school house, too?" he wondered, and at the honest wistfulness in his voice the last remnant of Sally's caution melted.

"Foolish, reckless, horrid." The world's thousand voices crooned it warningly in her ear, but she smiled back into the boyish eyes.

"It was a gray stone school house with a boys' yard and a girls' yard, and a pump in front where we all waited our turn for the tin dipper."

"But there was a boy who cleaned your slate and left pink, mint hearts on your desk."

"Engraved 'I love you,'" she assented. "And was there a girl you made cart wheels in front of all the way home—all whirling hands and legs?"

"Gee, I wished you'd gone to my school!" His eyes were shining delightedly, and Miss Stiles sobered suddenly.

"But we're grown-ups now," she sighed. "Only sometimes we forget."

"Wouldn't it be great to slide back to those kid days, when everything was what it seemed, when we cried when we were hurt and laughed when we were glad, and believed in everybody we knew and everything we were told?" he asked.

"Now I smile when I'm hurt and cry when I'm glad," she said.

"Well?" he challenged, his hands still thrust deep in his pocket and his eyes dancing eagerly. "You don't look like a girl who would take a dare."

"I'm no 'fraid-cat," she boasted.

"I know where there's a birch." The laugh in her eyes flickered anxiously.

"Oh-o!"

Her little squeal of delight was genuine. "And we might find some wintergreens. Tough, old ones, you know, with red berries. Oh, it's fine to be a kid."

"Yuh betchyu. 'Tain't no fair to talk like grown-ups, though," he protested.

To think there was a man like this in that grubbing city beyond! Her eyes were as childish and blue as the autumn sky as she protested.

"I'll beat you to that sumac, there, little boy," pointing with outstretched finger. "One, two, three, ready—go."

With that mad scamper, Sarah Stiles began an afternoon of unalloyed, foolish fun that never flagged until she was homeward bound, loaded with the gorgeous foliage of the autumn woods. They paused at a bend in the road, where cottages below were glimpsed through the leaves and a sky of molten gold poured itself into a glittering river. The laughter curves fell away from Miss Stiles's lips in a tired, satisfied sigh.

"But it must be good-by," she was insisting. "Miracles cannot bear repetition. It's a rainbow afternoon for memory—let's not touch it with the stupid finger of reality and shatter it, boy. Besides, if fate is eager and willing."

"You're a silly, little girl," said the man softly. "You're cruel, too. Haven't we grown up together?"

"Very improperly—in one afternoon," she pointed out. "But, don't you understand? I can't be the little girl any more. Any way, I'm afraid, I know—it wouldn't last."

"I can't lure you any more," he said ruefully. "But I am sorry. Here," he drew out a card and rapidly wrote a line upon it. "At least, you'll take this. And if you relent—I'll be waiting."

Running lightly, she started down the road. Then she looked back and while he watched, with a wistfully regretful smile, she tossed the card into the wayside bushes.

She had paused a scant moment in the boarding house hall to survey her tumbled hair when through the curtained door she saw him coming, fumbling a bunch of keys in his hand. With a smothered cry, she fled up to her own room and waited, peering breathlessly through a tiny crack.

It was the same gray figure, with hands deep in his pockets—the very whistling man into whose arms she had almost fallen two hours before. His heavy tread mounted slowly and sounded in the room overhead, where the crash of a trunk had driven her to despair that same day. She buried her head in the cushions, laughing hysterically. Then arising, she surveyed her radiant face in the tiny mirror.

"What a dear, sweet, lovely old thing fate is," she murmured.

The Artist's Compensation.

Save in a few business concerns, great concerns, Harrod's, the army and navy stores and the like, what a strange welter is in our whole system of payment for work—more especially in the higher branches of work! Art and literary work are terrible examples of this confusion and want of science, writes a pessimist in the London Saturday Review. The payments to many of the best workers in those barren fields are so bad that a man is quite sanguine if he sees not at the end of his career the madhouse or the pauper's grave.

If he paint without genius, a painter may, by attracting an ignorant public, make himself secure. If he write without individuality or real force, the writer may likewise make himself secure by driving hard bargains with those who buy and sell his wares. But for the most part good work in these branches is the work of sensitive men, who are still children in money matters and who shrink from bargaining. Politics and public life and business makes a much better game than art or letters.

The Last Word.

Creep into thy narrow bed,
Creep and let no more be said.
Vain thy onset! All stand fast,
Thou thyself must break at last.

Let the long contention cease!
Geese are swans and swans are geese.
Let them have it how they will!
Thou art tired; best be still.

They outtalked thee, hiss'd thee, tore thee?
Better men fared thus before thee;
Fired their ringing shot and pass'd,
Hotly charged—and sank at last.

Charge once more, then, and be dumb!
Let the victors, when they come,
When the forts of folly fall,
Find thy body by the wall!

—Matthew Arnold

TEMPERANCE NOTES

FIGHT AGAINST OPIUM CURSE

Reports From All Parts of Chinese Empire Show Habit Is Being Rapidly Stamped Out.

Ever since the issuance of an imperial edict in China placing opium and opium smoking under a ban reports have been sent out regularly showing the progress of the anti-opium struggle in all parts of the Chinese empire. From these it would appear that the opium habit is being rapidly stamped out, but the Peking correspondent of the Lancet, after an investigation of his own, feels justified in stating that such is not the case. According to his report, in some provinces the demand for opium continues as great as ever and efforts are being made to meet it without official interference to more than a nominal extent. In the province of Shantung, however, where there has been of late a very great increase of opium imports, apparently from Shanghai, the authorities at Kiaochou (the customs port) confiscated 40 cases and imprisoned the owners, thus raising an important legal point as to whether they could do so on an article which comes under treaty regulations and has paid duty according to stipulations.

As far as hospital experience goes one would at first say that opium smoking had almost disappeared. The Chinese have now become secretive and deceptive about it and it is now very rare for a man to seek treatment for smoking or to confess, when being treated for other complaints that he is still addicted to the drug. But among the people about three-tenths have stopped and among the officials about eight-tenths. The latter, however, are subject to examination and stop for varying periods, resuming their smoking after examination.

An exception must be made in the case of army officers. The habit would seem to be entirely abolished in this class of men. It is now rather difficult to buy opium in Peking unless under license, which permits a smoker to buy five drams weight. Each license costs 10 cents and is available for three months after issue. Government regulates the amount purchasable each time, so that a gradual diminution takes place each renewal.

As for morphia, there was undoubtedly a great rise in the number of opium smokers who left off opium and took to hypodermic injections of morphia at the time of the anti-opium edicts and for some months after their issue. But this craze has died down. The reason for the diminution is simply an inability to procure the drug or the hollow needles. At the same time there is a certain amount of morphia taking still. It is sold in an underhand way in Japanese chemists' shops. By those who are willing to pay the cost of this comparatively expensive luxury it can always be got, but if one were to compare Peking with other large cities, such as New York, there would be no difficulty in proving that the number of morphia maniacs in the latter city is very much greater.

URGES ABSTINENCE IN ARMY

Secretary of War Dickinson Encourages Temperance Movement—Its Rapid Progress.

The movement for temperance is spreading among all classes. It has extended to the cadets in the naval school at Annapolis. The members of the first class got together recently and pledged themselves not to use intoxicants, also to exert their influence in this direction with the other classes. They are convinced that the standard of discipline and efficiency can be raised if rum drinking is stopped.

Secretary of War Dickinson has commended voluntary abstinence to all within and without the army.

A letter was read at a mass meeting held in a Washington church for the purpose of inaugurating total abstinence associations in the army and navy. In the letter Mr. Dickinson says:

"I believe in everything that encourages voluntary abstinence both within and without the army. All other things being equal, the man who abstains is better qualified to be a useful and law abiding citizen and to promote his own happiness and that of his family and friends."

The Cocaine Habit.

Probably few readers had any previous knowledge of the prevalence of the cocaine habit so shockingly exposed in the recent proceedings instituted by the pharmaceutical board. This drug is of recent introduction, and in certain limited uses it has been found a highly beneficial agent; in the rapidity with which its abuse has spread among various classes of people its dangers have come to outweigh greatly all its benefits. The very properties which make cocaine useful in skillful hands make it extremely injurious in its continued constitutional effects, says Philadelphia Ledger. Physicians are aware of this danger and of the seductive nature of the drug, and employ it with extreme caution, but all sorts of quacks have seized upon it to pander to a depraved appetite, so that its consumption has been stealthily extended until it has become actually a public menace.

CORN PLANTING IS OVER

THAT CANADIAN TRIP SHOULD NOW BE TAKEN.

If you had intended going to Canada for the purpose of purchasing land on which to establish a home and accompanying some land company, whose holdings you proposed to look over or to go up on your own account to select one hundred and sixty acres of land free, you should delay no longer. Corn-planting is over, your wheat crop is well ahead, and you have a few weeks' time before you are required in the fields again. Now make your intended trip. Reports at hand show that the crop prospects in Canada were never better than they are today. The cool weather has not affected the crop, but if anything, it has been a benefit. There has been plenty of moisture and those who have had their land properly prepared look upon this year as likely to be one of the best they have had. A great many are going up this season who expect to pay two or three dollars an acre more than they were asked to pay last year. Others who wish to homestead are prepared to go farther from the line of railway than would have been necessary last year. Still it is worth it. So it will be with you. Next year lands will be higher-priced and homesteads less accessible. There is a wonderful tide of immigration to Central Canada now. It is expected that one hundred and fifty thousand new settlers from the United States will be numbered by the end of the present year, an increase of fifty per cent over last year. In addition to this there will be upwards of one hundred thousand from the old country, which does not include those who may come from the northern countries of the Continent. These all intend to settle upon the land. The reader does not require an answer to the questions, "Why do they do it?" "Why are they going there in such large numbers?" Western Canada is no longer an experiment. The fact that one hundred and fifty million bushels of wheat were raised there last year as against ninety-five millions the year previous, shows that the tiller of the soil in Central Canada is making money and it is safe to say that he is making more money than can be made anywhere else on the Continent in the growing of grains. He gets good prices, he has a sure and a heavy crop, he enjoys splendid railway privileges, and he has also the advantages of schools and churches and such other social life as may be found anywhere. It is difficult to say what district is the best. Some are preferred to others because there are friends already established. The Grand Trunk Pacific, on its way across the Continent, is opening up a splendid tract of land, which is being taken up rapidly. The other railways—the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern are extending branch lines into parts inaccessible a couple of years ago. With a perfect network of railways covering a large area of the agricultural lands it is not difficult to secure a location. Any agent of the Canadian Government will be pleased to render you assistance by advice and suggestion, and a good plan is to write or call upon him. The Government has located these agents at convenient points throughout the States, and their offices are well equipped with a full supply of maps and literature.

Valued Absences.

"Always speak kindly of the absent," said young Mr. Primly.

"I would," replied Miss Cayenne, "if I thought it would be an inducement to some tiresome people to remain so."

A Trained Nurse's Experiences with Resinol Ointment.

I applied Resinol to an ulcerated leg of six months' standing. Almost everything had been tried to heal it. Made two applications a day for four weeks and leg was permanently healed.

I have used Resinol on children's faces to heal eruptions and for everything that seemed to need an ointment with satisfactory results in every case.

Mrs. Isadore E. Cameron,
Augusta, Me. (Graduated Nurse.)

Horrible Thought.

"But why do you think we are in imminent danger of a war with England?"

"Ain't Alfred Austin just as likely as not to write a poem on the occasion of Roosevelt's visit?"

A Woman's Advice.

A woman was looking over the shoulder of a man who was writing this item, and just when he got to this point, and was writing the word "soap," she said:

"There's one great essential in a laundry soap. It must be a soap that will not rot the clothes or the fabrics. Some soaps will clean goods, but they rot them; others have sticky, yellow rosin in them and stain the clothes yellow. Just you write that Easy Task soap saves half the work and saves all the clothes and drives away the dirt and keeps away the disease germs, and is the best soap I ever found."

And so her advice has been followed, for women know soap.

Give a man health and a course to steer, and he'll never stop to trouble about whether he's happy or not.—G. Bernard Shaw.

Red, Weak, Weary, Watery Eyes.
Relieved By Murine Eye Remedy. Try Murine For Your Eye Troubles. You Will Like Murine. It Soothes. 50c at Your Druggists. Write For Eye Books. Free. Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Men who remain neutral in times of public danger are enemies to their country.—Addison.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months ..... .75
One copy three months ..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1910.

THE STING OF A BEE.

An Eastern fable tells of a potentate who demanded that there should be brought to him the stings of a thousand bees killed because one of their colony had dared commit lese majesty by stinging the hand of royalty. When they were brought in a tiny golden thimble the king was so amazed to find that a thousand of the hypodermic points made such a little mass that he issued a manifesto to the effect that thereafter no person within the bounds of the kingdom should complain at the sting of a bee. The lesson of the fable is that petty annoyances hurt because they are exaggerated in the mind, that when they are seen in their actual proportions they are so slight as to merit only contempt. How much comfort would come to the majority of persons if they could but see the tiny size of the bee stings that leads them to acts of petulance, words of anger, expressions of reproach. The bee sting annoyances have caused lifelong breaches of friendship, they have broken up families and caused anger and resentment to take the place of love and fealty. The big burdens of life often reflect the nobility of their bearers. The heavy tasks impart a benediction upon the toiler, the large duties and responsibilities confer a distinction, but the little things the petty things—how they do wear the spirit and how irksome do they become. It does not do to deny the hurt of the bee, it does not do to say that one is impervious to the stings of insects. It does no good, upon the other hand, to permit the sting to be magnified by the mind. How much better to see the instrument of one's annoyance in its proper proportions and then to assume an attitude of contempt for it, to maintain oneself free from the anger, pain and annoyance that it causes. One may thus become immune to the sting of the bee. Not actually so, but he may find out that some sweetness lurks in the composition of even those who delight to hurt. The power to regard the annoyances of life as indications that there is sweetness at hand, to seek to derive the good rather than complain at the evil is the true philosophy of existence. How puny are the stings of this existence as contrasted with the benefits that life brings everyone. How insignificant the annovances as contrasted with the pleasures of life. Those who would complain about the petty inflictions and the contemptible acts of their fellows towards them have only to look for the hive and they will be rewarded.

It is a wonderful faculty to see things in their proportions and not magnify the evil and ignore the good. The good is a thousand times greater than the evil, the blessings of life many times more than the ills of existence, yet one must learn to seek for the one and bear with the other.

It is difficult to take this view of life. Many who can sustain the slings and arrows of outrageous fortunes cry out against the sting of the bee. Yet when one comes to realize how silly, how wrong is much of the distress evidenced over the sting of the bee, the little annoyance and the infliction may be made a hint of the stores of honey ready for one's gleaning. Few are the graver troubles, numerous the little annoyances, the actual and anticipated sting of the bee. Ridding oneself of the spirit of complaint over trivialities learn to seek the golden stores of honey that are found in every way of life.

TAFT AND BEVERIDGE.

No man in the Republican party today can stand the test of his undeviating Republicanism better than the Indiana Senator whom the Democrats have singled out as the particular object of their miscontruing endeavors. Senator Beveridge, the brilliant orator, the zealous advocate of views matured and fortified, who made the Senate respect him from the time of his entrance into the body, is a man of unsullied Republicanism. Only the perversion of Democratic blind guides could lead them to believe otherwise. The Democrats are rabid in their endeavor to discredit the Republican party before the voters of the country. The siren song of control of the next House has been sung into their ears. The silliest feature of their campaign is the endeavor to accomplish the defeat of Senator Beveridge through misrepresentation. They proclaim that he is the enemy of President Taft when no Republican is more regular in his respect for the head of the nation and the head of the party. They assert that Mr. Beveridge has been at odds with the President upon the leading policies. As a matter of fact, the only policy upon which they have differed is the purely economic one of the tariff, and the difference in this particular has been the honest difference of party men as to the extent to which revision of the tariff should be carried. Mr. Beveridge is a regular Republican. He has no sympathy whatever with the palaver politician. He stands for policies judged by the breadth of benefit they will confer. This determines his position as a regular Republican, if there is any distinction to be made that would call for the use of such a word. He is as thoroughly Republican as any of the great leaders of the party of the past. He has consistently sought to make the force of his individuality felt, and with such success that, while he has at times seemed apart from President Taft, there has never been a difference them that diminished their personal or political mutual esteem. Senator Beveridge and Mr. Taft are both radical, if radical means to indorse measures that the party a decade ago would not have supported. The great economic positions of the Republican party more or less impinge upon the tariff, and for this reason a wider range of view as to the scope of a Republican tariff is possible than was formerly the case. A perfect tariff is impossible of formulation. The degree of satisfaction to be felt in the Payne-Aldrich measure must rest largely with each Republican of competent judgment to determine for himself. The majority of the party believe it to be the best tariff that could have been enacted. While some, like Mr. Beveridge, dissent from such a sweeping declaration, this reflects credit upon the party, showing that its adherents may entertain divergent views while holding to a common position.

It is impossible for the Democrats to understand, much less appreciate, the fact that positions and not opinions count. They are absolutely without a position upon the tariff, the conservatives having repudiated the position of Mr. Bryan, which has been made ridiculous since it was incorporated in the last Democratic national platform. When they harp upon the insurgency of Mr. Beveridge they are indulging in twaddle, as they have no perception of independence within the proper range of individual view as being consistent with loyalty to the policies of a party. President Taft cannot be injured by specious misrepresentation. The persistent misconstruing of the position of Senator Beveridge cannot detract one iota from the strength and value of this vigorous Republican within the ranks of his party.

Men like President Taft, former President Roosevelt and Senator Beveridge, bound together by the strongest ties of mutual devotion to the country and their party, confute allegations of Republican division. The President has no more cordial supporter than former President Roosevelt. The latter is not obligated to destroy the ties of his personal attachment for individuals because they have not in all instances been loyal to President Taft. On the other hand, in his relation to policies Mr. Roosevelt stands firmly committed to the Republican party and to the policies he has always avowed. The only possible difference between his position and that of Mr. Taft is that of method, and here comes in the range of opinion while the position is held in common. Democrats cannot conceive of men in such relations not exhibiting political animosity, because Democrats have no conception of party breadth.

Every effort of his political foes to seek to discredit President Taft and to represent former President Roosevelt or Senator Beveridge as at variance with him simply affords a fresh measurement of the mental and political narrowness of the Democratic leaders and makes the people doubly rejoice that Democratic efforts to gain control of the lower branch of Congress are pursued upon an utterly mistaken notion of what constitutes Republican harmony.

LOVES HIS FRIENDS.

Some of the political leaders and their followers appear unduly exercised over Colonel Roosevelt's reported promise to assist Senator Beveridge in his contest for re-election by making an address to the voters of Indiana. And why shouldn't he aid the Senator? The latter has always been one of the Colonel's ardent admirers and supporters and it is natural in the ex-President to remember favors.

It is probable that Colonel Roosevelt is satisfied to be a plain Republican without the attachments "regular" and "insurgent" which have become so common since he retired from the presidential chair. While Senator Beveridge has shown insurgent tendencies, Senator Lodge has been a stalwart among the regulars, and Colonel Roosevelt has also promised to aid the Massachusetts senator in his contest for re-election. Both of these gentlemen who are regarded so far apart by people who are always looking for trouble, have long been intimate personal friends of Colonel Roosevelt and were earnest supporters of his policies, while he was in public life. The Colonel can stand by his friends without endorsing their positions in political disputes. He couldn't afford to endorse all the political idiocrasies of his friends but remembering their loyalty, he loves them notwithstanding their different ideas of duty. No doubt he expects to see them all drop the names which they have applied to each other and all march under the one banner of Republicanism and to that end he is directing his labors.

To the Board of School Commissioners of Garrett County, Maryland.

GENTLEMEN:

We, the undersigned, endorse the retention of U. G. Palmer as Principal of the Oakland Public and High Schools.

F. A. THAYER	R. L. WOLFE	J. O. WHITE
J. W. WHITE	C. H. ECHARD	CLAUDE BROWN
ARTHUR TOWNSHEND	A. C. WHETSELL	T. W. STEWART
H. C. SINCELL	JOHN A. SOWERS	GROVER STEMPLE
AUSTIN BROWN	R. K. MARONEY	W. O. CLEVELAND
H. W. McCOMAS	W. R. COGLAN	D. H. SHANK
D. E. BOLDEN	THOS. M. TURNEY	MRS. J. H. BOWERS
CHAS. LILLER	W. J. NAIR	M. J. CARNEY
J. C. PEDDICORD	ISAAC TUSING	J. J. TREACY
W. A. STURGISS	THOS. A. GONDER	J. W. MOORE
JNO. G. ROBINSON	J. H. LOAR	H. W. KALE
JOHN W. DAVIS	ANDREW W. HELBIG	J. B. CHEUVRONT
C. F. HAMMOND	J. H. PAINTER	C. F. ROLLINS
BENJ. H. SINCELL	T. E. FLANNIGAN	F. WESTLAKE
N. R. SANNER	MRS. MARY E. BURKE	STUART H. MASON
S. T. JONES	J. W. ARNOLD	J. E. BUSH
W. A. MAFFETT	GEO. T. PORTER	M. A. CARNEY
A. D. NAYLOR	THOS. HARNE	ELMER S. GREEN
PAUL NAYLOR	W. M. TRICKETT	W. H. JOHNSON
JOHN T. MENHORN	KING DELAWDER	G. A. PORTER
C. S. SMOUSE	F. O. GLOTFELTY	WM. H. McROBIE
E. G. NAYLOR	W. H. BYRD	ARCHIBALD CASTEEL
H. R. DEWITT	B. C. FEATHER	GEO. HELBIG
J. T. BROWNING	GEO. C. KILDOW	LEWIS WALTERS
J. A. WHORTON	D. E. OFFUTT	JOHN YELLOLY
ZAIDEE BROWNING	G. S. HAMILL	S. L. RODEHEAVER
MRS. J. T. BROWNING	S. F. HAMILL	A. A. HINEBAUGH
ROSE BROWNING	JAS. A. SINCELL	J. R. COGLEY
R. S. JAMISON	H. S. WHITE	GEO. WELLING
E. H. SINCELL	M. C. HINEBAUGH	S. LAWTON
HY. LAUER	D. DURST	J. L. POLLOCK
B. F. SELBY	A. G. ROSS	W. E SHIRER
JAS. P. TREACY	E. I. WEST	JOS. H. WHITE
JOHN AULT	A. G. STURGISS	E. S. SLABACH
ALEX. C. MASON	C. B. JOHNSON	GEO. J. KILLIUS
J. W. LEATHERS	W. F. BARTLETT	LOUIS UPPERMAN
C. J. NEWMAN	THOS. MARTIN	TRUMAN MILLER
J. M. JARBOE, JR.	J. H. SMITHMAN	D. HINEBAUGH
J. M. JARBOE, SR.	JOHN RICE	R. CONNELL
J. O. HINEBAUGH	G. W. LEGGE	MRS. MOLLIE BELL
CHAS. S. DAVIS	GEO. E. BISHOFF	MRS. E. JAMISON
J. A. KELLY	ORLEY V. DUNHAM	DANIEL COLLINS
D. M. DIXON	W. H. RAVENSCROFT	MRS. C. LITTMAN
W. F. KING	R. H WEST	J. R. MURPHY
JNO. T. MITCHELL	JOHN J. SWEENEY	W. W. GRANT
JOHN M. DAVIS	D. M. MASON	W. H. HENNEN
J. A. GRANT	WADE H. HINEBAUGH	J. A. PAUGH
LEWIS GORTNER	G. W. WILT	GEO. MALE
E. A. WEIMER	F. TEATS	GEO. P. FITZWATER
PHILIP T. PEDDICORD	A. HINEBAUGH	MRS. A. W. HELBIG
W. R. BROWNING	H. A. RASCHE	M. M. GONDER
E. J. M. BUTTON	W. HARDESTY	W. H. LAWTON
H. W. HESEN	G. H. DELAWDER	JAS. BROCK
E. J. FRINGER	F. F. GOSS	MRS. G. C. STEMPLE
C. E. OFFUTT	MRS. M. CONNELL	W. D. REED
A. C. WOTRING	W. S. SHREVE	JNO. W. MARONEY
BEULAH LOUGHRIDGE	CHAS. A. TOWER	MATTHEW MARONEY
ELIZABETH LEARY	ALBERT ASHBY	P. R. MARONEY
OLIVE DEWITT	WM. KILDOW	F. R. BROWNING
E. E. SOLLARS	T. W. TAYLOR	D. E. OFFUTT, JR
A. W. DEWITT	GEO. SHARTZER	J. S. GNEGY
W. G. HINEBAUGH	G. R. WILLIAMSON	J. C MURPHY
E. S. WEST	ERNEST TOWNSHEND	SIMON MYERS
OWEN TREACY	HAMPTON McCROBIE	E. G. TAYLOR
G. A. SHIRER	H. SOELTER	G. SEMMES HAMILL, JR
HARRY W. DAVIS	MAURICE FAIRALL	R. L. FRIES
C. F. LOUGHRIDGE	J. W. COGLEY	ARTHUR LAWTON
MRS. N. THRASHER	L. J. BROWN	R. H. BARTLETT
REBECCA THAYER	UPTON CUPPETT	C. J. RATHBUN
THOS. LITTLE	CLARK DeBERRY	P. A. TINGUE
W. H. JOHNSON	A. S. TEATS	CHAS. A. ASHBY
HARRY HELBIG	D. T. ENLOW	W. L. DAVIS
W. D. DIXON	HY. MYERS	JOHN HELBIG
E. Z. TOWER	W. A. GONDER	ALEX. FLECKENSTEIN
J. C. DUNHAM	OSCAR TURNEY	P. P. LOHR
M. W. CRANE	L. M. FRALEY	J. E. LEGGE
THOS. A. MARTIN	E. E. FRIEND	FLOYD STAHL
ERBIN LANTZ	C. C. CROSS	R. C. TOWNSHEND
WM. NEWMAN	MRS. D. I. TOTTON	B. FRIESE
GEO. W. LEGGE, JR.	MRS. J. D. TAGGART	E. W. HELBIG
M. M. ASHBY	MISS ALICE V. HESEN	W. R. STULL
G. M. MASON	D. L. CONNEWAY	J. D. TAGGART
J. N. ROBINSON	LOUIS BUSH	JENNIE L. MILLER
D. A. STEPHENS	CHAS. E. WHITE	FRANK GRIFFITH
GEO. D. WHITE	J. H. McROBIE	MISS DAISY HANNA
H. CREUTZBERG	MORRELL JAMISON	CHAS. J. BUNCE
D. A. ASHBY	W. E. RICE	S. B. ARONHALT
H. W. SMOUSE	E. H. SMOUSE	B. B. NETHKIN
A. T. MATTHEWS	F. C. BROWNING	T. W. CASTEEL
E. BAUMGARTNER	W. H. SMOUSE	A. G. LIPSCOMB
C. H. LOAR	JAS. WILLISON	G. I. HESEN
LEE R. MASON	A. W. DUTY	WM. MILLER
J. H. MORRIS	C. O. NETHKIN	W. H. BOWERS
J. E. WOODYARD	H. M. CASTEEL	MRS. S. C. LEUTHKE
JAS. D. HAMILL	TRUMAN WEST	MRS. E. FUNDENBURG
E. A. SHAFFER	J. O. CLEVELAND	JAS. A. HAYDEN

Lost.

A Gold Watch, Open face, Waltham movement, black fob, gold charm, initials, N. C. C. Finder will be rewarded. C. B. CROPP.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

TRUSTEES' SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

In Garrett County, Maryland

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Garrett County, passed on the 11th day of July, 1910, in a cause wherein Annie Weir et al. are plaintiffs and James McMillan et al. are defendants, the same being No. 1651 Equity in said court, the undersigned Trustees will on

Saturday, August 6th, 1910,

at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Md., offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, and described as follows, to wit: Being a part of Military Lot No. 4008, containing

3 Acres, More or Less,

and particularly described in a deed from Franklin P. Green and wife to Margaret S. McMillan, dated 31st day of March, 1894, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 24, folio 159, etc., one of the land records of Garrett county, Md.

Said land is improved by a two story dwelling house, stable and outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third cash, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months, (or all cash at the option of the purchaser,) the credit payments to bear interest from the date of sale, and to be secured by the notes of the purchaser, endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF

The First National Bank

AT KITZILLERVILLE,

In the State of Maryland, at the close of business, June 30, 1910.

RESOURCES.

Loans and Discounts		$74,153 29
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		24,900 00
Premium on U. S. Bonds		663 82
Bonds, securities, etc		23,492 30
Banking house, furniture and fixture		11,136 90
Other Real Estate owned		400 00
Due from National Banks (not reserve agents)		459 79
Due from State and Private Banks and Bankers		42 00
Due from approved Reserve Agents		10,304 87
Notes of other National Banks		1,285 00
Fractional Paper Currency, Nickels and Cents		81 00
Lawful Money Reserve in Bank, viz:
Specie	$8,714 10
Legal tender-notes	1,130 00	9,844 10
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent. circulation)		1,249 50
Total		$158,102 57

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in	$ 25,000 00
Surplus fund	8,000 00
Undivided Profits, less Expenses and Taxes paid	234 25
National Bank Notes outstanding	24,900 00
Due to other National Banks	4,118 87
Dividends unpaid	750 00
Individual deposits subject to check	94,895 31
Certified Checks	65
Cashier's checks outstanding	113 49
Total	$158,102 57

State of Maryland, County of Garrett.

I, E. J. Hamill, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

E. J. HAMILL, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this day 7th day of July, 1910.

SUE R. LAUGHLIN, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest: R. A. SMITH,
C. E. HILLEARY,
WADE SAPP,
Directors.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank

Of Allegany County.

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital Stock - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank

Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank

Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department

Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.

Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.

C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.

C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Notice To Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, either in person or by deputy, will be in each of the Election Districts in Garrett county, Maryland, to collect and receive taxes at the time and places following:

July 15—Crellin—Company's Store, 9 to 3.
July 16—Ottoway—Carney's Store, 9 to 3.
July 18—Hoyes Run, 8 to 11.
July 18—Sang Run—Cuppett & Lytle's, 1 to 4
July 19—Friendsville—Crawford Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 20—Selbysport—Riley's Store, 9 to 3.
July 21—Accident—Rhes' Store, 9 to 3.
July 22—Cove—Krouse's Store, 9 to 3.
July 23—Grantsville—National Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 25—Thomas Layman's, 9 to 3.
July 26—T. H. Johnson's, 9 to 3.
July 27—Avilton—Garlitz's Store, 9 to 3.
July 28—Strickland's, 9 to 12.
July 28—Walter Warnick's, 2 to 5.
July 29—Merrill's, 9 to 3.
July 30—C. J. Otto's, 9 to 12.
July 30—Jenning's, 3 to 6.
Aug. 1—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 3—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 4—Beckman—Mellinger's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 4—Swanton—W. H. Lohr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 5—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 6—Red House, 9 to 3.
Aug. 8—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 9—Bloomington—Post Office, 9 to 3.
Aug. 10—Kitzmiller—Bank Building, 9 to 3.
Aug. 11—Kitzmiller—Wilson's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 12—Gorman—J. P. Parr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 13—Bloomington—Moody's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 15—Hoyes—W. A. Smith's Store, 9 to 12.
Aug. 15—McHenry, 2 to 5.

By an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1890, being Chapter 556, Section 45, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of levy thereof; and all taxes paid on or before the first day of September a discount of three per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt for taxes so paid, but the discount allowed on the county taxes by this section shall not be made to any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due by such person or corporate institution for the current year be paid when the same is made.

ROBERT L. FRIES,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

NOTICE OF FIRST MEETING OF CREDITORS.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.

In the matter of Charles C. Frederick, Bankrupt.

IN BANKRUPTCY

To the creditors of Charles C. Frederick, of Friendsville in the county of Garrett, and District aforesaid, a Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1910, the said party was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 1 Washington Street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 6th day of July, A. D., 1910, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

June 20, 1910.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.
G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt	Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis	George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell	William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Miss Ruth Delawder, of Washington, D. C., is here on a visit to her aunt, Mrs. E. A. Weimer.

Mr. John Bond, of Bond, was in Oakland Tuesday and yesterday visiting his brother, Mr. N. U. Bond.

Mr. George T. Brew, of Ronceverte, West Va., visited friends in Oakland for a day or two last week.

Miss Alma Scherr went to Morgantown Tuesday morning where she will visit friends for two weeks.

Try one of our Long Life Batterie on your telephone. Satisfaction guaranteed; 25 cents each. S. Lawton & Sons.

Miss Anna Gonder has returned home from school and will spend the vacation with her mother in Oakland.

Colonel Klem Clement, of Shawnee, Okla., and Texas, has been the guest of Mrs. Bowie Johnson this week.

Mrs. Julian Lynne, of Shenandoah Junction, West Va., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Legge.

Miss Gracia Stemple, who has been on a visit to friends near Clarksburg, has returned to her home in Oakland.

Mr. Joseph E. Harned spent Sunday in Cumberland with his family who are visiting relatives and friends in that city.

Dr. G. C. Keller, of Grantsville, accompanied by his daughter, is in Oakland and at Mountain Lake Park for a few days' visit.

Try the Rock Island Battery for your automobile and telephone. Will outlast any two ordinary ones. A. D. NAYLOR & Co.

Mrs. Frank Jamesson, of Piedmont, W. Va., spent Sunday in Oakland with his wife, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. King Delawder.

Mrs. W. P. Lowry and daughter, Miss Nettie Lowry, of Baltimore, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Shirer at their home on Alder street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Robinson are packing their household effects preparatory to leaving Oakland and will locate either in Cumberland or Philadelphia.

Mrs. Thomas Franklin and children, of Roanoke, Va., are at the home of Mrs. Franklin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Mitchell, for a protracted visit.

Mr. Kimmell Frazee, of near Selbysport, who accompanied County Commissioner W. M. Lowdermilk to Oakland last Sunday afternoon, returned home Tuesday evening.

Mr. B. H. Warner, Jr., of Montgomery county, this State, a candidate for nomination to represent this district in congress, was in Oakland last week, the guest of Mr. W. R. Stull.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Offutt went to Cumberland this morning to attend the funeral of the late John P. Brady, who died at his home near that city Tuesday after a protracted illness.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson Humbird and Miss Jane Baird came to Oakland last Saturday from Cumberland in Mr. Humbird's automobile and spent a few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Offutt.

Mrs. John C. Crane, of near Terra Alta, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Scott T. Jones at their home on Second street for a few days recently, returning home Monday, accompanied by Mrs. Posten.

LOST—On the road between Abel DeWitt's and Henry Casteel's on Saturday, June 25th, a horse contract book. Finder please leave at First National Bank and receive reward. D. J. Swartzentruber.

Mr. E. J. Fringer, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Lulu Fringer, left Oakland Monday morning for an overland trip to Petersburg, W. Va., where they will be guests for a week or two of relatives and friends.

Tomorrow County Treasurer Robert L. Friese will leave for his annual collection tour through the county, going from here to Crellin, thence to Hutton. His itinerary will cover every section of the county. He will be absent from his office for upwards of a month.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawton & Sons.

It is no doubt easier to stop the exhibition of the fight pictures than it would be to stop the fights which the exhibition would produce, and the easy way is the safe one for the present. Perhaps later—along when the snow flies and the temperature of the white and black blood is lower—it may be safe to exhibit the pictures. By that time not so many will want to see them, and those who care to take a look at them will wonder why they were ever so foolish as to get excited over the fight or the pictures.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

CAPITAL 50,000.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Pays 3 Per Cent. on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor.

COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

Orphans' Court Proceedings.

Tuesday morning with all members of the Court present the following were the proceedings of the Orphans' Court for Garrett county:

First and final account of James A. Kelley, guardian of John Swan Truly, was ratified and confirmed.

First and final account of Mary E. Pysell, executrix of Andrew Pysell, deceased, ratified and confirmed.

G. Semmes Hamill was appointed guardian to Russell Chisholm.

Elizabeth B. Leary was appointed guardian of Edward W. Leary.

Inventory of the personal estate of Richard E. Garlitz, deceased, filed, and an order of sale was passed.

The last will and testament of Eli Stanton, deceased, probated and admitted to record.

Primaries on August 30th.

Chairmen Hanna and Vandiver, of the Republican and Democratic State Committees, have agreed upon Tuesday, August 30th, as the date on which to hold the congressional primaries throughout the State, except in the Fifth District, in which Hon. Thomas Parran was nominated by the convention system just prior to the announcement of Attorney-General Straus' opinion.

Doing a Good Work.

J. Ed. Kildow, of Elkins, was in Salem Monday, having brought a young girl to the Industrial Home. Mr. Kildow established a Children's Home at Elkins about two years ago, and since that time has placed almost one hundred children in good homes as members of the family. He has at the home twenty-five children at this time and would like to correspond with good people who need and should have children. Write and tell him what you would like to have and he will please you.—Salem Herald.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Hattie Wolfe, Edna Frazee, Mrs. Dora Grace, Clark Groves, Mrs. Jane Hardesty, Mrs. May Rhodes, E. D. Simons, B. F. Michael, Mary Moreland, Roy Lowrie, J. P. Hughes, Mrs. Mamie Conner, Cora Carter, Sue Kissner, S. J. Lichtz.

The Medical Association of Allegany and Garrett counties held its semi-annual meeting at the court house in Oakland yesterday afternoon. The sessions were attended by quite a number of physicians and matters of interest to the medical profession were freely discussed. At the close of the meeting the visiting gentlemen were entertained at supper by the local professional men.

Tuesday morning the commissioners appointed by the Supreme Court of the United States to survey the boundary between the States of Maryland and West Virginia, accompanied by a corps of chainmen, flagmen and axemen, and taking with them a load of camp equippage, supplies, etc., left Oakland for Fairfax Stone where the survey was begun yesterday morning under the direction of Messrs. Brown, Monroe and Gannett, the commissioners.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

There was a quiet wedding in town Tuesday night, at the residence of David R. Beavers. The parties were Andrew Werner, widower, from Eglon, and Mrs. Adaline Sypolt, widow, from near Oakland. Rev. G. W. Bent made the nuptial knot. The groom is well known in this county, where he resided many years, but has been located in the West for several years and came back home for another wife. The groom is 69 and the bride 60. He is a number 3 and she is a number 2. They are thinking of locating in Kingwood.—Kingwood Argus.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Church Services.

ST PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching at 10,45 a. m., and 8 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

ST. MARK S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching 10:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES. Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E.

Service every Sunday at 11 a. m.
Sunday School at 2:30 p. m.

W. H. SHEARER

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Deer Park—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 8 p. m. Subject, "Having done all, stand."
Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

DEER PARK.

Mr. Leslie Buckler and Miss Bessie Buckler, of Baltimore, are being entertained by Mr. and Mrs. James Swan Frick at their lovely cottage, Hunting Ridge. They contemplate remaining here for a few weeks before departing for the Adirondacks.

Col. Charles H. Heyl, U. S. A., retired, came up from his Washington home. He and his coachman made the entire trip by wagon, four days being consumed, the rest of the family coming by train in a little less than six hours. Col. Heyl's route took him to Winchester, Va.; to Capon Bridge, to Romney, W. Va.; thence over the Northwestern pike to Ridgeville, and thence to Deer Park through Blaine, W. Va., crossing the Great Backbone Mountain that looms up so prominently from Deer Park.

Col. Heyl and his family will shortly entertain at their cottage, White Oaks, Captain and Mrs. Sewell. Captain Sewell is also a retired officer of the army. The Sewells reside in Philadelphia. Miss Julia Heyl will shortly entertain in honor of Miss Marshall, of Washington, daughter of General Marshall, chief engineer of the army.

Mrs. C. K. Lord, of Baltimore, is visiting her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. Marshall Bell, of Pittsburg, here at the Lord cottage on Congress avenue. They made the trip here in their automobile, occupying but a few hours, coming by way of Uniontown, Pa. Last Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Bell entertained a small dinner party, Mrs. C. K. Lord, Miss Olivia Turnbull and her brother, Mr. Horatio Turnbull, being presennt.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Powelson, of New York, who have apartments at the Deer Park Hotel, gave a children's party last Friday afternoon in honor of the birthday of their little child.

Mr. Lawrence T. Turnbull is visiting his mother at her cottage, Red House.

Mr. J. Fred Kreil, Jr., and Mr. A. L. Gable, of Baltimore, and Mr. Howard Thrasher, of Gassaway, W. Va., spent the early part of last week at Uplands, near Deer Park, the summer home of Miss Irene Haulenbeek and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Elmer Haulenbeek, of Baltimore.

The hotel orchestra this year, a very excellent one, is presided over by Mr. George S. Dunham.

Miss M. D. Talley, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Jessie C. McCubbin, of Mount Washington, Baltimore county, Maryland, are guests at "Uplands," near Deer Park.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Male entertained at dinner last Sunday, the Messrs. W. T. Sines, Abraham Lincoln Sines and John Sines. These gentlemen belong to the Dunkard church and held services near the Male farm on Sunday afternoon. The Messrs. Sines are located at Swallow Falls.

Miss Irene Haulenbeek, of Deer Park, went to Philadelphia last Sunday night on train No. 12. She made a very brief visit returning on Wednesday.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real EState

In Garrett County, Maryland

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Allen Garlitz and wife to Mary L. Sloan, dated the 31st day of March, 1905, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 45, folio 374, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named therein, hereby give notice, that on

Friday, August 5th, 1910,

at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m. in front of The First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Maryland, they will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all that tract or parcel of land situate in Garrett county, Maryland, about two miles west of Swanton, described as follows:

Beginning for the same at a stake and stonepile standing about 1 perch southwest of a black pine tree marked as a pointer and standing also at the beginning of the last line of a tract conveyed by J. R. Anderson to John A. Wagner, and running thence with the 10th line of said conveyed tract reversed, South 63 West, 74½ perches to a stake and stonepile in the 3rd line of a tract conveyed by C. M. Miller and wife to John E Steiding, and with the 3rd and 2nd lines thereof reversed, with an allowance of 3¼ for magnetic variation, North 20 East, 122 perches to a double pine tree, West, 65½ perches to a stake in a corner of field, North, 72 perches to the end of the last line of Military Lot No. 186, and with said line reversed, East, 89½ perches to a stake and stonepile, South 25 East, 84 perches to a stake and stonepile at the beginning of the 3rd line of a tract of land conveyed by J. R. Anderson to Mrs. Lucy McRobie, and with said 3rd line South 41 East 60 perches to a stake and stonepile, South 52 West, 94 perches in the last line of said conveyed tract to John A. Wagner, and with said line reversed to its beginning, North 25 West, 36 perches to the beginning, containing,

105¼ Acres, More or Less.

Terms of sale as prescribed in said mortgage, cash on day of sale.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorneys for said mortgagee named in mortgage.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE.

Offutt & Renninger, Trustees, v. E. M. Robinson.

No. 1659 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Notice is hereby given to the creditors of E. M. Robinson to file their claims in this cause with the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, properly authenticated on or before the 29th day of July, 1910, as I shall proceed to state an account on the 30th day of July, 1910, distributing the funds in the hands of the trustees in said cause.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Auditor.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have avariety of kinds and at any price.

TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.
RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.
AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.
CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.
SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S

FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

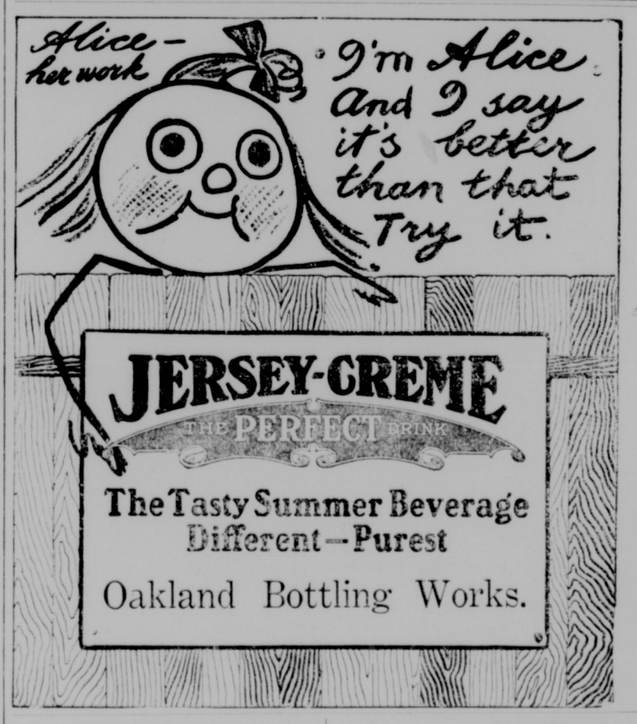
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Tax Department
LAST NOTICE

Oakland, Md., June 29, 1910.

All persons owing taxes for the years 1908 or 1909 will please make immediate payment. Kindly remit at once and save me the very unpleasant duty of advertising property as I must have money to meet claims now due.

Address W E HOLLINGER, Treasurer, Oakland, Md.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following county road is to be re-located. The road to be re-located is known as the Mansfield Road, in the North end portion between Fahey and Hughes and Fahey and Mansfield, so as to give said road a more gradual and better grade, and examine whether the said re-location should be made will meet on the 13th day of August, A. D. 1910, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said re-location and if so to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

GEORGE GEISSMAN,
JONAS YUTZY,
W. H. SMOUSE,
Examiners.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt

The dividend is at the rate of 2 13-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allow and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 20th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

Mourning Apparel

THE death of England's king throws nearly all the courts of Europe into mourning and in consequence the subjects of mourning apparel and mourning etiquette are up for consideration more generally than for many years. Customs change slowly, especially those which rule in matters of greatest moment. Rules of etiquette governing in the events of death, marriage, births and social functions of high importance have all been carefully thought out and are the crystalized expressions of consideration for others. They are formulated from the conduct of those whose good taste and keen intuitions put them in position to set examples. Much latitude is allowed individual taste in the matter of mourning apparel. Some people decry any special dress for those in mourning, on the ground that we should not divide our sorrows with others. But the great majority feel that the assumption of mourning attire is imperative as a sign of respect to the dead or to his family as well as an outward token of a sense of loss. To ignore a death seems to cast a slight upon the worth of the departed soul; therefore, an increasing number of persons in the best social circles assume what is called "complimentary mourning." This is either a badge of mourning of some sort, or the wearing of black for a short term. This is a different matter from the mourning apparel assumed by members of a family. Complimentary mourning does not involve the restrictions which that of relatives assumes. Certain fabrics are chosen for those in mourning. These are crape, silk genadine, nuns-veiling, bombazine, net, uncut velvet, crepe-de-chine, mourning silks, felt, voile and other fabrics of a jet black hue and soft luster or dull finish. Crape is recognized as the correct fabric for first mourning everywhere, and is in fact the insignia of mourning. Crape is used as a finish, or decoration, on other fabrics, and sometimes entire garments are made of it. It is a beautiful fabric made of silk and having diagonal rib or crinkle across the surface. It is made in both dull and silky luster; the dull finish is considered the more elegant. Recently it is much used in dress accessories, such as collars, cuffs and bands, and in stoles and muffs, for those in deep mourning. Silk grenadine is very generally worn in this country for veils, as shown in Fig. 1. It is light in weight, supple and durable. It is used in the open weaves for face veils and is often bordered. For summer, large mesh silk veils, bordered with a fold of crape, are worn, with millinery made of or trimmed with these materials, the crape nearly always appearing in a flat border or fold. English manufacturers have succeeded in waterproofing these fabrics so that rain or moisture does them no harm.

The transition from deep mourning to colors is accomplished gradually. After a certain period of time, more or less long at the discretion of the wearer, the mourning veil is discarded; next crape is eliminated. The attire is next all black, but not necessarily of recognized mourning fabrics. After black, gray, the cold lavenders and white are worn. White may be worn with black accessories for mourning, and is correct, but is more often assumed for what is called "second mourning," that is, in the period of transition from mourning to colors.

There is nothing so dignified and nothing more elegant than a well-chosen mourning costume. In choosing models or patterns for making mourning gowns or hats (or any garment) plain, neat and elegant designs are correct. Nothing "fussy" is admissible. No extremes of the mode are to be considered. For millinery neither very large or very small hats, but those in shapes which are always worn should be selected. Exquisite workmanship must characterize the work of both milliner and dressmaker. Fortunately the regular mourning fabrics, crape, bombazine and nuns veiling, all are adapted to the sort of work required.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

FOR YOUNG LADY.

This is a very smart frock suitable to be made in cashmere, silk and wool crepon, or any fine woolen.

The corselet bodice and side of skirt are cut in one to below hips; the front is a panel to foot; the lower part of side and back of skirt is plaited; braiding forms the trimming on skirt and front of bodice, a simple border being worked at edge of the shoulder straps. The under-slip is of piece lace.

Materials required: 6 yards 46 inches wide, 2 yards 18 inches wide for under-slip.

Like a Rose.

The rosette on a plain sailor hat gives all the richness necessary. Folded like a rose into a round shape, a bias piece of Persian silk has been so manipulated that its final effect would suggest both expense and art.

USEFUL FOR THE TRAVELER

Pin Case An Almost Indispensable Requisite When One Is on a Journey.

A new form of the well-known pin case for traveling is being shown just now that makes acceptable prizes or a present for European travelers.

The case is formed like a wallet with a flap at the side that buttons over with a patent clasp. This is made of cardboard covered first with cotton batting, then with cretonne, fancy brocades, ribbons or with an embroidered linen case.

Inside there is a single leaf adjusted to back of case like the page of a book. This is covered on both sides with white elderdown or flannel, which is carried over to line the sides of case as well.

In this lining is stuck on the outer east safety pins in all sizes and colors. On both sides of the inner page are arranged big headed pins in various sizes and color. These can form fancy borders or a star figure below and a border or other artistic grouping.

These cases may be made in any convenient size; one four by five inches gives plenty of space.

Silk Seams.

The making of a silk blouse is rendered all the more difficult, where the home dressmaker is concerned, by the fact that the seam to lie flat must be ironed, while a hot iron is only too apt to mark the silk indelibly. By far the best course to pursue is that of passing each seam, open or closed, over the upturned edge of a warm iron. With both hands the seam should be pulled taut and slowly passed over the iron, care being taken to avoid touching more than the seam with the point or side and thereby marking the material underneath.

About Veils.

When money is scarce there seems nothing that runs away with one's money so fast as veils. Their life is a very short-lived one and often a misadventure ruins them as soon as bought. Yet we must wear them if we want to look smart, and to buy cheap ones is morse than useless, as they never look well from the day they are bought. The truest economy is to buy fine net by the yard, says the Woman's Life. It cuts to better advantage, you get four veils for the price of one, and it is of a far better quality and lasts longer than if you buy veiling pure and simple.

The KITCHEN CABINET

"LET us be content to work,
To do the thing we can, and not presume
To fret because it's little."
—E. B. Browning.

The Woman With a Grievance.

We all know her and have had her griefs and worries loaded on to an already burdened back. It certainly is a comfort to some people to divide their discomforts by sharing them and a normal person never will refuse to take the recital of trials and give in return a full measure of sympathy; but there are people who should not be sympathized with, it is the worst possible thing for them. What they need is a good dose of cold facts and be made to realize that they are not of all women the most miserable. Let them "count their mercies, name them one by one," and they will find many silver sides to their clouds.

She who comes with tales of her husband, his faults, failings and shortcomings, is the one who raises the ire of the high-minded woman. Would she enjoy the idea of knowing that her husband canvassed their private affairs with his friends as they met? She would be deeply hurt and indignant, and yet she does the same thing herself. The golden rule must be worked both ways or it is of little value in the home. One person cannot do all the thoughtful, kind things without making others selfish. Selfishness is a many-sided evil. Some of the most self-denying people are the most selfish, for they enjoy doing the things for others that they should be taught to do for themselves.

How often a mother teaches the child the very evil she would shield it from, because of her deep love, which is not quite deep enough to wound the child sometimes for his own good.

She cannot bear to see it suffer, yet she builds for a future suffering immeasurably greater.

Unpopular Portions of Meat.

The livers of calves, cooked with bacon, are liked by many; but there seems to be a prejudice against the brains and kidneys as food. The French cook prepares many nice dishes from these portions.

In these days of high prices, every edible part of the meat should be used.

"WITH aching hands and bleeding feet
We dig and heap—lay stone on stone;
We bear the burden and the heat
Of the long day and wish 'twere done,
Not till the hours of light return
All we have built do we discern."
—Matthew Arnold.

A Bride's Salad.

Peel an average sized apple, cut in dice and mix with one-half the quantity of pineapple and about a tablespoonful of pecan or hickory nuts. Arrange lettuce on plates and heap the salad mixture on the lettuce. Lay on a few strips of fresh cocoanut cut thin. Cover with whipped cream and add a strawberry or two, or a cherry.

For a pot roast, one may buy a small piece of meat, although it is never quite as nice as a larger one. A delicious flavor will be added to the roast if a half pound of prunes are cooked with the meat. They may then be pickled and served with the meat.

For an emergency dessert when mother drops in to dinner, take stale cake, cut in squares and toast, spread each square with preserves, put two together and cover with sweetened whipped cream.

Some Dishes a Little Unusual.

A nice dinner dish, or one suitable for luncheon, is canelon of veal. To prepare it, chop together one-half pound of cold, cooked veal, and the same amount of boiled ham. Add one tablespoonful of grated lemon peel, one-half teaspoonful of mace, salt and pepper to taste, and two well beaten eggs. Add cream enough to mold it into a loaf; dust with flour; brush with egg and serve.

Stuffed Potato Croquettes.

Prepare a potato mixture of one and one-half cupfuls, one tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of pepper; form into croquettes, make an opening in the end and fill with chopped green pepper that has been sauted in a little butter. Add a yolk of egg and just sufficient milk to the croquette to make it easy to mold.

Parsons Sponge.

Line a glass dish with stale cake cut in slices, or with lady fingers. Sprinkle thickly with finely chopped nuts, add a few dates and raisins, cut fine, and over this pour a boiled custard, garnishing with the beaten white of egg poached by spoonfuls in hot milk. Cubes of jelly add to the beauty of the dish.

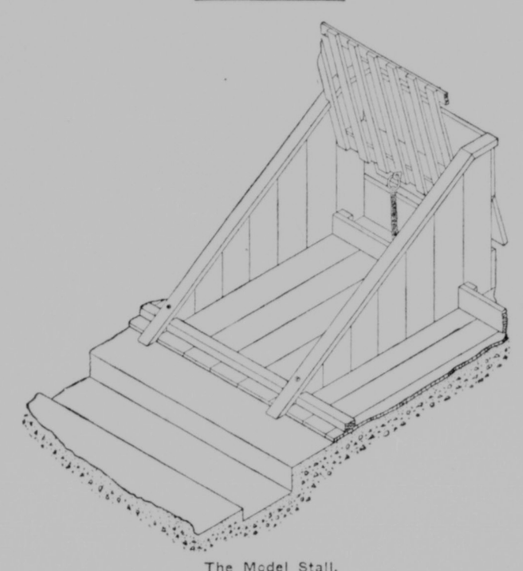
Summer Dishes.

When looking for something to give variety to our menus, a few new recipes, new to many, may be helpful. Here are some, good because tried and proved by many trials.

Nellie Maxwell

NECESSITY OF HAVING SANITARY COW STALLS

Dairymen Awakening to Subject to Meet Demands for Pure Milk and Its Products—Inexpensive and Easy to Make.



The Model Stall.

(By C. A. OCOCK, University of Wisconsin, Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The demand for pure milk, produced under sanitary conditions, is constantly increasing, and to produce such milk it is necessary to have clean cows kept in sanitary stalls. That dairymen of the state are realizing the wisdom of constructing sanitary barns is shown by the many inquiries for information on this subject. This awakening among the dairymen is in part an outcome of the pure food laws which have been enacted to meet the demand for pure milk and its products.

Sanitary cow barns should contain sanitary fastenings for securing the cows, but this does not necessarily imply that such fastenings need be patented. There seems to be a prevailing impression among dairymen that a comfortable sanitary stall or stanchion is an expensive factory product, while the fact is that any farmer who is handy with carpenters' tools can build a stall which will secure as good results as any patented stall upon the market. The stalls described in this bulletin embody in their construction all of the principles found in any of the patented stalls and the dairyman may easily choose a stall among these types which will meet the needs of the average dairy.

The average dairyman of 20 years ago gave the sanitary stall little consideration and used any method of building which best suited his individual ideas. He cared little about the condition of the cow at milking time so long as she gave the milk. The most of the old dairy barns are so arranged that it is impossible to keep cows clean in them.

The Model stall is a home made product and was originated by ex-Gov. W. D. Hoard. He has used this stall in his own stables for several years and finds it very satisfactory. It is probably the nearest approach of a perfect stall of any in use at the present time. It is constructed, as shown in illustration, so as to force the cow to have her hind feet between the crossbar and gutter when standing, thus preventing the fouling of the stall by her own droppings. When lying down she is brought forward and compelled to lie in front of the crossbar. The cow is forced to stand back from the hay rack when eating because of the position in which it is hung. The crossbar is adjustable and the stall will accommodate a large or small cow. The chain or fastening is so arranged that as the cow starts to lie down she is drawn forward and will step in front of this crossbar to prevent an uncomfortable position. The door in front is hinged at the top and opens upward when grain and water are given. Hay is placed in the hay rack from the front. The partitions are so constructed that it is almost impossible for a cow to step upon the udder or teat of one lying down next to her. This feature alone is worth the cost of several stalls to the owner of valuable individuals.

A wooden mat is laid over the concrete floor. This mat is removable, permitting the cleansing of the entire floor whenever occasion demands. If it seems desirable the manger may be constructed of concrete the same as the floor and where new stalls are being erected the manger and floors should be made at the same time. This construction will be more durable than separate construction.

RECORD-MAKING JERSEY COW

At the New Jersey experiment station the dairy herd is composed of strictly business animals. Both grades and pure-bred animals are kept, the basis of their membership in the herd being production rather than genealogy. The cow shown herewith is Manda King 2d, No. 184023, says American Agriculturist. She is a pure-bred Jersey. During 10 months in 1908 she yielded 10,308 pounds of milk containing 573 pounds of butter. During six months and 24 days in 1909 she yielded 8,249 pounds of milk containing 458 pounds of butter.

MUCH DANGER IN PASTURING

When Desired to Turn Mare and Colt on Grass It Should Be Done Gradually, as Sudden Change Is Dangerous.

(By W. J. LLOYD.)

When the mare has been kept at work up to a short time before foaling, and has been fed a grain ration, and then after foaling is turned out to pasture with her foal, it is safe to say the foal's death warrant is signed.

Mares that have been worked moderately up to the time they are due to foal are quite certain to have good husky foals, and after the foals have got a good start on the dam's milk that has been formed from rich grain food, all goes well until she is turned out on grass.

Then the composition of the milk is changed and the grass milk is like so much poison to the colt, its bowels become loose, and he sucks more and more, until at last he has the scours and dies.

The result is not caused by eating poison grasses or weeds, but by the sudden change in the composition of the mare's milk due to a change in her food.

When it is desired to turn the mare and colt out to grass, get them accustomed to the change gradually.

When the mare is allowed to run in the pasture at night and fed a full grain ration she may safely be turned out to grass with her foal, but her grain food must be continued to insure good results.

I believe that it pays to feed the mare and her foal a little grain food every day, although very few follow this practise.

Damage by Rats.

The government estimates that rats alone do damage to crops, grains, food and other things to the amount of $100,000,000 a year.

GETTING RICH RAPIDLY ENOUGH.

"He doesn't believe in trusts."

"He doesn't need to. He owns a summer resort hotel."

SKIN HUMOR 25 YEARS

"Cuticura did wonders for me. For twenty-five years I suffered agony from a terrible humor, completely covering my head, neck and shoulders, so even to my wife, I became an object of dread. At large expense I consulted the most able doctors far and near. Their treatment was of no avail, nor was that of the —— Hospital, during six months' efforts. I suffered on and concluded there was no help for me this side of the grave. Then I heard of some one who had been cured by Cuticura Remedies and thought that a trial could do no harm. In a surprisingly short time I was completely cured. S. P. Keyes, 147 Congress St., Boston, Mass., Oct. 12, '09."

Face Covered with Pimples

"I congratulate Cuticura upon my speedy recovery from pimples which covered my face. I used Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent for ten days and my face cleared and I am perfectly well. I had tried doctors for several months but got no results. Wm. J. Sadler, 1614 Susquehanna Ave., Philadelphia, May 1, 1909."

Fido's Exercise.

"Justin," said Mrs. Wyss.

"Yes," said Mr. Wyss.

"Will you speak a kind word to Fido and make him wag his tail? He hasn't had one bit of exercise today."—Scraps.

Your Great Grandmother Made Soap.

She would fill a barrel with wood ashes, let rain water seep through them to make lye, and then have a soap boiling day, using all the bacon rinds and scraps of fat meat and grease she had saved. She made soft soap. Nowadays women don't have to ruin their tempers and their health and their looks making soap, or toiling all day over the washing. Easy Task soap—a pure, white laundry soap made of clean tallow, cocoanut oil, borax and naphtha does the hard work in the laundry and everywhere else in the house that a safe and sure cleaner is needed.

His Approach Heralded.

The pet cat, wearing a bright red ribbon around his neck, was chatting democratically with a stray cat, on the back verandah. "I wonder what's the matter with me, Maltese," said the pet cat; "I can't stalk a mouse successfully to save my lives."

"No wonder," said the stray cat, disdainfully, "if all your neckties are as loud as that you're wearing."

TAKE A FOOT BATH TO-NIGHT

After dissolving one or two Allen's Foot-Tabs (Antiseptic tablets for the foot-bath) in the water. It will take out all soreness, smarting and tenderness, remove foot odors and freshen the foot. Allen's Foot-Tabs instantly relieve weariness and sweating or inflamed feet and hot nervousness of the feet at night. Then for comfort throughout the day shake Allen's Foot-Ease the antiseptic powder into your shoes. Sold everywhere 25c. Avoid substitutes. Samples of Allen's Foot-Tabs mailed FREE or our regular size sent by mail for 25c. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

"Foot-Tabs for Foot-Tubs."

To love and to serve is the motto which every true knight should bear on his shield.—Downs.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM
BRIGHT'S DISEASE
DIABETES BACKACHE
NUMBER 375 "Guaranteed"

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, New York

Keep Fit

Your brain, muscles and nerves depend upon good physical condition. Secure it by using

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Sold Everywhere. In boxes 10c. and 25c.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. It developed that the intruder was probably a woman.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

"Liddy," I called, "go through the house at once and see who is missing, or if any one is. We'll have to clear this thing at once. Mr. Jamieson, if you will watch here I will go to the lodge and find Warner. Thomas would be of no use. Together you may be able to force the door."

"A good idea," he assented. "But—there are windows, of course, and there is nothing to prevent whoever is in there from getting out that way."

"Then lock the door at the top of the basement stairs," I suggested, "and patrol the house from the outside."

We agreed to this, and I had a feeling that the mystery of Sunnyside was about to be solved. I ran down the steps and along the drive. Just at the corner I ran full tilt into somebody who seemed to be as much alarmed as I was. It was not until I had recoiled a step or two that I recognized Gertrude, and she me.

"Good gracious, Aunt Ray," she exclaimed, "what is the matter?"

"There's somebody locked in the laundry," I panted. "That is—unless—you didn't see any one crossing the lawn or skulking around the house, did you?"

"I think we have mystery on the brain," Gertrude said wearily. "No, I haven't seen any one, except old Thomas, who looked for all the world as if he had been ransacking the pantry. What have you locked in the laundry?"

"I can't wait to explain," I replied. "I must get Warner from the lodge. If you came out for air, you'd better put on your overshoes." And then I noticed that Gertrude was limping—not much, but sufficiently to make her progress very slow, and seemingly painful.

"You have hurt yourself," I said sharply.

"I fell over the carriage block," she explained. "I thought perhaps I might see Halsey coming home. He—he ought to be here."

I hastened to the lodge.

"Where is Warner?" I asked.

"I—I think he's in bed, ma'am."

"Get him up," I said, "and for goodness sake open the door, Thomas. I'll wait for Warner."

"It's kind o' close in here, ma'am," he said, obeying gingerly, and disclosing a cool and comfortable-looking interior. "Perhaps you'd keer to set on the po'ch an' rest you'self."

It was so evident that Thomas did not want me inside that I went in.

"Tell Warner he is needed in a hurry," I repeated, and turned into the little sitting room. I could hear Thomas going up the stairs, could hear him rouse Warner, and the steps of the chauffeur as he hurriedly dressed. But my attention was busy with the room below.

On the center table, open, was a sealskin traveling bag. It was filled with gold-topped bottles and brushes, and it breathed opulence, luxury, femininity from every inch of surface. How did it get there? I was still asking myself the question when Warner came running down the stairs and into the room. He was completely but somewhat incongruously dressed, and his open, boyish face looked abashed. He was a country boy, absolutely frank and reliable, of fair education and intelligence—one of the small army of American youths who turn a natural aptitude for mechanics into the special field of the automobile, and earn good salaries in a congenial occupation.

"What is it, Miss Innes?" he asked anxiously.

"There is some one locked in the laundry," I replied. "Mr. Jamieson wants you to help him break the lock. Warner, whose bag is this?"

He was in the doorway by this time, and he pretended not to hear.

"Warner," I called, "come back here. Whose bag is this?"

He stopped then, but he did not turn around.

"It's—it belongs to Thomas," he said, and fled up the drive.

To Thomas! A London bag with mirrors and cosmetic jars of which Thomas could not even have guessed the use! However, I put the bag in the back of my mind, which was fast becoming stored with anomalous and apparently irreconcilable facts, and followed Warner to the house.

Liddy had come back to the kitchen; the door to the basement stairs was double-barred, and had a table pushed against it; and beside her on the table was most of the kitchen paraphernalia.

"Did you see if there was any one missing in the house?" I asked, ignoring the array of sauce pans, rolling pins and the poker of the range.

"Rosie is missing," Liddy said with unction. She had objected to Rosie, the parlor maid, from the start. "Mrs. Watson went into her room, and found she had gone without her hat. People that trust themselves a dozen miles from the city, in strange houses, with servants they don't know, needn't be surprised if they wake up some morning and find their throats cut."

After which carefully veiled sarcasm Liddy relapsed into gloom. Warner came in then with a handful of small tools, and Mr. Jamieson went with him to the basement. Oddly enough, I was not alarmed. With all my heart I wished for Halsey, but I was not frightened. At the door he was to force Warner put down his tools and looked at it. Then he turned the handle. Without the slightest difficulty the door opened, revealing the blackness of the drying room beyond!

Mr. Jamieson gave an exclamation of disgust. "Gone!" he said. "Confound such careless work! I might have known."

It was true enough. We got the lights on finally and looked all through the three rooms that constituted this wing of the basement. Everything was quiet and empty. An explanation of how the fugitive had escaped injury was found in a heaped-up basket of clothes under the chute. The basket had been overturned, but that was all. Mr. Jamieson examined the windows; one was unlocked, and offered an easy escape. The window or the door? Which way had the fugitive escaped? The door seemed most probable, and I hoped it had been so. I could not have borne, just then, to think that it was my poor Gertrude we had been hounding through the darkness, and yet—I had met Gertrude not far from that very window.

"But Before We Go On, I Want to Say This."

I went upstairs at last, tired and depressed. Mrs. Watson and Liddy were making tea in the kitchen. In certain walks of life the tea pot is the refuge in times of stress, trouble or sickness; they give tea to the dying and they put it in the baby's nursing bottle. Mrs. Watson was fixing a tray to be sent in to me, and when I asked her about Rosie she confirmed her absence.

"She's not here," she said; "but I would not think much of that, Miss Innes. Rosie is a pretty young girl, and perhaps she has a sweetheart. It will be a good thing if she has. The maids stay much better when they have something like that to hold them here."

Gertrude had gone back to her room, and while I was drinking my cup of hot tea, Mr. Jamieson came in.

"We might take up the conversation where we left off an hour and a half ago," he said. "But before we go on, I want to say this: The person who escaped from the laundry was a woman with a foot of moderate size and well arched. She wore nothing but a stocking on her right foot, and, in spite of the unlocked door, she escaped by the window."

And again I thought of Gertrude's sprained ankle. Was it the right or the left?

CHAPTER VIII.

The Other Half of the Link.

"Miss Innes," the detective began, "what is your opinion of the figure you saw on the east veranda the night you and your maid were in the house alone?"

"It was a woman," I said positively.

"And yet your maid affirms with equal positiveness that it was a man."

"Nonsense," I broke in. "Liddy had her eyes shut—she always shuts them when she's frightened."

"And you never thought then that the intruder who came later that night might be a woman—the woman in fact, whom you saw on the veranda?"

"I had reasons for thinking it was a man," I said, remembering the pearl cuff-link.

"Now we are getting down to business. What were your reasons for thinking that?"

I hesitated.

"If you have any reason for believing that your midnight guest was Mr. Armstrong, other than his visit here the next night, you ought to tell me, Miss Innes. We can take nothing for granted. If, for instance, the intruder who dropped the bar and scratched the staircase—you see, I know about that—if this visitor was a woman, why should not the same woman have come back the following night, met Mr. Armstrong on the circular staircase, and in alarm shot him?"

"It was a man," I reiterated. And then, because I could think of no other reason for my statement, I told him about the pearl cuff-link. He was intensely interested.

"Will you give me the link," he said when I finished, "or, at least, let me see it? I consider it a most important clew."

"Won't the description do?"

"Not as well as the original."

"Well, I'm very sorry," I said, as calmly as I could, "I—the thing is lost. It—it must have fallen out of a box on my dressing table."

Whatever he thought of my explanation, and I knew he doubted it, he made no sign. He asked me to describe the link accurately, and I did so, while he glanced at a list he took from his pocket.

"One set monogram cuff-links," he read, "one set plain pearl links, one set cuff-links, woman's head set with diamonds and emeralds. There is no mention of such a link as you describe, and yet, if your theory is right, Mr. Armstrong must have taken back in his cuffs one complete cuff-link, and a half, perhaps, of the other."

The idea was new to me. If it had not been the murdered man who had entered the house that night, who had it been?

"There are a number of strange things connected with this case," the detective went on. "Miss Gertrude Innes testified that she heard some one fumbling with the lock, that the door opened, and that almost immediately the shot was fired. Now, Miss Innes, here is the strange part of that. Mr. Armstrong had no key with him. There was no key in the lock, or on the floor. In other words, the evidence points absolutely to this: Mr. Armstrong was admitted to the house from within."

"It is impossible," I broke in. "Mr. Jamieson, do you know what your words imply? Do you know that you are practically accusing Gertrude Innes of admitting that man?"

"Not quite that," he said with his friendly smile. "In fact, Miss Innes, I am quite certain she did not. But as long as I learn only parts of the truth, from both you and her, what can I do? I know you picked up something in the flower bed; you refuse to tell me what it was. I know Miss Gertrude went back to the billiard room to get something, she refuses to say what. You suspect what happened to the cuff-link, but you won't tell me. So far, all I am sure of is this: I do not believe Arnold Armstrong was the midnight visitor who so alarmed you by dropping—shall we say, a golf-stick? And I believe that when he did come he was admitted by some one in the house. Who knows—it may have been—Liddy!"

I stirred my tea angrily.

"I have always heard," I said dryly, "that undertakers' assistants are jovial young men. A man's sense of humor seems to be in inverse proportion to the gravity of his profession."

"A man's sense of humor is a barbarous and a cruel thing, Miss Innes," he admitted. "It is to the feminine as the hug of a bear is to the scratch of—well, anything with claws. Is that you, Thomas? Come in."

Thomas Johnson stood in the doorway. He looked alarmed and apprehensive, and suddenly I remembered the sealskin dressing bag in the lodge. Thomas came just inside the door and stood with his head drooping, his eyes, under their shaggy gray brows, fixed on Mr. Jamieson.

"Thomas," said the detective, not unkindly, "I sent for you to tell us what you told Sam Bohannon at the club, the day before Mr. Arnold was found here, dead. Let me see. You came here Friday night to see Miss Innes, didn't you? And came to work here Saturday morning?"

For some unexplained reason Thomas looked relieved.

"Yas, sah," he said. "You see it were like this: When Mistah Armstrong and the fam'ly went away, Mis' Watson an' me, we was lef' in charge till the place was rented. Mis' Watson, she've bin here a good while, an' she warn' skeery. So she slep' in the house. I'd bin havin' tokens—I tol' Mis' Innes some of 'em—an' I slep' in the lodge. Then one day Mis' Watson, she came to me an' she sez, sez she: 'Thomas, you'll hev to sleep up in the big house. I'm too nervous to do it any more.' But I jes' reckon to myself that ef it's too skeery fer her, it's too skeery fer me. We had it, then, sho' nuff, and it ended up with Mis' Watson stayin' in the lodge nights an' me lookin' fer work at de club."

"Did Mrs. Watson say that anything had happened to alarm her?"

"No, sah. She was jes' natchally skeered. Well, that was all, far's I know, until the night I come over to see Mis' Innes. I come across the valley, along the path from the club house, and I goes home that way. Down in the creek bottom I almost run into a man. He wuz standin' with his back to me, an' he was workin' with one of these yere electric light things that fit in yer pocket. He was havin' trouble—one minute it'd flash out, an' the next it'd be gone. I hed a view of 'is white dress shirt an' tie, as I passed. I didn't see his face. But I know it warn't Mr. Arnold. It was a taller man than Mr. Arnold. Besides that, Mr. Arnold was playin' cards when I got to the club house, same's he'd been doin' all day."

"And the next morning you came back along the path," pursued Mr. Jamieson relentlessly.

"The nex' mornin' I come back along the path an' down where I dun see the man night befoh, I picked up this here." The old man held out a tiny object and Mr. Jamieson took it. Then he held it on his extended palm for me to see. It was the other half of the pearl cuff-link!

But Mr. Jamieson was not quite through questioning him.

"And so you showed it to Sam, at the club, and asked him if he knew any one who owned such a link, and Sam said—what?"

"Wal, Sam, he' lowed he'd seen such a pair of cuff-buttons in a shirt belongin' to Mr. Bailey—Mr. Jack Bailey, sah."

"I'll keep this link, Thomas, for a while," the detective said. "That's all I wanted to know. Good-night."

As Thomas shuffled out, Mr. Jamieson watched me sharply.

"You see, Miss Innes," he said, "Mr. Bailey insists on mixing himself with this thing. If Mr. Bailey came here that Friday night expecing to meet Arnold Armstrong, and missed him—if, as I say, he had done this, might he not, seeing him enter the following night, have struck him down, as he had intended before?"

"But the motive?" I gasped.

"There could be motive proved, I think. Arnold Armstrong and John Bailey have been enemies since the latter, a cashier of the Traders' bank, brought Arnold almost into the clutches of the law. Also, you forget that both men have been paying attention to Miss Gertrude. Bailey's flight looks bad, too."

"And you think Halsey helped him to escape?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

JUNGLE AMENITIES.

Elephant—Say, Hippo, close that submarine opening of yours or the water will rush in and sink you.

Hippopottamus—Oh, lock up your trunk and put a strap round it if you don't want to have it busted.

DANGER SIGNALS.

Sick kidneys give unmistakable signals of distress. Too frequent or scanty urinary passages, backache, headache and dizzy spells tell of disordered kidneys. Neglect of these warnings may prove fatal. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills. They cure sick kidneys.

Mrs. M. A. Gamblin, Russellville, Ark., says: "I was in such bad shape from kidney disease that I gave up hope of my recovery. I could rest neither night or day, the pains in my back nearly driving me frantic. There were decided dropsical symptoms such as swelling of my feet and ankles and my heart palpitated violently. After doctoring without benefit, I began with Doan's Kidney Pills and when I had used two boxes I was as well as ever."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Juvenile Buster.

The famous Champ Clark, at a dinner at Bowling Green, said of the trusts:

"The feeling against monopolies has reached even to the nursery. I saw a little girl the other day slip something beneath her plate. Then she murmured angrily:

"'I wish there was an anti-crust law.'"

Casey at the Bat.

This famous poem is contained in the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910, together with records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. This interesting book sent by the Coca-Cola Co., of Atlanta, Ga., on receipt of 2c stamp for postage. Also copy of their booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" which tells all about this delicious beverage and why it is so pure, wholesome and refreshing. Are you ever hot—tired—thirsty? Drink Coca-Cola—it is cooling, relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere.

Applause is only the clacking of tongues. Self-respect is better than fame.—Antoninus.

THE FINEST FABRIC

is coarse compared with the lining of the bowels. When irritated we have pains, diarrhea, cramps. Whatever the cause, take Painkiller (Perry Davis').

A torn jacket is soon mended; but hard words bruise the heart of a child.—Longfellow.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

A genius is a man who tries to borrow money—and gets it.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—Mrs. Alvena Sperling, 1468 Clybourne Ave., Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Don't Persecute your Bowels

Cut out cathartics and purgatives. They are brutal—harsh—unnecessary. Try

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Purely vegetable. Act gently on the liver, eliminate bile, and soothe the delicate membrane of the bowel. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Sick Headache and Indigestion, as millions know.

Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price

GENUINE must bear signature:

Brent Good

ABSORBINE

Removes Bursal Enlargements, Thickened, Swollen Tissues, Curbs, Filled Tendons, Soreness from any Bruise or Strain, Cures Spavin Lameness, Allays Pain. Does not Blister, remove the hair or lay the horse up. $2.00 a bottle. Horse Book 1 E free. ABSORBINE, JR., (mankind) $1 and $2 bottle.) For Synovitis, Strains, Gouty or Rheumatic Deposits, Varicose Veins, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Allays pain. Your druggist can supply and give references. Will tell you more if you write. Send for free book and testimonials. Mfd. only by

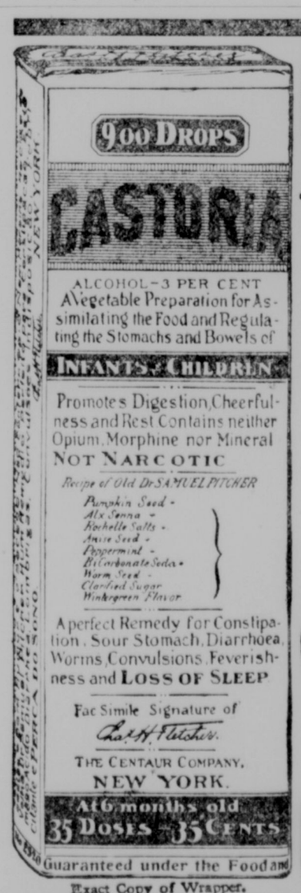
W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

DR. J. D. KELLOGG'S ASTHMA

Remedy for the prompt relief of Asthma and Hay Fever. Ask your druggist for it. Write for FREE SAMPLE. NORTHROP & LYMAN CO. Ltd., BUFFALO, N.Y.

FREE IRRIGATOR'S HAND-BOOK

Very valuable work just published. 100 pages, 50,000 words. Actual experience in Twin Falls Country, Idaho. Book worth $1.00. Send names of five or more friends interested in irrigation and receive book FREE. H. L. Hollister & Co., 205 La Salle St., Chicago



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL, Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The Glorious Liberty of the Children of God.

"The creature also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Romans viii, 21)

Brooklyn, July 3.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle preached today in Brooklyn's largest Auditorium, the Academy of Music, from the above text, to a crowded and attentive audience. He said:

Tomorrow will be celebrated as "Liberty Day" by Americans in all parts of the world. To some, of course, it means a holiday, a time of recreation, but to others of us it speaks eloquently of "Liberty enlightening the World." Even the enemies of the Republic must concede that an influence has gone forth from these shores to the uttermost bounds of earth—an influence against tyranny, and in a broad, general way in line with the Golden Rule, which respects the liberties of others as it desires its own to be respected. It is difficult to estimate the weight of influence attaching to the numerous letters going from these shores to every country under heaven, to every hamlet and village and city. It is difficult to estimate the influence of the newspapers and magazines which go forth from this land breeding the love of liberty. And yet, dear friends, every day and every year, as our ideas mature, we come to see more and more distinctly what constitutes true "liberty," and to distinguish this from "license," which sometimes steals the livery of liberty, to grossly misrepresent it.

It is not surprising that many who come to our shores from lands where personal liberty is almost unknown are inclined to expect more liberty than we can safely accord them. They are obliged to learn gradually the lesson that social liberty signifies, not personal license, but the permission to do only those things which will not interfere with the rights and liberties of others. Indeed, this is the lesson which all must learn in order to be good, useful citizens of this Republic; a lesson therefore to be learned by all who would enjoy true liberty. It is the lesson of self-control; the lesson of minding one's own business; the lesson of speaking evil of no man; the lesson of doing good unto all men as we have opportunity; the lesson of intruding on the proper rights and privileges of no one else. But alas, how few of the world have come to rightly view the liberty of which we boast!

In the School of Christ.

It is in the School of Christ that the pupils or disciples of the Lord Jesus may learn of him, the Great Teacher, the important lesson of self-control and the proper exercise of our own liberty, without encroaching upon the rights and liberty of others. Alas, dear friends, we must concede that remarkably few of the Lord's people have learned this lesson and are qualified to graduate along this line! Many followers of Christ continually practise injustice in the little things of life, neglecting to regard the liberties and rights of others. In the Church, in the home, in business, the rights of others are all too frequently ignored or only partially recognized. It is more important that we learn to recognize the rights and liberties of others than to insist upon our own rights. The former course tends to make us Godlike; the latter cultivates selfishness and frequently gets us into difficulty unnecessarily. The Apostle's instruction is that so far as possible, we should live peaceably with all men, which often necessitates the voiding of our own rights for the sake of peace.

This matter of insisting upon rights and liberties is moving the world more and more toward contention and strife, and hastening it toward the great time of trouble which shall engulf the whole social structure. Doubtless the great majority will be claiming their individual rights while almost totally disregarding the rights of others. We urge, therefore, that kind of love of liberty which is willing to sacrifice as respects its own privileges, that it may be helpful to others in maintaining their proper liberties. Nor does this signify that the people of God should ignore their own liberty and fight for the liberty of others. Rather we should stand for the principles of righteousness, and both by word and precept refrain from stirring up violence, or jeopardizing the interests of others. Liberty of conscience we should maintain in ourselves and should encourage in others.

"Liberty of Children of God."

St. Paul speaks in our text of the "liberty of the children of God." This, primarily, signifies our desertion from our taskmaster, Sin, and the surrender of our wills to God and righteousness. It means a repudiation of liberty to do wrong and the grasping, through Christ, of liberty from bondage to Sin. But, as the Apostle elsewhere explains, we find it impossible to conquer fully the fallen flesh. We will find it impossible as "New Creatures" to attain the full liberty of Sonship under present conditions, because, as St. Paul declares, "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the two are contrary the one to the other" (Galatians v, 17). We have a constant fight to resist the enslaving influences of Sin—to maintain our liberty as sons of God. The victory will not be fully attained until our resurrection, when "This corruptible must put on incorruption." Then our new minds will receive new, perfect spirit bodies, through which they can operate perfectly, and exercise, to the full, true liberty, true freedom.

The full liberty of the Children of God, therefore, is not attained in this present life, but will be attained in the resurrection, when we shall be perfected in the Master's likeness. And in this connection it is well to note that this is the liberty of the angels also—liberty of freedom from Sin, from the power and domination of error and superstition and weaknesses through heredity. All the angels were thus created, and father Adam and mother Eve also were thus created, in the full likeness of the children of God. Some lost their liberty by disobedience; they became slaves to Sin and Death, and have been more or less bound by these conditions from then until now. So, then, "The liberty of the children of God" is absolute perfection—the ideal condition for which the Church is striving.

The Groaning Creation.

The Apostle in our text is discussing the condition of the world of mankind in general. He reminds us that "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now" (Romans viii, 22). In the nineteenth verse he tells us what they are waiting for, namely, "The earnest expectation of the (human) creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God." The world of mankind is now enslaved to Sin and Death; they cannot help themselves; they must wait until God's time for setting them free from this bondage. God's time will come in connection with the glorification of the Church, and her manifestation with her Lord in the glories of his Messianic Kingdom. Then the groaning creation will be set free from the bondage of Sin and Death, under which it now groans and travails.

Made Subject to Vanity.

The Apostle reminds us that the slavery of mankind to Sin and Death came upon the world through vanity, or frailty, unwillingly. Our frailties are the result of sin and of the Divine sentence. Father Adam was disobedient and our Creator, in sentencing him to death, made the dying condition such that all of his children would be involved with him, as sinners, through heredity, and thus sharers in his dying condition. But God did not subject our race to this dying condition, "this slavery to Sin and Death, with the intention of blasting the hope of humanity to all eternity, much less with the expectation of sending Adam and his race to eternal torture. Rather, we are to understand that when God pronounced the death sentence upon our race, intermingled with it was the hope, the desire, on the part of the Creator, that the result of that death sentence should not be man's absolute and eternal destruction, after the manner of the brute beast. In the Divine purpose there mingles a hope—a desire and intention that all of Adam's race who will learn the lesson of righteousness may ultimately be delivered from the bondage of Sin and Death, into the true liberty of children of God. It was to secure, in God's due time, for Adam and his race, liberty from Sin and Death, that Christ died for our sins.

The Creation to Be Delivered.

Our minds now turn to the liberty which, by God's grace, came to this nation in 1776; and, similarly, some of our nation look to the liberty that was accorded them by the "Emancipation Proclamation." But these emancipations are nothing in comparison with the great Emancipation which God purposes shall come to all the world of mankind through Christ. Enslaved to Sin, through Father Adam's disobedience, "Sold under sin," the purchase of the race by the precious blood of Christ is to be announced by the Great Judge who pronounced the sentence. This is a glorious hope, a glorious prospect, but as yet it is merely a prospect. Only the true Church has as yet been set free; and she waits for perfect freedom through the "First Resurrection." "The whole world lieth in the Wicked One," and still are slaves to Sin and Death conditions in every way.

The arrangement of Divine Providence for this great liberation of the captives of Sin and Death is wonderful! God's Kingdom is to be established and to exercise his reign or rule of righteousness amongst men for a thousand years! Satan is to be bound during that period, that he may deceive and entrap humanity no more. The knowledge of God and the assistance of Divine power are to be extended to every creature, bond and free, rich and poor, of every tongue and nation. Not only will the living nations enjoy this privilege of release from slavery to Sin and Death, through the great Redeemer, but, additionally, all who are in their graves will have the glorious opportunity of being awakened and of being brought to a knowledge of the Truth, that they may be saved by laying hold thereon—by conforming heart and life to the rules of the Kingdom of God's dear Son, and thus attaining eternal life.

Truly, that will be a glorious epoch, when to the great Deliverer "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God." It will be grand, indeed, to witness during the thousand years of Christ's reign the gradual liberation of the slaves of Sin and Death—their gradual attainment of full mastery over their weaknesses and imperfections by the assistance of the great Emancipator! Many of these poor slaves went down to the tomb in fearful anticipation of a future of eternal torment. How glad they will be when they awake from the sleep of death, realizing it as only a momentary interim! They will be advised of the fact—that the Redemption price has been paid by Jesus and that, therefore, he is fully qualified and empowered to set them free in every sense of the word—not only from the condemnation of death, but also from the actual blight of death—the mental, moral and physical weaknesses, which are elements of the death sentence.

True, the Scriptures intimate that all will not appreciate the privilege of emancipation from the dominion of Sin and Death. It is not for us to speculate as to the number who will ultimately be set free. It is sufficient for us to know that all will be brought to a full opportunity of attaining or rejecting the emancipation privileges. All will be free in the sense that none will die the Second Death, except by his own willful, deliberate sympathy with sin and rejection of the righteous and liberal terms of the Great Liberator.

Not Only They but Ourselves.

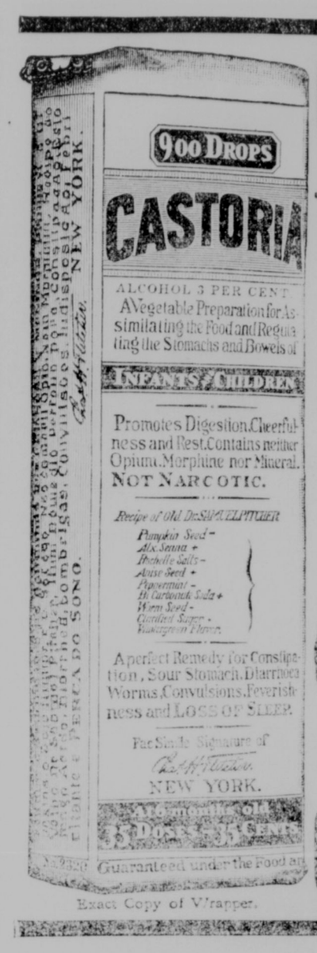
Pursuing the subject, the Apostle marks the Church of this Gospel Age as separate and distinct from the world. He shows that those who receive the begetting of the holy Spirit now, are already children of God, and already enjoying full freedom, full liberation from the condemnation of Sin and Death. He says, "And not only they (the groaning creation, the world), but ourselves also (the spirit-begotten Church of this age), which have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption (deliverance) of our Body"—"the Body of Christ, which is the Church" (Verse 23; I Corinthians xii, 27).

The Apostle is here pointing out that while the world is groaning under its share of the Adamic condemnation, believers in Christ also groan—though in a different manner. The world groans and travails, waiting for the Church's manifestation—"the manifestation of the Sons of God." The Church groans, not outwardly, but inwardly, while waiting for something different. The world is waiting for the manifestation of the Sons of God, because "Now are we the Sons of God" (I John iii, 2). Our salvation will come, therefore, before this manifestation of the Sons of God, which will bring release to the world. The elect Church is waiting for the adoption, the deliverance of the Body in the First Resurrection. Our Heavenly Father has already granted us the spirit of adoption whereby we can cry, "Abba, Father," but our adoption is not yet accomplished, completed. We are already set free in our minds from the Law of Sin and Death, but will not be entirely free until our adoption shall be completed by our resurrection change. The adoption of the Church by the Father will be her full entrance into the liberty of the Sons of God, her full entrance into perfection, "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye" (I Cor. xv, 52).

The Apostle continues the same thought, pointing out that the salvation of the Church at the present time is not her actual or complete salvation, but a hope-salvation or a faith-salvation. He points out that what we hope for is to be brought unto us at the revelation of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, at his second advent. He points out that, in the meantime, if we have this hope as an anchor to our souls, it will lead us to be patient in waiting for the glorious things of the Divine arrangement. It will lead us to wait patiently for the Lord's time for our own blessing and further opportunity for service in bestowing God's blessings upon the world. We are to wait for our deliverance, with patience, and in this we shall be exercising and developing one of the graces of the holy Spirit necessary for our perfecting. It is not sufficient that we learn to love liberty; we must learn full submission to the Divine will and to receive our liberty, in kind and in time, according to the good pleasure of the Father.

The expression, "The redemption of our Body," does not refer to the Lord's people, individually, for each of us will have a separate body in the resurrection. The Apostle's thought is that of the Scriptures in general, namely, that there is one Body, which is the Church; and that, so far as our complete adoption by the Father is concerned, this must be done in unison; he will not receive the Church separately, member by member, but altogether, at the close of this age. Then so many as shall have fought the good fight of faith and finished their course, so many as shall be found worthy a place with our Lord in his throne will be "changed" in the "First Resurrection." These will be presented together as one glorious Body, or "Church of the living God, whose names are written in heaven."

So far, then, as the world is concerned, let us think less of assisting them to individual and personal liberty than to freedom from the yoke of Sin. Let us rejoice in the privilege and opportunity which, if faithful, we will have by and by with the Master, of delivering or setting at liberty from sin and death the entire groaning creation. Let us remember that to attain this we must become members of the glorified Kingdom, which will extend this blessing to all the families of earth.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
Near Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from William J. Nair and wife to Mary L. Sloan, dated the 15th day of November, 1902, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 43, folio 165, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named therein hereby give notice, that on Friday, the 5th day of August

1910, at the hour of 11.30 o'clock a. m. in front of the First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Maryland, they will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all the following real estate, situate about one-half mile southwest of Oakland, in Garrett County, Maryland:

1st. All that lot, piece or parcel of land containing 10 acres, more or less, which was conveyed to the said William J. Nair by A. G. Sturgiss and others by deed dated the 6th day of January, 1899, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County in Liber E. Z. T. No. 36, folio 127, to which said deed reference is made for a full and complete description of said land.

2nd. All that other land adjoining the above mentioned tract containing 1 acre and 14 perches, more or less, and being the same land which was conveyed to the said William J. Nair by John Feity, Jr., by deed dated the 7th day of June, 1898, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 38, folio 357, one of the Land Records of Garrett County, to which said deed reference is made for a complete description of said land.

This property is improved by a comfortable frame dwelling, stable and other outbuildings, good water, fruit trees and the most of said land is cleared and under cultivation.

Terms of sale as prescribed by said mortgage, cash on day of sale.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorneys for mortgagee named in mortgage

TRUSTEE'S SALE
OF Valuable Coal
AND
OTHER PROPERTY
Situate in Garrett County, Md., Known as the Gillespie Property.

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned Trustee, by decree entered on the 9th day of May, 1910, in the matter of C. D. Gillespie, bankrupt, pending in the District Court of the United state for the Northern District of West Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will, on SATURDAY, the 23rd Day of July, 1910,

at Eleven O'clock A. M.,

at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, owned by C. D. Gillespie.

I

All the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying

315 Acres of Land.

being part of a tract known as "Elk Garden," situate in Garrett county, Maryland, together with 150 acres of the surface of said 315 acres and all the rights and privileges granted to the said C. D. Gillespie in connection with said coal property. Two-thirds of said property was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Ada A. V. Halterman, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, of record in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 43, folio 132, and the remaining one-third was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Austin Brown, Sheriff, by deed bearing date December 1, 1906, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 433, to which deeds reference is now here had for a more particular description of said property.

This property is situated very near the Western Maryland Railroad, near the station of Henry on said railroad and adjacent to the coal property now being operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Company at its mines at Henry. The coal underlying this property which is to be sold is very valuable.

II

All of the coal underlying a tract of land containing

68 1-2 Acres,

situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being known as a part of the "Elk Garden" tract and being the same coal conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Peter F. Snyder and wife, by deed bearing date October 27, 1905, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 364, to which deed reference is here had for a particular description of said 68½ acres, together with all the rights and privileges as to mining rights, surface and rights of way, as were vested in said Gillespie by said deed.

This 68½ acres of coal is considered very valuable. It is located a distance of about three or four miles from the railroad.

III

An undivided one half interest in ten acres of land, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being also a part of what is known as the "Elk Garden" tract, said undivided one-half interest having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry F. Marshall and wife, by deed dated the 11th day of August 1902, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 42, folio 230, to which deed reference is had for a particular description of said property.

IV

A tract or parcel of land containing one acre, more or less, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, on the Western Maryland Railroad, near Gorman, having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry C. Stemple and wife, by deed dated the 30th day of April, 1906, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 54, folio 454. There are situated, on this property, several buildings, one of which can be used for a combination dwelling house and store building.

All of the above described property will be sold free and acquit from all liens and incumbrances. The title to all of said property is considered good.

TERMS OF SALE.—One-third cash in hand on day of sale and the residue upon a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to give interest bearing notes, with good personal security, for the deferred purchase money and the legal title to the property to be retained as additional security, until said deferred purchase money has been paid.

C. W. MAXWELL, Trustee.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-05-ly.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
In Garrett County, Maryland

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Thomas J. Roy and Rebecca F. Roy, his wife, to Katharine B. Stille dated the 5th day of July, 1905, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, folio 79, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named therein, hereby gives notice that on

Friday, August 5th, 1910,

at the hour of 10.30 o'clock a. m., in front of the First National Bank Building in the town of Oakland, Maryland, he will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all the following described real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland; about three and one-half miles northwest of Oakland, the same being a part of Lot No. 6 of the subdivisions of a tract of land called "William and Mary," and adjoins the farms of William H. Hardesty and Owen Macklin, and beginning for the same at an anciently planted stone standing at the end of 227½ perches on the 2nd line of the whole tract called "William and Mary," which is also at the end of the 1st line of said Lot No. 6 and running thence with the 2nd line thereof, North 3 degrees West, 80 perches to a planted stone marked No. 2, standing at the end of the 2nd line of William H. Hardesty's land, and reversing it West, 89 4-5 perches to the end of the 1st line of said Hardesty's land to a planted stone marked No. 1, thence South 1 degree East, 63 perches to the 1st line of said Lot No. 6, thence with it South 77 degrees East, 91 perches to the beginning, containing 38½ Acres, More or Less.

The improvements consist of a comfortable dwelling, stable and other outbuildings, a young orchard, and about one half of said land is cleared and under cultivation.

Terms of Sale, as prescribed in said mortgage—Cash on day of sale.

D. JAMES BLACKISTON,
Attorney for Mortgagee named in said Mortgage.

For further information apply to E. H. Sincell, Oakland, Maryland.

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1553 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland

Ordered this 27th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by the Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelph, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 26th day of July, 1910, provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1,00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

In the Orphans' Court for Garrett County.
In the matter of the estate of Henry A. Reichelt, deceased.

Ordered by the Orphans' Court for Garrett County, this 12th day of July A. D. 1910, that the sale of the property mentioned in these proceedings, made and reported by Rosie Reichelt Guenther, Executrix of the last will and testament of Henry A. Reichelt, deceased, to Peter Reichenbecher and Otilda Reichenbecher his wife, be qualified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 9th day of August, 1910; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county once in each of three successive weeks before the 5th day of August, 1910.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $58,500.

W. J. BARNARD,
HENRY KAMP,
J. THOMAS MOON,
Judges of the Orphans' Court.

True copy. Test: E. E. FRIEND, Register.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $2,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to schcol and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not are vertised here. For particulars address
M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

OPERA HOUSE
School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,
Opera House. OAKLAND, MD

Oakland Pharmacy
JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G. ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing
Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1910. NUMBER 21

CONNELL HEIRS WERE AWARDED $1900 BY JURY

For Land Wanted at Hutton by the B. & O. R. R. CO.

The jury of condemnation summoned by Sheriff Shartzer for the purpose of condemning certain land at Hutton wanted by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for right of way purposes, went to Hutton last Thursday morning on a special train and after viewing the property returned to Oakland with a large number of witnesses on the special. Dinner was served at the Frantz Hotel at the expense of the railway company, and immediately afterward the jury went to the court house when the evidence of witnesses was taken and arguments made by counsel, Mr. Thayer and Mr. Peddicord for Mrs. Connell and Mr. G. S. Hamill for the railway company.

Evidence as to the value of the property to be condemned varied greatly, some of the witnesses placing it ridiculously low, while others placed a fair valuation upon it. It was shown, however, that revenue equal to an investment of $6000 was being derived from the rents accruing.

The jury was given the case early in the evening but did not arrive at a verdict until quite late at night when they awarded Mrs. Connell the sum of $1900, which, in the estimation of many conservative people, was very low.

It is understood that the matter is entirely unsatisfactory to Mrs. Connell and that an appeal from the decision of the jury will be made to the Circuit Court for this county.

THE DEATH RECORD.

HAMILL SMOUSE

The death of Hamill, aged seven years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Smouse, of Fairmont, West Va., who are stopping at Mountain Lake Park for the summer, removes the only surviving child of the fond parents. The boy was taken ill several weeks ago with whooping cough and later contracted pneumonia which terminated in his death on Tuesday night. Hamill was a boy of rare intelligence and beauty and his death was a terrible shock to his father and mother and is sincerely mourned by their hosts of friends. The funeral will occur this morning eleven o'clock from the Mountain Lake Park home, interment to be made in Oakland.

Fire at Selbysport.

The house of W. S. Grove at Selbysport, Garrett county, was destroyed by fire which originated in the attic shortly after midnight, Wednesday, while the members of the family were asleep. They were able to save but few articles. The loss is $2,000 with $1,000 insurance.

STONE CRUSHES WORKMAN.

Arzoangelo Tarpino, an Italian Youth, Met Pitiful Fate near Bloomington.

While engaged digging out the bank, at Everetts Tunnell for the new B. & O. third track, near Bloomington, at 9 o'clock a. m. Tuesday, Arzoangelo Tarpino, an Italian laborer, aged nineteen, was struck in the head by an immense rock boulder, that loosened above, and was fatally injured, his head being fearfully crushed. He was picked up and passenger train No. 6 flagged and put in the baggage car, to be taken to a Cumberland hospital, but he died just as the train neared Cumberland. His body was removed to the Wolford morgue in the ambulance waiting to receive him. Workmen near him say that the rock which weighed over a ton was deflected when it struck him and leaped in the air, nearly catching another man. Despite his fearful injury, Tarpino showed wonderful vitality, succumbing only when within sight of the hospital. He was unmarried, and was employed by Grey & Linken, contractors, who are cutting out the Everett tunnel and building the third track near that place.

BITTINGER.

District Road Supervisor Jacob Brenneman attended the meeting of the Board of County Commissioners at Oakland last week.

A. J. Oester was confined to the house a day or two last week by a slight illness brought on by the excessively hot weather.

F. M. Bittinger is on the sick list this week, his physician stating that he is suffering from an attack of walking typhoid fever.

Misses Lizzie and Naomi Orendorf spent last Sunday with their sister, Mrs. Earl Stanton, near Grantsville.

Mrs. K. A. Bittinger and daughter, Mrs. Ida Yommer, made a business trip to Grantsville last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frye and children, of Braddock, Pa., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Bittinger this week.

Samuel Broadwater and family, of New Germany, visited at the home of C. E. Ellithorp in this village last Sunday.

M. K. Malone, of Elizabeth, Pa., is spending his summer vacation in this neighborhood and is boarding at the home of Ira Durst.

A party of twenty-six young folks from this village walked across Meadow Mountain last Sunday evening and visited the hermitage of Hannah Spiker, an aged and eccentric character. The young folks carried many presents of food and clothing to the old lady's cabin and after a short visit returned leaving Aunt Hannah in a most gracious humor.

Try the Rock Island Battery for your automobile and telephone. Will outlast any two ordinary ones. A. D. NAYLOR & Co.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK BIBLE CONFERENCE.

DR. HENRY OSTROM.

The Bible Conference at Mountain Lake Park, which promises to be one of the best features of this summer's program, will open Friday, the 22nd, at 7 p. m. The Rev. Henry Ostrom, D. D., will give the opening address. On Saturday, the 23rd, and Sunday, the 24th, George Heber Jones, of Korea, just returned from Scotland, will give the principle addresses.

All next week the program continues with one famous speaker after another. No admission fee is charged for any these addresses.

All singers will receive a hearty welcome in the big chorus choir.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

In it All Communications To The Republican Will Appear.

THE REPUBLICAN establishes a department this week to be known as "The People's Forum," in which will appear all communications contributed by its readers touching upon public topics and matters of interest to the readers of the paper. For this department we invite communications which are of public interest, but would suggest that letters be limited to not more than five hundred words each and that any subject under discussion in this department be free of personalities or anything that might tend to arouse animosities.

A Rejoinder.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Two communications in last week's Mountain Democrat, one entitled "A Communication," the other, "Was Prof. Palmer Displaced," and signed respectively, "A Tax-Payer and Voter," and "Fairplay," demand some little attention, not because of their good sense, intellectual brilliancy or veracity, but rather because all these qualities were in a large measure lacking, and the public no doubt expects a reply.

In a general way let me say that not a single proposition in my article of two weeks' ago in THE REPUBLICAN, entitled "Right of Petition" was answered. That article simply contained a few fundamental propositions that inhere in self government, and were backed by quotations from the National and State constitutions, with the application that our School Commissioners in thwarting the will of the people, violated these basic principles, and made themselves the victims of public indignation.

I here and now stand by that article and will so stand until by decent, forceful argument I am led to see it is wrong. And yet these simple statements were called "a tirade of abuse."

Now I shall proceed to give a little attention to each article as they separately appeared in the Democrat. I do not feel at all humiliated to have my production styled "a Fourth of July oration." This county feels the need of a little old time Fourth of July patriotism and if we had more of it perhaps little petty office holders could not with impunity trample on the will of a sovereign people.

"Tax-Payer" does not seem to know who the author was. On that point I do not care to enlighten him. His acquaintance would not be worth the trouble. But why reply to an article written by such an obscure person? On coming to Oakland last fall I immediately enrolled as a voter in the Clerk's office. Yet "Tax-Payer" claims to have searched the records. The assessor has not been around yet, which is no fault of mine. I shall be glad to welcome him any day, and will give in my property at its full value. I wonder if "Tax-Payer" has done as much? If the said "Tax-Payer" will come out from hiding I shall be glad the compare tax receipts with him.

I again assert that the action of the Board in ignoring the petition without explanation is a reprehensible and dastardly act. He claims that I did not ask for a hearing or an explanation. This is false, because the very act of signing the petition was a request for a hearing, and in the event the petitioner can't get his reques the is entitled to an explanation. This, thus far, has been denied the ninety per cent. of the school's patrons who petitioned the Board.

"Tax-Payer" closes by saying that I have nothing to say on the vital question, "Has the action of the School Board been for the betterment of the school facilities of the town or not?" I was discussing a principle rather than the question he considers so vital. If, however, he is so anxious for illumination on this point I only need to refer him to public sentiment. At least eighty per cent. of Oakland's population think the results will be disastrous, and that unless the action of the Board is rescinded and the matter adjusted to the satisfaction of the public the coming session is doomed to a most humiliating failure.

I drop "Tax-Payer and Voter" here that I may devote a little time to "Fairplay." But before proceeding to Fair-Play's article a word should be said that applies to both writers. They are both cowards of a very low and vulgar type. Newspaper etiquette always demands that when a signed article is answered it should be over the signature of the one who answers. So these gentlemen? who replied to my article were either afraid of public censure or ashamed of their untenable position, or their inability to answer in a respectable way, so their famous names were withheld. After all there is some advantage in being a lonely person known only to a mere handful of people. Such an one can afford to be man enough to sign his name to an article. There are men so well known to the public that all they do must be anonymus, otherwise by making themselves known they might be heading toward the penitentiary. This may not be true of the honorable? gentlemen who replied to my article, but the fact remains that they withheld their names, and this to say the least, is a reflection on them.

Now for "Fairplay." He begins in a very general way by introducing the Journal also also, and calling attention to "far-fetched excuses." His cloven hoof protrudes, however, in the next sentenced when he uses the word "bigotry," and this gives colouring to the remainder of his sophistry, and reveals to the most casual observer the venom from which the whole thing springs.

He also uses the word "political," a word which also gets close to the hearts of a few menials in public school circles.

In a future article on the "Public School and Politics," I shall have something more to say on this line. However, the two words "bigotry" and "politics" serve to "chase the lion to his den" and reveal to the public the hiding precincts of "Fairplay."

The next two or three paragraphs are not worthy of attention. This much may be said: When "Fairplay" can convince the public that white is black, night, day; and can make the worse appear the better reason, then his ingenius sophistry trying to prove that Prof. Palmer was not displaced and that he was put where the people wanted him, may get some hearing. This fact remains, and I defy anybody to explain it away. The people of Oakland wanted Prof. Palmer as Principal of their High School. They expressed their wish to the School Board by an overwhelming petition. They were ignored by the Board and another man was elected to the position by methods not only reprehensible, but which some of our lawyers say are illegal. Now Mr. "Fairplay" explain this away if you can. If you can't then be decent and acknowledge the fact.

He introduces the question of money. This to use his own languarge is "far-fetched" and has no bearing on the subject, except as it affects the gentleman chosen to supplant Mr. Palmer. He now begins some personal thrusts at the writer, and chimes in with "Tax-Payer" in speaking of my obscurity. After the most extensive research possible to his two by four intellect he discovers that I hail from West Virginia, and implies, though he does not express it, the old question of Nathaniel, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

His painstaking research revealed also the fact that the author of that awful article in THE REPUBLICAN is a Methodist preacher. Horror of horrors! Now he finds a place for "bigotry" and is at home in his mediaeval thinking. We begin to smell the Middle Ages as this reanimated fossil, sailing under the nom de plume of "Fairplay," vents his spleen and lays bare to the public's gaze the real sentiment of his heart.

Now I regret, and I presume the community does, the unfortunate fact that the church question has been introduced. I am willing to submit my article to the most competent critics, conscious that there was not the remotest hint in it relating to ecclesiastical affairs. I was careful there. "Fairplay" makes the onslaught and reads into my article a thing that was not there. He evidently wanted it there. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

I want to say to "Fairplay" that on that point I make my reply very mild in the hope that he is willing to drop it there. He can least afford to enter into a scrap of that kind. If he persists I announce here and now that he will find me with the "goods on," and some things will be forthcoming that he does not anticipate. The public school is one of the bulwarks of our civilization, and the public well knows who its friends have been. Enough here for the present.

This is not so much a question of men as it is a question of principle. He is right in saying that I would have protested had Cardinal Gibbons been an applicant. I would have done the same had one of my own Bishops been the applicant. But why deal with impossible suppositions? However, if Cardinal Gibbons wants to teach school, and will make application, and the people want him, and the School Board turns him down, I will champion his cause.

(Continued on Page Eight)

FORGER PASSED A NUMBER OF WORTHLESS CHECKS

Colored Man Discharged by Col. J. M. Burns Forges His Name.

A colored man giving his name as John Carroll, or Carrilton, who was until last Friday in the employ of Col. J. M. Burns at Mountain Lake Park as coachman and then discharged, worked a number of business men in Oakland and Mountain Lake Park for various amounts by passing forged checks with the name of Col. Burns signed as the maker. The forgeries were not discovered until the checks were presented at the Garrett National bank for payment and those caught by the forger "went up into the air."

The total amount of the four or five forged checks represent nearly $60, much of which was cash from the merchants' tills, while others took in the checks as payment for goods and good naturedly passed over the cash for the balance.

The man took his departure from here the same evening he worked the checks through and was seen on Saturday night in Cumberland. An effort was made by Sheriff Shartzer and other state officers to locate the offender but up to this time have been unsuccessful.

STRANGER BADLY INJURED

At Deer Park By Falling from Swiftly Moving Freight Train.

A stranger in a strange country, seriously injured by falling from a freight train at Deer Park, was taken to the office of Dr. Legge in Oakland yesterday morning and immediately lapsed into unconsciousness. Upon examination Dr. Legge found that the man was in a very serious condition from a number of cuts and bruises and was also internally injured. The necessary surgical aid was rendered and after consciousness had returned it was learned that the strangers name was J. A. Whetsell, of Jane Lew, West Va., to which point a telephonic message was sent. The reply was that the man was engaged in the lumbering business and was financially well fixed. He exhibited to Dr. Legge several checks aggregating a considerable sum besides a number of books of deposit in banks located in West Virginia and requested to be taken to a hospital where he could receive proper care. Complying with his request the injured man was taken to the Western Maryland hospital at Cumberland last night on train No. 12.

FOR SALE—A practically new six horse power engine and ten horse power boiler. Apply at Oakland Model Steam Bakery.

DIXON & KELSO

DIXON & KELSO

Have purchased a large stock Best Quality

BINDER TWINE

which we offer at 8 1-2c. lb. for cash; 9c. on time or for trade.

HARVESTING OIL,

1 gallon cans 35c.

Have Big Stock Scythes, Grain Cradles, Forks, Rakes, etc.

P. S. Wanted, 2000 2nd hand Bags.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

Copyrighted.

TEDDY TAFTY

Teddy-Tafty Sundae

The Latest in Ice Cream.

Healthful

Delightful

Refreshing

Oakland Steam Bakery

Manufacturers of Ice Cream complying absolutely with the Pure Food Laws of the United States.

We Freeze our Reputation into our Ice Cream.

TEDDY TAFTY

TEDDY-TAFTY.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Pubr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

See that fly? Kill him!

With all his faults, a fly doesn't bother one as much as does a mosquito.

They are fighting in Nicaragua, but why they are fighting no one seems to know.

Blondes are becoming fewer, according to statistics. So many are "letting it go back dark,' nowadays.

The individual census cards make a pile 16 miles high. And the man higher up presumably is the top card.

A liberal supply of sentimentalism is good for a man; it keeps him from brooding over his non-performances.

A St. Louis man chewed up a $5 bill with a sandwich. At that it was about as cheap as a piece of meat of corresponding size.

Massachusetts woman wants a divirce because her husband keeps a live lobster in the ho se. Well, what's she been keeping?

And now a Beloit professor will tramp in the African wilds. How does he know those cannibals will be able to discriminate between a professor and a missionary?

A Chicago surgeon has discovered how to graft new extremities on the bodies of his patients. Science should, in this way, be able to assemble a man superior to the natural article.

A man who started to cure by fasting one of the ills that flesh is heir to has made the discovery that it cured all ailments in his case. Having become defunct he is free from all disease, even the fever called living.

Because Chinese immigrants have been detained on Angel island, the Chinese residents haye boycotted American goods. Just what their reasoning is, is difficult to understand. Evidently, however, they are trying to meet boycott with boycott.

The thrifty Dutch also are buying large amounts of American bonds and other securities for permanent and safe investment. The Netherlanders are a canny folk, and when they make a purchase of this kind it is pretty strong testimony to the excellence of the bargain.

That Culebra cut is one of the great difficulties in constructing the Panama canal. Latest reports show that a vast mass of stone and mud has dropped into the excavated channel, involving a whole lot of extra work. But this is one of the contingencies that had to be considered, and American pluck and perseverance will carry the job through in the face of all obstacles.

Physicians have succeeded in making the stethoscope and telephone so sensitive that the heart beats of a patient in London were distinctly transmitted to a seismologist on the Isle of Wight. It is expected that this will be of great use in enabling physicians to keep in more sensitive touch with their patients at all hours.

The new battleship South Carolina has returned to Norfolk after a trip at sea for target practise with a new record with big guns, having made sixteen bullseyes in sixteen shots with the twelve-inch weapons. With a score like that to their credit the jackies of the South Carolina must come pretty close to the championship for good shooting.

The ex-Shah of Persia appears to have settled for himself at least the problem of what to do with deposed monarchs. He is studying medicine and hopes soon to become a practising physician. And that is a much more honorable and commendable proceeding than dwelling apart in sulien idleness or plotting revolutions against his country. Some other "exes" might imitate his example with much credit to themselves.

Of course it is guesswork as yet, and no one will know the actual population of the United States until the decennial federal enumeration now in progress shall be completed. But word comes from Washington that census officials, basing their opinion on what has been learned thus far, believe that the total for the country will be not far from 100,000,000, which will surpass most estimates made previously.

A Chicago judge bars wife beaters from citizenship. He might also bar them up away from the rest of the world.

Here's a man complaining because "his wife eloped with his best friend." Friend, perhaps, was just trying to prove it.

When there are a few more flying machines the commuter who works in France and lives in England will have a living chance.

Deaf and Dumb—and Blind

By PAUL CALVIN ANDERSON

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

When the tide is out at Palm Beach hundreds of hotel guests walk up and down the hard, wet sands. Others speed up and down in their autos. Others, still, sit on hired chairs and gaze out seaward and imagine they can hear the songs of mermaids.

On a certain day in the present twentieth century Philip Gillett was among those who walked. He was a young man at the beach with his mother and sister, and his occupation when at home in New York was preparing himself for architecture. He did that mostly by looking at one or two skyscrapers a day from the outside and spending $500 per week allowed by his father. It was his father who had insisted that the young man take up architecture. There never had been an architect in the Gillett family, and he wanted one. He had a manor house, and he wanted a hennery built, and he wanted to point to it after it was finished and say: "A Gillett did that!"

On this particular day Philip Gillett had toothache and he set out to walk it off. His sister had told him to hold a wad of cotton saturated with peppermint essence in his mouth, and to keep his mouth shut. He thought a good deal of his sister, and he was obeying her.

Toothache affects a person peculiarly—particularly a man. It gives him what is known as a grouch. He wants to stand on the beach and see a dentist drown in the sea. He isn't to blame, but everybody else is. And what made young Mr. Gillett crosser still was the fact that he had to chew cotton and keep his mouth shut. It was not dignified. It was taking undue advantage of a fellow.

Among those who motored that day were Miss Edna Blair and Miss Kitty Waldron, girl chums. They were in Resorted to More Peppermint.

Miss Kitty's auto, and she was running it herself. After getting out of the crowd, and heading up the shore, they saw a young man half a mile ahead of them. He was scuffing along on the hard track and was in their path. The honk! honk! was sounded, but he paid no attention. He wanted to be run over and have that aching tooth smashed out.

The autmobile passed him within two feet and in spite of himself he gave a jump and swallowed the peppermint-soaked wad of cotton. He then had to produce more cotton and more peppermint for his aching tooth.

Mr. Gillett's walk had extended two miles when he sat down on a hummock and resorted to more peppermint. His sister was right; it began to have a soothing effect! He began to feel glad that he was alive and away from the snow heaps of New York city. Just then he caught sight of the auto returning. As it drew near, he saw that Miss Edna Blair was passably good looking and that Miss Kitty Waldron was more so. The auto was aiming to pass him within a few feet, but that was all right. He reasoned that the girls desired a nearer view of the young man, whom they had so frightened, and he was right about it. They didn't seem to see him, of course, but that was false pretense.

And after that fate stepped in. The auto was exactly opposite Philip to an inch, and exactly six feet and one inch and a half away, when a front tire exploded with a bang. Two young ladies screamed. The auto ran wild until half buried in the sand. The young man was blown over on his back by the concussion and swallowed his wad of cotton for the second time in an hour.

He would have been less than human if he hadn't arisen with a face as red as paint and cross all the way through. He grabbed for his hat and might have gone running over the sand dunes had not a sweet and plaintive voice reached his ears:

"Oh, sir, please do help us! We have bursted a tire!"

Yes, he would help. As a gentleman he must do so; but he made up his mind to do no more. That is, he wouldn't speak a word to those girls. They had fed him on cotton, so to speak, and he would have his revenge. He advanced and raised his hat. Then he inspected the tire.

"I hope you were not hit by one of the flying pieces," said Miss Kitty in her most ingratiating manner.

No reply.

"Will we have to walk back to the hotel?"

No answer.

"You see we have a spare tire here."

No answer.

Mr. Gillett owned an auto himself. In fact, his mother and sister were down the beach in it at that very moment. He knew all about tires. He took the jack from its place, and without motioning the girls to descend he went at it and had the tire replaced inside of 12 minutes. He might have done it in ten except for overhearing such observations as:

"Say, Edna, he must be deaf."

"Yes, deaf as an old tin pan."

"And he hasn't spoken a word. Do you think he's also dumb?"

"He looks it."

"Poor young man! It's just awful! He's got considerable style about him."

"Oh, I don't know. Wasn't it funny to see him go over on his back. If his hat hadn't blown off he'd have swallowed it!"

"Hush, you bad girl! I'll tell you what he is. He's a professor in some deaf and dumb school. And he owns an auto, too. See how handy he is. I wish we hadn't frightened him so."

"If we had scared him worse, he might have got his voice and hearing back. Think what it would be to marry a deaf and dumb man! Are you going to thank him?"

"Not in words, but I'll just look my thanks."

As Mr. Gillett finished and stood back and raised his hat the thanks were duly looked and the auto whizzed along. He followed at a slow pace. The toothache was all gone, but he had been humiliated. He had been made to jump aside like a kangaroo; he had been blown flat on his back; he had been made to swallow wads of cotton; he had almost been called names to his very face. No wonder he wouldn't speak to his sister for an hour after getting back to the hotel, and that his mother laid her maternal hand on his locks and said:

"Philip, I hope you won't go into a decline, as your grandfather did at this very place."

There is fate and there is revenge. Fate had come—revenge had to wait a day or two. Then the sister came running to Philip.

"Oh, Phil!" she exclaimed; "I've met just the nicest girl you ever saw! She's stopping at the Royal. I've invited her to take a spin in the auto, and you are to be chauffeur. I want you to meet her."

As the aching tooth had gone out of business and the world looked rosy again, Philip consented, though entirely to please the sister. They differed on the girl question.

It was only when they had rolled around to the hotel and picked up their passenger that Mr. Philip Gillett would have swallowed a whole roll of cotton batting had it been handy. She was the girl of the other auto—the girl who had looked her thanks—Miss Kitty Waldron!

Mr. Gillett tried to say things, and Miss Waldron did likewise, and the sister sat there and wondered if both of them had toothache. And when they got back at last and Mr. Gillett assisted Miss Waldron up the steps of the veranda, she turned to him to say:

"Sir, have you any explanations to make?"

"I have, and will call this evening to make them."

The explanations must have proven satisfactory, as an auto ride became a thing of daily occurrence thereafter, and the season had not yet closed when Miss Gillett put her arms around her brother's neck and murmured:

"Oh, Phil, I'm so glad—so glad! I just hoped you two would take each other, and now you have!"

A Spanking Chair.

Although the whipping post is a thing of the past, the principle in revised and modern form and judiciously applied is expected to work wonders in enforcing good behavior upon some of the worst offenders brought before the juvenile court.

A "spanking chair" has been set up in the basement of the juvenile home at Columbus, O., and Elisha Searls was the first to occupy it. He promised to be good for all time when he had been given a good "dressing," and he was instructed to relate his experience to other lads who have an inclination to be very, very naughty.

The juvenile court paddle consists of a long leather strap, wide and heavy, and it is bound with felt so that the edges will not cut or bruise the flesh. The paddle "stings right," but leaves no marks, and is much more humane than a switch or a slipper—and more effective.

But Lawyers Must Live.

It is impossible to see the long scrolls in which every contract is included, with all their appendages of seals and attestations, without wondering at the depravity of those beings of promise by such formal and public evidences.—Johnson.

MUCH DRUNKENNESS HIDDEN

English Inspector, Under Inebriate Act, Shows How Little Is Known of True Conditions.

Although there has been an acknowledged improvement in the general drinking habits of Great Britain, says the London Mail, it is by no means clear that any real advance has been made toward the suppression of habitual drunkenness—the form of drunkenness that gave rise to temperance work, the form that causes all the real misery and matters most.

This is the conclusion reached by Dr. R. W. Branthwaite, inspector under the inebriate act. The large majority of the population, he says in his annual report, are now moderate drinkers who never get drunk or teetotalers, but below the surface there is a small army of habitual drunkards who are hidden out of sight in better class life, or, in lower class life, lost in the obscurity of slums, prisons and workhouses.

"In times gone by," Doctor Branthwaite says "the habitual inebriate was constantly in evidence in the streeets, in public houses, and in private life. He was allowed freedom to roam about and display his peculiarily, being treated with the same toleration as the village idiot or harmless lunatic. When he became too great a nuisance he was put still more in evidence by public chastisement in pillory or stocks. In other words, every drunkard was then known and seen. Today the habitual drunkard in a well-to-do private family is relegated to the skeleton cupboard and prevented so far as possible from publicly exhibiting his failing.

"Pauper drunkards hide themselves in workhouses, shelters, or charitable colonies, the only places where they can get food; or, when they become sufficiently insane, are immured in asylums. The man who appears drunk in a play house, drunk and disorderly in the street, or who commits a criminal offense through drunkenness is hurried to the police cell, ultimately to prison. As a consequence of all this the ordinary individual sees little or nothing of the habitual drunkards of today, and is apt to believe that but few exist.

"It remained for some persons who were intimately associated with these hidden drunkards, some 30 or 40 years ago, to point out how plentiful they were, how little they had been affected by orthodox temperance efforts in the past, and how meager was the evidence that any decrease in the prevalance would be likely to result from the steady exercise of such energy in the future."

Three departmental committees, it is pointed out, have strongly recommended that power to commit an inebriate to control in a retreat on the application of friends should be given to a properly constituted court.

The number of cases sent to inebriate reformatories in 1908 was 262—44 men and 218 women—as compared with 463 in 1907, but the decrease was principally due to want of accommodation for London cases.

Most of the people sent to to inebriate reformatories are of the "feeble-mind" class. Of the 3,032 admissions of the past ten years, only about 36 per cent. were up to the average mental capacity. As a moderately sound mind is required for success in the struggle to throw off the drink habit, the probability of producing good results is limited.

Nevertheless, Doctor Branthwaite considers that good is being done. In the past ten years 670 inmates were released on license before the expiration of their terms, and in 63 per cent. of the cases with satisfactory results, retaining their freedom for an average period of seven and a half or eight months without a relapse.

BETTER EFFICIENCY IN ARMY

Colonel Commandant Tells of Improvement in British Service by Temperance Principles.

The following order issued opportunely by Colonel Gatliff, commandant of the Portsmouth division of the Royal Marine light infantry, is interesting to temperance reformers, as showing the steady trend toward temperance noticeable in the British military service. "As most service offenses arise from having too much to drink, the colonel commandant desires to point out to all whom it may concern that the beginning of the new year is the best time for making a fresh start. During 1909 there has been a diminution in the cases of drunkenness as compared with 1908, and there is still room for further improvement. Men who may be inclined to excess should formally resolve that under no circumstances whatever will they drink too much, and all who are not quite sure of themselves are strongly advised to become teetotalers. Men who make these good resolutions and stick to them will, at the end of 1910, find themselves better off in pocket, in health, with improved prospects in the corps, with a great increase of self-respect, and in every way they will be betters servants of our king and country."

No soul was ever yet saved who was too idle to seek.

UNDEFEATED CHAMPION OF THE NORTHWEST.

T. A. Ireland, Rifle Shot, of Colfax, Wash., Tells a Story.

Mr. Ireland is the holder of four world records and has yet to lose his first match—says he: "Kidney trouble so affected my vision as to interfere with my shooting. I became so nervous I could hardly hold a gun. There was severe pain in my back and head and my kidneys were terribly disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me after I had doctored and taken nearly every remedy imaginable without relief. I will give further details of my case to anyone enclosing stamp."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

When Father Helped.

The fond father held the manuscript while his son practised the oration.

"Shall we permit the ruthless hand of the hydra-headed tyrant," cried the youth, "to—to—to—well, what is it?"

The father was wrestling with the manuscript.

"Oh, yes," he muttered, "here it is: 'to dessicate.' Go on."

"It's desecrate," cried the boy, indignantly. "'Shall we permit the ruthless hand of the hydra-headed tyrant to desecrate the—the—the—' why don't you prompt me?"

The father was staring hard at the manuscript.

"The—the poodle—paddle—poodleum of our liver ties," he stammered.

"It's the 'palladium of our liberties,'" roared the boy. "Gimme that paper—I'll say it meself."

And he stalked away angrily.

But He Wasn't.

Senator Depew, in his Washington residence on his seventy-sixth birthday, told a reporter that his health was perfect.

"You do, indeed, sir," said the reporter, heartily, "look the picture of health."

"Yes," said the senator, "I shouldn't have said I was well if my appearance didn't bear me out. A self-contradictory statement is merely ludicrous. You have heard about the census taker?

"A census taker rang the bell of a Hillyer place residence the other day and an elderly gentleman opened the door.

"'I'd like to see the head of the house,' said the census taker.

"'S-sh! Not so loud!' whispered the elderly gentleman. 'Now, what is it? I'm the head of the house?'"

Try This, This Summer.

The very next time you're hot, tired or thirsty, step up to a soda fountain and get a glass of Coca-Cola. It will cool you off, relieve your bodily and mental fatigue and quench your thirst delightfully. At soda fountains or carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Delicious, refreshing and wholesome. Send to the Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells what Coca-Cola is and why it is so delicious, refreshing and thirst-quenching. And send 2c stamp for the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910—contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities.

Get After the Flies.

With the warm days flies multiply amazingly. Now is the time to attack them and prevent the breeding of millions from the few hundreds that already exist.

Perhaps the most effective method of destroying flies is by burning pyrethrum in each room. This stuns the flies and they can be swept up and burned.

Flies are dangerous carriers of disease and an enemy of humankind. Do your part toward keeping down the pest and improving the health of your community.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Oh, Mr. Wright!

Wilbur Wright was talking to a Dayton reporter about the Daily Mail's $50,000 aerial race from London to Manchester.

"It was shocking, though," said the reporter, "that Graham White, an Anglo-Saxon flying man, let himself be beaten by a Frenchman."

Mr. Wright smiled.

"Shocking?" he said. "It was more than that. It was a-Paulhan."

Faster.

Teacher—Children, nature is superior to man in everything. For instance, there is nothing that travels so fast as the unseen wind.

Willie—Huh! You ought to hear what my pa says about a sight draft!

Penalized for Holding.

Maud—Do you believe in palmistry?

Ethel—In a way. I've known it to work splendid as a starter when the young man was shy.

He who commits injustice is ever made more wretched than he who suffers it.—Plato.

Don't throw kisses, my boy; deliver them in person.

Constipation Vanishes Forever

Prompt Relief--Permanent Cure

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS never fail. Purely vegetable—act surely but gently on the liver.

Stop after dinner distress—cure indigestion—improve the complexion—brighten the eyes. Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price

GENUINE must bear signature: Brent Good

STOCKERS & FEEDERS

Choice quality; reds and roans, white faces or angus bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.

National Live Stock Com. Co.

At either

Kansas City, Mo., St. Joseph, Mo., S. Omaha, Neb.

KNOWN SINCE 1836 AS RELIABLE

PLANTEN'S (TRADE MARK) C & C OR BLACK CAPSULES

SUPERIOR REMEDY FOR MEN ETC. ETC.

AT DRUGGISTS. TRIAL BOX BY MAIL 50c.

PLANTEN, 93 HENRY ST. BROOKLYN, N.Y.

WOMAN'S ADVANCE IN CHINA

One of the Most Encouraging Signs of Progress That the Great Empire Has Yet Given.

When Christ begins to uplift a race, the evidence of it is seen in the position and education of woman. In the great land of China woman is still ignorant and enslaved to man. Mentally, morally and physically she is still near the bottom of the ladder—but a change is coming and has, in fact already become evident. A new style of woman is appearing, with unbound feet, with face washed from the old-time paint and powder, with the impulse and admitted right to take her place beside the men of her family and acquaintance in social and intellectual life.

Perhaps the most evident change has been in the line of woman's education. Thirty years ago there was not even the simplest classic for them; now the road to highest education is opening. The very men who a generation ago wished to keep them in subjection now demand they shall be like their western sisters.

"A cry comes from all over China for teachers, for women who know," says a writer in Woman's Work. "This need offers perhaps the greatest opportunity for American young women that exists anywhere for the Chinese are willing to pay for English, for music, for anything. It is decreed that their women must be enlightened."

Another sign of progress in China is seen in the new official Chinese almanac, which contains for the first time in its history the Christian Sunday as well as the Chinese holy days.

German Alcohol Stills.

An authority on alcohol stills says that there are 20,000 farm stills in operation on as many farms in Germany. The German government permits the farmer to produce a certain amount of grain or potato alcohol, the amount depending upon the size and location of the farm and the annual demand for the product, upon the payment of a reduced revenue tax. Alcohol distilled in excess of the quantity allowed is subject to the higher rate of taxation. Denatured alcohol, however, is not subject to any tax.

The Secret.

"Miss Bright," whispered Miss Gaussip, "can you keep a secret?"

"Yes," replied Miss Bright, also whispering, "I can keep one as well as you can."

Girls don't take much interest in pugilism, but they will continue to train for the engagement ring.

A "Corner" In Comfort

For those who know the pleasure and satisfaction there is in a glass of

ICED POSTUM

Make it as usual, dark and rich—boil it thoroughly to bring out the distinctive flavour and food value.

Cool with cracked ice, and add sugar and lemon; also a little cream if desired.

Postum is really a food-drink with the nutritive elements of the field grains. Ice it, and you have a pleasant, safe, cooling drink for summer days—an agreeable surprise for those who have never tried it.

"There's a Reason" for POSTUM

Postum Cereal Co., Limited, Battle Creek, Mich.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. It developed that the intruder was probably a woman. Gertrude was suspected, for the intruder left a print of a bare foot. Gertrude returned home with her right ankle sprained. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff button.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

"Undoubtedly. Why, what could it be but flight? Miss Innes, let me reconstruct that evening, as I see it. Bailey and Armstrong had quarreled at the club. I learned this to-day. Your nephew brought Bailey over. Prompted by jealous, insane fury, Armstrong followed, coming across by the path. He entered the billiard room wing—perhaps rapping, and being admitted by your nephew. Just inside he was shot, by some one on the circular staircase. The shot fired, your nephew and Bailey left the house at once, going toward the automobile house. They left by the lower road, which prevented them being heard, and when you and Miss Gertrude got downstairs everything was quiet."

"But—Gertrude's story," I stammered.

"Miss Gertrude only brought forward her explanation the following morning. I do not believe it, Miss Innes. It is the story of a loving and ingenious woman."

"And—this thing to-night?"

"May upset my whole view of the case. We must give the benefit of every doubt after all. We may, for instance, come back to the figure on the porch; if it was a woman you saw that night through the window, we might start with other premises. Or Mr. Innes' explanation may turn us in a new direction. It is possible that he shot Arnold Armstrong as a burglar and then fled, frightened at what he had done. In any case, however, I feel confident that the body was here when he left. Mr. Armstrong left the club ostensibly for a moonlight saunter, about half after eleven o'clock. It was three when the shot was fired."

I leaned back bewildered. It seemed to me that the evening had been full of significant happenings, had I only held the key. Had Gertrude been the fugitive in the clothes chute? Who was the man on the drive near the lodge, and whose gold-mounted dressing-bag had I seen in the lodge sitting room?

It was late when Mr. Jamieson finally got up to go. I went with him to the door, and together we stood looking out over the valley. Below lay the village of Casanova, with its Old World houses, its blossoming trees and its peace. Above on the hill across the valley were the lights of the Greenwood club. It was even possible to see the curving row of parallel lights that marked the carriage road. Rumors that I had heard about the club came back—of drinking, of high play, and once, a year ago, of a suicide under those very lights.

Mr. Jamieson left, taking a short cut to the village, and I still stood there. It must have been after 11, and the monotonous tick of the big clock on the stairs behind me was the only sound. Then I was conscious that some one was running up the drive. In a minute a woman darted into the area of light made by the open door, and caught me by the arm. It was Rosie—Rosie in a state of collapse from terror, and, not the least important, clutching one of my Coalport plates and a silver spoon.

She stood staring into the darkness behind, still holding the plate. I got her into the house and secured the plate; then I stood and looked down at her where she crouched tremblingly against the doorway.

"Well," I asked, "didn't your young man enjoy his meal?"

She couldn't speak. She looked at the spoon she still held—I wasn't so anxious about it; thank Heaven, it wouldn't chip—and then she stared at me.

"I appreciate your desire to have everything nice for him," I went on, "but the next time, you might take the Limoges china. It's more easily duplicated and less expensive."

"I haven't a young man—not here." She had got her breath now, as I had guessed she would. "I—I have been chased by a thief, Miss Innes."

"Did he chase you out of the house and back again?" I asked.

Then Rosie began to cry—not silently, but noisily, hysterically. I stopped her by giving her a good shake.

"What in the world is the matter with you?" I snapped. "Has the day of good common sense gone by! Sit up and tell me the whole thing."

Rosie sat up then, and sniffled.

"I was coming up the drive—" she began.

"You must start with when you went down the drive, with my dishes and my silver," I interrupted, but, seeing more signs of hysteria, I gave in. "Very well. You were coming up the drive—"

"I had a basket of—of silver and dishes on my arm, and I was carrying the plate, because—because I was afraid I'd break it. Part-way up the road a man stepped out of the bushes, and held his arm like this, spread out, so I couldn't get past. He said—he said—'Not so fast, young lady; I want you to let me see what's in that basket.'"

She got up in her excitement and took hold of my arm.

"It was like this, Miss Innes," she said, "and say you was the man. When he said that, I screamed and ducked under his arm like this. He caught at the basket and I dropped it. I ran as fast as I could, and he came after as far as the trees. Then he stopped. Oh, Miss Innes, it must have been the man that killed that Mr. Armstrong!"

"Don't be foolish," I said. "Whoever killed Mr. Armstrong would put as much space between himself and this house as he could. Go up to bed now; and mind, if I hear of this story being repeated to the other maids, I shall deduct from your wages for every broken dish I find in the drive."

I could fancy Liddy's face when she missed the extra pieces of china—she had opposed Rosie from the start. If Liddy once finds a prophecy fulfilled, especially an unpleasant one, she never allows me to forget it. It seemed to me that it was absurd to leave that china dotted along the road for her to spy the next morning; so with a sudden resolution, I opened the door again and stepped out into the darkness. As the door closed behind me I half regretted my impulse; then I shut my teeth and went on.

I have never been a nervous woman, as I said before. Moreover, a minute or two in the darkness enabled me to see things fairly well. Beulah gave me rather a start by rubbing unexpectedly against my feet; then we two, side by side, went down the drive.

There were no fragments of china, but where the grove began I picked up a silver spoon. So far Rosie's story was borne out; I began to wonder if it were not indiscreet, to say the least, this midnight prowling in a neighborhood with such a deservedly bad reputation. Then I saw something gleaming, which proved to be the handle of a cup, and a step or two farther on I found a V-shaped bit of plate. But the most surprising thing of all was to find the basket sitting comfortably beside the road, with the rest of the broken crockery piled neatly within, and a handful of small silver, spoons, forks and the like, on top! I could only stand and stare. Then Rosie's story was true. But where had Rosie carried her basket? And why had the thief, if he were a thief, picked up the broken china out of the road and left it, with his booty?

It was with my nearest approach to a nervous collapse that I heard the familiar throbbing of an automobile engine. As it came closer I recognized the outline of the Dragon Fly, and knew that Halsey had come back.

I Was Conscious That Some One Was Running Up the Drive.

Strange enough it must have seemed to Halsey, too, to come across me in the middle of the night, with the skirt of my gray silk gown over my shoulders to keep off the dew, holding a red and green basket under one arm and a black cat under the other. What with relief and joy, I began to cry, right there, and very nearly wiped my eyes on Beulah in the excitement.

CHAPTER IX.

Just Like a Girl.

"Aunt Ray!" Halsey said from the gloom behind the lamps. "What in the world are you doing here?"

"Taking a walk," I said, trying to be composed. I don't think the answer struck either of us as being ridiculous at the time. "Oh, Halsey, where have you been?"

"Let me take you up to the house." He was in the road, and had Beulah and the basket out of my arms in a moment. I could see the car plainly now, and Warner was at the wheel—Warner in an ulster and a pair of slippers, over heaven knows what. Jack Bailey was not there. I got in, and we went slowly and painfully up to the house.

We did not talk. What we had to say was too important to commence there, and, besides, it took all kinds of coaxing from both men to get the Dragon Fly up the last grade. Only when we had closed the front door and stood facing each other in the hall did Halsey say anything. He slipped his strong young arm around my shoulders and turned me so I faced the light.

"Poor Aunt Ray!" he said gently. And I nearly wept again. "I—I must see Gertrude, too; we will have a three-cornered talk."

And then Gertrude herself came down the stairs. She had not been to bed evidently; she still wore the white negligee she had worn earlier in the evening, and she limped somewhat. During her slow progress down the stairs I had time to notice one thing: Mr. Jamieson had said the woman who escaped from the cellar had worn no shoe on her right foot. Gertrude's right ankle was the one she had sprained!

The meeting between brother and sister was tense, but without tears. Halsey kissed her tenderly, and I noticed evidences of strain and anxiety in both young faces.

"Is everything—right?" she asked.

"Right as can be," with forced cheerfulness.

I lighted the living room and we went in there. Only a half-hour before I had sat with Mr. Jamieson in that very room, listening while he overtly accused both Gertrude and Halsey of at least a knowledge of the death of Arnold Armstrong. Now Halsey was here to speak for himself: I should learn everything that had puzzled me.

"I saw it in the paper to-night for the first time," he was saying. "It knocked me dumb. When I think of this houseful of women, and a thing like that occurring!"

Gertrude's face was still set and white. "That isn't all, Halsey," she said. "You and—and Jack left almost at the time it happened. The detective here thinks that you—that we—know something about it."

"The devil he does!" Halsey's eyes were fairly starting from his head. "I beg your pardon, Aunt Ray, but—the fellow's a lunatic."

"Tell me everything, won't you, Halsey?" I begged. "Tell me where you went that night, or rather morning, and why you went as you did. This has been a terrible 48 hours for all of us."

He stood staring at me, and I could see the horror of the situation dawning in his face.

"I can't tell you where I went, Aunt Ray," he said after a moment. "As to why, you will learn that soon enough. But Gertrude knows that Jack and I left the house before this thing—this horrible murder—occurred."

"Mr. Jamieson does not believe," Gertrude said drearily. "Halsey, if the worst comes, if they should arrest you, you must—tell."

"I shall tell nothing," he said with a new sternness in his voice. "Aunt Ray, it was necessary for Jack and me to leave that night. I cannot tell you why—just yet. As to where we went, if I have to depend on that as an alibi, I shall not tell. The whole thing is an absurdity, a trumped-up charge that cannot possibly be serious."

"Has Mr. Bailey gone back to the city," I demanded, "or to the club?"

"Neither," defiantly; "at the present moment I do not know where he is."

"Halsey," I asked gravely, leaning forward, "have you the slightest suspicion who killed Arnold Armstrong? The police think he was admitted from within, and that he was shot down from above, by some one on the circular staircase."

"I know nothing of it," he maintained; but I fancied I caught a sudden glance at Gertrude, a flash of something that died as it came.

As quietly, as calmly as I could, I went over the whole story, from the night Liddy and I had been alone up to the strange experience of Rosie and her pursuer. The basket still stood on the table, a mute witness to this last mysterious occurrence.

"There is something else," I said hesitatingly, at the last. "Halsey, I have never told this even to Gertrude, but the morning after the crime I found, in a tulip bed, a revolver. It—it was yours, Halsey."

For an appreciable moment Halsey stared at me. Then he turned to Gertrude.

"My revolver, Trude!" he exclaimed. "Why, Jack took my revolver with him, didn't he?"

"Oh, for heaven's sake don't say that," I implored. "The detective thinks possibly Jack Bailey came back, and—and the thing happened then."

"He didn't come back," Halsey said sternly. "Gertrude, when you brought down a revolver that night for Jack to take with him, what one did you bring? Mine?"

Gertrude was defiant now.

"No. Yours was loaded, and I was afraid of what Jack—might do. I gave him one I have had for a year or two. It was empty."

Halsey threw up both hands despairingly.

"If that isn't like a girl!" he said. "Why didn't you do what I asked you to, Gertrude? You send Bailey off with an empty gun, and throw mine in a tulip bed, of all places on earth! Mine was a 38 caliber. The inquest will show, of course, that the bullet that killed Armstrong was a 38. Then where shall I be?"

"You forget," I broke in, "that I have the revolver, and that no one knows about it."

But Gertrude had risen angrily.

"I cannot stand it; it is always with me," she cried. "Halsey, I did not throw your revolver into the tulip bed. I—think — you — did—it—yourself!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Burglar's Text Book.

The police of New York found upon a burglar, arrested by them, a treatise on safe-cracking that is said to be the most remarkable document that has ever fallen into their hands. The contents are so well compiled that the police unhesitatingly declare the author a past grand master in his profession, and, according to Popular Mechanics, are somewhat anxious to find out just how many copies are in circulation throughout the country.

For the most part the manuscript is in the yegg code, a lingo freely used by thieves the country over. It describes the two kinds of safes recognized by the profession, namely, the fireproof and the burglar-proof, asserting, however, that there is no genuine burglar-proof safe, and that kind that are drill-proof are only called so by courtesy. Minute directions for cracking a safe are given, together with diagrams to illustrate the treatise.

Guilt Revealed.

"Johnny, do you smoke cigarettes?"

"I d-d-do a l-l-little, sir," stammered Johnny, paling beneath the tan of the baseball field.

The boss fixed him with his eagle eye.

"Then gimme me one," he said. "I left mine on the bureau."

WINE, WOMEN AND WAGES

By Rev. M. A. Matthews, D. D.
Pastor of First Presbyterian Church Seattle, Wash.

In calling to your attention the perplexing problems included in the title of this sermon, you are, no doubt, willing to admit that it is impossible to give an exhaustive review of the underlying conditions and causes. If we are successful in making you think, arrive at a conclusion and form a resolution, the sermon has accomplished its purpose. In fact, it is not the purpose of a sermon to relieve the audience of mental exercise. Its best work has been done when it creates an appetite for Bible study, investigation and honest thought; when it provokes the auditors to think and forces them to arrive at logical, sane, spiritual conclusions.

The work of this pulpit has always been done along that line. It does not try to inject hypodermic doses of encyclopedia into the audience. It leaves that work to superficial, alleged students. If in this sermon you can be provoked to think, to act and to do your Christian duty, every one will be satisfied.

Wine, women and wages have been, since the catastrophe in the Garden of Eden, very obstreperous subjects. No man pretends to know everything about them. In fact, one of them is very elusive, and perhaps will never be fully understood until she reaches Paradise regained. The more elusive the subject the more fascinating the study and the more exciting the pursuit of knowledge.

These three problems are ever with us, and will remain with us, and will continue to be serious problems until the end of the ages. Many ridiculous, foolish and harmful solutions remain unsolved. One is prone to think and believe the time has arrived for serious, sane, righteous efforts to be made at remedying the conditions now confronting us.

The harmful effects of intoxicating beverages have been apparent to students for the last 5,000 years.

Drunkenness is a crime against God, against man, against society, against the home, church and child. There is no excuse for it. There is no logical reason to sustain it. It has been tried and condemned before every bar of justice, before public opinion and by every thinking man who has ever lived or who now lives.

Drunkenness must cease. If the man who makes a beast of himself were the only one involved we might become cold hearted and cruel enough to say: "Let him drink himself to death, go to the dogs, and be devoured by the vultures." The man who makes a beast of himself, who destroys his life by strong drink, and who wallows in the gutter, perhaps, deserves no more consideration. However, he is not the only one involved. His family are to be considered, his children are to be pitied, society is to be protected, and posterity is to be prevented from inheriting his habits, tendencies and diseases.

Many remedies have been tried for drunkenness. The man who comes into this world cursed by heredity, with a tendency to drink, is to be pitied. He ought to have every effort made in his behalf that could possibly prevent him from following his inclinations to the drunkard's grave and to the drunkard's cell. It is impossible for a man who dies a drunkard to be saved. No drunkard who dies a drunkard can inherit the kingdom of God or receive the blessings, joys and citizenship of heaven. There are no drunkards in heaven. In order for a drunkard to be saved he must turn from his evil ways, give up his life of sin, accept Jesus Christ as his personal Savior, be regenerated by the Holy Spirit, and then he can be saved in this life and from himself, his appetites and his passions.

The man who deliberately contracts the habit of drunkenness deserves physical punishment, ostracism, and the infliction of every pain that will make him conscious of the wrong he is perpetrating against his family and society.

The whipping post would perhaps be effectual remedy for premeditated, deliberate drunkenness. The man who disregards his family and shows contempt for society by deliberately getting drunk ought to be stripped to the waist, tied to a public whipping post, and given 39 lashes on his naked back once a week for six months. If that remedy were applied, some of your "genteel drunks," who are destroying their families, dissipating their property, insulting society and damning young men would be immediately and effectually cured.

The idea of a man getting drunk, going home and insulting his family, abusing his little, helpless wife, terrorizing and cursing his little children, is repugnant to every thought. His poor, helpless wife and little children seem to be without remedy at the hands of your courts, because justice is administered by namby-pamby men who seem to be afraid to punish a genteel rascal. The whipping post ought to be established for wife beaters, professional drunks and men who disregard their duties to their families, their children and society.

Remember that I said I was deeply interested in and sorry for the man who is born a drunkard, and by inheritance was cursed with an appetite for demonized wine. Such a man, if he becomes a drunkard, ought to be tried for insanity and confined in an asylum for life.

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Holly Springs, Miss. — "Words are inadequate for me to express what yourwonderfulmedicines have done for me. The doctors said I had a tumor, and I had an operation, but was soon as bad again as ever. I wrote to you for advice, and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you told me to do. I am glad to say that now I look and feel so well that my friends keep asking me what has helped me so much, and I gladly recommend your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Willie Edwards, Holly Springs, Miss.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy — tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give everyone confidence.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists

NO MORE THAN HE DESERVED

Conscienceless Interrupter of Suffragette Meeting Probably a Sadder and Wiser Man.

The suffragette meeting was in full blast. Enthusiasm was rampant and every remark the distinguished leader made was cheered to the echo.

"And now we come to personal courage," cried the speaker, excitedly; "our masculine enemies try to deride us with such allusions as 'frail femininity,' or 'weaker vessels,' but we can show more bravery than men."

"Aye, aye, sister!" echoed a mighty chorus.

"When it comes to real danger we fear nothing."

"Aye, aye, sister!"

"Now, take sister Horn, our worthy fighter and vote getter of this district. She fears nothing. Two nights in succession sister Horn came home from one of our enthusiastic meetings and found a man under her bed."

There was a short pause. Then a little emaciated chap who had crept to the front unobserved arose and stretched his arms.

"H'm!" he ejaculated, with a deep yawn. "I'll bet a dollar agin a plug of tobacco that man was her husband seeking safety."

And when the little emaciated chap finally recovered his bearings he was on the sidewalk minus hat and collar.

Authority on Soup.

A little boy, promoted to company dinner at the family table, enjoyed his oyster cream hugely until he came to an unrecognized object at the bottom of the plate.

"What is it? Oh, just an oyster, dear," responded the child's mother, sharply appealed to.

"Why did Dora put it in?"

"Oh, to make the soup good."

"She can leave it out next time," the tiny epicure decided. "The soup's good enough without."—Exchange.

Diplomacy is the art of making others believe you are interested in them, when in reality they make you weary.

A Pleasing Combination

Post Toasties

with Cream and Sugar.

Adding strawberries or any kind of fresh or stewed fruit makes a delicious summer dish.

The crisp, golden-brown bits have a most delightful flavour—a fascination that appeals to the appetite.

"The Memory Lingers"

Sold by Grocers,
Pkgs. 10c and 15c

POSTUM CEREAL CO., LTD.
Battle Creek, Mich.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months ..... .75
One copy three months ..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1910.

AT EVERY recurring election complaint is registered against the party leader who is termed a boss, because he refuses to accept instructions from some self-constituted censor, and immediately the smaller fry, who include disappointed office seekers taking advantage of the criticism, proceed to wield the hammer. An investigation would demonstrate that the men who knock the hardest are usually disappointed aspirants who sought the aid of "the boss" and were denied the assistance they ask for. Had their requests received favorable consideration, they would have worshipped at the shrine of the boss, and none would have bent so lowly as they. Angered at the refusal, however, they proceed to get even, giving no thought to the party to which they profess allegiance and only intent upon destroying the power of the man who would not do their bidding.

That such men are not sincere in their opposition to the system which they condemn is evidenced by the fact that they had previously been beneficiaries under it or subsequently accepted favors and licked the hand that smote them. This has frequently occurred.

There have been occasions when the party manager has found it expedient to take up as a candidate a man to whom he is bitterly opposed in order to propitiate an element whose assistance is necessary to carry the ticket and keep the party in power. This, however, is not done when the danger is imminent, and an election cannot be won without such a concession, for even a boss, strange as it may seem, would prefer to have those who oppose him in power than be charged with defeat.

WHITE SLAVE CONFERENCE.

No subject of social legislation has so nimbly found its way to the statute books of the states and of the nation as that of the repression of the white-slave traffic. No movement has had the more intelligent furtherance from this community. It is, therefore, a matter of more than usual interest to note the meeting of the National Vigilance Committee at Mountain Lake Park, which began Tuesday. Dr. O. Edward Janney of Baltimore, who has taken a foremost place in the ranks of fighters for the purity standard violated by the nefarious white-slave business, will be prominently before the meeting of the social workers from all parts of the country.

It has been made clearly known that the decent sentiment of the country will not tolerate wrong of so ghastly a nature in relation to the weaker sex as the exploitation of the unprotected or the unsophisticated female by professional purveyors of womanhood. Maryland has had placed upon its statute books, in common with many other states and in conformity with the federal government, laws that look to the rigid repression and the rigorous punishment of those who offend civilization by their acts.

The various subjects to be treated at the beautiful mountain resort are in line with the protection of virtue and the salvage work that is being carried on by one and another organization in behalf of womanhood. Such convocations do much for the promotion of good sentiment and the realization of desired ideals, and they deserve the support and good will of all lovers of the better impulses and better motives in human society.

Young Bank Cashier.

Jesse C. Sharpless, who has been employed in a clerical position in the First National Bank of Keyser several years, has been elected cashier of the First National Bank of Gormania. He is only 23 years old, but has had such experience as fits him fully for the position of trust. He will move his family to Gormania at once, and assume the duties of the position on Monday next. —Keyser Echo.

Mr. Walter Ravenscroft Ill.

A telegram received in Oakland this morning by a friend of the family conveyed the intelligence of the extreme illness of Mr. Walter Ravenscroft, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscroft, of Oakland. Mr. Ravenscroft suffered a stroke of appoplexy a day or two ago at his home in Ridgeway, Pa., and last night his condition was very grave.

The Republican for Job Printing

MOVE AGAINST GIRL SLAVERY

Conference Opened at Mountain Lake Park Tuesday.

A conference under the auspices of the National Vigilance Committee for the Suppression and Prevention of the White Slave Traffic, together with the American Purity Alliance, met at Mt. Lake Park Tuesday with a good attendance. The gathering was called to order by Dr. W. W. Davis, superintendent of the Park, who, after words of welcome, introduced Judge Delacy, of the Juvenile Court of Washington, D. C., as chairman. On taking the chair Judge Delacy spoke earnestly concerning the evils of the white slave traffic and urged all present to unite in its suppression. Miss Ida E. Miner, of Washington, was chosen secretary. Letters of sympathy and co-operation were read from Governor Crothers, Senator Rayner, Charles J. Bonaparte, Robert Garrett, Governor Mann, of Virginia, and Commissioner Rudolph, of Washington. The latter named as delegates Mrs. Ellen Spencer Murray, Mrs. Kate Waller Barrett, Rev. R. H. McKim, Charles A. Massie, Miss Florence M. Brown, Mrs. H. B. McFarland, Deaconess Ida E. Miner, Mrs. Mary Bayly, Mrs. L. A. Fetran and Charles P. Neill.

Dr. O. Edward Janney, of Baltimore, chairman of the National Vigilance Committee, spoke on the white slave traffic. Dr. Janney spoke of the necessity of arousing the nation to the fact that there exists a traffic in women far-reaching in its influence and terrible in its results. It is as treacherous as it is widespread. The trader often appears in the guise of a friend, who gains the confidence of the unwary, offers easy employment at a distance, and then entraps the victim, or he may marry the girl with the same intention. Girls from towns and villages all over the United States are being entrapped. It was shown that the procurers, men and women, are hunters, that they take all chances, and use every means to secure their prey, that they destroy thousands of young girls every year. Extracts from government reports and the reports of prosecuting officers were read, confirming the statements made.

In the discussion that followed Judge Elliott, of Baltimore, related cases of white slavery that had come before him in the Criminal Court. He urged all citizens to exert every influence to break up the connection that exists between politics and social vice and to firmly support all those whose duty it is to enforce the laws.

Miss Laura B. Garrett, of the Maryland Society of Social Hygiene, gave a talk of unusal interest to parents and teachers on mother love as shown by plants and animals.

In the afternoon Miss Garrett addressed the Woman's Club of Mountain Lake Park.

Why They Did It.

To the Editor of The Republican.

The communication in last week's REPUBLICAN, signed "A High School Patron," asking the school officials for reasons for taking the action they did in the selections of the principals of the schools in Oakland, is such that is worthy of notice.

Although the request comes a little late and after a great many and uncalled for harsh things have been said and published, it is the first request coming from any one asking why Prof. Loraditch was selected as principal of the High school and Prof. Palmer was not, and on behalf of the Board I will comply with the request.

In the first place, I will state that in naming Prof. Loraditch for the High School the Board had no desire or intention to ignore those who signed the petition for the appointment of Prof. Palmer as principal of the "Public and High Schools," but were of the opinion and are still of the same opinion that by leaving Prof. Palmer as principal of the Grammar (Public) school he is in the position where he can serve seventy-five per cent of his petitioners.

Under the arrangement (separating the High and Public schools) Prof. Palmer could not hold the principalship of both. Two principals were required. There were two applicants, and the selection of either one as principal of the High School (the only one under the law the Board had authority to fill) was not and could not be construed to mean that the other and the friends of the other were ignored.

In selecting Prof. Loraditch the Board thinks there can be no question as to his ability and qualifications for the position. No one has raised this question, therefore it is not necessary to enter into any explanation as to his qualifications.

By the separating of the schools the selection of the principal of the Public (Grammar) school is wholly in the hands of the trustees of that school, and before the Board took action the views of two of the three trustees were ascertained and Prof. Palmer assured that his salary would remain at what he had been getting for the past two years.

Now as to the advisability of separating the schools.

Briefly stated, the Act of 1910 says that all High Schools of the first group shall have three teachers (besides the principal) teaching High School branches alone, together with manual training and commercial teachers.

The Oakland school has had only two teachers teaching High School branches heretofore.

Should not some effort be made to fulfill the requirements of the law governing High Schools? Would the Board be condemned (and rightly) or be commended by the present fault finders if they did not plan to make the school come under the law.

Any one who has given educational matters any thought will agree with the school officials that better work can be done under the plan of having separate schools when the present building is inadequate to hold all the pupils and the number of teachers required.

Unless the provisions of the new law are complied with this county will be unable to get approximately $2,500 from the State for High School purposes, and which otherwise will go into the State general school fund and be apportioned to all the counties in the State.

From an educational standpoint and as an official, believing the separating of the schools and having over each a principal, both competent, is for "the greatest good to the greatest number," the point cited by "A High School Patron," but believe the nasty "flings" and insinuations, by those who wish to make believe that they have the good of the schools in view, have in no way been a benefit to the schools.

The Board does not feel that it has been guilty of any criminal action in naming the principal of the High School, a prerogative delegated to it by the School laws, passed by the representatives of the people in General Assembly. It is true, Prof. Palmer had quite a number of names on the petition he filed, among they many excellent and interested parties, together with a grest many disinterested ones, and in the Grammer school is where he can serve best most of the interested ones.

I have endeavored to be brief and as plain as possible, and write solely because of the gentlemanly request of "A High School Patron" and not in reply to anything that any scribbler or "knocker" has said. Respectfully,

CHAS. A. DEFFINBAUGH,
Pres. Garrett School Board
Oakland, Md., July 18, 1910.

GRANTSVILLE.

Charles H. Bill, Mahlon Miller and many other property owners in the vicinity of Grantsville as far south as Bittinger, have recently given options on their coal lands to C. D. Hershberger, Wm. C. Livengood and others, said to be representing the same parties who have recently taken options or purchased outright the coal under extensive tracts along the Blue Lick and other portions of Somerset county, Pa. W. A. Merrill, a prominent coal operator of Garrett, Pa., and J. J. Dougherty, of the Quemahoning Coal Company, who is directing the development work along the Blue Lick, have been through the country here and are mixed up in the deal. The presence of such men here and the fact that it is known that they represent vast financial interests, gives color to the hope that some extensive developments are on the tapis in this region. Some of the options secured have been taken for three and some for six months. It is understood that a core drill will soon be put to work in the Casselman valley above Grantsville to determine the thickness and quality of the lower coal measures. Borings made in the past along Shade run and the Casselman have disclosed the fact that enormous wealth is concealed in the earth hereabouts. Thus far the coal underlying the hills and mountains of this section of Garrett county remains untouched except where the surface veins have been tapped here and there for local fuel supply. If all of the options on coal lands that have been taken in the last month or two are made good a great deal of money will be placed in circulation here within the next three to six months.

Garrett county, although not traversed by the Wabash extension being built through Allegany county, Md., and Somerset and Fayette counties, Pa., is already indirectly benefitting by the construction of the new road. Charles H. Bill and Peter Nathan who are cutting a tract of timber near Friendsville have a contract to furnish lumber for the Carter Construction Company for use at the tunnel to be bored through Big Savage mountain near Deal. They have already shipped several car loads via Confluence to Sand Patch.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Miller, living two miles south of town, have had as their guests during the past week Mrs. Miller's brother, Enoch Kreitzburg, wife and two children, of Sharon, Pa., who have been visiting relatives and friends at Meyersdale since July 5th. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were at Meyersdale last Thursday superintending repairs to Mrs. Miller's house on Grant street which was badly damaged by the tornado that swept over Somerset county, Pa., on June 18th. The Millers have one of the newest and best farm homes in this vicinity and any one visiting them is sure of being hospitably entertained.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The conference under the auspices of the National Vigilance Committee for the Suppression and Prevention of the White Slave Traffic held sessions for three days and will close tonight. The chairman of the meeting was Judge Delacy of the Juvenile Court of Washington City. The attendance was good.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will hold their annual conference here commencing tomorrow and closing Monday afternoon with the serving of refreshments and the sale of useful and fancy articles at the Hall of Philosophy from 2 to 5 o'clock. The sermon in the Tabernacle Sunday morning will be preached by Dr. Henry Ostrom and the music will be furnished by Prof. John P. Hillis and his chorus.

The Bible Conference, under the direction of Dr. Henry Ostrom, also commences tomorrow for a session of ten days. While this and the meeting noted above overlap, the sessions will be so arranged as to be mutually helpful to both. Prof. John P. Hillis has organized a strong chorus to furnish music for the conference, and Dr. Ostrom will be assisted by a large number of the most prominent religious teachers in America. This conference will be one of the best meetings ever held on the grounds and will be continued from year to year.

Mr. and Mrs. Winchell are making their handsome cottage, "Land's End," more and more attractive every day.

Miss Blanche Chance is at a hospital in Wheeling where she was operated on for a very annoying affliction from which she has suffered for several months. We understand that the operation entirely relieved the young lady and that she will be home in a few days.

Miss Abbie Chance left here last Sunday to attend the marriage of Miss Ettie Cadle and Mr. Emory Flowers, which occurred at the home of the bride's parents, Reistertown, Md., yesterday.

The Ladies Civic Club will establish a tennis court in connection with their bowling alley.

The Allen cottage near the railroad has been sold to a party in Baltimore who will occupy it shortly.

Dr. Harry McComas and wife were in the Park Tuesday where the Dr. presented his wife to his many friends.

Of all the wars we have had in this peaceful place and among this peace loving people, none have quite equaled the post card war now on between the dealers in that commodity in this community.

Services in the M. E. church next Sunday as follows: Class meeting at 11 a. m. and Sunday school at 2 p. m.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smouse, whose critical illness we noted last week, died yesterday morning.

Mr. Adolph Rambeau, of Wheeling, is at the Park for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson went to Keyser today to purchase a supply of fruit for their boarding house.

Mr. Jasper Clark, of Cleveland, Ohio, son of Rev. C. E. Clark, is here. His father and sisters Misses Ethel and Madge will be here in about a week. Rev. Clark and Miss Ethel appear on the Chautauqua platform next month.

Cottages are in demand and many more could be rented. A number are not rented simply because they are not in a fit condition for occupancy.

Mr. W. H. Mallette has taken out a license for the sale of post cards and homemade candy at his residence opposite the Association office.

Mr. L. P. Carr, president of the Annual Meeting, went to Fairmont, W. Va., today.

Mrs. J. H. Cuppett, of Clarksburg, W. Va., is spending a few days here.

Mrs. Leah F. Sincell and Miss Julia Byrne are occupying the Sincell cottage. Later they will be joined by Mr. B. H. Sincell's family.

ASHER GLADE.

It was a hundred years ago,
When by the woodland ways,
The traveler saw the wild deer drink
Or crop the birchen sprays.

We have have had some very warm weather this past week and several electrical showers.

Mrs. Minerva Fike is slowly improving.

The farmers are busy harvesting wheat at the present time.

Mr. Wm. Brumbaugh, of Bedford county, Pa., passed through this place last week.

Mr. Lloyd K. Fike and wife expect to go to a festival at the South Avenue church.

The cherries in this section are nearly all gone.

Miss Ethel Conner is sick at this writing.

Wm. H. Thomas made a trip to Markleysburg, Pa., one day last week.

Mr. Marshall Fike of Markleysburg, Pa., was in our section wanting to trade horses one day last week.

Wm. H. Thomas sold a yearling heifer last week to Mr. Ephram Thomas.

OSTEOPATHIST.

Dr. Isabel Garrison Eiler, a graduate of the full three years course as required by the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, will be at the Roslyn Cottage, Mountain Lake Park, for the summer. 4t

Subscribe for The Republican.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank
Of Allegany County.
Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department Takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier

DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

Notice To Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, either in person or by deputy, will be in each of the Election Districts in Garrett county, Maryland, to collect and receive taxes at the time and places following:

July 15—Crellin—Company's Store, 9 to 3.
July 16—Ottoway—Carney's Store, 9 to 3.
July 18—Hoyes Run, 8 to 11.
July 18—Sang Run—Cuppett & Lytle's, 1 to 4
July 19—Friendsville—Crawford Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 20—Selbysport—Riley's Store, 9 to 3.
July 21—Accident—Ries' Store, 9 to 3.
July 22—Cove—Krouse's Store, 9 to 3.
July 23—Grantsville—National Hotel, 9 to 3.
July 25—Thomas Layman's, 9 to 3.
July 26—T. H. Johnson's, 9 to 3.
July 27—Avilton—Garlitz's Store, 9 to 3.
July 28—Strickland's, 9 to 12.
July 28—Walter Warnick's, 2 to 5.
July 29—Merrill's, 9 to 3.
July 30—C. J. Otto's, 9 to 12.
July 30—Jenning's, 3 to 6.
Aug. 1—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 3—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 3—Beckman—Mellinger's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 4—Swanton—W. H. Lohr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 5—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 6—Red House, 9 to 3.
Aug. 8—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 9—Bloomington—Post Office, 9 to 3.
Aug. 10—Kitzmiller—Bank Building, 9 to 3.
Aug. 11—Kitzmiller—Wilson's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 12—Gorman—J. P. Parr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 13—Bloomington—Moody's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 15—Hoyes—W. A. Smith's Store, 9 to 12.
Aug. 15—McHenry, 2 to 5

By an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1900, being Chapter 556, Section 45, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of levy thereof; and all taxes paid on or before the first day of September a discount of three per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt for taxes so paid, but the discount allowed on the county taxes by this section shall not be made to any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due by such person or corporate institution for the current year be paid when the same is made.

ROBERT L. FRIES,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

NOTICE OF FIRST MEETING OF CREDITORS.

In the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland.

In the matter of Charles C. Frederick, Bankrupt.

IN BANKRUPTCY

To the creditors of Charles C. Frederick, of Friendsville in the county of Garrett, and District aforesaid, a Bankrupt.

Notice is hereby given that on the 8th day of June, A. D., 1910, the said party was duly adjudicated bankrupt, and that the first meeting of his creditors will be held at my Law Office, No. 1 Washington Street, in Cumberland, Maryland, on the 6th day of July, A. D., 1910, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, at which time said creditors may attend, prove their claims, appoint a trustee, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as may properly come before said meeting.

ALBERT A. DOUB,
Referee in Bankruptcy.

June 20, 1910.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL.	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS. .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.

G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.

S. T. JONES, Cashier.

G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt	Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis	George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell	William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Dr. H. M. Kemp of Bloomington, spent Monday in Oakland on business.

Mr. G. Semmes Hamill went to Baltimore yesterday on professional business.

Mrs. Adam Kline, of New York City, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Joseph White, in Oakland.

Miss Evelyn Helbig, of Oakland, is visiting her cousin, Miss Lillian Knieriem, in Cumberland.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Northrup, of Cumberland, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Cheuvront at their home in Oakland.

During the illness of Charles White, clerk in the Treacy grocery, his position is being filled by Homer Turney.

Mr. Daniel Hinebaugh, who spent two weeks at Thomas, W. Va., visiting his son, returned to Oakland yesterday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira F. Steiner, of Baltimore, are here as the guests of Mrs. Steiner's father, Mr. E. D. Kepner, on Alder street.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S.Lawtont & Sons.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. McComas, of Baltimore, arrived in Oakland Monday night and will be the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Henry W. McComas for a short time.

Mr. E. J. Fringer and daughter, Miss Lulu, who visited relatives at Petersburg, W. Va., for a week, returned home Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Catherine Manges left last Friday for Johnstown and other points in Pennsylvania where she will be the guest of friends for a short time.

Mrs. Samuel E. Boyer and little son, of Fairmont, W. Va., who were guests of Mrs. Elizabeth Hinebaugh for a week, returned home Monday afternoon.

Messrs. Dixon & Kelso are erecting a large addition to their already commodious warehouse on Liberty street. The new addition will front on Railroad street.

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith and two children, of York, Pa., are in Oakland visiting Mrs. Smith's parents, Rev. and Mrs. E. Manges, at the Lutheran parsonage.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

Mrs. Joseph E. Harned, son and daughter, who were on a visit to relatives and friends in Cumberland and Pittsburg, returned home last Friday evening.

Mrs. Frank Jamesson and son William, of Piedmont, who were guests of Mr. and Mrs King Delawder for several weeks, returned home yesterday morning.

Mr. William Scherr, accompanied by his sister, Miss Alma, went to Morgantown last Friday, in which city their parents will locate in a short time as residents.

Miss Wade, daughter of Rev. P. J. Wade, pastor of the Carmel Lutheran church, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Renninger at their home in Oakland yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sweeney, of Clarksburg, W. Va., are at Miss Nell Stanton's for the summer. Mrs. Sweeney had as her guest Sunday Miss Hamilton, of Clarksburg.

The postoffice at Watsondale, Pa., just across the line from Selbysport, has been discontinued and mail intended for patrons of Watsondale office should be addressed to Guard. Md.

LOST—On the road between Abel DeWitt's and Henry Casteel's on Saturday, June 25th, a horse contract book. Finder please leave at First National Bank and receive reward. D. J. Swartzentruber.

State Senator Harvey J. Speicher, accompanied by a number of friends, drove up to Oakland from Accident last Saturday in Mr. Speicher's automobile, returning home Sunday afternoon.

Hon. James S. Lakin, chairman of the Public Service Commission of West Virginia, with headquarters in Charleston, spent a day or two this week in Oakland as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Offutt.

A rattlesnake, measuring five feet and having thirteen rattles attached, was killed on the Casteel farm, two miles north of Oakland, Tuesday by Walter Hardesty who was engaged in hauling rock.

Rev. and Mrs. Chas. Beachy are in Oakland visiting Mr. and Mrs. David Durst this week. They expect to go to Grantsville later where they will be the guests of friends and relatives until fall when they will return west. For the past year Mr. Beachy has been engaged in evangelistic work in the State of Washington.

CAPITAL 50,0 0.00 — THE — SURPLUS AND PROFITS $20,000.00

First National Bank

OAKLAND, MD.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSITORY.

One of the Largest and Best Equipped Banking Houses in Maryland.

Vaults absolutely Fire and Burglar proof.

Safety Deposit Boxes for Rent

Every courtesy extended consistent with sound banking.

Pays 3 Per Cent.

on Time Deposits—Compounded Semi-Annually

Home Savings Banks Free. $1.00 will start an account.

The Depositor with a Dollar account receives the same consideration as the largest depositor. COME IN AND GET ACQUAINTED

Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Ravenscroft, son and daughter, of Baltimore, arrived in Oakland last Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon they went down to their summer home at Accident to remain a few weeks.

Rev. and Mrs. G. R. Williamson entertained Class No. 11 of the M. E. Sunday school at the parsonage Tuesday evening. The class is made up of quite a large number of boys ranging in years from twelve to sixteen.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Robinson left Oakland last Friday morning for Philadelphia where they will reside indefinitely. The departure of these excellent people from Oakland is deeply regretted by their many friends residing here.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Miller and daughter, of Washington, D. C., are visiting relatives and friends in Oakland and other parts of Garrett county, Mr. Miller having arrived here Saturday night, his wife and daughter preceding him by several days.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mountain arrived in Oakland Sunday evening and on Monday Mr. Mountain resumed his old position as foreman for Mr. J. E. Francis, road contractor. For the present Mr. and Mrs. Mountain are stopping at the Browning Hotel.

County Surveyor A. C. Mason, accompanied by Mr. F. A. Thayer and his son Ralph and E. H. Sinceil, Jr., went to a point near Frostburg Tuesday to make a survey of a large tract of land which is to be subdivided into smaller parcels and placed upon the market.

Carmel Lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Carmel, W. Va., will hold its annual picnic at that place on Saturday, August 6th, when a program including amusements of all kinds will be carried out. The main feature of the picnic will be a tournament which will be ridden at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Louis Gortner purchased from Messrs. Renninger & Offutt, receivers, the stock of general merchandise assigned to them by E. M. Robinson. Mr. Gortner has consolidated his goods with those he recently purchased and is occupying the Robinson stand in the Ravenscroft building on Second street.

A dog belonging to Ken Browning was bitten by a rattlesnake Tuesday and although the animal's head became swollen to twice its size the bite is not expected to prove fatal. The snake was in a wheat field on Mr. Browning's farm and was killed by the harvest hands. It measured about three feet in length.

Five members of the Mountain City Band, Messrs. Charles Liller, C. H. Echard, Dennis Rasche, Wall Brown and Roy Hinebaugh, left Oakland yesterday morning for Keyser, W. Va., where they joined the Keyser band and went from that point to Moorefield, W. Va., to furnish music at the Democratic Congressional convention to be held there today.

The government chief chemist says that ice cream is very injurious to the youth of the country during the heated term. The next thing some scientific iconoclast will be holding forth on the deleterious nature of the moonlight-excursion germ and the dangers of the park-concert microbe. And the youth of the country will continue in these germ-inviting ways and will survive, as it has done since romance and ice cream were invented.

Dating from Monday Grafton will be perfectly "dry," the authorities having ordered stopped the sales of "bevo," "near beer" and the like. Since the town has been "dry" malt establishments have flourished. At a recent meeting of the men who have had much trouble, arrests having been made from time to time, it was agreed by them to voluntarily quit the business.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the Maryland Agricultural College, which appears in this paper today. The College has had an upward tendency for many years until it stands today well at the head of schools of like character in any part of the country. The faculty is large and thorough in all branches. Maryland youths seeking an education along technical lines should favor Maryland schools and the Agricultural College is one of the best.

The West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, opinion by Judge Miller, has decided that it is legal for social clubs to sell to their own members. The decision was based on a case from Logan county, where a club insisted on the right to sell intoxicants to its own members outright without any lockers or other evasion. The result was the indictment, trial and conviction of Everett Atkinson, who took the case to the Supreme Court of Appeals on a writ of error and had the action of the lower court reversed.

E. M. F. Automobile.

Mr. William R. Offutt, of Oakland, was in the city yesterday, and while here purchased a 30 h. p. E. M. F. touring car from the local agents, the Queen City Garage Co. Mr. Offutt will take his new machine home today.—Cumberland Times.

Lost.

A Gold Watch, Open face, Waltham movement, black fob, gold charm, initials, N. C. C. Finder will be rewarded. C. B. CROPP.

Examiners' Notice

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the proposed new county road is to be located, said road to begin at a point on the Gorman road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at a lane between the lands of J.B. Shockey and W.G.Riley and running thence through the lands of W.G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis and intersect the Deer Park and Schell road near the bridge over Laurel Run, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of August, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said location of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

E. W. KELSO,
J. THOMAS MOON, } Examiners
JAMES E. LISH,

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

Maryland's School of Technology

Fifty-fourth year begins Sept. 15.

Entrance examinations 13, 14.

Eight courses of Instruction leading to professional degree of B. S. Agricultural, Horticural, General, Mechanical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Biological and Chemical.

The College has a close association with the Department of Agriculture in Washington. College students are permitted to visit the Experiment Farms at Arlington and Beltsville and thus secure an additional equipment for their professional career.

The demand of the age is for men for life's activities. Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements. Bath room, steam heat, electric lights. Location unsurpassed for health.

Tuition, books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in the annual charge of $60.00 per quarter, payable in advance.

Sanitorium for issolation of contagious disease, resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to the Two Years Courses in Agriculture and Horticulture. Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student.

Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SYLVESTER, President.

TRUSTEES' SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

In Garrett County, Maryland

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Garrett County, passed on the 11th day of July, 1910, in a cause wherein Amile Weir et al. are plaintiffs and James McMillan et al. are defendants, the same being No. 1651 Equity in said court, the undersigned Trustees will on

Saturday, August 6th, 1910,

at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Md., offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, and described as follows, to wit: Being a part of Military Lot No. 4008, containing

3 Acres, More or Less,

and particularly described in a deed from Franklin P. Green and wife to Margaret S. McMillan, dated 31st day of March, 1894, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 24, folio 159 etc., one of the land records of Garrett county, Md.

Said land is improved by a two story dwelling house, stable and outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third cash, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months, or all cash at the option of the purchaser, the credit payments to bear interest from the date of sale, and to be secured by the notes of the purchaser, endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real EState

In Garrett County, Maryland

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Allen Garlitz and wife to Mary L. Sloan, dated the 31st day of March, 1905, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 43, folio 374, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named therein, hereby give notice, that on

Friday, August 5th, 1910,

at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m. in front of The First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Maryland, they will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all that tract or parcel of land situate in Garrett county, Maryland, about two miles west of Swanton, described as follows:

Beginning for the same at a stake and stonepile standing about 1 perch southwest of a black pine tree marked as a pointer and standing also at the beginning of the last line of a tract conveyed by J. R. Anderson to John A. Wagner, and running thence with the 10th line of said conveyed tract reversed, South 65° West, 74½ perches to a stake and stonepile in the 3rd line of a tract conveyed by C. M. Miller and wife to John E Steiding, and with the 3rd and 2nd lines thereof reversed, with an allowance of 3½ for magnetic variation, North 20° East, 122 perches to a double pine tree, West, 85½ perches to a stake in a corner of field, North, 72 perches to the end of the last line of Military Lot No. 1861, and with said line reversed, East, 89½ perches to a stake and stonepile, South 27° East, 84 perches to a stake and stonepile at the beginning of the 3rd line of a tract of land conveyed by J. R. Anderson to Mrs. Lucy McRoble, and with said 3rd line South 41° East 60 perches to a stake and stonepile, South 50° West, 94 perches in the last line of said conveyed tract to John A. Wagner, and with said line reversed to its beginning, North 25° West, 36 perches to the beginning, containing,

105¼ Acres, More or Less.

Terms of sale as prescribed in said mortgage, cash on day of sale.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorneys for said mortgagee named in mortgage.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE.

Offutt & Renninger, Trustees, v. E. M. Robinson.

No. 1679 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Notice is hereby given to the creditors of E. M. Robinson to file their claims in this cause with the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, properly authenticated on or before the 29th day of July, 1910, as I shall proceed to state an account on the 30th day of July, 1910, distributing the funds in the hands of the trustees in said cause.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Auditor.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have avariety of kinds and at any price.

TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S

FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

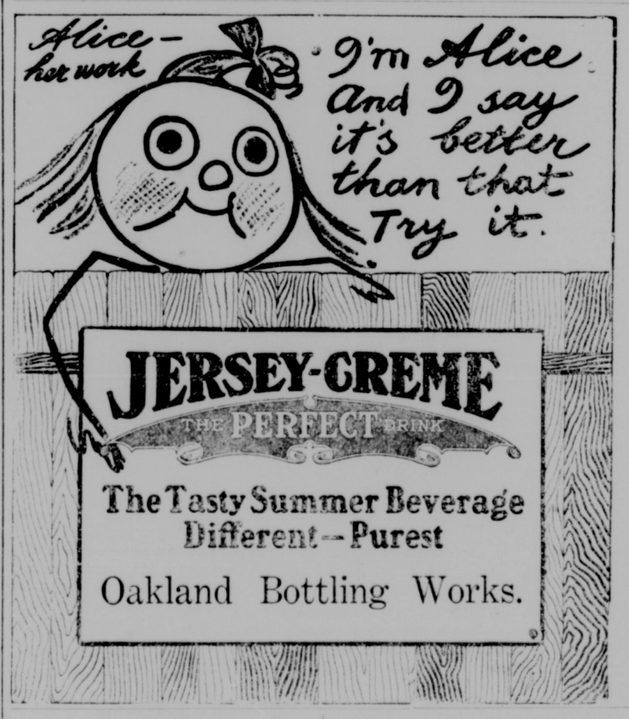
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Tax Department

LAST NOTICE

Oakland, Md., June 29, 1910.

All persons owing taxes for the years 1908 or 1909 will please make immediate payment. Kindly remit at once and save me the very unpleasant duty of advertising property as I must have money to meet claims now due.

Address W E HOLLINGER, Treasurer, Oakland, Md.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following county road is to be re-located. The road to be re-located is known as the Mansfield Road, in the North end portion between Fahey and Hughes and Fahey and Mansfield, so as to give said road a more gradual and better grade, and examine whether the said re-location should be made will meet on the 13th day of August, A. D. 1910, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said re-location and if so to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

GEORGE GEISSMAN,
JONAS YUTZY,
W. H. SMOUSE,
Examiners.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt.

The dividend is at the rate of 2 13-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allow and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 20th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

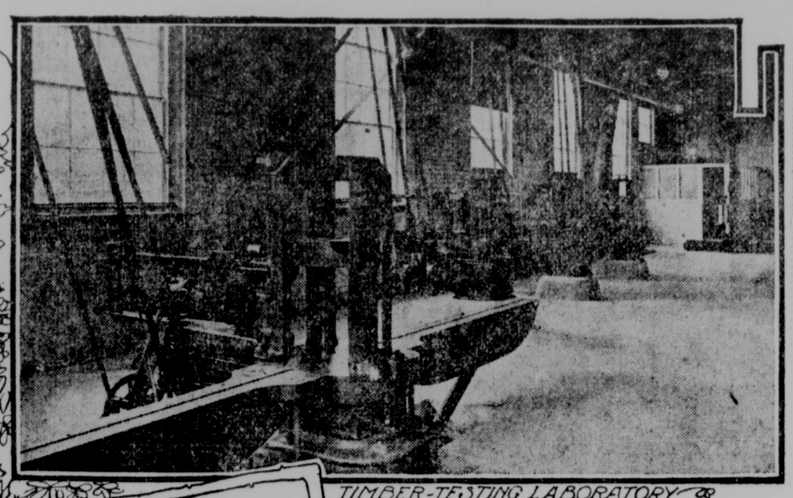
Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the line between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

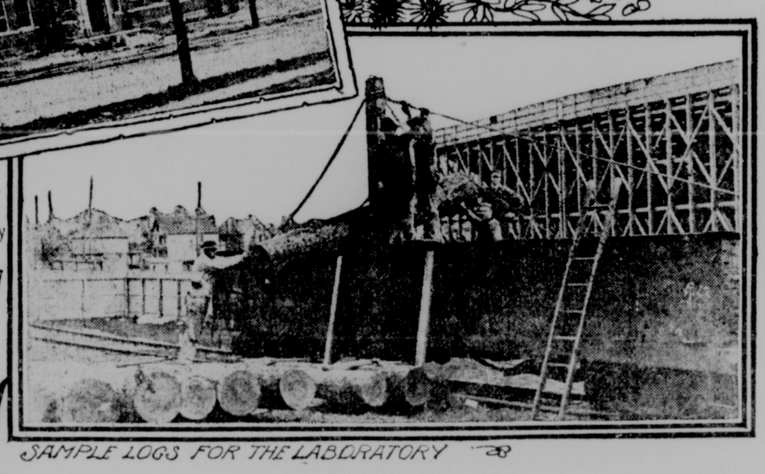
SAVING THE SHAVINGS

by WILLARD G. BLEYER

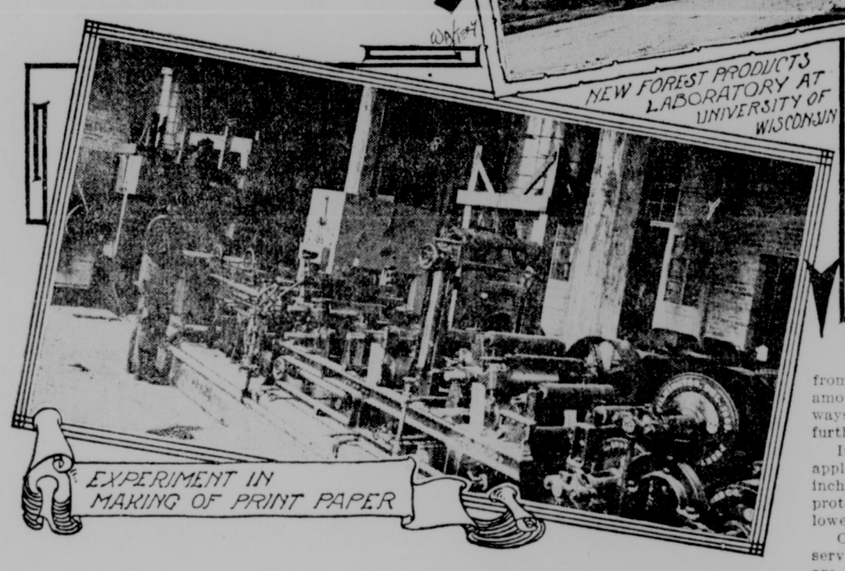


TIMBER-TESTING LABORATORY

NEW FOREST PRODUCTS LABORATORY AT UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN



SAMPLE LOGS FOR THE LABORATORY



EXPERIMENT IN MAKING OF PRINT PAPER

OUR FORESTS will last but 25 years longer if we continue to cut them at the present rate, declares Gifford Pinchot, former general forester, and one of the best informed men on the forest problem of the country.

The increased cost of lumber, the scarcity of many kinds of woods, the high price of print paper, already bear witness to the forest famine that faces the United States.

And still only one-third of every tree cut down is now being utilized.

Two-thirds of every one of the millions of trees felled annually, including the big stumps, the heaps of branches, cords of slabs and tons of sawdust are being destroyed, burned up to get rid of the so-called waste.

Incidentally burning over the slashings starts forest fires that destroy annually millions of feet of standing timber.

Now Uncle Sam is going to try to save the shavings and make cheaper print paper, wood alcohol, turpentine and other useful products out of the two-thirds of the tree that is now being thrown away.

The United States forest service has just established a big experimental laboratory out in the heart of the middle west, at Madison, the capital of the state of Wisconsin, in connection with the state university, in which government experts will attack the problems of these forest products.

The new building has just been formally dedicated and the fine equipment of machinery and testing apparatus which is to make it the most complete laboratory of its kind in the country is rapidly being installed. The staff of some twenty government investigators has already arrived and been established in the suite of offices in the new building and for some months have been delivering lectures before the students of forestry.

In the new laboratory the United States forest service and the University of Wisconsin will co-operate in the investigations which will be made to solve problems confronting the paper manufacturers, lumbermen, builders and others who deal with the products of the American forests. The building itself, which cost some $50,000, and the site upon which it stands, south of University avenue, between Camp Randall and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad tracks, were furnished by the university. The equipment was furnished by the government at a cost of about $75,000 and the staff of investigators is also maintained by government appropriations. These men, in addition to their laboratory work, will deliver lectures in the regular forestry course of the university. The laboratories, too, although devoted chiefly to the government experiments, are open to the faculty and students for advanced research along the lines of study undertaken by the experts.

The laboratory, which faces north on University avenue, is a fine fireproof building of dark brown brick, trimmed with white Bedford stone and roofed with red tiles, with a 180-foot frontage and a depth of 80 feet. Immediately east of the building a private spur from the railroad carries the lumber into the laboratory yards. A derrick is to be erected north of the track for unloading the big logs and stumps for the experiments from the flat cars. Immediately opposite, south of the track, is to be installed a small sawmill with a saw which will cut timbers up to 20 feet in length.

Already logs of long-leaf, short-leaf and loblolly yellow pine have been sent in to the laboratories by lumbermen and paper manufacturers at Kenwood, La., Hattiesburg, Miss., Thornton, Ark., and spruce logs from the Maine woods. A number of fat pine stumps for the turpentine, rosin and alcohol tests have also been received.

Sheds for air drying the lumber line the west side of the yard, which is to be graded and covered with cinders. Immediately back of the building is a deep, cement-lined pit to hold the creosote to be used in experiments until it is pumped out into the laboratory tanks.

The problem of making a satisfactory print paper from materials other than spruce and hemlock is one which will receive particular attention, and for this purpose a complete paper making plant has been made a part of the laboratory equipment. Every process, from the breaking of the wood into chips for the first treatment by soda and sulphite solutions to the final running of the sheets of paper through the calendering rolls to produce a finished surface, will be followed carefully, so that the results of substitution of various woods for the usual materials will be noted at each stage of manufacture.

Both soda and sulphate processes of treatment of the chips will be used and the laboratory will make its own sulphite liquor in a vat adjacent to the digestors, in which the wood is cooked by steam until the lignin is all dissolved and only the cellulose left. A blast of high-pressure steam drives the chips against the side of the digestor, further dividing the cellulose fibers, and then the whole mass is pumped out by a centrifugal pump into a tank in which it is stirred until the fiber is still further broken up. Over and over it is run through "riffler" troughs and over screens where suction draws out the fiber to be used and leaves behind the small chips, splinters and other waste.

When the liquor has been washed out of it in a washer driven by an electric motor (a contrivance much like the housewife's washing machine) it is put into a press and the water is squeezed out of it. Such of the pulp blocks from the press as are not wanted immediately are then in convenient form to store away on shelves.

After going through the beating engines the refined pulp is run on to the screens of the paper machine and taken up by felt rollers, from which it goes to wooden rollers and then between metal rollers to the steam-heated drying drums, where the wet sheet is run back and forth until it is ready for the final smooth finish of the hot steel calendering rolls. Any grade of paper can be made on this machine, from the roughest brown paper to fine correspondence paper, in a running sheet 15 inches wide, and even a water-marking device is attached, so that the impression can be made on the wet sheet before it goes through the rollers and on to the winding drum at the end.

How to make timber last longer by protecting it with preservatives from the various borers and fungous growths which attack wood will be another important problem to which considerable time and laboratory space are to be given.

Beneath the building is a great pit, heated by steam to a temperature most favorable to rot, and there, in separate glass compartments all about the walls, are to be samples of timbers with the various fungous growths and animal and insect enemies of the wood attached. The progress of their effect upon the wood will be closely watched and compared with that of the same pests upon samples of the wood treated with different preservatives, prepared and applied in the room above.

A big skylight and many windows make the preservative laboratory an excellent place to work and every facility is provided for testing the various forms of preservatives and antiseptics to protect timbers, such as those in mines and water-front piers, which are much subject to the attack of minute animals and plants.

Into two great treatment cylinders the timbers are shoved and steam pumps force the oil from tanks above at high pressure into the cylinders. When no more oil will enter the cylinder, even under 150 pounds pressure per square inch, it is drawn off and again returned to the tanks and measured. The difference between the amount drawn off and that originally forced in, deducting the oil collected from the vapor condenser, gives the exact amount absorbed by the timber, which is always weighed before and after treatment as a further means of calculating the oil absorbed.

In a small cylinder the preservative may be applied at a pressure of 600 pounds per square inch for smaller specimens and the resulting protection can be compared with that of the lower pressure preservatives.

Open tanks are provided for tests of preservatives that do not require pressure. These are heated with steam coils and an iron cage hung above lets the railroad ties or other timbers down into the hot oil. By a trolley arrangement the cage can be lifted and run across to other tanks filled with cold oil, so that it is not necessary to pump out the hot oil and replace it with the cold, as in laboratories where there is but one set of tanks.

All about the inner walls of the preservatives laboratory are ranged shelves to accommodate the samples of wood for treatment and those already submitted to the different forms of protection against rot and other attacks.

What woods will best stand various kinds of strain, in bridges, buildings and different structures will be determined in the timber testing laboratory, where two seven-horsepower motors furnish the electric current to run the machinery.

In the torsion machine timbers can be twisted until the strain reaches 30,000 inch-pounds. Five "Universal" testing machines are provided to test the strength of different woods under slow pressure, one having a capacity of 100,000 pounds, another twice that, and three other smaller ones 30,000 pounds.

To see what sudden strains oak, pine, maple and different woods will withstand a Hatt-Turner impact machine was built in the machine shops of the Purdue university and sent to the forestry laboratory for experiments. It can be so gauged that the hammers, ranging in weight from 50 to 250 pounds, can be dropped from heights up to six feet upon the beam or block of wood, exerting a sudden pressure of hundreds of pounds.

In a laboratory where so much machinery is in constant use there must be facilities for instant repairs. For this purpose one end of the laboratory is fitted up into a machine shop. Here, too, much labor is saved by use of electricity to run the engine lathe, milling machine and other necessary apparatus. Beside the anvil there is a gas forge for heating and tempering steel.

The equipment of the wood shop, where timbers and samples of wood are to be prepared for tests, is very complete.

Steam heated ovens for drying wood, in order to test the shrinkage, warping tendencies and water content of different woods are a part of the laboratory equipment, and a portion has also been set off for a seasoning room.

In this connection, in another laboratory, tests will be conducted to discover the heat conductivity of different woods, to assist in the work of the kiln drying and preserving tests.

Stumps and other resinous portions of the trees now burned as trash will be put into stills and retorts and the turpentine, tar and gases will be extracted, carried off, separated and refined into the various commercial products. If methods of doing this economically can be fixed upon, the problem of utilizing much of the big pine trees now wasted will be solved.

All of the many chemical tests made necessary by the work of the different departments will be centered in a big chemistry laboratory on the second floor, where eight large windows on the east and south furnish admirable light, and eight stone tables, besides those running all about the room beneath the windows, give room for the apparatus and experiments.

As some of the tests will produce strong fumes, there are tables encased in glass with hoods and ventilators above to carry off the smells and small doors through which the experimenters will work.

A corner room is set apart for special work in distilling turpentine and other products and special unlighted space is provided as a chemicals storage room. Still other unlighted spaces are reserved as photographic darkrooms and record vaults for the safe keeping of the valuable reports of the work done.

One of the most interesting offices is that of the pathologist who has charge of the experiments with the fungi and other enemies of the woods. Upon his desk are large collections of glass tubes containing cultures of every sort of vegetable growth which feeds upon wood fibers, and samples of all the minute animalculae which attack timbers. Many he secured last summer in his visits to mines in different parts of the country, since one of the greatest sources of the dangerous mine cave-in is the destruction of supports by these little enemies.

A large drafting room, lighted from the north and east, a library and filing room, a lecture hall and a suite of 17 offices for the staff officials and their clerks and stenographers complete the building arrangements below and in the attic a space for storing materials which cannot be left in the open yard and which is reached by an elevator from the basement.

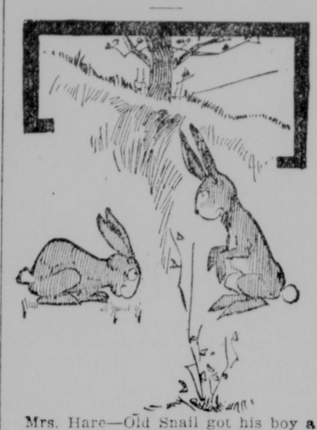
The government will appoint to regular work in the laboratory, as an addition to the present staff, several of the students who have been doing forestry work the past winter at the University of Wisconsin.

The forestry lecture course of the university, just closed, included this year, besides the regular work under State Forester E. M. Griffith, lectures by W. L. Hall, assistant forester at the Washington office; R. S. Kellogg, who holds a similar position; Franklin H. Smith, in charge of the wood utilitization office of the government at Chicago; H. F. Weiss and H. S. Bristol, assistant directors of the new laboratory; L. F. Hawley, in charge of the wood distillation of the laboratory, and Frederick Dunlap, in charge of the kiln drying investigations.

At the time of the formal dedication of the laboratory the various departments of the government work were in full operation, that the visitors may see the actual work in progress—just how paper is made; how timbers are tested; how stumps are distilled, and how the little marine animals are prevented from boring through shipping.

The staff of the new laboratory is as follows: McGarvey Cline, Purdue '04, director; H. S. Bristol, Yale, and H. F. Weiss, Yale, assistant directors; H. D. Tiemann, Stevens Institute of Technology, in charge of technology; Ralph Thelen, University of California, mechanical engineer; W. H. Kempfer, University of Michigan, in charge of maintenance; Edwin Sutermeister, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in charge of wood pulp laboratory; E. Bateman, Yale, in charge of chemistry; L. F. Hawley, Cornell, in charge of wood distillation; Frederick Dunlap, Cornell, in charge of kiln drying operations; F. W. Bond, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in charge of wood preservation; C. T. Barnum, Cornell, and C. P. Winslow, Yale, engineers in wood preservation laboratory; J. A. Newlin, Purdue, in charge of timber tests; H. E. Surface, Ohio State university, engineer in wood chemistry; H. E. McKenzie, University of Maine, engineer in timber tests; C. J. Humphrey, University of Nebraska and Cornell, pathologist, and A. W. Schorger, Ohio State university, chemist.

INCOMPETENT.



Mrs. Hare—Old Snail got his boy a position last week and he only held it one day.

Mr. Hare—What was it?

Mrs. Hare—A messenger boy.

A Hibernian Verdict.

A New Yorker is the happy employer of an aged Irishman, who grows eloquent over the woes of the Emerald isle. Said the boss: "Pat, the king of England is dead."

The old man was silent for a moment. Then he took off his hat.

"Well," he said slowly, "as a man he was a fine bit of a boy. As Englishmen go, he was as good as yez can make them. As a king, there was nobody on earth as could beat him. But still, I'll keep me eye on George."

Your Wife's Picture.

A man ought to be ashamed to live so that his wife is compelled to look as she does at housecleaning time. He'll allow her to buy cheap old yellow soap right along and take twice as long for her housework and washing, when Easy Task soap will save time, health and money for her. A man wouldn't tolerate old-fashioned methods in his place of business for a minute. If your wife would use Easy Task soap all the time there wouldn't be a tenth of the dirt to get rid of at housecleaning time.

For the Dog's Sake.

"Where are you going for your summer vacation this year?" asked Mrs. Gotrox.

"O, dear, I've not made up my mind yet," sighed Mrs. Rich wearily. "I want to find some quiet, restful spot, where my dear little French poodle can get plenty of fresh air."

Decidedly So.

Hewitt—Are you sweet on that girl?

Jewett—Sweet on her? The sugar trust isn't in it.

A rich man's children seem to think it is up to them to make a noise in the world.

Ennui is the price we pay for knowledge.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

It is a wise worm that turns no oftener than he has to.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE DIABETES.
NUMBER 375 "Guaranteed under"

WESTERN CANADA
What Prof. Shaw, the Well-Known Agriculturist, Says About It:
"I would sooner raise cattle in Western Canada than in the corn belt of the United States. Feed is cheaper and climate better for the purpose. Your market will improve faster than your farmers will produce the supplies. Wheat can be grown up to the 60th parallel, 900 miles north of the International boundary. Your vacant land will be taken at a rate beyond present conception. We have enough people in the United States alone who want homes to take up this land." Nearly
160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE
70,000 Americans
will enter and make their homes in Western Canada this year. 1909 produced another large crop of wheat, oats and barley, in addition to which the cattle exports was an immense item. Cattle raising, dairying, mixed farming and grain growing in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.
Free homestead and pre-emption areas, as well as lands held by railway and land companies, will provide homes for millions. Adaptable soil, healthful climate, splendid schools and churches, and good railways.
For settlers' rates, descriptive literature "Last Best West," how to reach the country and other particulars, write to Supt of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to the Canadian Government Agent.
H. M. WILLIAMS
Law Building Toledo, Ohio
(Use address nearest you) 42

PROOF in the Morning!
We tell you about how good you'll feel after taking a CASCARET—that millions of people—buy, use and recommend them—But that's talk—you buy a box now—take as directed to-night and get the proof in the morning—After you know CASCARETS you'll never be without them. 913
CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

Midsummer Hats

JUST for the heads of youth and loveliness, one of that small company of designers who make Paris the top o' the world (in millinery), has given to us these three things of beauty for the summer girl. They look so simple! And they are in reality only broad-brimmed leghorn and hemp shapes with plumes and ribbon, or flowers and ribbon, for garniture. But their simplicity is only seeming. It is the result of a deep study of lines by a gifted artist. It is like the simplicity of a perfectly plain and perfectly fitted, tailored coat, a thing difficult of achievement.

These broad brims, droop and lift, flowing about the face and head in lines that make us wonder and envy, not at their own sweet will, but by the careful calculation of the mind that planned them. They are, indeed, fitted to the face and head. They compel us to note how they silhouette an exquisite profile, or point to the fine line of the eyebrows, or play up the depth of the eyes or veil half the pretty face in mystery.

On the broad brimmed leghorn with black velvet facing, a mass of delicate tulle roses and a curious lily in black velvet are banked against the crown. The brim, drooping gradually at the left, is so wide that it throws the entire profile, including the beautiful throat, and the neck, into high relief. The girl who chooses this must possess a profile worth while, because it will stand out like a stone cameo, with such a hat for a background.

The hemp hat covered with oddly mounted uncurled ostrich plumes is of a sort to carry off the honors at the Grand Prix, where millinery and horses triumph—but mostly millinery. It would surely hold its own in any meeting of those who make dress a study and vie with one another in display. Happy the bride or bridesmaid who may indulge herself in its counterpart. It is a hat for high occasion. There are four long, but not heavy, plumes, more like a soft mass of snow than anything else in nature. There is almost no curl in the long fibers. Such a hat never was and never will be out of style.

The third hat is more distinctly of the season. It has a bell-like brim with irregular edge and a fairly tall crown. Fuor long plumes are mounted at the right under a bow that is more than large. They fall completely over the crown, to the left brim. One half the face is in shadow from the sharp droop of the brim. This hat is almost universally becoming.

All these hats are set on the head in the proper position. It will be noticed that the pose is dignified—not rakish. The crowns are posed as they should be, directly on top of the head. It is the modeling of the brims that gives each hat its individuality and makes each extraordinary. As studies in midsummer high art millinery they must interest everyone. Those who would like facsimiles of any one of these must consider whether their features are of the same class or not, and remember that the rest of the toilette must play up to the hat. Such millinery is immensely useful for it is brimming over with good suggestions, which we will do well to follow—some of them at a discreet distance. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

PRETTY FOULARD WAIST

This simple waist is of dotted foulard, white ground, with blue dots. It is trimmed on each side of the front with a band of embroidery in colors, bordered with rolls of liberty.

The full front is of white silk voile; the collarette and sleeve ruffles are of lace.

Take Good Care of Your Gloves.

Gloves are another item about which many do not concern themselves sufficiently. A soiled glove looks as badly as a soiled collar, yet no one would think of wearing the latter, whereas gloves that reek with dirt and germs are worn with the greatest disregard for appearances and hygiene. Fastidious women find the chamois glove a delightful substitute for the regular kid, as it can be washed when soiled, wears as well as any other, and is much more comfortable. Gloves, like stockings, should be mended the moment they begin to show wear; in fact, every garment requires constant inspection to keep it in condition and always ready for use. —The Delineator.

SUMMER BEDROOM IN COLORS

Soft Shade of Green One of the Most Appropriate That Can Be Devised.

A beautiful green room of a summer cottage has been produced with green woodwork in one of the restful sage-green tints, the walls papered in a plain cartridge paper, with a frieze of stray vines, all in different shades of the same cool color. The wicker furniture is finished in a forest green stain and the carpet is covered with a green and white rug of fine, jointless matting. Sheer white mull curtains hang at the windows with straight-falling draperies of liberty silk of the same color over them. A white porcelain bedroom candlestick four feet high stands at the head of the bed. It is a straight column resting on a square block base, the fluted finish outlined in green. It holds a large green wax candle, at the side of which is a little holder for a box of matches. Other fittings of the room carry out the green and white scheme, and as the apartment faces the south, the effect has been to temper its high light and contribute a restfully subdued tone.

Black Jewelry to the Fore.

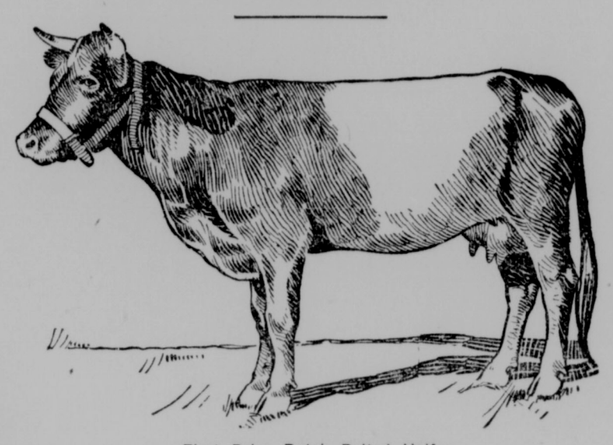
Black jewelry is threatening a return to extensive vogue. Whenever any calamity abroad brings a prominent part of the populace into mourning black jewelry is sure to come around again. Persons who remember the death of the prince consort tell interesting tales of the extent to which the craze went at that time. Everybody wore black ornaments, and jet. Jet is already in high esteem with the powers that direct the wardrobe and has been for a year or more, but the manufacturers are getting ready for a still greater demand for it than they have seen for two generations at least.

Salt For Freckles.

If you are troubled with freckles try putting a teaspoonful of salt in a basin of water and bathing the face with it. Do this occasionally and see how quickly they will fade.

GREAT IMPORTANCE OF SELECTING DAIRY HERD

Animals Chosen Should Be Carefully Examined and Tested Physically—Should Show Evidence of Health and Vigor.



First Prize Dutch Belted Heifer.

(By PROF. H. E. ALVORD.)

There is no point of greater importance in selecting animals for the foundation of a herd or in making purchases of additions than to get perfectly healthy stock. Animals chosen should be critically examined and should afford evidence of being strong in constitution and of healthful vigor. It is advised that all be tuberculin tested, and this of course should be done by a competent veterinarian. Besides the robust character of the individuals, the breeding stock from which they are descended and the herd, stables and farms from which they come should be closely examined on the score of health. Breeding and rearing the animals needed to replenish and increase the herd and refusing to allow strange animals on the farm are the best safeguards against the introduction of disease.

If purchases must be made let the new stock be strictly quarantined for at least one month before mingling with the herd. On every farm of any size a well-secluded building for a stock quarantine and hospital suitably arranged and equipped is a most useful adjunct. This not needed for calving cows or for cases of lameness or ordinary accident, but for cases of acute sickness, retention of afterbirth, abortion or any symptoms of contagious disease it is essential. Of course the building itself, its care and the attendance upon its occupants must be subjected to regulations suitable to any hospital or quarantine.

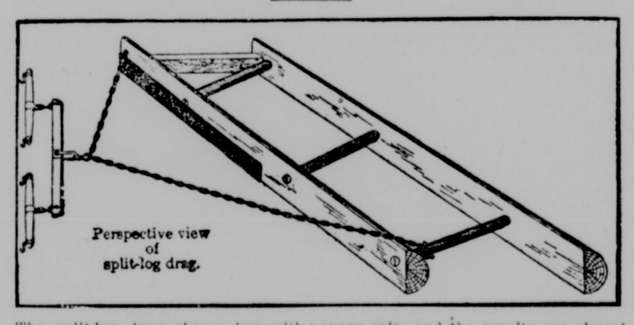
There are many of the ordinary accidents and ailments to which domestic animals are subject which can be managed by an intelligent owner or under his direction without professional assistance. "Every man his own cattle doctor," is a very delusive title; one may well follow this suggestion within reasonable limits, but there is always a point hard to define at which professional aid should promptly be summoned.

So long as an owner is certain of the difficulty and has knowledge and experience as to treatment or remedy he may depend upon home resources. But in cases of obscurity, uncertainty or complications the owner of a good cow disregards his own interests and his moral obligation if he fail to summon a veterinarian, as much as if he neglected to secure proper medical service for a sick child. And the veterinarian should be selected with the same care one exercises in choosing a family physician.

Close confinement, with impure air and lack of exercise, is as prejudicial to the health of milch cows as to that of human beings. Some recently promulgated theories of dark, warm stables and no exercise for profitable milk production are without a rational basis and certain to lead to disastrous results sooner or later. Exposure to storms and cold is equally injurious to the health and profit of cows. A judicous mean is the provision for moderate exercise in the open air and sunshine, and the application of the same common sense care for the comfort of cows which one would approve for members of his own household.

Every member of the herd, young or old, should pass under the critical eye of the owner or his trusty assistant daily, and preferably twice a day. The least symptom of disorder, like dulness, loss of appetite, rough coat and irregularity of milk, manure or urine, should be noted and promptly receive the attention which it deserves. Experience is needed on the part of the caretaker to detect and correct the beginnings of trouble and thus maintain the general health of the herd.

SPLIT-LOG DRAG IS USEFUL



Perspective view of split-log drag.

The split-log drag shown herewith is one of the simplest, cheapest, and yet the most useful and effective implements for the improvement of earth roads ever invented, a mere glance at which will enable any practical farmer to make one. In some states the farmers by common agreement drag the road along their own fronts after every rain, and the results are almost unbelievable.

Value of Sheep.

Sheep are great soil renovators and weed eradicators, but the man who would make a profit on them should not get the idea that they are simply scavengers.

IMPORTANCE OF FEEDING HENS

Problem on Which All Inexperienced People Go Broke Until They Have Mastered It—Few Master Science.

(By C. C. WENTZLER.)

Feeding is the dividing line between failure and success in poultry culture.

Even professionals sometimes assert that the feeding is a matter of secondary importance. It is all important. It is the problem, the rock, on which all inexperienced people go broke until they have mastered it. Poultry feeding is a science. Few master the science.

It is the one thing in which common sense will not guide you. You can't feed common sense. It requires a knowledge of foods. Corn and wheat and meat are as far as the knowledge of some people extends. We should become familiar with the foods and learn what functions they perform.

We know that corn makes fat. We also know that fat is the fuel—the source of the chicken's heat and energy. There is very little egg-making principle in it, however. Wheat contains some fat. It also contains protein, which is needed for egg and tissue building. But it is one of a long line of egg-building foods. It is not the best food for feathers. And in some parts of the country it may be the most expensive of the egg-building foods. Corn, in some sections, is also prohibitive, owing to its price, to be used economically. It is then that knowledge of foods comes into play and suggests substitutes. Chickens, like all other live stock, require variety to do their best.

When cickens have unlimited range they balance their own foods and get what the system craves. When man feeds he has to furnish this balance. Common sense will not always decide how to get the balance.

Science in Farming.

Convince your son and daughter that to be successful on the farm they must have healthy bodies and bright minds and they must be proficient in mathematics, chemistry, physiology, pathology, bacteriology, biology, political and domestic economy and a half-dozen other sciences, and they will begin to respect the farm and stop calling farming "Dago business," and a little later the world will look up to the farmer, not down at him.

FROM THE MOUTHS OF BABES

Johnny Probably Told the Truth, but at a Dreadfully Inopportune Time.

A teacher in one of the lower grade schools was entertaining two visitors to the classroom. Several days previously the teacher had furnished amusement and at the same time increased the children's store of knowledge by a series of questions of the following nature:

"What do we sit on that rhymes with hair?"

Some child would answer: "Chair."

Today the visitors would be pleased to observe how readily the pupils could answer.

"What do I wear on my head that rhymes with cat?" asked the instructress.

Up went the hand of a boy with red hair.

"Well, Johnny," said she, "you may tell us."

Johnny arose and appeared frightened.

"It's a rat," he blurted.

And then the tableau.

BOY TORTURED BY ECZEMA

"When my boy was six years old, he suffered terribly with eczema. He could neither sit still nor lie quietly in bed, for the itching was dreadful. He would irritate spots by scratching with his nails and that only made them worse. A doctor treated him and we tried almost everything, but the eczema seemed to spread. It started in a small place on the lower extremities and spread for two years until it very nearly covered the back part of his leg to the knee.

"Finally I got Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and gave them according to directions. I used them in the morning and that evening, before I put my boy to bed, I used them again and the improvement even in those few hours was surprising, the inflammation seemed to be so much less. I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, the same of the Pills and the Soap and my boy was cured. My son is now in his seventeenth year and he has never had a return of the eczema.

"I took care of a friend's child that had eczema on its face and limbs and I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. They acted on the child just as they did on my son and it has never returned. I would recommend the Cuticura Remedies to anyone. Mrs. A. J. Cochran, 1823 Columbia Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 20, 1909."

Up to Date Milking Scene.

"What's going on around here?" asked the surprised visitor. "Is this a hospital?"

"Oh, no," answered the tall man in the silk hat; "this is the stage setting for a New England farm drama. The next act will be the milking scene."

"But I thought the young lady in the antiseptic apron was a trained nurse?"

"Oh, no; she is the milkmaid. The young man in the rubber gloves that you thought was a doctor is the farm boy. As soon as they bring in the sterilized stool and the pasteurized pails and find the cow's tooth brush the milking scene will begin."

Children's Skins.

Every now and then a child's skin will break out in some kind of a rash and folks think it caught the trouble at school or somewhere away from home. Half the time the trouble is caused by the use of unwholesome yellow soaps for washing clothing. They leave the dirt in the goods and make the clothing harsh and irritating to the skin. No wonder the rash breaks out. Easy Task soap is clean and white and sanitary and is best for children's clothes and yours, too. Get it at your grocer's.

There's a Reason.

"Paul, if I were to die, should you marry Widow Muller?"

"Good heavens, no!"

"Why not? Every one says how like me she is."

"Yes, that's just the reason."

Gunner—"They say since Coggwood bought his new automobile he has run into wealth." Guyer—"Yes, he ran into a 400-pound hog the other day."

A PACKAGE MAILED FREE ON REQUEST OF

MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

The best Stomach and Liver Pills known and a positive and speedy cure for Constipation, Indigestion, Jaundice, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Headache, and all ailments arising from a disordered stomach or sluggish liver. They contain in concentrated form all the virtues and values of Munyon's Paw-Paw Tonic and are made from the juice of the Paw-Paw fruit. I unhesitatingly recommend these pills as being the best laxative and cathartic ever compounded. Send us a postal or letter requesting a free package of Munyon's Celebrated Paw-Paw Laxative Pills, and we will mail same free of charge. MUNYON'S HOMOEOPATHIC HOME REMEDY CO., 53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

FREE Send postal for Free Package of Paxtine.
Better and more economical than liquid antiseptics FOR ALL TOILET USES.

PAXTINE TOILET ANTISEPTIC

Gives one a sweet breath; clean, white, germ-free teeth—antiseptically clean mouth and throat—purifies the breath after smoking—dispels all disagreeable perspiration and body odors—much appreciated by dainty women. A quick remedy for sore eyes and catarrh.

A little Paxtine powder dissolved in a glass of hot water makes a delightful antiseptic solution, possessing extraordinary cleansing, germicidal and healing power, and absolutely harmless. Try a Sample. 50c. a large box at druggists or by mail.

THE PAXTON TOILET CO., BOSTON, MASS.

ABSORBINE

Will reduce inflamed, strained, swollen Tendons, Ligaments, Muscles or Bruises, Cure the Lameness and stop pain from a Splint, Side Bone or Bone Spavin. No blister, no hair gone. Horse can be used. $2.00 a bottle.

Horse Book 2 E free.

ABSORBINE, JR., for mankind, $1 and $2. Reduces strained torn ligaments, enlarged glands, veins or muscles—heals ulcers—allays pain. Your druggist can supply and give references. Will tell you more if you write. Book Free. Mfd. only by W. F. YOUNG, P. D. F., 310 Temple St., Springfield, Mass.

Try Gillette Shaving
NO STROPPING NO HONING
Gillette
KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c. HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, New York

CONSUMPTION CURABLE

Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh and other diseases of the lungs cured. Send at once for our big FREE book on the cause and cure of these stubborn diseases. Thousands have been made well—not a patent medicine but a treatment used by physicians and known everywhere. It is thorough—reaching the seat of the trouble and effecting a PERMANENT cure. Learn how to get a two weeks treatment free. Gearhart Medicine Co., North Robinson, O.

Wanted Confidential Correspondents Everywhere in the UNITED STATES. Experience unnecessary. School Teachers, Stenographers, Telegraph Operators, Clerks and Professional men or women eligible. An unusual opportunity to increase your income. Particulars. Box 971, Los Angeles, Cal.

FREE INFORMATION about irrigated farms in the Sacramento Valley, Cal. Ideal climate. Rich soil. Six and seven cuttings of alfalfa. First class poultry and dairy country. All the fruits. Easy terms. H. L. Hollister & Co., 203 LaSalle St., Chicago

Asthma and HAY FEVER CURE sent by express to you on Free Trial. If it cures send $1, if not, don't. Give express office. Do it now. NATIONAL CHEMICAL CO., 407 Ohio Avenue, Sidney, Ohio.

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

W. N. U., CLEVELAND, NO. 28-1910.

Rosy Cheeks or Pale Ones?

A moment's reflection with your mirror will give the hint as to the condition of your system. Pale cheeks, muddy complexion, dull eyes, show a poverty of blood. You require something to make a plentiful supply of rich, red blood course through your veins. To ensure this take the wonderful little blood-makers. Whatever your blood may need the stomach will supply from the daily food when it is in good working order. Beecham's Pills aid the stomach to digest its food and to assimilate the blood elements. They increase the supply and improve the quality of the blood. If you are pale, weak, languid, or anaemic, a few doses of Beecham's Pills will

BEECHAM'S PILLS

Make all the Difference

In boxes with full directions, 10c. and 25c.

STOPS ITCHING AND INFLAMED PILES AT ONCE

RESINOL

WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD FOR ALL SKIN DISEASES

THEY SAY IT IS THE VERY BEST OINTMENT MADE AND IT IS. 50 CENTS ALL DRUGGISTS OR SENT DIRECT ON RECEIPT OF PRICE.

RESINOL CHEMICAL COMPANY, BALTIMORE, MD.

Eczema, Erysipelas, Herpes, Poison Ivy, Scalds, Eruptions, Nettle Rash, Ringworm, Itch, Chafing, Burns, Erythema.

KODAK SAFETY FILM

THE PEOPLE'S FORM.

(Continued from Page One.)

A word in conclusion. He says, "the Rev. Mr. Williamson does not strike a very clerical attitude." Just what is meant by "striking an attitude" is difficult to tell. They may have said it that way in the 15th century. I have never tried, and never shall, to assume or "strike" a clerical attitude. The clerical attitude just recently almost precipitated civil war in France, has made Italy atheistic, is causing now all sorts of trouble in Spain, and makes the difference between the civilization of Mexico and the United States.

No, Mr. "Fairplay," I prefer to be a man among men, wear men's clothing, and be a plain preacher of the gospel of Christ.

Last, the Methodists of Oakland have not yet asked me to express through the paper for them their appreciation of the sympathy "Fairplay" seems to have for them. They can hardly do it in person for they may not know who "Fairplay" is. The Methodists of Oakland may be in need of sympathy, but "Fairplay" can't give it; for a coward is neither capable of giving nor of receiving sympathy. As for myself I don't need his sympathy, and I am very sure I don't want it.

In the closing paragraphs he has opened up a question that I shall discuss shortly in an article in the near future entitled the "Minister and Civic Affairs." G. R. WILLIAMSON.

Dodging the Issue.

To the Editor of The Republican:

In an article in last week's Democrat signed "Tax Payer and Voter," the writer of the same, who is evidently closely allied with the School Board, attempts to divert the attention of its readers from the egregious blunder made by that body in ignoring the will of the people of Oakland, almost unanimously expressed in making the change in the principalship of the high school, by slurring the Rev. George R. Williamson, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, who had the temerity to express publicly what the people of Oakland generally thought of said act. The writer professes not to know who "G. R. Williamson" is, If he does not, his lack of knowledge in this respect is on a par with his dense ignorance as to what constitutes common and ordinary decency. But if he does not know who Rev. Williamson is, does he not know the large number of patrons of the Public Schools of Oakland, who signed a petition to the Board of School Commissioners protesting against a change? Does he live in this town and don't know that these petitioners want the information asked for by Rev. Williamson? They have the right to know why their request was ignored and trampled under foot. If the action of the Board was prompted by any other reason than to comply with the demand of the "small boss" that he and his might profit thereby the people are in ignorance of that reason and should be informed.

We agree with the writer of the article referred to in his one assertion that "the most vital question involved is, has the action of the School Board been for the betterment of the school facilities of the town or not?" At the present the people are under the impression that a serious blunder has been made by the Board. If it has information to the contrary the people are entitled to be advised in regard thereto. They want the reasons for the action of the Board, and will not be satisfied with a newspaper article which begs the all important question, and is an insult to a highly respectable and intelligent citizen of Garrett county and a minister of the gospel, as well as to the intelligence of the people at large.

ANOTHER VOTER AND TAXPAYER.

Was He Sincere?

To the Editor of The Republican:

In last week's issue of the Mountain Democrat may be found two communications in defense of the late regretable action of the Board of School Commissioners. These letters are signed respectively "Tax-Payer and Voter" and "Fairplay," but it seems extremely likely from the matter and diction that both are products of the same facile pen. However that may be, the longer communication, that signed "Fairplay" (what a keen sense of humor the writer must possess!) is clearly the work of Garrett County's most prominent school official. The earmarks are too plain to be mistaken. In this letter the said official plainly states that the board had but one motive for its action—the best interest of the school. The same idea comes out in the other, in the form of a question: "Has the action of the School Board been for the betterment of the school facilities of the town or not?" Well, has it? Let us see.

I suppose even our aforesaid school official would acknowledge that the first qualification of a teacher—especially a principal of a high school—is education. Mr. Palmer comes from what is acknowledged to be one of the foremost colleges in Pennsylvania, which state perhaps stands first among the United State in matters educational. Mr. Loraditch is a graduate of a small normal school, also in Pennsylvania, and probably a very good school of its kind, but certainly not to be compared to Lafayette College. Mr. Palmer has been for many years a high school teacher, instructing during that period in all the branches which make up high school work. Mr. Loraditch has for the past nine years taught manual training—and the best of us grow rusty in studies which we have no occasion to use. Does this seem like looking after "the best interests of the school?"

Is not personal popularity with pupils and parents a valuable asset to a teacher? Ask any of the high school pupils which of the two men in question they prefer—and remember that they have had experience with both—and see what the answer will be.

As for the feeling of the parents, one need only examine Mr. Palmer's petition to find out their attitude. I have taken the pains to procure a list of last year's high school pupils. Some, I find came from out of town, but residing in or near Oakland were between sixty-nine and seventy-two. The names of the parents (or nearest relatives) of forty-four of these children were affixed to Mr. Palmer's petition as it appeared in THE REPUBLICAN of last week. A majority isn't it? Much more I might say; but this it seems to me, shows conclusively how the School Board or rather its deus ex machina, who does not longer appear publicly as a member of that august body, but is well known to be the power behind the throne—works for the school's best interests. If this be their idea of "fairplay," heaven grant they may never judge for me!

PARENT OF A HIGH SCHOOL PUPIL.

Anti-Bossism.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Political bossism, whether of the Republican or Democratic variety, or of both combined, is something that the people are no longer willing to submit to, and it is time that notice were served upon the whole outfit that it will not be tolerated by our people in the conduct of the schools.

Whenever and wherever the political boss arrogates to himself the right to say that, through political expediency, such a one shall be pulled down and another raised to the position thus vacated, it were high time that the people assert their rights and dethrone the bosses. If the people of our town submit quietly to the effrontery of the School Board in ignoring their petition that Mr. Palmer be continued in the principalship of the schools, a condition brought about through bossism, as many believe, then they deserve to wear the collar of the bosses, with their names engraved thereon, so that even the wayfaring man, though a fool, may know who owns them.

ANTI-BOSSISM.

Oakland, July 20, 1910.

An Open Letter From Mr. Palmer.

To the Board of School Commissioners:

GENTLEMEN:—In the current issue of the Democrat "Fairplay" (who hasn't the courage to sign his real name) makes several statements which are not true and for fear that you may think I sanction them I write this letter and am ready to appear before you in person if you desire.

This article claims that "before the Board made the appointment they took" me "into their confidence" and I "virtually agreed" to what has been done in the matter of the Oakland principalship.

I hasten to brand such reports as absolutely false. I "virtually agreed" in the sense that the man being hung agrees to the execution and in no other.

As you gentlemen know individually and officially no member of your Board ever mentioned compromise to me or I to him except at the interview at the Oakland Pharmacy at the adjournment for supper during your meeting of June 24th when your President and Secretary came with the compromise proposition which I promptly turned down in the presence of J. E. Harned and B. H. Sincell who are ready to make affidavit to that effect.

In reference to the statement afloat that I may have consented to this arrangement at some previous time, if such were the case, why was it necessary that your President and Secretary again present it if this arrangement had been "virtually agreed" to already?

I will acknowledge that your Secretary on several occasions pictured to me the "advantages" of the Grammar School and the "disadvantages" of the High School, evidently in the hope that I would be persuaded into his way of thinking, but I have never consented to accept anything than what I now have under the law, viz.: the High School Principalship.

You gentlemen see just as well as I do how much more desirable is a position which pays $1200 per year—salary fixed by statute—to one paying $1000 per year absolutely in the hands of the School Board which may reduce the salary at any meeting to $50 per month, if they think proper and from whose decision there is no appeal.

And if the Grammar School Principalship is such a good place as "Fairplay" thinks why not give it to the other man who has never had any High School experience and allow me to retain the High School Principalship where I have had a dozen years' experience?

I fail to see the opportunity to make $200 in the Normal and Training School. Next Spring the High School here will still be in session at the time the Normal is usually held and the patronage of the teachers is all it will have. The students will attend the High School. This year we had thirteen teachers in in the Normal. There were not enough teachers in the county normal to pay the instructors' board. The Board paid me $75 for my services in the first Training School. This was cut to $50 last year and to $40 this year—$10 less per month than is paid at Grantsville for teaching manual training to juveniles. What might the salary be next year?

I want no friction or unpleasantness in this matter. All I ask for are my legal rights. Ten years ago when your Secretary and his colleague brought suit against my associates and me to oust us from office—in which they succeeded—neither my friends nor I resorted to stirring up political and religious animosity, but we submitted with grace and without malice to the majesty of the law. It is to be hoped for the good of the community that you will frown down those persons who are defending your action in the papers by appealing to political and religious prejudice over assumed names.

Yours truly,
U. G. PALMER.

Oakland, Md., June 15, 1910.

People's Rights Ignored.

To the Editor of The Republican:

The personality of the principal of the Oakland High School makes very little difference to the patrons of the school, so long as he possesses the qualifications necessary to a proper discharge of the duties of the position, but it does make all the difference in the world to the patrons of the school, and to their children as well, when, with an almost unanimous voice asking for the retention of the head of the school, their request is over-ridden and turned down, simply because, for political reasons, it became necessary to "keep peace in the family!"

There is not, and absolutely should not be, any question of politics or religion in this matter, and that the people did not regard it as a political or religious question is clearly evidenced by the names attached to the petition for retention of Prof. Palmer as principal of the schools as published in your paper last week.

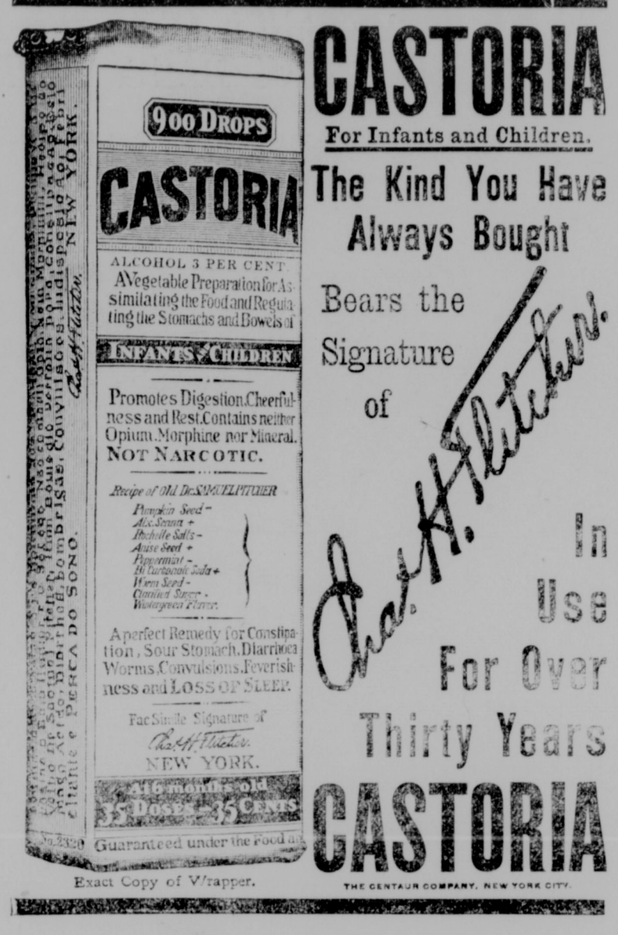
Any one attempting to lug politics or religion into the discussion of this matter is an enemy of the people and of the public school system, and should be driven from place and power and relegated to the darkest depths of political oblivion.

The whole question is simply this, have the people any rights which the School Board is bound to respect? If they have, then one of these rights is surely the privilege of petitioning that august body to retain the people's choice as the head of their school. Having expressed their wish in the matter, if the School Board is the people's servant and not their master, it was the duty of the Board to retain Prof. Palmer. This matter of ignoring the wish of the people, so clearly and unmistakably made known to the School Board, should be brought to the attention of Governor Crothers and a demand be made for the removal of those members of the board who took part in this business.

Let us find out, as a people, whether we have any rights entitled to respect at the hands of those who are charged with the duty of educating our children at our own expense.

Like Banquo's ghost, this thing will not down; and if the people are determined in asserting their rights, we shall enter upon a new and vastly better condition in educational matters in Oakland. SQUARE DEAL.

Oakland, July 20th, 1910.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher.
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

DEER PARK.

Mr. and Mrs. Josias Pennington are at their cottage. Early in August they contemplate a run up to Bar Harbor for a few days. Mr. Pleasants Pennington, their son, recently graduated at Princeton. He is now on a fishing trip in Canada.

Mrs. Gordon F. Paine, of Baltimore, entertained Miss Virginia Latrobe for several days at her cottage.

The Latrobes occupied a summer home at Deer Park some years ago, but of recent years have occupied a dwelling in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The McGraws have arrived from their winter home at Grafton and are nicely fixed in their cottage, Rosemont, for the summer.

The Deer Park Hotel is filling up rapidly. It has a good many patrons from Baltimore, St. Louis, Cincinnati, New York, Pittsburg and Washington.

Mrs. Frank Morse, of Philadelphia, is visiting at Uplands, near Deer Park.

Mr. William Elliott Lowes, Mrs. Lowes and two children are spending the heated term at Uplands, the Deer Park residence of Mrs. Haulenbeek. Mr. Lowes is Assistant General Passenger Agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company and has heretofore derived a great deal of benefit from summering in the Alleghanies. In Baltimore Mr. and Mrs. Lowes reside on Chelsea avenue, Windsor Hills.

Mr. Harry F. Regester, Mrs. Regester and Master Robert Regester, of St. Paul street, Baltimore, are spending the season at the residence of Mrs. Haulenbeek, near Deer Park. This is Mr. and Mrs. Regester's second season in the mountains. Mrs. Regester is a daughter of Mr. J. Sewell Thomas, City Register of Baltimore.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
Near Oakland, Garrett County, Maryland.

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from William J. Nair and wife to Mary L. Sloan, dated the 15th day of November, 1902, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 43, folio 165, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named therein hereby give notice, that on

Friday, the 5th day of August

1910, at the hour of 11.30 o'clock a. m. in front of the First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Maryland, they will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all the following real estate, situate about one-half mile southwest of Oakland, in Garrett County, Maryland:

1st. All that lot, piece or parcel of land containing 10 acres, more or less, which was conveyed to the said William J. Nair by A. G. Sturgiss and others by deed dated the 6th day of January, 1899, and recorded among the Land Records of Garrett County in Liber E. Z. T. No. 38, folio 127, to which said deed reference is made for a full and complete description of said land.

2nd. All that other land adjoining the above mentioned tract containing 1 acre and 14 perches, more or less, and being the same land which was conveyed to the said William J. Nair by John Felty, Jr., by deed dated the 5th day of June, 1900, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 38, folio 357, one of the Land Records of Garrett County, to which said deed reference is made for a complete description of said land.

This property is improved by a comfortable frame dwelling, stable and other outbuildings, good water, fruit trees and the most of said land is cleared and under cultivation.

Terms of sale as prescribed by said mortgage, cash on day of sale.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorneys for mortgagee named in mortgage

TRUSTEE'S SALE
OF Valuable Coal
AND
OTHER PROPERTY
Situate in Garrett County, Md., Known as the Gillespie Property.

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned Trustee, by decree entered on the 20th day of May, 1910, in the matter of C. D. Gillespie, bankrupt, pending in the District Court of the United State for the Northern District of West Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will, on

SATURDAY,
the 23rd Day of July, 1910,

at Eleven O'clock A. M.,

at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, owned by C. D. Gillespie.

I

All the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying

315 Acres of Land,

being part of a tract known as "Elk Garden," situate in Garrett county, Maryland, together with 100 acres of the surface of said 315 acres and all the rights and privileges granted to the said C. D. Gillespie in connection with said coal property. Two-thirds of said property was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Ada A. V. Halterman, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1904, of record in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 43, folio 152, and the remaining one-third was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Austin Brown, Sheriff, by deed bearing date December 1, 1905, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 433, to which deeds reference is now here had for a more particular description of said property.

This property is situated very near the Western Maryland Railroad, near the station of Henry on said railroad and adjacent to the coal property now being operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Company at its mines at Henry. The coal underlying this property which is to be sold is very valuable.

II

All of the coal underlying a tract of land containing

68 1-2 Acres,

situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being known as a part of the "Elk Garden" tract and being the same coal conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Peter F. Snyder and wife, by deed bearing date October 27, 1905, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 50, folio 364, to which deed reference is here had for a particular description of said 68½ acres, together with all the rights and privileges as to mining rights, surface and rights of way, as were vested in said Gillespie by said deed.

This 68½ acres of coal is considered very valuable. It is located a distance of about three or four miles from the railroad.

III

An undivided one half interest in ten acres of land, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being also a part of what is known as the "Elk Garden" tract, said undivided one-half interest having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry F. Marshall and wife, by deed dated the 11th day of August 1902, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 42, folio 500, to which deed reference is had for a particular description of said property.

IV

A tract or parcel of land containing one acre, more or less, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, on the Western Maryland Railroad, near Gorman, having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry C. Stemple and wife, by deed dated the 30th day of April, 1907, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 54, folio 454. There are situated, on this property, several buildings, one of which can be used for a combination dwelling house and store building.

All of the above described property will be sold free and acquit from all liens and incumbrances. The title to all of said property is considered good.

TERMS OF SALE.—One-third cash in hand on day of sale and the residue upon a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to give interest bearing notes, with good personal security, for the deferred purchase money and the legal title to the property to be retained as additional security, until said deferred purchase money has been paid.

C. W. MAXWELL, Trustee.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-1y.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE
OF VALUABLE
Real Estate
In Garrett County, Maryland

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Thomas J. Roy and Rebecca F. Roy, his wife, to Katharine B. Stille, dated the 5th day of July, 1905, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, folio 79, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorney named therein, hereby gives notice that on

Friday, August 5th, 1910,

at the hour of 10.30 o'clock a. m., in front of the First National Bank Building in the town of Oakland, Maryland, he will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all the following described real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland; about three and one-half miles northwest of Oakland, the same being a part of Lot No. 6 of the subdivisions of a tract of land called "William and Mary," and adjoins the farms of William H. Hardesty and Owen Mackin, and beginning for the same at an ancient planted stone standing at the end of 227 ¾ perches on the 2nd line of the whole tract called "William and Mary," which is also at the end of the 1st line of said Lot No. 6 and running thence with the 2nd line thereof, North 3 degrees West, 80 perches to a planted stone marked No. 2, standing at the end of the 2nd line of William H. Hardesty's land, and reversing it West, 89 4-5 perches to the end of the 1st line of said Hardesty's land to a planted stone marked No. 1, thence South 1 degree East, 63 perches to the 1st line of said Lot No. 6, thence with it South 77 degrees East, 90 perches to the beginning, containing 38½ Acres, More or Less.

The improvements consist of a comfortable dwelling, stable and other outbuildings, a young orchard, and about one half of said land is cleared and under cultivation.

Terms of Sale, as prescribed in said mortgage—Cash on day of sale.

D. JAMES BLACKISTON,
Attorney for Mortgagee named in said Mortgage.

For further information apply to E. H. Sincell, Oakland, Maryland.

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1553 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland

Ordered this 27th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by the Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelph, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of July, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

In the Orphans' Court for Garrett County.
In the matter of the estate of Henry A. Reichelt, deceased.

Ordered by the Orphans' Court for Garrett County, this 12th day of July A. D. 1910, that the sale of the property mentioned in these proceedings, made and reported by Rosie Reichelt Guenther, Executrix of the last will and testament of Henry A. Reichelt, deceased, to Peter Reichenbecher and Otilda Reichenbecher his wife, be qualified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 9th day of August, 1910; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county once in each of three successive weeks before the 5th day of August, 1910.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $8815.00.

W. J. BARNARD,
HENRY KAMP,
J. THOMAS MOON,
Judges of the Orphans' Court.

True copy. Test: E. E. FRIEND, Register.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 2—Suitable for Commercial Hotel; 4 lots and house of 23 rooms; bath rooms; fairly furnished; large stable All for $5,200.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.
7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.
50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed not are vertised here. For particulars address
M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

OPERA HOUSE
School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,
Opera House. OAKLAND, MD

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.
Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS L. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p m

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing, Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1910. NUMBER 22

FATHER OF SIXTEEN

Jonas E. Gnagey Hopes to Attend Next Gnagey Reunion With His Numerous Progeny.

Jonas E. Gnagey, formerly of Grantsville, Md., who for some years past has resided in Baltimore, Md., pulled up stakes there last week and will henceforth make his home with his eldest son, Edward, at Washington, Pa.,

Mr. Gnagey, who is an expert carpenter and mechanic, worked on the construction of an electric power house at Millvalle, W. Va., near Harper's Ferry, the greater part of the summer. Before starting for little Washington, he spent a week with his son J. E. Gnagey, Jr., at Allentown, Pa. He stopped off at Meyersdale for a few hours last Saturday to pay for two yearly subscriptions to The Republican, one for himself, the other for his son at Allentown.

Although Mr. Gnagey is but in his sixtieth year, and does not look over 50, he is quite a patriarch in the matter of descendents, as he is the father of sixteen children and has seven sons and seven daughters living, also a number of grandchildren. All of his sons are practical electricians, or are employed in one capacity or another by electrical companies, and all are doing well. They are: Edward of Washington, Pa.; Harry, Bradford, Pa.; William, San Francisco; J. E., Allentown, Pa.; Blaine, McKeesport, Pa.; Homer, Pittsburg; Raymond, East McKeesport. The seven daughters are all married and scattered through several state from Maryland to California.

Mr. Gnagey is urging all of his children and their families to attend the Gnagey reunion this fall. There are enough of his progeny to make a large family reunion by themselves.—Meyersdale Republican.

Illustrated Lecture.

A series of illustrated lectures will be give at the Crellin church beginning Monday evening, August 1st, and continue every night during the week.

The lectures covering a Trip Around the World, containing over six hundred views and travels of over 42,000 miles, are to be given by Rev. C. W. Guthrie, of Los Angeles, Cal.

They are the finest views that can be produced and are recommended where ever given by pastors of the various denominations. An admission fee of 10 cents be charged, and for children under twelve 5 cents. The Preston Railway will run a special train each evening to bring those living along the line, and again for their return after the lecture.

Call for Your Letters.

Mrs. Jas. Cain, B. W. Frantz, Katie Tripeet, Herbert Jones, Mrs. Lewe Gardner, Albert Wilson, Phil Horton.

Subscribe for The Republican.

FRIENDSVILLE TO HAVE REUNION

Practically Settled That Old Soldiers Will Be Entertained There.

A special from Lonaconing to the Cumberland News says: It appeared as if the proposed old soldiers' reunion which has been agitated for some time would have to "go a begging" for the want of a place to hold it but Sherman Post, G. A. R., of Friendsville, in a letter to Captain John C. Donald has taken the matter up and offered to entertain their comrades of Allegany and Garrett counties. Comrade R. H. Friend and Acting Adjutant Wm. H. Friend are actively interested in securing the reunion for that place and as soon as a suitable date can be agreed upon arrangements will begin. Since the question of place has long been the annoying hindrance the movement will now be practically assured and the reunion held at Friendsville.

Improving the Service.

That the management of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is making every effort to merit the popular favor of the traveling public is evident by the improvements recently inaugurated in its passenger service. A short time ago announcement was made that the Baltimore and Ohio had placed large orders for passenger equipment of the most modern design, including electrically lighted and vestibuled coaches and powerful passenger engines built for high speed express service. This equipment has been delivered and is being used on the express trains, enabling the use of better class coaches and engines on other trains.

Following the purchase of the new equipment inspectors were appointed to look after the service and see that comfort is provided for travelers at all times. This inspection is conducted through the office of the operating vice-president.

Another subject to which the Baltimore and Ohio has devoted attention is the general neatness of its station properties and general appearance of the track. Agents are furnished flowers and other plants to beautify the surroundings and they are asked to devote their attention to the neat appearance of stations by keeping the grass and foliage trimmed. Much work has also been done to improve the appearance of the track. Banks have been sloped and made even in many places and grass seed planted where weeds were destroyed. Still further efforts will be made to keep things orderly, as shown by instructions recently given to trackmen and others to burn all waste paper thrown from passing trains. Porters on the trains are to collect waste paper and deposit it in receptacles provided for this purpose at all terminals.

Try the Rock Island Battery for your automobile and telephone. Will outlast any two ordinary ones. A. D. NAYLOR & Co.

FACE IMMINENT DEFEAT OR UNITE ON A CANDIDATE

Personal Ambition of Candidate Must Be Subordinated. Says Baltimore American.

Under the caption, "How to Win in the Sixth District," the Baltimore American of Sunday says:

If the Republicans in the Sixth congressional district want to win the next election, they will have to get together. The course they are now pursuing is almost suicidal, as it must inevitably result in the election of a Democrat, when a Republican should have a walkover. As has already been stated in the editorial columns of the American, this is no time for personal bickering. There is altogether too much at stake. It may be that the complexion of the House will depend upon the choice of the district and the loss of this one vote result in Democratic control of the popular branch of Congress.

Should this come to pass and the administration be prevented from carrying out its beneficent policies, the responsibility must rest where it properly belongs—on the candidate who by the tactics they are now pursuing are preventing Republican success. A primary election hotly contested, in which the various aspirants refrain from mudslinging and conduct their respective campaigns without reflecting on the personal integrity or fitness of their opponents, but by presenting their own claims for recognition is often beneficial, for it arouses the voters and creates an interest it is frequently difficult to awaken, but when injudicious or improper methods are employed it has the opposite effect.

Loyal Republicans will at all times subordinate personal ambition to party success. When he finds that his candidacy is likely to disrupt his party, an aspirant should not hesitate to step aside and in announcing the fact make plain to the voters that he is ready to support any candidate upon whom all can unite. Such an exhibition of unselfishness would undoubtedly appeal to the masses and be remembered by them when he again shies his castor into the political arena. They will neither forget nor forgive him, however, who is guilty of a dog-in-the-manger policy.

No excuse can be offered for the loss of a district that is overwhelmingly Republican and which under normal conditions may be expected to poll the full party vote. Unlike the First and Fifth, where Republicans are hampered by the odious Wilson law, the voters in the Sixth have no difficulty in marking their ballots properly. Here the Democrats enjoy no advantage over their opponents. The ballot is easily marked and fairly counted, and the winner may depend upon all that is coming to him. There has been no change in the voting proposition since 1906, and yet the Republican majorities in some of the counties in the district have materially decreased. A drop from 4,900 to less than 600 is, to say the least, significant and one of which the Republican management should take cognizance. If the change was wholly due to an opposition to national policies then of course the candidate who is the representative of these policies should not be held responsible; if, on the other hand, local conditions, resulting from factional bitterness, caused the slump, then the remedy is at hand. A candidate wholly unobjectionable should be nominated and all rancorous talk cease.

A give and take policy would do the business. Let all who are interested in the success of the Republican party meet on common ground and agree to support a representative party man upon whom all can unite. Then let the various county organizations recommend his nomination and his success in the primaries will be followed by a sweeping victory in November.

It is understood that overtures will be made this week by prominent Republicans in the district. The idea is to have all the county leaders get together, talk over the situation and suggest a candidate who can command united support. If they are successful it will make little difference whom the Democrats will name.

The conditions in the Fifth district present a striking contrast. Here there is harmony and unity in the Republican ranks, while the Democrats are almost hopelessly divided. This improvement may be attributed in part to a change of candidates and to the popularity of the man selected. In a way this district furnishes an object-lesson to the Sixth. It cannot be denied that Mr. Mudd was not only an able representative, but a very popular one, and yet he had aroused enmities because of the stand he had taken on various propositions which came near resulting in his defeat at the last election. Like the Sixth, the Fifth district is heavily Republican, and with anything like a square deal should give anywhere from 4,000 to 5,000 majority. Owing to the manipulation of the ballot, which prevented Republicans from properly marking their ballots, this has been cut down materially, but with all the handicaps, there is still a wide margin, and the vote counted depends altogether upon the number of names on the ticket.

Child Fatally Scalded.

Madeline, infant daughter of George Whickham, near Kitzmiller, Md., was scalded to death by falling into a tub of hot lye water. Mrs. Whickham was giving an order to a groceryman and hearing the little one scream, ran into the house, finding the body hanging over the tub.

TO SPEAK AT BIBLE CONFERENCE

REV. DR. J. WILBUR CHAPMAN.

Dr. Chapman, noted as an evangelist, is to speak at Mountain Lake Park tomorrow at the International Bible Conference, now in progress there. The West Virginia Christian Endeavors, in convention at Terra Alta, will adjourn and attend the conference.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The Park is at its best in appearance with a crowd never greater at this time in the season, and enjoying a program never excelled in the history of the Park—the Interdenominational Bible Conference, under the direction of Dr. Henry Ostrom and his associates, Drs. J. W. Mahood and A. B. Davidson, with Prof. John P. Hillis in charge of the music. Prof. Hillis has organized one of the largest and best chorus ever on the grounds. It is worth while to go to hear this splendid chorus and the solos and duets. But the music is not the greatest attraction to most of those who are priviledged to be here. The sermons and lectures are of the highest order and most entertaining and instructive. The great day of the feast will be tomorrow (Friday) when Rev. J. Wilbur Chapman will lecture at 10.30 a. m. and 3.00 and 7.30 p. m. It is seldom one is privileged to hear such a celebrated orator once, but here you may hear him three times in one day. Following is the program for Friday: 6.30 a. m. Early Worship led by A. B. Davidson; 8.30. Boys and Girls, Mrs. A. G. Crouse; 9.00, "John the Baptist," H. A. Gobin; 10.30 and 3.00, J. Wilbur Chapman; 6.30, Young People, J. W. Mahood; 7.30, J. Wilbur Chapman. On Saturday the "Old People" will be remembered in a special service at 3.00 o'clock, when Dr. Ostrom will be the principal speaker, and at night Rev. Rockwell Clancy, of India, will preach. Sunday at 10.30 and 7.30 Biship Lewis, of China, will preach. This will be one of the great Sundays at Mountain Lake Park. Come Friday morning and stay until the close of the services Sunday night and you will never regret it.

Next year this Conference will be here and it is hoped that in the years to come it may be extended to four or six weeks in duration and be the greatest meeting of the greatest mountain religious summer resort.

The Loch Lynn Hotel is having a very successful season.

The hotels and boarding houses in the Park are rapidly filling up; in fact some of the boarding houses have been turning people away for several days past.

Rev. C. E. Clark and daughters Ethel and Madge will arrive Friday evening or Saturday morning, and occupy Rev. Clark's cottage.

Mrs. M. W. Rider and three daughters will be here Saturday.

Mrs. H. B. Ferguson and daughter Leonore, of Fairmont, W. Va., are here for two weeks or more.

A mountain excursion and hay ride for the benefit of the parsonage debt, will be conducted by the parsonage trustees of the M. E. church Monday next. See small bills.

Sunday school in the M. E. church at 2.00 p. m. All cordially invited.

Lonaconing Star Assigns.

The Lonaconing Star, through John J. Robinson, the editor and proprietor, and Rebecca Robinson, his wife, Saturday made an assignment to Tasker G. Lowndes, trustees, who entered bond in $10,000. The deed of trust includes the Star building and the Star publishing plant. The Star is a Republican weekly. Some years ago, Mr. Robinson purchased the Lonaconing Review which was consolidated with the Star.

FARMERS AS DELEGATES

Governor Names Many To Go To National Convention.

The largest delegation Governor Crothers ever appointed to attend a public gathering was made public Tuesday when he named the Maryland representatives to the National Farmers' Convention, which opens at Lincoln, Neb., October 6th.

Much interest has been manifested in the convention, and the Governor by naming a large number takes no chances on there being a slim Maryland representation. He says he hopes they will all go and show the progressive Maryland farmer's spirit.

The delegates from Garrett are: H. P. Miller, Grantsville; James D. Harvey, Deer Park; George E. Bishoff, Hoyes; J. B. Miller, Grantsville; Frederick Richter, Accident; J. H. Conneway, Oakland; W. McC. Brown, Oakland; Herman Steiding, Swanton; A. P. Enlow, Elder; Daniel Thayer, Oakland; Simon P. Baker, Mountain Lake Park; James Harvey, Kearney; Edward A. Browning, Oakland; M. Frederick Gortner, Mountain Lake Park; John A. Hughes, Oakland; W. M. Frazee, Accident; T. O. Collier, Accident; N. H. Casteel, Hoyes; W. T. Stanton, Grantsville; R. C. Rush, Accident; S. M. Yoder, Grantsville; Ralph Engle, Grantsville.

THE DEATH RECORD.

WALTER S. RAVENSCROFT.

Mr. Walter S. Ravenscroft, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscroft, of Oakland, whose illness was mentioned in these columns last Thursday, died at his home in Ridgeway, Pa., Monday evening, and was buried at Frostburg yesterday afternoon. The deceased, who was 53 years of age, was born in Frostburg where his father, the venerable Dr. Ravenscroft, of Oakland, was for many years a successful practitioner of his profession. By profession the deceased was a lawyer, having been admitted to the Allegany county bar July 6th, 1878, but after removing to Ridgeway he ceased the practice of law and entered into other business pursuits. He is survived by his wife, who was a daughter of the late J. J. Hoblitzell, of Frostburg; a daughter and two grandchildren and also by his father and mother and one brother, the latter a resident of Denver, Colorado. The funeral was attended by Mrs. Ravenscroft, who was accompanied to Frostburg by Miss Orlie V. Dunham.

OSTEOPATHIST.

Dr. Isabel Garrison Eller, a graduate of the full three years course as required by the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, will be at the Roslyn Cottage, Mountain Lake Park, for the summer. It

Subscribe for The Republican.

HIS CRIPPLED HAND TAKEN OFF

Mr. Fred G. Fox, of Friendsville, Met With Distressing Accident.

Mr. Fred G. Fox, owners of the Friendsville planing mill, who met with a very unfortunate accident several years ago when the fingers of his right hand were cut off by a saw, was again caught in a machine at the mill on Saturday and his crippled hand was severed and his arm so badly lacerated that amputation of the member just below the elbow was necesary.

Married.

FLOWERS—CADLE—The wedding of Miss Etta E. Cadle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Cadle, to Mr. Emory H. Flowers took place Wednesday evening, July 20th, at the home of the bride's parents at Reisterstown, Md. The ceremony was performed on the lawn under an arch of cedar and fern by Rev. Solomon German, pastor of the Reisterstown Methodist Episcopal church. The bride wore a gown of white chiffon and carried a shower bouquet of Bride roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Irma Cadle, sister of the bride, wore pink mull and carried pink roses, and her brother, Mr. R. Norman Cadle, acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Flowers left Friday night for Vancouver, British Columbia, where they will make their future home.

BITTINGER.

They ketch folks by the button-hole,
And yank 'em round the corner;
And try to make 'em pawn their soul,
To vote 'er straight for Warner.

But when the time rolls round to vote,
These "Boosters" sure will see
A great big crowd on hand to toat,
The flag for G. A. P.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Wiley attended the funeral of Mr. Wiley's sister, Mrs. Rebecca Miller, which occurred at Somerfield, Pa., last Monday.

Mrs. Anna Grady, of Grantsville, was calling on friends in this vallage last Sunday evening

Thomas Brenneman, with the assistance of his neighbors, raised the frame of his new barn on last Thursday and the building is now being raidly pushed toward completion.

G. W. Engle and family, of Baltimore, came to this place last week. Mr. Engle returned to the city on Saturday and his family will spend a few weeks with relatives here.

Lawrence Bittinger, of Grantsville, was calling on Miss Lizzie Orendorf at this place last Saturday and Sunday.

Constable N. Murphy, of Grantsville, was in this section on professional business last Monday.

The Republican for Job Printing

DIXON & KELSO

Dixon & Kelso o&ers the following exceptionally low Prices on Felt and Rubber Roofing:

2 Ply Amazon Rubber Roofing, per roll $1.75
3 Ply Felt Roofing, roll 90 cents
2 Ply Felt Roofing, roll 75 cents
Nails and Caps, - 5 cents

We can use 2000 or 3000 second handed Burlap Bags.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

Copyrighted.

TEDDY TAFTY

Teddy-Tafty Sundae

The Latest in Ice Cream.
Healthful
Delightful
Refreshing

Oakland Steam Bakery

Manufacturers of Ice Cream complying absolutely with the Pure Food Laws of the United States.

We Freeze our Reputation into our Ice Cream.

TEDDY TAFTY

TEDDY-TAFTY.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death, in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. It developed that the intruder was probably a woman. Gertrude was suspected, for the intruder left a print of a bare foot. Gertrude returned home with her right ankle sprained. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff button. Halsey suddenly reappeared. He said he and Bailey had left because they had received a telegram. Gertrude said that she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him Halsey's loaded weapon.

They Stared at Each Other Across the Big Library Table.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

They stared at each other across the big library table, with young eyes all at once hard, suspicious. And then Gertrude held out both hands to him appealingly.

"We must not," she said brokenly. "Just now, with so much at stake, it—is shameful. I know you are as ignorant as I am. Make me believe it, Halsey."

Halsey soothed her as best he could, and the breach seemed healed. But long after I went to bed he sat downstairs in the living room alone, and I knew he was going over the case as he had learned it. Some things were clear to him that were dark to me. He knew, and Gertrude, too, why Jack Bailey and he had gone away that night, as they did. He knew where they had been for the last 48 hours, and why Jack Bailey had not returned with him. It seemed to me that without fuller confidence from both the children—they are always children to me—I should never be able to learn anything.

As I was finally getting ready for bed, Halsey came upstairs and knocked at my door. When I had got into a negligee—I used to say wrapper before Gertrude came back from school—I let him in. He stood in the doorway a moment, and then he went into agonies of silent mirth. I sat down on the side of the bed and waited in severe silence for him to stop, but he only seemed to grow worse. When he had recovered he took me by the elbow and pulled me in front of the mirror.

"'How to be beautiful,'" he quoted. "'Advice to maids and matrons, by Beatrice Fairfax!'" And then I saw myself. I had neglected to remove my wrinkle eradicators, and I presume my appearance was odd. I believe that it is a woman's duty to care for her looks, but it is much like telling a necessary falsehood—one must not be found out. By the time I got them off Halsey was serious again, and I listened to his story.

"Aunt Ray," he began, extinguishing his cigarette on the back of my ivory hair-brush, "I would give a lot to tell you the whole thing. But—I can't, for a day or so, anyhow. But one thing I might have told you a long time a ago. If you had known it, you would not have suspected me for a moment of—of having anything to do with the attack on Arnold Armstrong. Goodness knows what I might do to a fellow like that, if there was enough provocation, and I had a gun in my hand—under ordinary circumstances. But—I care a great deal about Louise Armstrong, Aunt Ray. I hope to marry her some day. Is it likely I would kill her brother?"

"But the whole thing is absurd," I argued. "And besides, Gertrude's sworn statement that you left before Arnold Armstrong came would clear you at once."

Halsey got up and began to pace the room, and the air of cheerfulness dropped like a mask.

"She can't swear it," he said finally. "Gertrude's story was true as far as it went, but she didn't tell everything. Arnold Armstrong came here at 2:30—came into the billiard room and left in five minutes. He came to bring—something."

"Halsey," I cried, "you must tell me the whole truth. Every time I see a way for you to escape you block it yourself with this wall of mystery. What did he bring?"

"A telegram—for Bailey," he said. "It came by special messenger from town, and was—most important. Bailey had started for here, and the messenger had gone back to the city. The steward gave it to Arnold, who had been drinking all day and couldn't sleep, and was going for a stroll in the direction of Sunnyside."

"And he brought it?"

"Yes."

"I can tell you—as soon as certain things are made public. It is only a matter of days now," gloomily.

"And Gertrude's story of a telephone?"

"Poor Trude!" he half whispered. "Poor loyal little girl! Aunt Ray, there was no such message. No doubt your detective already knows that and discredits all Gertrude told him."

"And when she went back, it was to get—the telegram?"

"Probably," Halsey said slowly. "When you get to thinking about it, Aunt Ray, it looks bad for all three of us, doesn't it? And yet—I will take my oath none of us even inadvertently killed that poor devil."

I looked at the closed door into Gerturde's dressing room, and lowered my voice.

"The same horrible thought keeps recurring to me," I whispered. "Halsey, Gertrude probably had your revolver; she must have examined it, anyhow, that night. After you—and Jack had gone, what if—that ruffian came back, and she—and she—"

I couldn't finish. Halsey stood looking at me with shut lips.

"She might have heard him fumbling at the door—he had no key, the police say—and thinking it was you, or Jack, she admitted him. When she saw her mistake she ran up the stairs, a step or two, and turning, like an animal at bay, she fired."

Halsey had his hand over my lips before I finished, and in that position we stared each at the other, our stricken glances crossing.

"The revolver—my revolver—thrown into the tulip bed!" he muttered to himself. "Thrown perhaps from an upper window; you say it was buried deep. Her prostration ever since, her—Aunt Ray, you don't think it was Gertrude who fell down the clothes chute?"

I could only nod my head in a hopeless affirmative.

CHAPTER X.

The Traders' Bank.

The morning after Halsey's return was Tuesday. Arnold Armstrong had been found dead at the foot of the circular staircase at three o'clock on Sunday morning. The funeral services were to be held on Tuesday, and the interment of the body was to be deferred until the Armstrongs arrived from California. No one, I think, was very sorry that Arnold Armstrong was dead, but the manner of his death aroused some sympathy and an enormous amount of curiosity. Mrs. Ogden Fitzhugh, a cousin, took charge of the arrangements, and everything, I believe, was as quiet as possible. I gave Thomas Johnson and Mrs. Watson permission to go into town to pay their last respects to the dead man, but for some reason they did not care to go.

Halsey spent part of the day with Mr. Jamieson, but he said nothing of what happened. He looked grave and anxious, and he had a long conversation with Gertrude late in the afternoon.

Tuesday evening found us quiet, with the quiet that precedes an explosion. Gertrude and Halsey were both gloomy and distraught, and as Liddy had already discovered that some of the china was broken—it is impossible to have any secrets from an old servant—I was not in a pleasant humor myself. Warner brought up the afternoon mail and the evening papers at seven—I was curious to know what the papers said of the murder. We had turned away at least a dozen reporters. But I read over the head-line that ran half-way across the top of the Gazette twice before I comprehended it. Halsey had opened the Chronicle and was staring at it fixedly.

"The Traders' bank closes its doors!" was what I read, and then I put down the paper and looked across the table.

"Did you know of this?" I asked Halsey.

"I—expected it. But not so soon," he replied.

"And you?" to Gertrude.

"Jack—told us—something," Gertrude said faintly. "Oh, Halsey, what can he do now?"

"Jack!" I said scornfully. "Your Jack's flight is easy enough to explain now. And you helped him, both of you, to get away! You get that from your mother; it isn't an Innes trait. Do you know that every dollar you have, both of you, is in that bank?"

Gertrude tried to speak, but Halsey stopped her.

"That isn't all, Gertrude," he said quietly; "Jack is—under arrest."

"Under arrest!" Gertrude screamed, and tore the paper out of his hand. She glanced at the heading, then she crumpled the newspaper into a ball and flung it to the floor. While Halsey, looking stricken and white, was trying to smooth it out and read it, Gertrude had dropped her head on the table and was sobbing stormily.

I have the clipping somewhere, but just now I can remember only the essentials.

On the afternoon before, Monday, while the Traders' bank was in the rush of closing hour, between two and three, Mr. Jacob Trautman, president of the Pearl Brewing Company, came into the bank to lift a loan. As security for the loan he had deposited some 300 International Steamship Company 5's, in total value $300,000. Mr. Trautman went to the loan clerk, and, after certain formalities had been gone through, the loan clerk went to the vault. Mr. Trautman, who was a large and genial German, waited for a time, whistling under his breath. The loan clerk did not come back. After an interval, Mr. Trautman saw the loan clerk emerge from the vault and go to the assistant cashier; the two went hurriedly to the vault. A lapse of another ten minutes, and the assistant cashier came out and approached Mr. Trautman. He was noticeably white and trembling. Mr. Trautman was told that through an oversight the bonds had been misplaced, and was asked to return the following morning, when everything would be made all right.

Sent Two Telegrams.

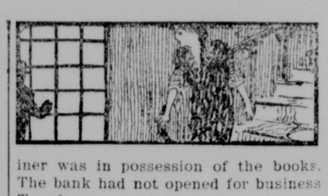
Mr. Trautman, however, was a shrewd business man, and he did not like the appearance of things. He left the bank apparently satisfied, and within 30 minutes he had called up three different members of the Traders' board of directors. At 3:30 there was a hastily convened board meeting, with some stormy scenes, and late in the afternoon a national bank examiner was in possession of the books. The bank had not opened for business Tuesday.



At 12:30 o'clock the Saturday before, as soon as the business of the day was closed, Mr. John Bailey, the cashier of the defunct bank, had taken his hat and departed. During the afternoon he had called up Mr. Aronson, a member of the board, and said he was ill, and might not be at the bank for a day or two. As Bailey was highly thought of, Mr. Aronson merely expressed a regret. From that time until Monday night, when Mr. Bailey had surrendered to the police, little was known of his movements. Some time after one on Saturday he had entered the Western Union office at Cherry and White streets and had sent two telegrams. He was at the Greenwood Country club on Saturday night, and appeared unlike himself. It was reported that he would be released under enormous bond some time that day, Tuesday.

The article closed by saying that while the officers of the bank refused to talk until the examiner had finished his work, it was known that securities aggregating a million and a quarter were missing. Then there was a diatribe on the possibility of such an occurrence; on the folly of a one-man bank, and of a board of directors that met only to lunch together and to listen to a brief report from the cashier, and on the poor policy of a government that arranges a three or four day examination twice a year. The mystery, it insinuated, had not been cleared by the arrest of the cashier. Before now minor officials had been used to cloak the misdeeds of men higher up. Inseparable as the words "speculation" and "peculation" have grown to be, John Bailey was not known to be in the stock market. His only words, after his surrender, had been: "Send for Mr. Armstrong at once." The telegraph message which had finally reached the president of the Traders' bank, in an interior town in California, had been responded to by a telegram from Dr. Walker, the young physician who was traveling with the Armstrong family, saying that Paul Armstrong was very ill and unable to travel.

That was how things stood that Tuesday evening. The Traders' bank had suspended payment, and John Bailey was under arrest, charged with wrecking it; Paul Armstrong lay very ill in California, and his only son had been murdered two days before. I sat dazed and bewildered. The children's money was gone; that was bad enough, though I had plenty, if they would let me share. But Gertrude's grief was beyond any power of mine to comfort; the man she had chosen stood accused of a colossal embezzlement—and even worse. For in the instant that I sat there I seemed to see the coils closing around John Bailey as the murderer of Arnold Armstrong.

Gertrude lifted her head at last and stared across the table at Halsey.

"Why did he do it?" she wailed. "Couldn't you stop him, Halsey? It was suicidal to go back!"

Halsey was looking steadily through the windows of the breakfast room, but it was evident he saw nothing.

"It was the only thing to do, Trude," he said at last. "Aunt Ray, when I found Jack at the Greenwood club last Saturday night, he was frantic. I cannot talk until Jack tells me I may, but—he is absolutely innocent of all this, believe me. I thought, Trude and I thought, we were helping him, but it was the wrong way. He came back. Isn't that the act of an innocent man?"

"Then why did he leave at all?" I asked, unconvinced. "What innocent man would run away from here at three o'clock in the morning? Doesn't it look rather as though he thought it impossible to escape?"

Gertrude rose angrily. "You are not even just!" she flamed. "You don't know anything about it, and you condemn him!"

"I know that we have all lost a great deal of money," I said. "I shall believe Mr. Bailey innocent the moment he is shown to be. You profess to know the truth, but you cannot tell me! What am I to think?"

Halsey leaned over and patted my hand.

"You must take us on faith," he said. "Jack Bailey hasn't a penny that doesn't belong to him; the guilty man will be known in a day or so."

"I shall believe that when it is proved," I said grimly. "In the meantime, I take no one on faith. The Inneses never do."

Gertrude, who had been standing aloof at a window, turned suddenly. "But when the bonds are offered for sale, Halsey, won't the thief be detected at once?"

Halsey turned with a superior smile.

"It wouldn't be done that way," he said. "They would be taken out of the vault by some one who had access to it, and used as collateral for a loan in another bank. It would be possible to realize 80 per cent. of their face value."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Origin of "John Bull."

The name "John Bull," as applied to the English nation, was first made use of in a poem dated 1712.

Double the Wheat Yield of Your Land

Crop rotation and good tillage will not do it all. You need fertilizer—need Armour's. In order to secure a proper return on the investment in your land you MUST increase the yield per acre.

Armour's Fertilizers

for wheat have a record of always producing the heaviest yield. Use them this Fall—Grow more wheat—Make more money. Ask your dealer.

Armour Fertilizer Works, Chicago

COUNTRY'S WEALTH IN OIL

Industry That Has Grown to Enormous proportions Within a Few Years.

The production of oil in the United States has grown from nothing at the time of its discovery to enormous proportions. Millions of barrels have been taken from the country near the western slope of the Alleghenies in western Pennsylvania, and millions more from the districts in West Virginia and Ohio. Indiana has yielded its share and Illinois has been productive beyond the dreams of avarice.

It remained, however, for Kansas and Oklahoma, together with the Indian Territory, to open the eyes of the modern driller and capitalists. When the soil was first tapped in the wildcatting operations of that section great gushers rewarded the efforts of the men who had the courage and capital to engage in the enterprise. The usual rush followed, but many thousands of acres had been already taken up and the war for supremacy began.

The Lost Chords.

The village concert was to be a great affair. They had the singers, they had the program sellers, they had the doorkeepers and they would doubtless have the audience. All they needed was the piano, but that they lacked. Nor could they procure one anywhere.

At last the village organist learned that one was possessed by Farmer Hayseed, who lived "at the top o' the 'ill." Forthwith he set out with two men and a van.

"Take it, an' welcome," said Hayseed cordially "I've no objections s'long as ye put 'Pyenner by Hayseed' on the program."

They carted it away.

"An' I wish 'em joy of it," murmured Mrs. Hayseed, as the van disappeared from sight.

"Wish 'em joy of it," repeated Hayseed. "What d'ye mean?"

"Well, I mean I only 'ope they'll find all the notes they want," replied the good woman. "'Cos, ye see, when I wanted a bit o' wire I allus went to the old planner for it."

It Is a Mistake

Many have the idea that anything will sell if advertised strong enough. This is a great mistake. True, a few sales might be made by advertising an absolutely worthless article but it is only the article that is bought again and again that pays. An example of the big success of a worthy article is the enormous sale that has grown up for Cascarets Candy Cathartic. This wonderful record is the result of great merit successfully made known through persistent advertising and the mouth-to-mouth recommendation given Cascarets by its friends and users.

Like all great successes, trade pirates prey on the unsuspecting public, by marketing fake tablets similar in appearance to Carcarets. Care should always be exercised in purchasing well advertised goods, especially an article that has a national sale like Cascarets. Do not allow a substitute to be palmed off on you.

Midas.

Midas had come to that point in his career where everything he touched turned to gold.

"What shall you ever do with the stuff?" asked his entourage in visible alarm.

Midas affected not to be uneasy. "Just wait till the boys begin to touch me!" quoth he, displaying an acquaintance with economic tendencies far in advance of his age.—Puck.

Those Awful Roaches.

They sneak out on the kitchen sink and look at you saucily sometimes. Don't fret your life away dusting powders in the crevices and buying insecticides. Make a hot suds with Easy Task soap and go after that sink. Mr. Roach and his family thrive where things are not clean, and it is hard to clean the cracks and crevices with ordinary yellow soaps—it is impossible! Easy Task soap makes roaches hunt other quarters. It keeps moths out of woolens, too, if you use it in your laundry.

Artistic Temperament.

"Hamlet seemed to speak with authority in his advice to the players."

"Yes," replied Mr. Stormington Barnes, "although he was rather quiet and patient. But in his other scenes he was as nervous and irascible as a regular stage manager."

The Inevitable.

Briggs—I don't think much of Underblossom. He's a scoundrel. He lies in his teeth.

Griggs—Why shouldn't he? His teeth are false.—Life.

It seems to make some folks wonderfully comfortable to tell the Lord just what they think of one another.

THE REASON.

Spick—The doctor has given him up. What's the matter with him?

Span—Impecuniosity I guess.

A BURNING ERUPTION FROM HEAD TO FEET

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to feet and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor I was advised to try Cuticura Remedies. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies, as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Nenning, 1112 Salina St., Watertown, N. Y., Apr. 11, 1909."

Foxy Hiram.

"Well, now, if that ain't surprising!" ejaculated Mrs. Ryetop, as she shaded her eyes with her hand. "There goes old Hiram Skinflint, and rather than step on a poor black ant he picked it up, and I bet he is going to drop it somewhere out of the reach of danger."

Her husband laughed knowingly.

"Not Hiram Skinflint, Mandy. He'll go down to Jed Weatherby's general store and order a pound of granulated sugar. Then while Jed is looking another way he'll drop the ant among the grains and tell Jed as long as his sugar has ants in it he ought to sell it at half price. Like as not he'll try to get Jed to throw in two or three raisins and a yeast cake. You don't know Hiram Skinflat."

A Protection Against the Heat.

When you begin to think it's a personal matter between you and the sun to see which is the hotter, buy yourself a glass or a bottle of Coca-Cola. It is cooling—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Wholesome as the purest water and lots nicer to drink. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere. Send 2c stamp for booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" and the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910. The latter contains the famous poem "Casey At The Bat," records, schedules for both leagues, and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. Address The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.

He Had Been Observing.

"Why don't you call your invention the 'Bachelor's Button?'" I asked my friend, who was about to put on the market a button that a man could attach without needle or thread.

"I fear that the appellation would imply too much restrictiveness," he answered. "You see," he went on, giving me one of his knowing smiles, "I expect to do just as much business with the married men as with the bachelors."

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, a safe and sure remedy for infants and children, and see that it

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

Household Consternation.

"Charley, dear!" exclaimed young Mrs. Torkins, "the baby has swallowed a gold dollar!"

"Great heavens! Something must be done. There will be no end to the cost of living if he gets habits like that!"

Hot-Headed If You Mention It.

Scott—Jones is a cool-headed chap.

Mott—Naturally! He's as bald as a door knob.

Summer Finery

THE happy possessor of a touring car, or the happier occupant of one, who regularly takes the air in someone's else touring car, presents herself these days in a bonnet and a protecting coat which fastens into a "coat-dress." This garment is of pongee or linen, very practical, dainty and a protection against the dust from collar to hem. It is shaped in such a variety of ways that one may choose from among the pattern books the most becoming style. The simplest lines remain the best and the coat-dress should be plain. Brilliantine, of the washable variety, is another choice in fabrics, where the wearer has reason to wish to get something other than pongee or linen.

The bonnet is made of Madagascar cloth on a supporting veil frame and does not crush the hair. The crown is made of an oblong piece folded in and the bonnet is finished about the face with shirred taffeta silk. Ties of the taffeta, made from piece-silk, are fringed out at the ends and hemmed at the sides. The frames which support these bonnets hardly deserve the name, for there is so little to them. The cloth is a wiry fabric which needs little help to retain it in place. But the bonnet is designed to be cool and the wire supports are made to that end. It must not set too close to the head. These pretty head pieces look very simple and they are—as simple as a sunbonnet—which is not so easy to make successfully, as its appearance might indicate. Wash silk or suede-lisle gloves enable the autoist to be always daintily gloved; if several pairs are provided clean gloves are always on call, for they may be washed and dried over night.

It takes a very great beauty indeed to appear at once charming and "blowsy." This summer's auto clothes are the most practical we have had. The roomy coat-dress is complete and covers up a multitude of well protected finery, or maybe a kimona—no one can tell which, until the garment is taken off.

Every one who possesses a lace coat or a scarf or a shawl is making the most of many opportunities. What with tunics, stoles, overskirts and all sorts of draperies, and the universal use of lace, every good old piece is having an airing. This is likely to continue for, if the shadows that are cast before are in any way authoritative, the silhouette of the Empress Josephine seems to be lengthening across the land abroad, and has already arrived over seas to us. Skirts are narrow to inconvenience at the bottom and figures suggest that the corset is about to be forgotten—in effect—but not of course in reality. American women have ceased to accept everything Paris chooses to hand out to them, however, and it remains to be seen just how the banded skirts and coats will be received. But there is no doubt about the liking for soft draperies, and old classic models never fail of some degree of welcome. The manner of draping fine bits of old Chantilly is shown in the picture just as a suggestion to some one who may own a mantle or shawl or a long scarf. There are any number of ways by which it may be made to become a part of the costume. Shawls are arranged with the point fastened to the bodice at the bust line, plaited in at the waist on each side of the front, but hanging free at this point, and tacked to the skirt at the sides. This is not the only manner of placing them. With trained gowns the fine shawl of old lace may play the most important part of the composition.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

COAT FOR YOUNG GIRL.

Serge or cloth would make up prettily like our sketch, which has a panel front; the sides of the upper part are plain, while those at lower part are pleated, the two are connected by a material waistband which has the right end pointed, and fastened over on the left; cord ornaments and buttons form the fastening. Velvet or satin might be used to face collar and cuffs.

Hat of fine straw, trimmed with velvet or roses.

Materials required: 3 yards 48 inches wide, ½ dozen buttons, ½ yard silk or velvet.

To Insert Ribbon.

When removing ribbon from soiled corset covers fasten a piece of twine on one end and pull through, take off the ribbon, leaving the string in the corset cover while it is being laundered. Then by tying the ribbon on one end again it is easily pulled back into place.

Many of the smartest new frocks are made with overskirts of all sizes from a short apron to a long drapery.

INGENIOUS COAT HANGERS

Good Substitute for a Regular Article When Such Is Not at Hand.

A coat or jacket of any description should be kept on a coat hanger—when not being worn. If a regular hanger does not chance to be on hand a good substitute can be evolved by making a tight roll of wrapping paper or newspaper and tying about the center a string with loops left to hang it on the hook.

The paper roll if sufficiently thick will keep a coat in shape nicely. Most waists are also better hung up than laid in a drawer. In traveling it is especially convenient to be able to fashion good hangers with only a few old papers, a bit of string and just a moment's time and work.

For traveling the small cases of extension hangers are delightfully compact and a great convenience. These hangers can also be bought separately and a bag of silk or dimity made for them to be carried in.

A Flounce Finish.

To finish the upper edge of a flounce on a delicate white frock there is suggested a new idea in a spray of silk flowers. A long and trailing tendril made of a milliner's fold of delicate pink satin is tacked along the line of joining where the chiffon or tulle is fastened to the skirt. Hanging from this at distances of three or four inches are single rosebuds, the smallest imaginable, made of pink ribbon and each one attached to a leaf made of delicate, narrow green ribbon.

Now, at wider intervals, and reaching upward from the long tendrils, there appear wandering sprays of the same pink silk fold ending with a tiny pink bud. On the same frock the sleeve is finished with a similar handmade decoration and the shoulder line below the subyoke.

Chamois Cushions.

With a pattern cut out as for stencil work, the chamois cover of a cushion is lined with rich brown satin or velvet and finished round the edge with a brown silk cord. A second cushion top of chamois has its conventional design burnt upon it—very delicately burnt—with the pyrographic needle, because this leather is too delicate for careless work.

TEMPERANCE NOTES

BARRED FROM NORTHLAND

Alcohol Is Not Allowed to Be Sold Along the Coast of Labrador—Many of Its Ill Effects.

"Alcohol is not allowed to be sold on any part of the coast on which we are working," says Dr. Grenfell, a famous physician who is working among the Eskimos; "but so surely as it comes an illicit sale begins, one sees its evil results as quickly as if, instead of alcohol it had been the germ of diphtheria or smallpox. Lying at my anchors in Labrador harbors, women have come off the ship after dark, secretly, for fear of being seen, to ask me for God's sake to try and prevent its being sold near them, as their sons and husbands were being debauched, and even their girls were in danger.

"I have seen it come among the Eskimos. It kills our native as arsenic kills flies, and it robs them of everything that would differentiate them as human beings from the beasts.

"Why don't I want to see liquor used at sea? Because when I go down for a watch below I want to feel that the man at the wheel sees only one light when there is only one light to see; that when the safety of the ship and all it carries depends on the cool head, the instant resolve and the steady hand of the helmsman, there is not standing there in place of the man the poor, debased creature that all the world has seen alcohol create.

"I have seen ships lost through collision because the captain had been taking a 'little alcohol.' I have had to tell a woman that she was a widow and that her children were fatherless, because her husband, gentle and loving and clean-living, had been tempted to take 'a drop of alcohol' at sea and had fallen over the side, drunk, and gone out into a drunkard's eternity. I have had to clothe children and feed them when reduced to starvation, because alcohol had robbed them of a natural protector and all the necessities of life. I have had to visit in prisons the victims of crime, caused as directly in honest men by alcohol as a burn is caused by falling into the fire.

"I have been doctoring sick men and women of every kind, and I have found that I can use other drugs of which we know the exact action and which we can control absolutely with greater accuracy in cases of necessity for stimulating the heart. I contend we can get just as good results without it, and I always fear its power to create a desire for itself. It is not necessary for happiness, for I have known no set of men happier and enjoying their lives more than the crews of my own vessel, and the many, many fishermen who, like ourselves, neither touch, taste nor handle it."

ABSTINENCE MAKES BIG GAINS

In No Country in World Has Cause of Temperance Made Better Progress Than England.

The progress of abstinence from intoxicants in Great Britain may be seen in the report of the temperance organizations connected with the Free Church union. Thirty years ago out of 2,560 such ministers only 760, or about one-third, were abstainers. Today there are 2,670 abstainers out of a total of 2,963 ministers, or seven-eighths of the whole. Out of 59 young men newly entering the ministry 57 were found to be teetotalers and 44 of these had never known the taste of drink. In no country in the world has the progress of total abstinence among ministers been more marked and more rapid than in Great Britain, where the present archbishop of Canterbury is an active friend of temperance in church, society and state, says Interior. Addressing a recent meeting in Liverpool Lord Charles Beresford, from his youth a member of the British navy and now standing at its head, said that 46 years ago he came to Liverpool with a squadron which the city entertained. Out of 4,000 men who went ashore that year not over 300 returned to their ships sober, and 1,500 were left in the hands of the police. Two years ago Lord Beresford said he brought a fleet to the same city, and out of 3,000 men who went ashore not over three failed to report fit for duty when the shore leave expired. Admiral Beresford attributed the change to various causes, not the least being the gracious influence of Christian women who followed with their prayers and temperance literature the navy round the world. The address of the British admiral stands in marked contrast with that of an American admiral who has recently expressed the fear that sober Americans will prove "mollycoddles."

Governor Hoch on Temperance.

Ex-Governor Hoch of Kansas is sanguine of the complete success of temperance throughout the country. At a recent meeting in Chicago he delivered an address, in the course of which he said: "There is absolutely nothing to be said in favor of the saloon. As soon as the Middlefield bill, or some other like it, gets through congress, to make shipments of liquor into dry territory contraband, the remaining great obstacle to temperance will be removed."

YOUNT UNIFORMITY BILL IS HIT BY EDUCATORS

Ohio Teachers' Association Adopts Strong Resolution Against State Uniformity of School Books.

Cedar Point, O., —— .—Educators of Ohio to the number of 2,000 attended the annual meeting of the Ohio State Teachers' Association here. The session was marked by two important incidents—the teachers refused to listen to an address on equal suffrage and they took unanimous action against state uniformity of school books.

During the last session of the legislature the Yount uniformity bill was passed by the senate and was lost in the house. The educators of Ohio do not want uniformity considered again and they voice their protest in the following strong resolution:

"We believe that the educational value of school processes and practices should be paramount to every other consideration. We are therefore opposed to all efforts which would aim to establish a system of State Uniformity in the selection of text-books, because we believe that such a system would be a hindrance to the present progress of our schools."

HE ENJOYED IT.

Mrs. Talkalot—It's a wonder you wouldn't be careful about your own language. You make it a business to pick me up on little blunders.

Mr. Talkalot—No, my dear. I make a recreation of it.

Controlled Newspapers.

The Atchison Globe says that no advertiser has ever tried to control its editorial policy, the remark being occasioned by the charge often made nowadays, that the big advertisers direct the editorial policy of newspapers.

The experience of the Globe is the experience of most newspapers. The merchant who does a great deal of advertising is more interested in the circulation department of a newspaper than in the editorial department. If a daily paper goes to the homes of the people, and is read by them, he is satisfied, and it may chase after any theory or fad, for all he cares. He has troubles of his own, and he isn't trying to shoulder those of the editorial brethren.

There are newspapers controlled by people outside of the editorial rooms, and a good many of them, more's the pity; but the people exercising that control are not the business men who pay their money for advertising space. The newspapers which are established for political purposes are often controlled by chronic officeseekers, whose first concern is their own interests. There are newspapers controlled by great corporations, and the voice of such newspapers is always raised in protest against any genuine reform.

The average western newspaper usually is controlled by its owner, and he is supposed to be in duty bound to make all sorts of sacrifices at all sorts of times; there are people who consider it his duty to insult his advertisers, just to show that he is free and independent. If he shows a decent respect for his patrons, who pay him their money, and make it possible for him to carry on the business, he is "subsidized" or "controlled." The newspaper owner is a business man, like the dry goods man or the grocer. The merchants are expected to have consideration for their customers, and they are not supposed to be subsidized by the man who spends five dollars with them, but the publisher is expected to demonstrate his courage by showing that he is ungrateful for the patronage of his friends. It is a funny combination when you think it over.—Emporia Gazette.

Tactful.

A woman with a pronounced squint went to a fashionable photographer.

He looked at her and she looked at him and both were embarrassed.

He spoke first.

"Won't you permit me," he said, "to take your portrait in profile? There is a certain shyness about one of your eyes which is as difficult in art as it is fascinating in nature."—Beacon.

Watch Your Refrigerator.

You'll save many a doctor's bill by watching your refrigerator. Keep it absolutely clean all the time. The best way to clean it is to take clean hot water, make a suds with Easy Task soap and wash every nook and corner in the ice box or refrigerator. Then the food doesn't get smelly and carry disease germs to the table. Easy Task soap, being made of pure cocoanut oil, borax, naphtha and clean tallow, is antiseptic as well as cleansing. It is a wonderful soap—and a nickel a cake.

A widow may have words of praise for her late husband. But a sleepy wife, never!

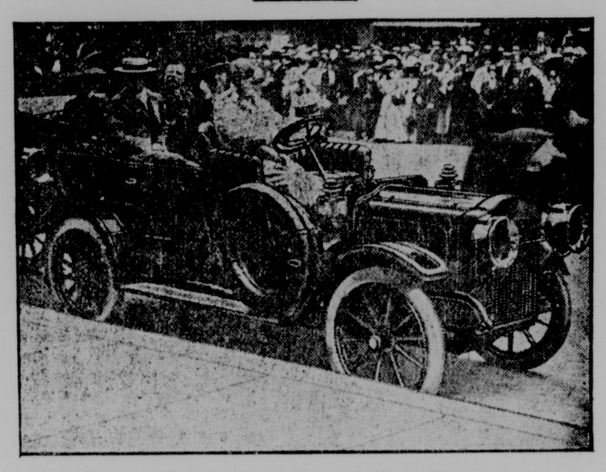
Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

The morning after is responsible for many good resolutions.

ROOSEVELT RETURNS AND IS GIVEN AN OVATION SELDOM EQUALED

The Mighty Traveler Goes Buoyantly Through a Long and Trying Reception-Parade, Showing Lively Interest in Everything American

The White Company Receives Unique Compliment for the Sturdy Reliability of Its Steam Car From Mr. Roosevelt and Family



Theodore Roosevelt and Party in White Steamer.)

After fifteen months absence, exactly as scheduled, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt disembarked from the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, Saturday morning, June 18, at 11 a. m. To the keen disappointment of a large group of newspaper correspondents, Mr. Roosevelt absolutely refused, as heretofore, to be interviewed or to talk on political subjects, but his rapid fire of questions showed the same virile interest in public affairs as before.

If the welcome tendered by the vast throng may be considered a criterion upon which to base a "return from Elba," surely there was no discordant note in the immense reception-parade, nor in the wildly clamorous crowd which cheered at every glimpse and hung on his very word.

The incidents of the day in New York were many, but perhaps none better illustrated the nervous energy and vitality of the man, the near-mania to be up-and-doing, which he has brought back to us, than the discarding of horses and carriages for the swifter and more reliable automobiles. The moment the Roosevelt family and immediate party landed, they were whisked away in White Steamers to the home of Mrs. Douglas Robinson at 433 Fifth avenue. A little later, when the procession reached the corner of Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, Colonel Roosevelt again showed his preference for the motor car in general and the White cars in particular, when he, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Collector Loeb transferred from their carriage to White Steamers, which were in waiting for them.

After luncheon at Mr. Robinson's house, the entire party, including Colonel Roosevelt, again entered White cars and were driven to Long Island City, where they were to take a special train to the ex-President's home at Oyster Bay.

The supremacy of the White cars with the Roosevelt party was again demonstrated on Sunday, when the party was driven to church in the White Steamers, and a group of some forty prominent Rough Riders were taken in a White Gasoline Truck to a clambake at the Travers island clubhouse of the New York Athletic Club.

Cost of Spontaneity.

"I want the office, of course," said the aspiring statesman, "but not unless I am the people's choice."

"We can fix that, too," said his campaign manager; "only you know it's a good deal more expensive to be the people's choice than it is to go in as the compromise candidate."

TAKE A FOOT-BATH TO-NIGHT

After dissolving one or two Allen's Foot-Tabs (Antiseptic tablets for the foot-bath) in the water. It will take out all soreness, smarting and tenderness, remove foot odors and freshen the feet. Allen's Foot-Tabs instantly relieve weariness and sweating or inflamed feet and hot nervousness of the feet at night. Then for comfort throughout the day shake Allen's Foot-Ease the antiseptic powder into your shoes. Sold everywhere 25c. Avoid substitutes. Samples of Allen's Foot-Tabs mailed FREE or our regular size sent by mail for 25c. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

"Foot-Tabs for Foot-Tubs."

An Answer in Kind.

"How did the trouble in the family start?"

"The wife, it seems, got tired of her husband's heavy wit."

"Why didn't she simply make a light retort?"

"She did. She threw the lamp at him."

For Red, Itching Eyelids, Cysts, Styes Falling Eyelashes and All Eyes That Need Care Try Murine Eye Salve. Aseptic Tubes—Trial Size—25c. Ask Your Druggist or Write Murine Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

Theatrical expense accounts come under the head of play bills.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES
FOR RHEUMATISM
BRIGHT'S DISEASE
DIABETES, BACKACHE
NUMBER 375 "Guaranteed"

Weak Women should heed such warnings as headache, nervousness, backache, depression and weariness and fortify the system with the aid of
Beecham's Pills
Sold Everywhere. In boxes 10c. and 25c.

Your Liver is Clogged up
That's Why You're Tired—Out of Sorts—Have No Appetite.
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS will put you right in a few days. They do their duty. Cure Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, and Sick Headache.

SMALL PILL, SMALL DOSE, SMALL PRICE
GENUINE must bear signature:
Brent Good

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, cannot spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.

HAROLD SOMERS
150 DeKalb Ave.
Brooklyn, New York

SEA SHELLS 25 shells, each a different variety, by mail, for 25 cents. Genuine Pink Coral Necklace with spring clasp, by registered mail, one for 47 cts. or three for $1.00. Shell Scarf Pin one 10 cents or three for 25 cents. Lucky Old Shoe Pin, two shoes on a pin, two pins 10 cents, one dozen, 45 cents, stamps taken. Large showy shells and curios for fairs, church bazars, on commission.
J. E. POWELL Waukegan, Ill. U. S. A.

STOCKERS & FEEDERS
Choice quality; reds and roans, white faces or angus bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.
National Live Stock Com. Co.
At either
Kansas City, Mo., St. Joseph, Mo., S. Omaha, Neb.

Up-Set Sick Feeling that follows taking a dose of castor oil, salts or calomel, is about the worst you can endure—Ugh—it gives one the creeps. You don't have to have it—CASCARETS move the bowels—tone up the liver—without these bad feelings. Try them. 914
CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month.

FLORIDA LANDS. Investigate Prosper Colony (Orange Co.) Florida. Heart of the orange and truck section. High, healthful, fertile, beautiful. Excellent markets. Increase your income and enjoy life. Five-acre farm $100—easy terms. Excursion soon, very low rates. Write T. V. Orr, Toledo, Ohio.

PATENT YOUR IDEAS. They may bring you wealth. 64-page Book Free. Est. 1869. Fitzgerald & Co., Pat. Attys., Box K, Washington, D.C.

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months..... .75
One copy three months..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1910.

PAY OF COUNTY TEACHERS.

By a decision of the Maryland Court of Appeals the Commissioners of Worcester county have been obliged to comply with the law passed at the 1908 session of the Maryland legislature, which designates $350 as a minimum salary for white teachers in the state who shall have taught three years; $400 as the minimum for a teacher with five years' experience, and $450 as the lowest pay for one who shall have continued in the work during eight years. The salary range thus apportioned is certainly low enough, and it is surprising that any county should have protested.

The question of placing the schools of the state, whether in the counties or the city, upon a higher level of efficiency is almost entirely one of salaries paid. If the pay of teachers were doubled in every Maryland county there would soon be a corresponding rise in the quality of the service rendered. For with the higher pay there would be a more capable class of applicants for the schools, inefficient teachers could be eliminated and there would be greater inducement for men and women of special adaptibility to the teachers' calling to devote their lives to the profession. The public schools of the state cannot be graded up to a high level so long as the salaries of the teachers are kept graded down to a low level.

It is gratifying to note that the Board of Commissioners of Worcester has promptly acted in accord with the Supreme Court decision, which declares the 1908 law to be constitutional and operative. The extra back pay due to teachers in Worcester for the years 1908-1909 amounted in the aggregate to $11,966.50, and this sum, together with an additional amount covering the extra salary costs of 1910, has been levied. The effect of the Supreme Court decision will be to establish a minimum range of salaries in those counties where the average has ranged low. In the majority of the Maryland counties the salary averages are upon a higher level than the minimum rates fixed by the 1908 law.

CANNON ON CANNONISM.

Notwithstanding the fact that Speaker Cannon was finally forced off the platform at Winfield, Kan., on Saturday by the 105-degree temperature, he had talked for one hour and three-quarters before yielding and had put a few "demonstrations" in his own terse and original way. If "Cannonism" is to be made an issue in the campaign this year, the general public will certainly be interested in knowing just what the ism, as the great original himself explains it, may be.

As Uncle Joe views the ism for which he is held responsible and elucidates its practical workings, it has caused business throughout the country to move with a push rarely seen before. He accepts the Payne tariff as the main count in the general arraignment on the charge of Cannonism, and proceeds to demonstrate that under eleven months' operation of this law the revenues amounted to $333,000,000 "the largest revenue ever collected under any tariff law ever enacted, so that the new tariff is a success as a revenue producer." Then he directs attention to the fact that since the enactment of the law 200,000 idle freight cars, with the locomotives that hauled them, have resumed operations; that a large amount of idle labor has again found employment, and that wages in the aggregate have been increased to the extent of $500,000,000

The people, he believes, have complete confidence in the economic policies of the government. The pocket nerve, which he regards as being the most sensitive of all, has not shown any signs of being touched, and there would be quick signs everywhere if it were touched. The pocket nerve, in the Speaker's opinion, is beating strong and in attune with the throbbing pulsations of high-pressure prosperity, a prosperity for which, in the Speaker's view, Cannonism is in no small degree responsible.

HUNTING A BETTER CLIMATE

The wheat lands of the Northwestern Provinces of Canada are just as rich in stored-up wealth as ever they were, and are ranging even a little cheaper in price than they were offered at five or six years ago. But the much-heralded grand rush of American farmers across the Canadian border to take up these lands has practically come to a standstill and from latest accounts, an ebb-flow has set in that is promising to be of almost as conspicuous proportions as the moving-northward flood. The immigration bureau at Washington has advanced information of a pending movement of population from the Western Canadian Provinces described as "enormous."

This population is contemplating moving to the southeastern section of the United States. A record-breaking migration from the northwest to the southeast of the Continent occurred last years, and it is to be inferred that favorable reports from this advance movement sent back to the frozen North have inspired the greater migratory movement which will start in October. Large tracts of land in the Gulf States are being negotiated for, it is said, by agents of the Northwest farmers. This Southern trend of the farming population is affecting not only Canada, but such states as Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

The movement southward, there is reasons to infer, is traceable to a desire to escape to rigors of the northern climate. Even the northern-bred races are apparently arriving at the conclusion that a considerably greater amount of satisfaction out of earthly existence is obtainable in a region where the winters are not seven months long and where the temperature has not the bad habit of dropping down to seventy-five degrees below zero.

WHY NOT TELL?

To be specific, we charge Governor Crothers with using threats to force the passage of the Wells road bill. We charge the Governor with threatening certain members of the General Assembly of Maryland that he would veto certain measures then pending unless the Wells road bill was supported. . . . We charge the Governor with promising to reward certain members of the General Assembly, not with money, but with patronage, for supporting the Wells road bill. We state these charges openly and dare the Governor to deny them. We promise the Governor, should he deny these charges, to give him the names of the witnesses.—Laurel Democrat.

With so much interesting information aboard, why wait for further incitation? Everybody else will listen even if our esteemed contemporary should fail to catch the Governor's attention.—Baltimore News.

THE MAN IN OVERALLS.

Least noticed in the news of the day are those minor items telling of catastrophes met by men occupying an inconspicuous place in the world. A belt slips and the mill worker is carried to his home on a stretcher by co-laborers, who administer crude comfort to a grief-stricken family and return to the hazardous occupation; a man at the smelter falls into molten metal; a structural steel worker running along a girder makes a misstep and plunges ten stories down; a sledge slips in the car shops and a man is crippled for life; a trainman in the performance of duty is maimed or killed—these and other incidents in the world of industry happen with a frequency that dulls the senses unless accompanied by some spectacular feature to cause a momentary thrill of interest.

Certain occupations are hazardous, yet there is much hazardous work that has to be done. No machine can be substituted for the nimble fingers and brain of the trained laborer in certain tasks. Danger is everywhere in the mighty undertakings of industry; but wherever danger is there is always a man to brave it undeterred by any thought of the risk involved. The hazard of the job is recognized, but welcomed, either because of its appeal, because it is in the line of duty or because there is a family back home to support. To the credit of industry much is being done to minimize risk and in the event of accident to render some measure of compensation. Railroads, such as the Baltimore and Ohio, are among the most energetic of corporations in looking after the man incapacitated in the performance of duty, and recognition of the obligation in general.

The debt owed by the public to the man in overalls is large, but sometimes disregarded. His work calls for no display of pyrotechnics to attract attention. It is generally prosaic and frightfully hard. Upon the faithful performance of it depends the world's advancement. Credit for mighty feats of construction properly go to the brain that conceived and planned and executed them; but thought should be given the men in overalls who did the work, braved the danger, endured the toil, and wrought into splendid realization the finished production. The man in overalls as he returns from work grimy with toil, weary and uncouth in appearance, often is subjected to many little evidences of the existence of a petty caste of clothes. His next door neighbor, a clerk, may look sneeringly upon his badge of toil, careless of the important and honorable part played by this ordinary workman; the latter, too, anxious that his children shall not be ashamed because their father looks less tidy than the fathers of their playmates may slink in through the back to escape the public gaze.

But there is no dishonor in honest dirt. The workman plays an important and essential part. Sneers at overalls are out of place. In America, at least, the workman can look any millionaire square in the eyes in the conviction that his work is relatively quite as important. Let there be mutual recognition of this and there will be less of class clash with the elevation of the laborer to his rightful position in the esteem of the community.

NEW GERMANY.

It seems useless to mention the weather as everybody knows all about it.

Harvest has just begun

The barnraising at G. W. Broadwater's last Friday was well attended and the work progressed rapidly. Samuel Wiland has the contract for construction.

Mrs. Nettie May, of St. Louis, is a guest of Henry Swauger this week.

Mrs. Jennie Warnick, of Fairview, who was ill, is recovering.

Miss Sarah Durst and Mrs. Fannie Wagner, of Salisbury, were visiting relatives here Sunday and Monday.

The lawn fete held by the members of the M. E church Saturday night was largely attended.

Mrs. Susan Schweikart, formerly of New York City, is now staying with her brother, Peter J. Stephens.

Owing to an accident Rev. Friend was unable to reach here Sunday.

Misses Lucretia Warnick and Beulah Sigler, of Westernport, were visiting relatives in this vicinity last week.

Miss Margaret Smith, of Barton, who has secured our school for the coming winter, was here Sunday.

Ernest Wiland and Elbridge Durst have returned to West Virginia.

Miss Bessie Green was the guest of Clara Stark last week.

Mrs. Henry Broadwater and Mrs. Sam Miller were calling on relatives last Thursday and Friday.

Church services July 24th are as follows: Reformed, 10:30 a. m. Sunday school every Sunday in both churches at 9:30 a. m.

We wish the ginseng farmers much prosperity.

Some Apple Tree.

What is probably the largest apple tree in West Virginia is growing on the Trembly Brothers' farm, near Albright, Preston county.

The tree is eleven feet in circumference four feet above the ground. It has four limbs which are from four to six feet in circumference twenty feet from the ground. The tree has a spread of 67 feet, and is 40 feet in height. The estimated age of this tree is 125 years. The tree is in a fine healthy condition, but will not bear any fruit this year, as all the fruit in that section was killed by the late frosts.

West Virginia Will Celebrate.

Hon. Henry G. Davis, chairman of the West Virginia semi-centennial commission, has called a meeting at Webster Springs on August 14th, when some definite plan will be decided on for the celebration of the state's fiftieth birthday. The commisssion will submit its report to the governor, who will recommend a celebration to the legislature, which meets on next January. Some of the members of the commission favor a world's fair, and if this is decided on, there will be a fight among Wheeling, Parkersburg, Huntington and Charleston as the place. Other members are in favor of all cities holding separate celebrations.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

FOR SALE—A practically new six horse power engine and ten horse power boiler. Apply at Oakland Model Steam Bakery.

Lost.

A Gold Watch. Open face, Waltham movement, black fob, gold charm, initials, N. C. C. Finder will be rewarded. C. B. CROPP.

Notice To Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, either in person or by deputy, will be in each of the Election Districts in Garrett county, Maryland, to collect and receive taxes at the time and places following:

July 30—C. J. Otto's, 9 to 12.
July 30—Jenning's, 3 to 6.
Aug. 1—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 3—Bittinger—Ellithorp's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 3—Beckman—Mellinger's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 4—Swanton—W. H. Lohr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 5—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 6—Red House, 9 to 3.
Aug. 8—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 9—Bloomington—Post Office, 9 to 3.
Aug. 10—Kitzmiller—Bank Building, 9 to 3.
Aug. 11—Kitzmiller—Wilson's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 12—Gorman—J. P. Parr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 13—Bloomington—Moody's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 15—Hoyes—W. A. Smith's Store, 9 to 12.
Aug. 15—McHenry, 2 to 5

By an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1890, being Chapter 556, Section 45, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of levy thereof; and all taxes paid on or before the first day of September a discount of three per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt for taxes so paid, but the discount allowed on the county taxes by this section shall not be made to any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due by such person or corporate institution for the current year be paid when the same is made.

ROBERT L. FRIES,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

Election Supervisors' Notice of Appointments OF Judges and Clerks of Election.

OFFICE OF
THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS FOR GARRETT COUNTY.

OAKLAND, MD., July 26, 1910.

The Board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett County, Maryland, having selected the following named persons to be Judges and Clerks of Election in and for the several election districts of said county in accordance with the provisions of Section 7 of Article 33, of the Code of Public General Laws of the State of Maryland for the year 1906, hereby give notice of the name and post-office address of each person so selected as Judges and Clerks, and also the political party which the Board of Supervisors of Elections in tends each of said persons to represent respectively.

The law makes it the duty of the Board to examine promptly into any complaints which may be preferred to them in writing against any person so selected and to remove any such persons whom upon inquiry they find to be unfit or incapable to discharge the duties incumbent upon them as election officials.

Election District Number One—Swanton.

Amos Reckner, Democrat, Judge of Election, Swanton; Richard Custer, Republican, Judge of Election, Swanton.

John A. Beckman, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Swanton; Archibald Barnard, Republican, Clerk of Election, Swanton.

Election District Number Two—Friendsville.

Joseph E. Friend, Democrat, Judge of Election, Friendsville; Albert Richard Frazee, Judge of Election, Selbysport.

Thurman F. Umbel, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Friendsville; Walter Collier, Republican, Clerk of Election, Friendsville.

Election District Number Three—Grantsville.

William Winterberg, Democrat, Judge of Election, Grantsville; Daniel Baker, Republican, Judge of Election, Grantsville.

Earl Stanton, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Grantsville; Alvin Stark, Republican, Clerk of Election, Jennings.

Election District Number Four—Bloomington.

Philip R. Titchinell, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bloomington; Grant Hershberger, Republican, Judge of Election, Bloomington.

Earl Fazenbaker, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bloomington; Lloyd Duckworth, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bloomington.

Election District Number Five—Accident.

James McGettigan, Democrat, Judge of Election, Accident; Lewis Kamp, Republican, Judge of Election, Accident.

William Garringer, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Accident; Lloyd Skiles, Republican, Clerk of Election, Accident.

Election District Number Six—Sang Run.

Meshack Mattingly, Democrat, Judge of Election, Hoyes; Clarence Fraker, Republican, Judge of Election, McHenry.

E. F. Jenkins, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Cranesville, W. Va.; George Glotfelty, Clerk of Election, McHenry.

Election District Number Seven—Oakland.

L. M. Bernard, Democrat, Judge of Election, Mt. Lake Park; John W. Maroney, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

E. F. Smouse, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park; John R. Hipsley, Jr., Republican, Clerk of Election, Mt. Lake Park.

Election District Number Eight—Ryan's Glade.

John S. Browning, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; James Aaronhalt, Republican, Judge of Election, Wilson, W. Va.

David F. Liller, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; John H. Sanders, Republican, Clerk of Election, Oakland.

Election District Number Nine—Johnson's.

Urias McKenzie, Democrat, Judge of Election, Finzel; George Beman, Republican, Judge of Election, Frostburg.

William A. Murphy, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Frostburg; Bradford Blocher, Republican, Clerk of Election, Frostburg.

Election District Number Ten—Deer Park.

Henry Solomon, Democrat, Judge of Election, Deer Park; Allen Pauzh, Republican, Judge of Election, Deer Park.

Zaimon West, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Deer Park; Wilfred Chadderton, Republican, Clerk of Election, Deer Park.

Election District Number Eleven—The Elbow.

Walter Warnick, Democrat, Judge of Election, Lonaconing; Lewis Broadwater, Republican, Judge of Election, Avilton.

E. W. Lancaster, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Avilton; Jacob Strickland, Republican, Clerk of Election, Lonaconing.

Election District Number Twelve—Bittinger.

Stephen C. Miller, Democrat, Judge of Election, Bittinger; Peter Bigford, Republican, Judge of Election, Bittinger.

B. F. Broadwater, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Bittinger; George Beitzell, Republican, Clerk of Election, Bittinger.

Election District Number Thirteen—Kitzmillersville

Wm. H. Pool, Democrat, Judge of Election, Kitzmiller; Charles Harvey, Republican, Judge of Election, Kitzmiller.

H. L. Pool, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Kitzmiller; Fred. Kerns, Republican, Clerk of Election, Kitzmiller.

Election District Number Fourteen—Oakland.

James A. Delawder, Democrat, Judge of Election, Oakland; John Kisner, Republican, Judge of Election, Oakland.

John A. Hughes, Democrat, Clerk of Election, Oakland; Joseph Tritchler, Republican, Clerk of Election, Crellin.

WILLIAM R OFFUTT, Pres.,
THOMAS J JOHNSON,
S LAWTON,
Board of Supervisors of Election for Garrett County.

EDMUND JAMISON, Clerk.

Subscribe for The Republican, Oldest and Best Paper in Garrett county.

22222 The Lonaconing Savings Bank Of Allegany County. 22222

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays. 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

OPTICIANS

EYES EXAMINED, GLASSES PRESCRIBED AND FURNISHED. CROSS EYES STRAIGHTENED

SNYDER & L'MASTERS
REGISTERED OPTOMETRISTS.

75 per cent. of all Nervous Troubles, such as Headache, Neuralgia and Stomach Trouble are caused by reflex from eye strain. We make glasses to correct all such conditions.

Room No. 6, Traders Annex, CLARKSBURG, WEST VA.

LeMasters will be at Chautauqua Hotel, Mountain Lake Park, July 27 to August 8; at Johnson Cottage, Oakland, Aug. 8 to 13.

Bloomington M. E. Church.

The young ladies and gentlemen in Bloomington will hold a festival for the benefit of the M. E. church in the hall at that place, Monday and Tuesday nights, August 1st and 2nd. Let all turn out and help this cause and show their appreciation of the pastor.

Sunday Work Stopped.

Last Saturday Sheriff Andrew Shartzer served notice that all work of construction men along the line of the B. & O. would have to stop on the Sabbath or arrests would follow. The notice had the desired effect and no work was done on Sunday.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.
G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt — Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis — George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell — William R. Stull
Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Mr. George Loar, of Grafton, spent Sunday in Oakland.

Mr. J. M. Crane, of Kingwood, W. Va., spent Sunday in Oakland with friends and relatives.

Mrs. W. L. Thomas and little daughter are on a visit to friends and relatives in Preston county, W. Va.

Mr. Garrett V. Dixon, of near Friendsville, is in Oakland on a visit to his sons, Messrs. D. M. and W. D. Dixon.

Mrs. Kate Bunker Paine, wife of Judge John Barton Paine, of Chicago, Ill., spent Tuesday afternoon and evening in Oakland.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawton & Sons.

Miss Abbie Chance, who attended the Flower-Cadle wedding at Reisterstown, Baltimore county, last Wednesday, returned to Oakland Saturday morning.

Mr. R. Morris, editor of the Preston Republican, Terra Alta, accompanied by Mr. S. H. Jackson, also of Terra Alta, spent Tuesday evening in Oakland.

Mrs. Martha Brown and daughter Miss Emma Brown, of Kingwood, are in Oakland on a visit to Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscraft, having arrived here Tuesday evening.

Notice the change in the advertisement of the First National Bank of Oakland. This will be a weekly feature hereafter and some interesting advertising "stunts" will appear.

Mrs. R. E. Sliger was at Lonaconing Tuesday visiting her mother and brother, the latter having suffered the loss of an eye on Monday, the point of a screw driver with which he was working having been driven into it.

Rev. E. Manges, pastor of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church, left Oakland this morning for Westmoreland county, Pa., where on Sunday he will officiate at the installation services of Rev. W. H. H. Flick as pastor of the church near Hamlin.

The comments have been many and favorable upon the improved appearand general neatness of the railroad station and surroundings since the new order, issued several weeks ago directagent all along the line to give more attention to sanitation, has been effective.

Judges A. Hunter Boyd and R. R. Henderson and A. Hunter Boyd, Jr., left yesterday morning in Judge Henderson's automobile for Hot Springs, Va., where they will attend the joint meeting of the Bar Associations of Maryland and Virginia this week.—Cumberland News.

C. H. Jennings, president of the P. & M. Street Railway Company, accompanied by Mrs. Jennings and son, Mrs. Hall and son and Cortez M. Jennings, all of Towanda, Pa., passed through this city one day last week for Jennings, Md., where Mr. Jennings has extensive lumber and other interests.—Meversdale Republican.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

Prof. Frank E. Rathbun, principal o the Piedmont High School, who is spending his vacation in Mountain Lake Park with his mother and other relatives, left Oakland last Sunday afternoon for Hinton, West Va., where he is engaged this week conducting a teachers' institute. He will return home next Saturday or Sunday.

WHEN YOU'VE HARVESTED YOUR COIN PUT IT IN THE BANK

Just a few bushels of wheat planted in the ground become MANY BUSHELS of grain; so will the money you put in our Bank from time to time become a BIG SUM. The interest we will pay you will help it grow.

Make OUR Bank YOUR Bank.

We pay liberal interest consistent with safety 3 per cent.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
OAKLAND, MD.

MRS. E. A. BROWNING SUES

Wife of Garrett County School Superintendent Wants Divorce.

A limited divorce from Edward A. Browning, superintendent of schools for Garrett county, Maryland, with the custody of their 2-year-old daughter was applied for in the Circuit Court Tuesday by Bruce Lacey Browning through James Fluegel, attorney. They were married July 15, 1905.

Mrs. Browning alleges that her husband's ill treatment compelled her to leave him and that he has contributed nothing to her support since June 12, 1908. She also alleges that besides his salary of $1,500 a year as school superintendent her husband owns a farm worth $5,000 and a house worth $3,000.—Baltimore Sun.

LOST—On the road between Abel DeWitt's and Henry Casteel's on Saturday, June 25th, a horse contract book. Finder please leave at First National Bank and receive reward. D. J. Swartzentruber.

John Bender, Sr., of Grantsville, is staying with his son, C. A. Bender, and family, of Meyers avenue, for the present. Mr. Bender is in his seventy-eighth year, and has been well known to the people of Garrett county, Md., and Somerset county, Pa., for the last fifty years as the manufacturer of "Bender's Tonic Elixir Vitae." Mr. Bender is the father of a large family of stalwart and progressive sons, whose fine physique and good looks are undoubtedly an inheritance from their father, for the old gentleman, despite his nearly four score years, is still a fine figure of a man.—Meyersdale Republican.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

The Bolden, Brown & Weimer Co., Oakland's new firm of merchants who will occupy the Bolden building on Second street, which has been altered and a large addition built thereto to accommodate the needs of the new firm, expect to open for business within the next week or ten days. The firm is composed of Mr. D. E. Bolden, Mr. Austin Brown and Mr. E. A. Weimer. The latter will move his stock of shoes and gentlemen's furnishings from his present location in the First National Bank building to the new location. A general line of merchandise, groceries, grain, feed, etc., as well as a large line of furniture and house furnishing goods generally will also be carried. Experienced business men compose the firm and they have the best wishes of hosts of friends for success.

McHENRY.

Misses May and Ruth DeLawder, Master Lurman DeLawder, Miss Agnes Merchant and Miss Sadie Glolfelty, all of Washington, D. C., are visiting at this place.

Quite a large crowd attended Quarterly Meeting at Arden Chapel Sunday.

Mr. Anthony Niner spent several days at Mr. Jonas Glotfelty's this week.

Mr. Grant Glotfelty has been visiting at Mr. Mahlon Glotfelty's for several days.

Mr. Jonas Glotfelty, Jr., spent several days at the home of his grandfather.

Miss Elinor Hinebaugh was the guest of Mrs. Howard Brenneman for a few days recently.

Miss Annie Brenneman has been spending the past week at the home of Mr. Jonas Glotfelty.

Mr. George Glotfelty and family spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Nelson Brenneman.

Miss Georgia Lowdermilk, of Uniontown, has been visiting at McHenry but has now gone to Mt. Lake Park.

Miss Grace Fox and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McLean spent Sunday at Mr. Mahlon Glotfelty's.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Colored Minstrel.

The colored people of Oakland and Mt. Lake Park will give a minstrel show in the Oakland opera house on next Thursday evening, July 28th, for the benefit of the Oakland A. M. E. church. The program will consist of music, character sketches and dialogues and the entertainment will be very enjoyable to everyone. During the entertainment refreshments will be served. Admission, adults, 25 cents; children, 10 cents.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

Examiners' Notice

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the proposed new county road is to be located, said road to begin at a point on the Gorman road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at a lane between the lands of J.B. Shockey and W.G.Riley and running thence through the lands of W.G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis and intersect the Deer Park and Schell road near the bridge over Laurel Run, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 27th day of August, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said location of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

E. W. KELSO,
J. THOMAS MOON, Examiners
JAMES E. LISH

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

Maryland's School of Technology

Fifty-fourth year begins Sept. 15.

Entrance examinations 13, 14.

Eight courses of Instruction leading to professional degree of B. S. Agricultural, Horticural, General, Mechanical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Biological and Chemical.

The College has a close association with the Department of Agriculture in Washington. College students are permitted to visit the Experiment Farms at Arlington and Beltsville and thus secure an additional equipment for their professional career.

The demand of the age is for men for life's activities. Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements. Bath room, steam heat, electric lights. Location unsurpassed for health.

Tuition, books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in the annual charge of $60.00 per quarter, payable in advance.

Sanitorium for issolation of contagious disease, resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to the Two Years Courses in Agriculture and Horticulture. Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student.

Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SYLVESTER, President.

TRUSTEES' SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

In Garrett County, Maryland

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Garrett County, passed on the 18th day of July, 1910, in a cause wherein Annie Weir et al. are plaintiffs and James McMillan et al. are defendants, the same being No. 1651 Equity in said court, the undersigned Trustees will on

Saturday, August 6th, 1910,

at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Md., offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, and described as follows, to wit: Being a part of Military Lot No. 4008, containing

3 Acres, More or Less,

and particularly described in a deed from Franklin P. Green and wife to Margaret S. McMillan, dated 31st day of March, 1894, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 24, folio 529 etc., one of the land records of Garrett county, Md.

Said land is improved by a two story dwelling house, stable and outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third cash, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months, or all cash at the option of the purchaser, the credit payments to bear interest from the date of sale, and to be secured by the notes of the purchaser, endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real EState

In Garrett County, Maryland

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Allen Garlitz and wife to Mary L. Sloan, dated the 31st day of March, 1908, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 43, folio 374, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named therein, hereby give notice, that on

Friday, August 5th, 1910,

at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m. in front of The First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Maryland, they will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all that tract or parcel of land situate in Garrett county, Maryland, about two miles west of Swanton, described as follows:

Beginning for the same at a stake and stonepile standing about 1 perch southwest of a black pine tree marked as a pointer and standing also at the beginning of the last line of a tract conveyed by J. R. Anderson to John A. Wagner, and running thence with the 10th line of said conveyed tract reversed, South 63° West, 74½ perches to a stake and stonepile in the 3rd line of a tract conveyed by C. M. Miller and wife to John E Stedding, and with the 3rd and 2nd lines thereof reversed, with an allowance of 3¼ for magnetic variation, North 29° East, 122 perches to a double pine tree, West, 65½ perches to a stake in a corner of field, North, 72 perches to the end of the last line of Military Lot No. 1861, and with said line reversed, East, 80½ perches to a stake and stonepile, South 25° East, 84 perches to a stake and stonepile at the beginning of the 3rd line of a tract of land conveyed by J. R. Anderson to Mrs. Lucy McRobie, and with said 3rd line South 41° East 60 perches to a stake and stonepile, South 5° West, 94 perches in the last line of said conveyed tract to John A. Wagner, and with said line reversed to its beginning, North 25° West, 36 perches to the beginning, containing 105¼ Acres, More or Less.

Terms of sale as prescribed in said mortgage, cash on day of sale.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorneys for said mortgagee named in mortgage.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE.

Offutt & Renninger, Trustees, v. E. M. Robinson.

No. 1679 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett county, Maryland.

Notice is hereby given to the creditors of E. M. Robinson to file their claims in this cause with the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett county, properly authenticated on or before the 29th day of July, 1910, as I shall proceed to state an account on the 30th day of July, 1910, distributing the funds in the hands of the trustees in said cause.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Auditor.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have a variety of kinds and at any price.

TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S

FOR

Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.

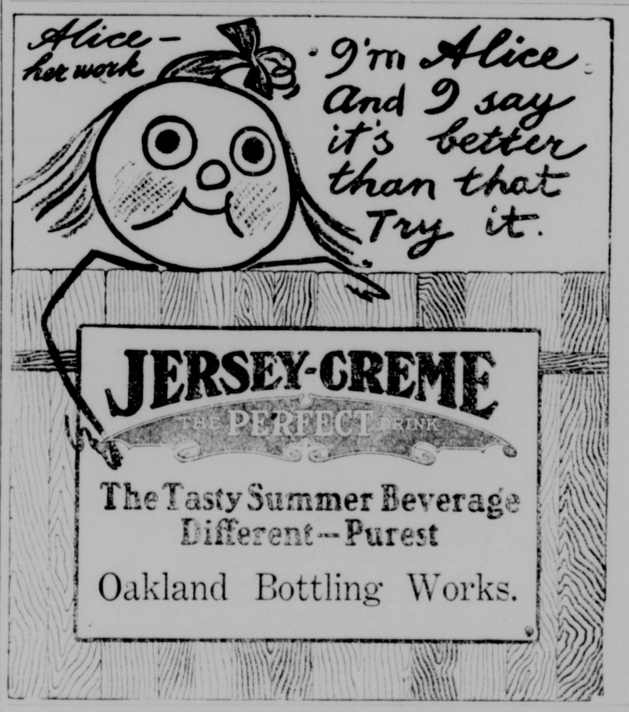
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.

Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.

LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP

FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.

Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.



Tax Department
LAST NOTICE

Oakland, Md., June 29, 1910.

All persons owing taxes for the years 1908 or 1909 will please make immediate payment. Kindly remit at once and save me the very unpleasant duty of advertising property as I must have money to meet claims now due.

Address W E HOLLINGER, Treasurer, Oakland, Md.

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following county road is to be re-located. The road to be re-located is known as the Mansfield Road, in the North end portion between Fahey and Hughes and Fahey and Mansfield, so as to give said road a more gradual and better grade, and examine whether the said re-location should be made will meet on the 13th day of August, A. D. 1910, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said re-location and if so to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

GEORGE GEISSMAN,
JONAS YUTZY,
W. H. SMOUSE,
Examiners.

Subscribe for The Republican.

Notice to Creditors.

Take notice that I have this 7th day of June, 1910, filed in the Clerk's office of the District Court of the United States for the District of Maryland, at Baltimore, an account showing distribution to the creditors who have filed their claims duly proved and allowed, in the estate of Christian J. Yoder, Bankrupt.

The dividend is at the rate of 2 15-100 per centum on claims of general creditors filed and allowed and payment of said dividend will be made by Jacob S. Miller, Trustee, after the 20th day of June, 1910 unless exceptions to said account are filed before that date.

ALBERT A. DOUB, Referee.

Road Petition.

Notice is hereby given that thirty days after the first publication of this notice application will be made to the Board of County Commissioners for the appointment of viewers to view and locate a new county road in Election District No. 10 beginning for the same at a point on the Gorman Road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at the lane between the farms of J. B. Shockey and W. G. Riley and running thence through the lands of said W. G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis, and to intersect the Deer Park and Schell Road near the bridge over Laurel Run, a distance of about one mile.

B. W. HARVEY,
C. E. MARTIN,
J. O. HARVEY and others,
Petitioners.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Pubr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

If you have any grounds for complaint, dissolve them.

All signs point to a sky full of flying machines before long.

A Philadelphia man stole the roof from a church, and Pittsburg is jealous.

Some day this part of the country will get mad and clean up with Medicine Hat.

No man in an automobile should regard himself as a licensed killer of his kind.

When churches select press agents they should seek them outside of theatrical ranks.

England has invented luminous golf balls for those who are afraid to hole out in the dark.

The anti-kiss button is all right in principle, but so many ladies use hooks and eyes.

A Chicago man has the last word! His wife dislocated her jaw while bawling him out.

Nicaragua's revolution continues pegging away in a manner to keep every one feeling natural.

Paper money is to be made smaller. But cheer up. It will probably continue to look bigger and bigger.

"Beware of pickpockets and hatpins," warns the London police, thus putting both parties on their guard.

Liliuokalani is given to understand that since she has no crown she does not need any crown lands to support it.

Singing is proposed in Paris as an aid in uplifting the morals of young people. But how about the old people next door?

Cook books issued by the government have proved so interesting that a bureau of household recipes might be suggested.

The Michigan is our fastest battleship, but the medals for the shot-put and marathon records have not yet been awarded.

Generally speaking, the main difference between the husband's poor kin and the wife's is that his doesn't cost her anything.

A Nebraska woman's hat, decorated with fruit, was eaten by a horse. But it was of practical use, at least, while others like it—

"No photographer who is an artist will flatter a patron," says a London weekly. No photographer who is an "artist" will make a living, either, eh?

Indianapolis doctors made a man a new nose from a chunk of his leg. He limps now, and he can't smell, but otherwise the operation was a success.

New York's subway has improved on its old straps by putting in cast steel hangers, with porcelain handles. But the public is expected to do its hanging on in the same old style.

"Training for housekeeping is woefully missing from our school system," says an Ohio manufacturer. Is this another covert attack on the biscuits of the woman's college graduate?

The German emperor keeps up fifty residences, some of which he has never seen. He probably wishes to have things prepared in case he is ever caught far from home late at night.

Meanwhile, it may comfort those persons who think they have had a narrow escape to reflect that it will be seventy-five years before Halley's comet visits this part of the universe again.

Scientific measurements establish that Yale students weigh more and are thicker in the neck and chest than in 1864. How much larger they are in their minds is not statistically imparted.

The number of cigarettes which are smoked in this country is rapidly increasing. Perhaps this is due to the precautions that are being taken to stop the sale of poisons to irresponsible people.

A Chicago minister says woman's greatest fault is that of telling little white ones. He should understand that many married women have to take drastic measures to preserve the family reputation.

President Twitchell of the Maine State Pomological society reports, after an investigation, that from 100,000 to 150,000 apple trees have been set out in Maine this year. Perhaps what used to be the Pine Tree state may become the Apple Tree state in time.

Michigan bank robber says his sweetheart drove him to crime. Men haven't changed since Adam's time. Not even found any new excuses.

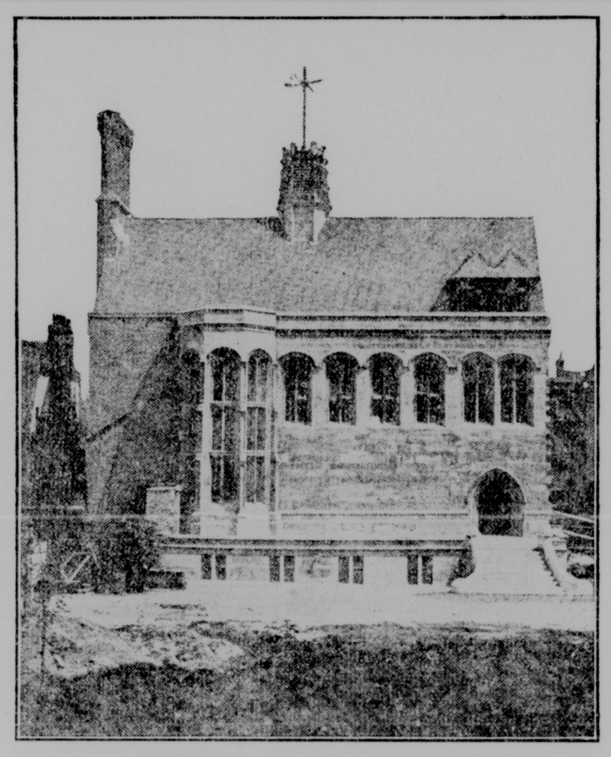
People who undertake to cure all ailments by going without food are almost invariably benefited to the extent of acquiring a first rate appetite.

After Louisiana has prohibited mother's bridge whist it might turn its massive intellect to some of the questionable sports indulged in by father.

The World's Wonders

STRANGE THINGS FOUND IN VARIOUS PORTIONS OF THE EARTH

Crosby Hall Transplanted



In spite of efforts to preserve it on its original site in Bishopsgate, London, the famous Crosby hall was removed from the city some three years ago. It has just now been re-erected, as far as possible exactly as it was before, in More's garden at Chelsea, on the site of Sir Thomas More's country house, where he entertained Henry VIII. The position is peculiarly appropriate, since Sir Thomas More also at one time resided in Crosby place, Bishopsgate street. Crosby hall will now form part of the new University hall residence. The stone and wood in the building was marked, numbered and replaced in the same positions. Crosby hall was built by Sir John Crosby, grocer and wool merchant, in 1470, and at that time was the highest house in London.

TRAPPED BY HIS WHISKERS

An odd little adventure, more humorous than tragic, happened in a hotel at Seattle the other day, the victim being a guest from Salt Lake City named Morris Steigers, who rejoiced in the possession of a twenty-eight inch growth of flowing whiskers.

As Katie Merrill, who handles the linen on the top floor of the hotel was tripping down a hallway she saw apparently hanging from a door knob what looked like a woman's switch. It was gray and fully twenty inches long.

"Mercy!" quoth Katie. "What a peculiar place for a switch!"

Then Katie looked closer and discovered that the bunch was held fast in the door jamb. With a pass key she opened the door, when Steigers toppled backward very much exhausted, but once more a free man.

Steigers, while writing a letter, had felt a draught and gone to the door to close it. A guest of wind wafted his whiskers outward and they were caught when the door slammed. It was a catch lock and he was held a prisoner for over an hour because he could not unlock the door, and he did not wish to lose his much-treasured patriarchal beard.

REMARKABLE SURGICAL FEAT

A remarkable operation was performed recently at King's College hospital, London, a shawl pin being successfully removed from a patient's lungs. The patient, a young married woman, was holding a shawl-pin, 1½ inches long, in her mouth, when something made her laugh, and the pin vanished down her throat. An examination by X-rays showed that the pin lay just below the right breast.

The patient was placed under chloroform, and cocaine was applied to the internal parts of the throat. Bruning's telescopic tube was then introduced, when the pin was found in the main bronchus. The pin was immediately seized with a pair of forceps and withdrawn through the mouth. The patient returned home two days later, and has remained perfectly well since the operation.

HUNT FOR MAMMOTH BONES

A search for mammoth bones is exciting the folk of the Yorkshire seaside town of Filey. A big tooth, with the ivory in perfect preservation, was found sticking out of the cliffs there the other day and identified as having once adorned the jaw of one of these prehistoric monsters. The tooth weighs nearly thirteen pounds, is a foot long and nearly four inches thick. It indicates the presence near by of mammoth remains bigger than any hitherto found, although quite a number of these antediluvian relics have been discovered in the neighborhood from time to time. The finder, a local surveyor, values the tooth at more than $25, and it will probably be placed in the British Museum.

PAGODA OF AXLE-TREES.

Among the strange sights to be seen by travelers in some parts of Mongolia, notably in Hata, are what have the appearance of wooden pagodas or small Eiffel towers, in the streets. They are in reality the stock in trade of the local cartwrights, who pile their axle-trees up pyramid-like on the ground to dry and become seasoned.

KILLED HAWK WITH A STONE

Robert Bowning, who lives in Orwell township, Bradford county, Pennsylvania, threw a stone with such unerring aim that he struck and instantly killed a hawk perched on a limb of a tree thirty feet from the ground. The hawk measured three feet and eight and one-half inches from tip of the wing to tip of the wing.

FIT CURES A DEAF MUTE

John Driscoll, an ex-sailor living in St. Helens, Eng., who had been bereft of speech and hearing for eight years, has been suddenly restored to both these faculties in a remarkable manner. "A queer feeling came over me Saturday night," he told a doctor after the occurrence. "I stood up but became so dizzy that I fell, and remembered nothing for some time.

"I have been told since that I was so violent that it took five men to hold me down. They tell me that I struggled and shouted, and they became very much alarmed. After that I calmed down again.

"I still felt queer, but I could hear them telling me that I could speak. It all seemed like a dream to me. I went hot and cold in turns, and I felt as weak as a child. But O, the joy and wonder of myself and friends after the strange fit had passed, when I found that my long lost faculties had been so miraculously restored."

While at Bermuda in 1901 Driscoll had an attack of yellow fever, and when he recovered twelve months afterwards he found that he could neither speak nor hear.

PET DOG USES TOBACCO

People who assert that tobacco will kill a dog, horse or pig will be surprised to learn that the pet Boston terrier owned by F. H. Smith of Norway, Me., chews tobacco and enjoys it together with an abundance of good health. The dog is a finely bred animal, and does a number of tricks. He has used tobacco several years. One day when Mr. Smith threw away a "quid" he was greatly surprised to see his pet pick it up and swallow it. Fearing that the dog would suffer he made an effort to remove the tobacco from its stomach, but without avail. The dog showed no ill effects from use of the "weed" and watched Mr. Smith when he placed another "chew" in his mouth. When this was thrown away the dog seized it as before and then began a strange habit that has lasted several years. Inseparable companions, the dog and his master enjoy many hours together and the dog barks happily when his accustomed allowance of tobacco is thrown to him. The dog's special pleasure is when his master will cut a bit of un-chewed tobacco from the plug for his benefit.

COW SAVES FARMER'S LIFE

A cow, which L. G. Stahl, a farmer living near Dalton, was taking to an abattoir in Masillon, O., saved its owner' slife and the life of a valuable horse. Stahl, riding in a buggy, was leading the cow down a steep hill, at the foot of which is the Baltimore & Ohio railroad crossing. The horse, unable to hold back the buggy, started to run. Just then a passenger train rapidly approaching the crossing, shot into view. Stahl was tangled up in the lines and the rope with which he was leading the cow, and couldn't jump.

Then 25 feet from the tracks the cow reared and stuck its front legs between the spokes of a rear wheel of the buggy. The wheel slid and served as a brake. The horse was able to stop a few feet from the tracks just as the train swept past. Stahl will keep the cow.

ONE FISH WORTH OVER $140

The shad season at Chester, Pa., has closed and the river fishermen are turning their attention to the catching of sturgeon. The season has been one of the best in recent years, owing to high prices. Recently when Frank Pierce landed a 300 pound sturgeon the fish contained eighty-seven pounds of roe, which is worth $1.50 a pound, and the meat is valued at 6 cents a pound.

Roman Ferry Boat Found

While workmen were making excavations the other day for a new county hall at Lambeth, London, they dug up the remains of a Roman ferry boat, of oak, black with age and almost rotted away. The boat has a flat bottom, is 16 feet wide and has a depth of 1 foot 9 inches.

AMUSEMENT ROAD TO HELL

By Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell
Pastor St. James M. E. Church Chicago

I shall talk about some roads leading out of Chicago which are not on the map. These roads take different routes, but all lead to the same awful destination.

There are many traveling these roads who are not fully aware of their destination. We should all listen to the warning of Solomon, who said, "Ponder the path of thy feet." The best travelers are open to mistakes. It is easy to get off the right road. It is both humiliating and fatal to get on the wrong road, especially when the train never stops and there is no return ticket.

The tragedy of life is that young men and women who need most wisdom have the least. I am standing here tonight as a guard at the station gate, warning people against taking the amusement road which leads from Chicago to hell.

Many young people, and older, are making the mistake referred to here by Solomon—the mistake in supposing that there is nothing better in life than amusing one's self. All thoughtful folk value recreation. They know that there must be hours of rest and change of thought and employment. Body and mind need rest. Science is teaching us that even inanimate matter gets tired and needs a rest. Car wheels and razors alike need rest. There is a strange restorative power in steel to recoup itself after its molecules have begun to crystallize and grow brittle.

God has implanted in each of us an instinctive love for those things which will bring rest to mind and body. We need to unbend. We need to relax muscle and rest brain. Hence the play-element is our safety valve. Wit and humor give rest and relaxation to the mind. People who never laugh have poor stomachs and never live out half their days. God intends his children to come to their best. He wants us to be fitted for work, and we can only be best fitted for work when we have had opportunity for the needed play.

Amusement is as much a part of God's program for our life as is work. The old notion that a sorrowful life is a sign of piety and that sanctity is measured by the degree of one's misery, has long since been exploded. There is some sarcasm but more truth in the old notion that the Puritans opposed bullbaiting not so much on the ground that it gave the bulls pain as that it gave the people pleasure.

There are a thousand ways in which God has planned for the happiness of his children. It can be relied upon that the amusements God would have us freely employ are such as are devoid of these four things: First, they must not be unduly extravagant; second, they must not be damaging to health; third, they must not be detrimental to the mind, and fourth, they must not be contrary to good morals. Those four principles are fundamental, and we must judge all pleasures by them.

There are many going along the amusement road to hell for fear, if they are Christians, they will not have a good time. Worldly-minded, evil-minded people do have a good time, according to their standard of what a good time is. Many a youth needs to have his ideal of pleasure changed; and until he does he will be unable to be happy according to rational ideals.

A drunkard may have a good time according to his present ideal; but when he comes to self-mastery he will no longer seek pleasure in such bestial manner. According to their tastes, wicked people have jolly times. But so soon as their lives are transformed by divine grace, they come to loathe the sty of the swine, because they are now qualified for the refined joys of the palace.

They who find their pleasures in the gratification of the fleshly appetites cannot understand how one can find joy in the realm of the mental and spiritual.

A Christian can enjoy even far more the legitimate pleasures of the physical senses, for they have not been dulled or diseased by satiety. His mind can grasp the wonders and beauties of the world with keener vision, because his powers are not dulled by dissipation. The Christian finds no bar across any pathway of pleasure which does not lead to sorrow and defeat. He finds every pathway open which leads to the pleasures which bring no sting.

The devil lies when he tells a youth he must be bad to be happy. Any man who will open his eyes can see that it is the transgressor of God's laws who has the hard time. It is the devil's children, not God's, who have a hell of a time on earth.

Many are going down to hell on the amusement road because as they say, they do not want any check or restraint upon them. I frequently am told by men and women that they would join the church if there were no restraint upon them; if they could do as they please.

Some churches have tried it. There are so-called liberal churches which have required almost nothing in the way of subscribing to a creed, and who have required less in the way of moral restraints on personal conduct. I state history when I say that such churches have not grown for 49 years.

A PACKAGE MAILED FREE ON REQUEST OF

MUNYON'S PAW-PAW PILLS

The best Stomach and Liver Pills known and a positive and speedy cure for Constipation, Indigestion, Jaundice, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Headache, and all ailments arising from a disordered stomach or sluggish liver. They contain in concentrated form all the virtues and values of Munyon's Paw-Paw Tonic and are made from the juice of the Paw-Paw fruit. I unhesitatingly recommend these pills as being the best laxative and cathartic ever compounded. Send us a postal or letter requesting a free package of Munyon's Celebrated Paw-Paw Laxative Pills, and we will mail same free of charge. MUNYON'S HOMOEOPATHIC HOME REMEDY CO., 53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.

Trying to Satisfy Him.

Squeamish Guest (as waiter places water before him)—Waiter, are you sure this is boiled distilled water?

Waiter—I am positive, sir.

Squeamish Guest (putting it to his lips)—But it seems to taste pretty hard for distilled water.

Waiter—That's because it's hard-boiled distilled water, sir.

A BAD THING TO NEGLECT.

Don't neglect the kidneys when you notice lack of control over the secretions. Passages become too frequent or scanty; urine is discolored and sediment appears. No medicine for such troubles like Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly remove kidney disorders.

Mrs. A. E. Fulton, 311 Skidmore St., Portland, Ore., says: My limbs swelled terribly and I was bloated over the stomach and had puffy spots beneath the eyes. My kidneys were very unhealthy and the secretions much disordered. The dropsical swellings began to abate after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and soon I was cured."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Unflattering Truth.

A Chicago physician gleefully tells a child story at his own expense. The five children of some faithful patients had measles, and during their rather long stay in the improvised home hospital they never failed to greet his daily visit with pleased acclamation. The good doctor felt duly flattered, but rashly pressed the children, in the days of convalescense, for the reason of this sudden affection. At last the youngest and most indiscreet let slip the better truth.

"We felt so sick that we wanted awfully to do something naughty, but we were afraid to be bad for fear you and the nurse would give us more horrid medicine. So we were awfully glad to see you, always, 'cause you made us stick out our tongues. We stuck 'em out awful far!"

The Miser of Sag Harbor.

"Economy," said Daniel W. Field, the millionaire shoe manufacturer of Boston, who at the age of forty-five has entered Harvard, "economy is essential to wealth, but by economy I don't mean niggardliness.

"Too many men fail to attain to wealth because they practise a cheeseparing and mean economy that gets everybody down on them.

"They practise, in fact, an economy like that of old William Brewster of Sag Harbor. William, you know, would never buy oysters because he couldn't eat shells and all."

Caring for the Baby.

Old Lady—What a nice boy, to watch your little brother so carefully!

Nice Boy—Yes, 'um. He just swallowed a dime and I'm afraid of kidnapers.

Hereditary Power.

Hoax—Poor old Henpeck has to mind the baby.

Joax—Yes, it's wonderful how that baby takes after its mother.

Delightful Desserts

and many other pleasing dishes can be made with

Post Toasties

A crisp, wholesome food—always ready to serve.

With fruits or berries it is delicious.

"The Memory Lingers"

A little book—"Good Things Made with Toasties"—in packages, tells how.

Sold by Grocers—pkgs. 10c and 15c.

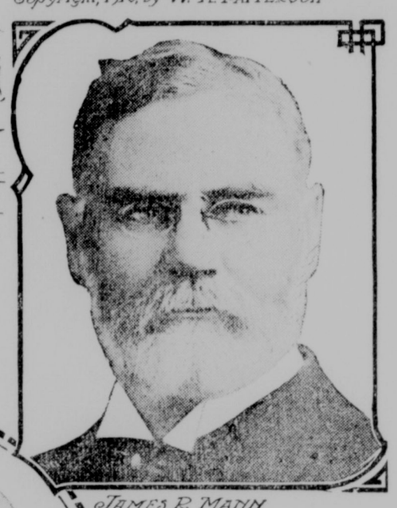
POSTUM CEREAL CO., LTD.
Battle Creek, Mich.

When LAWMAKERS Become PEEVISH

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Copyright, 1910, by W. A. PATTERSON

SPEAKER JOSEPH G. CANNON



JAMES R. MANN

SERENO E. PAYNE

CHAMP CLARK

BOURKE COCKRAN

IT IS the custom to speak of the United States senate as the most dignified legislative body in the world, while on occasions the house of representatives has been described as a "bear garden." The senate is ordinarily a dignified deliberative body, but nevertheless it is a mistake to look upon the house of representatives in any way, except on the rarest occasions, as an assembly given to disorderly procedure. There have been within the last few months many scenes of intense excitement in the house, times when personal, political and factional temper has run high and when there was the "high spirited excuse" for scenes bordering on the tumultuous. In the main, however, through all the temper-trying times of the attempt to shear Speaker Cannon of his power, and during the intense moments of the debate on the railroad bill, the members succeeded in holding themselves in check, and in giving an exhibition of self-restraint that was admirable. On only a few occasions within the space of seven years that one correspondent has watched proceedings in the house, have there been personal encounters on the floor between members. In only one instance really could these affairs be spoken of as personal encounters, for in only one case were blows exchanged.

A former minority leader of the house and one of the leading members of his party, exchanged blows, but the matter was a personal one, and not a political one, and it might have happened outside of the house as well as inside. It was not brought about by the heat of debate, but by long continued friction which engendered heat enough to cause an explosion while the house was in session. One of the parties to this physical encounter is now dead, and the other, next March, will take his seat in the senate of the United States. Their names probably will suggest themselves at once.

There are many hot-headed members of the lower house of congress, and some of these "temperamental ones" are leaders in their respective parties. As leaders, however, these men long ago learned that if they were to maintain leadership they must keep a check on their tongues and a check on their birthright willingness to enter on a scrimmage.

The members of the house realize that men laboring under excitement, will say things that they will be sorry for in a minute, and so frequently, words that positively are insulting, are overlooked by the offended member for a few minutes in order to give the offender a chance to get his faculties back and apologize. If he does not apologize, though he generally does, the one who feels himself aggrieved, has his own way of securing retraction, either by appeal to the house, or direct appeal, sometimes made in pretty sharp language, to the member who has offended.

One of the most exciting times in the house of representatives in recent years was a verbal encounter between Representative Bourke Cockran, Democrat, of New York city, and Representative John Dalzell, Republican, of Pittsburg. Bourke Cockran is known as one of the greatest orators of the United States, and John Dalzell is known as one of the ablest debaters on the Republican side of the house of representatives, a small man physically, but absolutely fearless. Dalzell is one of the chief advocates of protection.

The New York member attacked the consistency of the Pittsburg member in a speech, and said some things about the inconsistency of the Republican party. To Dalzell, this seemed to give the opportunity that he wanted. He stood on the floor of the house and accused Cockran not only of inconsistency, but practically of using his gift of oratory, first to uphold one side of a question, and then to uphold another, and the Pittsburg man did not try to conceal the reasons which he thought were responsible for the change of opinion and the change of attitude on the part of the man whom he was criticizing.

In that speech against Cockran, Dalzell was waspish. There were men on the floor who expected fully to see Cockran attack him, not verbally, but physically, but the New Yorker sat through the speech, and when it was ended arose in his own place. The New Yorker contented himself with saying that if he were guilty of the charges which the Republican member had made against him, he was not fit to stay in the house of representatives, and he demanded that congress as a matter of personal privilege to him, should make an investigation of his conduct, make a report thereon, and if he were found guilty, the fact should be published to the country.

The house refused to take any action on the New Yorker's demand for an investigation, and the whole matter went by default with the speeches of both men standing in the Congressional Record as evidence of a warm day in congress.

In a debate on the tariff last year, the dry subject of lumber came near causing a physical encounter between Representative Joseph W. Fordney of Michigan, and Representative Adam M. Byrd of Mississippi. The Mississippian had said that the Michigan member was interested personally in lumber matters and intimated that he was particularly interested in a section of a lumber trust. The Michigan man said something in retort which was a little stronger than a mere statement that the Mississippian did not know what he was talking about. At any rate, Representative Bryd stripped off his coat and started down the aisle toward the Republican side, and toward Mr. Fordney, who stood perfectly still, awaiting the attack. Not many years ago Fordney had worked in the capacity of what is known as a "lumber jack," and he is as hard as any nail that was ever driven into a board. Before the Mississippian could reach the scene of intended action, however, he was seized by several members, and his coat was slipped on to his back once more. Later, the two representatives made up their differences.

In seven years these are the only instances which can be recalled at this time of troubles between members that did, or seemed likely to culminate in serious encounters. The truth is that the house is seldom a "bear garden," and the best test of the tempers of the members was made during the time which preceded the change in the rules of the house which was secured by a coalition of so-called Insurgent Republicans and the Democrats. Led by Representative Norris of Nebraska, the Insurgents and Democrats together succeeded in taking away from the speaker his membership in that committee. It was a great change from former conditions, and it was a direct attack on the power of the speaker, an attack that had in it seemingly much that was personal, although most of the men who had a hand in it, denied that there was any personal feeling.

Men sat white in their seats or stood and spoke with shaking voices, so tremendous was the excitement, but during it all each man kept a firm hold on his temper, and while it seemed to the spectators that encounters must come, they never came, and the change in the rules was effected, involving as it did, an airing of factional differences with just as little outward show of disturbance as would attend the enactment of legislation of small degree of interest.

Every man has mannerisms, but of course in the house of representatives pronounced mannerisms of the leading members are the only ones which become impressed upon the public. Sereno E. Payne, the Republican leader, is the author of the last tariff bill as it passed the house of representatives. Outwardly, Mr. Payne suggests a condition of mind and temper indicated by the sound of his first name, but the Republican leader is not serene at all times, although he, perhaps better than any other prominent man in the house, keeps control of his emotions.

Mr. Payne is fat and he is jolly under ordinary circumstances. Occasionally when his good Republican soul is pierced by an arrow of sarcasm, invective or reproach fired from the Democratic side, Sereno loses his serenity, and he grows quite hot and emits what some members have dubbed bolts of lightning. On occasions of less heat the Republican leader emits sparks only, but they are of the kind that burn. There are possibilities of indignation and anger in Representative Payne that no one would suspect who looks down from the gallery upon his ordinarily calm exterior.

Champ Clark of Missouri, the leader of the Democrats, loves his joke and it takes an occasion that is worth while before he rouses himself to anger. "When Champ Clark does get mad he gets mad," is the expressive way in which a Democratic colleague of the minority leader put the matter recently. There was an exhibition of how mad Champ Clark can get at the time when he was trying to hold his Democratic colleagues in a solid line in favor of a change in the rules governing house procedure. This was at the time when some of the Insurgents, in connection with the Democrats were trying to secure what is now known as Calendar Wednesday. It was at a time long prior to the fight which ended in the removal of the speaker from the committee on rules.

The Democratic leader found that he could not control all his party colleagues, and he had a suspicion that some of them knew that they were to get committee preferment at the hands of the speaker, provided they deserted the Democratic leader in the time of need. One New York Democratic member, with some others from different parts of the country, deserted their chieftain in the hour of trouble, and later the New Yorker was given a fine committee berth by the speaker.

No one will ever forget the castigation which Champ Clark gave this colleague, whom he looked upon as a deserter from the cause of his fellows. It was a scoring the like unto which few men have ever received. The New Yorker took it in apparent humbleness of spirit, and it may be that he did not have any excuse to offer. Time is a great healer, however, and now the Democratic leader and the man whom he excoriated are good friends, and seem to be working in harmony for the party good in the house of representatives.

The hardest worked man in the house of representatives, not even barring the speaker, is Representative James R. Mann, Republican, of Chicago. Mann is known as the great objector, and also as the watch dog. It is his duty to be on the floor of the house constantly, and to watch legislation, line by line, and to see to it that nothing is "slipped over," which the Republican majority does not think proper. Mr. Mann keeps an eye on amendments to the appropriation bills, and all kinds of things as they come before the house. It is he who objects to the consideration of many small bills when unanimous consent unquestionably would secure passage for them. This makes him in a sense tremendously unpopular with members who want to get something through, and can only get action under unanimous consent.

Day of the Hall Boy

In this day of complaint against incompetent servants of all sorts it is rather remarkable to study the general utility of the apartment-house hallboy. The resourceful New York woman finds many uses for the liveried lad and where he has been tested and found thoroughly reliable he is often trusted with responsible duties.

At one of the upper West side apartment hotels two extremely bright young colored men have been employed for four years and the commissions with which they are trusted are worth studying. One of them was seen at a neighboring bank the other morning depositing money for three guests at the hotel. Several other colored boys in uniform were performing a similar service. The receiving teller at the bank explained that many of his women depositors intrusted this work, especially on stormy days, to hall boys and elevator boys and that there has not been a single case of dishonesty or misunderstanding in the matter.

In some houses elevator and hall boys are not permitted to run errands, the New York World says. In others, where two or three lads are on duty, rules are relaxed and superintendents are glad to let the boys serve the tenants. Naturally the boys like to do the errands, because there is corresponding increase in their incomes.

Elevator and hall boys are also intrusted with all sorts of repairs, sponging, pressing, dyeing, etc. You will see them hurrying toward the uptown shops, their arms laden with all sorts of wearing apparel, from silk hats that need ironing to shoes that need half-soling. For such work the boy generally gets two bits of money, one from the tenant for performing the errand and another from the tradesman to whom he throws the work.

A busy time for many of the boys is Sunday afternoons and evenings, after the delicatessen shops open. Then housewives upon whom unexpected company has descended whistle for the hall boy, who makes an emergency run to the nearest purveyor of ready-cooked food.

On Sunday mornings you will find quite a line of colored boys in uniform lined up at the branch postoffices in the residence districts. These represent various apartment houses and apartment hotels whose tenants want their mail on Sunday mornings and who club together to give the colored attendants a small fee for making the trip to the branch postoffice during the hour at which mail is distributed every Sunday.

A very common source of revenue for hall boys is the care of baby buggies. Very few apartments offer room for such vehicles and it is not always safe to leave them in the basement. A bright hall boy will take care of the carriage, keeping it cleaned and repaired, locking it with a chain or padlock to some clean, safe place in the basement and having it ready for use at a signal from the mother or nurse.

Landlords may object to dogs, but hall boys—never. A valuable dog is pretty sure to mean a weekly stipend to an obliging colored attendant. Here again the iron fence or bar becomes useful as an anchorage for the pet in his care and many an uptown hall boy spends his noon hour giving a pedigreed dog its outing.

An upper West side boy whose Rooseveltian teeth are the hallmark of good nature said when interviewed on the subject:

"Yessir—we all can do most anything. Missus Powers, she has me open all her cans, 'cause her hands is shaky, an' I hooks her dresses when Mr. Powers he ain't home. I kin market fur her ef she's feelin' poorly, an' I allus meets her mother at the subway station an' takes her back again. I take keer of her cat when she's away and I feed Missus Brown's bird when she goes. Most all the ladies they give me their keys if they're 'spectin' some one to come while they're out, an' I ain't never made no mistake."

Relieves the PAIN of a BURN Instantly and takes out all inflammation in one day. The most serious Burns and Scalds instantly relieved and quickly healed by

Dr. Porter's Antiseptic Healing Oil

A soothing antiseptic discovered by an Old Railroad Surgeon. All Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. 25c, 50c & $1.

Paris Medicine Co. Bang, N. C.

My wife was severely burned from a red hot cook stove. We applied DR. PORTER'S ANTISEPTIC HEALING OIL, and in ten minutes her buras were relieved. We used it as directed and in a few days the burns were entirely healed. We can strongly recommend it to heal the worst burns and sores.

(Signed) J. W. Church, Notary Public.

Made by

E. W. Grove

Maker of

Laxative Bromo Quinine

Notes and Comments.

Church—Does your neighbor play that cornet without notes?

Gotham—Yes; but not without comments.—Yonkers Statesman.

An Exception.

Caller—Is Mrs. Brown at home?

Artless Parlor Maid (smiling confidentially)—No, ma'am—she really is out this afternoon.

Annie Telford, "Queen's Nurse," of Ballyantral, Ayrshire, England, Writes as Follows:—

I have great pleasure in testifying what a valuable remedy in various Skin Troubles I have found Resinol Ointment to be. I have used it in extremely bad cases of Eczema and in poisoned wounds, and always with most satisfactory results. I have the highest opinion of its curative value.

Looked Like a Pattern.

"My dear," asks the thoughtful husband, "did you notice a large sheet of paper with a lot of diagrams on it about my desk?"

"You mean that big piece with dots and curves and diagonals and things all over it?"

"Yes. It was my map of the path of Halley's comet. I wanted to—"

"My goodness! I thought it was that pattern I asked you to get, and the dressmaker is cutting out my new shirtwaist by it!"—Chicago Evening Post.

Well, Wasn't He Right?

The minister was addressing the Sunday school. "Children, I want to talk to you for a few moments about one of the most wonderful, one of the most important organs in the whole world," he said. "What is that that throbs away, beats away, never stopping, never ceasing, whether you wake or sleep, night or day, week in and week out, month in and month out, year in and year out, without any volition on your part, hidden away in the depths, as it were, unseen by you, throbbing, throbbing rhythmically all your life long?" During this pause for oratorical effect a small voice was heard: "I know. It's the gas meter."

What's the Answer?

We're ready to quit! After sending two perfectly rhymed, carefully scanned, pleasurably sentimental pieces of poetic junk to seventeen magazines and having them returned seventeen times, we turn to the current issue of a new monthy and find a "pome" modeled after Kipling's "Vampire," and in which home is supposed to rhyme with alone, run on page eleven with all the swell curlycues ordinarily surrounding a piece of real art. If poetizing is a gift we are convinced that this poet's must have been. As for us, we are on our way to the woodshed to study the psychology of the ax or any other old thing that hasn't to do with selling poetry to magazines.

Compound Interest

comes to life when the body feels the delicious glow of health, vigor and energy.

That Certain Sense of vigor in the brain and easy poise of the nerves comes when the improper foods are cut out and predigested take their place.

Grape-Nuts

If it has taken you years to run down don't expect one mouthful of this great food to bring you back (for it is not a stimulant but a rebuilder.)

Ten days trial shows such big results that one sticks to it.

"There's a Reason"

Get the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

POSTUM CEREAL CO., LTD., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Will the President of School Board Answer?

To the Editor of The Republican:

The writer feels very grateful to the President of the school board for his frank discussion of the school situation in last week's papers.

If he will answer a few more questions, somewhat in detail, it will further enlighten us.

Were not the Oakland public and high school in session during the past year in the two building in question?

Was not Prof. Palmer principal of that part of the school in the old court house?

What difference does it make whether primary grades or high school grades are assigned to the old court house as far as the principalship is concerned?

Should not all the schools of the town be under one head?

For the purpose of the discipline we agree there should be a man in each building but why employ a high-priced high school man at an additional expense for these qualifications of $300 to $500 to the taxpayers when only grammer school qualifications are required?

As a taxpayer I would ask what is the reason the board for years has employed two high-priced men, with conflicting powers in the Oakland building? The last state reports show that Garrett County paid the manual training instructor $904.50 for his year's work and $900 for the year before. This is almost twice as much as is paid the very best men in the county outside of Oakland, viz: DeWitt, Perdew, Cathcart, Weitsell, Gnegy, Welch and others. And is the report true that the board can employ a competent instructor in manual training for $350 per year while it has been paying $900

If manual training is such an important factor both financially and to the school curriculum why has the state reduced the appropriation from $1,500 to $400 per year?

The Act of 1910 makes it obligatory that the high school principal be principal of the elementary grades when they are in the same building or on the same premises and is silent as to the matter when otherwise. Isn't it just as clearly within the province of the school board to make the high school principal, principal of both buildings next year as it was last years?

What service will the high school principal render to the public next year if he has no work in the elementary grades? There will be 3 assistants and four grades in the high school next year. If each grade has on an average five studies (which is all the academic work the ordinary student can handle) there will be 20 daily recitations in the high school. It is hardly possible to divide the school day into less than 7 or 8 periods after taking out the time for spelling and writing. Yet these 3 assistants in 8 periods can conduct 24 recitations or 4 more than there will be in the high school. What does the board expects the principal to do? Every time he hears a recitation one of his assistants must remain idle.

And what qualifications are necessary for the high school principal under such conditions? Isn't the statement of the County Superinintendent made a few weeks ago that Prof. Loraditch will fail in the high school, groundless, if the board makes the chief duty of that person to draw the salary?

The writer has been familar with school conditions here for two decades and isn't this the first opportunity that Oakland has ever had for the principal to do supervisory work and is the board going to throw it away?

Was Prof. Palmer an applicant for the principalship of the high school? Why should he apply for a position which is his until he resigns or is removed for good and substantial reasons?

Does Prof. Palmer want the grammar school principalship or has he ever wanted it? Wasn't the secretary of the board fully aware at all times that his wishes were to continue as principal of the high school?

When, where and how did the board get the idea that Prof. Palmer agreed to any other arrangment?

We do not dispute that Prof. Palmer could serve many of his friends at the head of the grammar school but is it best for the educational needs of the town that Prof. Loraditch be placed in the highest position?

No doubt the janitor of a bank serves the personal needs of more of its patrons than a clerk, but is that good and sufficient reason to force a clerk to become the janitor?

It looks as if the result would be to drive Prof. Palmer out of the school entirely and isn't that the ultimate aim of the movement?

It seems to be a question whether the new principal will be able to enroll enough pupils to class the school in group A. We learn that last year Prof. Palmer's enrollment was nine in excess of the legal requirements of that group. Do you think the board is serving the public interests best by electing a man whom they fear will allow the school to drop back and thus reduce the state appropriations from $2,300 per year to $1,400 per year—a direct loss to the county of $900 per year?

Have the taxpayers no rights to be respected?

I appeal to the President of the school board and ask him in all candor does he really think the action of the board will result in increasing the efficiency of the schools—will it be for "the greatest good to the greatest number?"

To be honest, Mr. President, aren't all these words and excuses and fine-spun arguments simply a blind to put "goggles on the eyes of the public" to conceal the real reasons, viz: to pay the political debts of some of the school officials for the positions they now hold?

When the writer signed Prof. Palmer's petition it was with a full knowledge of what it signifies and we are waiting for conviction that any other plan or petition quite meets the needs of the situation.

HIGH SCHOOL PATRON.

Oakland, Md., July 25, 1910.

Still Hoping.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Much regret has been expressed by a very large number of the patrons of the Oakland schools that the School Board, at its meeting last week, took no action looking to a rectification of the error it committed in ignoring the petition of the people that Mr. Palmer be retained at the head of the schools.

I, for one of the number, am loath to believe that the School Board intended, by its inaction, to add insult to injury, and shall be content to wait until its next meeting before passing final judgment in this matter, hoping that something may still be done to relieve the situation and that the wishes of the patrons of the schools may be recognized by the School Board. HOPE.

Oakland, July 26, 1910.

School Finances.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Several taxpayers having expressed a desire to know the status of the state appropriation under the new high school law, I beg to offer the following:

Last year Oakland received $2,500 state aid, account the high school. Next year the most it is possible to get, if the school complies with the requirements of the First Group, is $2,300. To do this means an enrollment of 80, a term of 36 weeks, a salary of $1200 to principal and $500 to each of three assistants, besides two special teachers. If the school fails to enroll 80, or to meet any of the requirements, it will fall back to the Second Group and receive only $1400, state aid.

It will be very unfortunate for the taxpayers if the enrollment should fail to reach 80 as we understand the board has supplied the two additional assistants which means an expense of $1000; also the vice principal's salary must be at least $50 higher than last year and there will be $105 more salary to the commercial teacher if the monthly salary remains the same. Taking it for granted that the salary for manual training remains the same, the board under the most favorable circumstances must expend $1155 more than last year and then receive $200 less state aid than last year. This means the board is worse off by $1355 than last year unless something is saved on the manual training end.

If after all preparations are made and continued for a First Class high school the enrollment should not reach 80 it means a further loss of $900 (less $200 salary to the principal) or a total of $2055.

The session of 1910 certainly gave Garrett a black eye as far as high school appropriations are concerned. It is to be hoped that the efficiency of the school will increase in proportion to the increased expense to the taxpayers.

TEACHER.

Why Not Interested?

To the Editor of The Republican:

One thing in Mr. Deffinbaugh's communication appearing in your paper last Thursday, in which he (Mr. Deffinbaugh) attempted to defend the School Board, caught and held my attention, namely:

That some disinterested people had signed Mr. Palmer's petition to be retained as principal of the Oakland High School.

What Mr. Deffinbaugh means to convey, I am at a loss to understand. All should be interested in the schools, for their success means the future success of every child in Oakland who has already or may hereafter arrive at school age. If Mr. Deffinbaugh means to infer that those who are not parents or patrons of the school are "disinterested," then I agree with him, but would not the same argument prevail against Mr. Deffinbaugh himself in this respect: that he is not the parent of a child of school age, therefore not a patron and consequently "disinterested" as far as the succesr of the school is concerned.

If Mr. Deffinbaugh will specifically name those who are "disinterested" he will confer a lasting favor upon

A PARENT WHO IS INTERESTED.

Oakland, July 27, 1910.

Hon. John W. Daniel.

To the Editor of The Republican:

Not often does it occur that notices are so generally published over the country at large with comments so flattering as have been those announcing the death of the distinguished Senator whose name heads this paper; nor for a long while has a star of such luster disappeared from the Southern sky.

He was a knightly soldier, a polished speaker and a blameless gentleman.

Fresh in memory today are two instances that dropped from the mere chances concerning the early career of this now famous man. While a mighty outpouring of visitors was leaving Washington the day following the ceremonies relating to the monument in that city to Washington, this writer, on one of the crowded trains, met a lady who informed him that she had had a reserved seat in an eligible section of National House of Representatives in the gallery, from which she listened to the oration of the chief orator of that occasion. At the close of the address, tired of sitting for hours, she rose to leave; but just as she rose a clap of hands and a stamp of feet caused her to look over the sea of heads on the floor below and catch a view of a form on crutches shuffling through the throng to the rostrum. Asking the name of the stranger she was told that he was John Daniel of Virginia. Curious to hear what could be added to so much that had been so well said, she stood a minute to hear the opening which she repeated, about as follows: "Washington is alone in history; solitary and alone, like some great peak that has no fellow in the mountain range of greatness." The charm of such an opening held her a willing captive to the utterance of the last word in the closing sentence.

Again on a train, a delegate from the National Convention nominating Gen. Hancock for the presidency, stated that Maj. Daniel rose to second the nomination. The Western crowd did not know him, and for a while it was feared that the jeers and cat-calls would force him from the platform. But remaining firm, in clear, bugle tones, alluding to the gallant chief, when the war had ended, as "the first to salute with his stainless sword the majesty of the civil law," the convention fell under the spell of his powers and was borne upon the waves of his eloquence in whatever direction he desired.

In Virginia he was among his own without a peer. As a brightening luminary he was just rising to view above the Virginia horizon when Mahone sought power under the hideous deformity of State Repudiation of a large part of her assumed debt. Maj. Daniel saw this unhallowed resort as a blot upon the fair fame of his state, and championed its opposition in every quarter of the Commonwealth with a patriotic devotion and impassioned eloquence never surpassed upon that ancient hustings. In that issue he met defeat from an element in electorate too recent from servitude to respond to the nobler impulses and too ignorant for public safety with the ballot. Maj. Daniel was a Democrat from deep convictions but not a political vassal. He was a statesman of lofty conceptions and his arguments broadened out high and wide above the fog clouding the lower grounds of party passion. While witheringly scathing in assaults upon the policies and theories of opponents he did not descend to personalities nor enter the arena of abuse with the little men of little minds.

He was one who was masterful in discussions but—

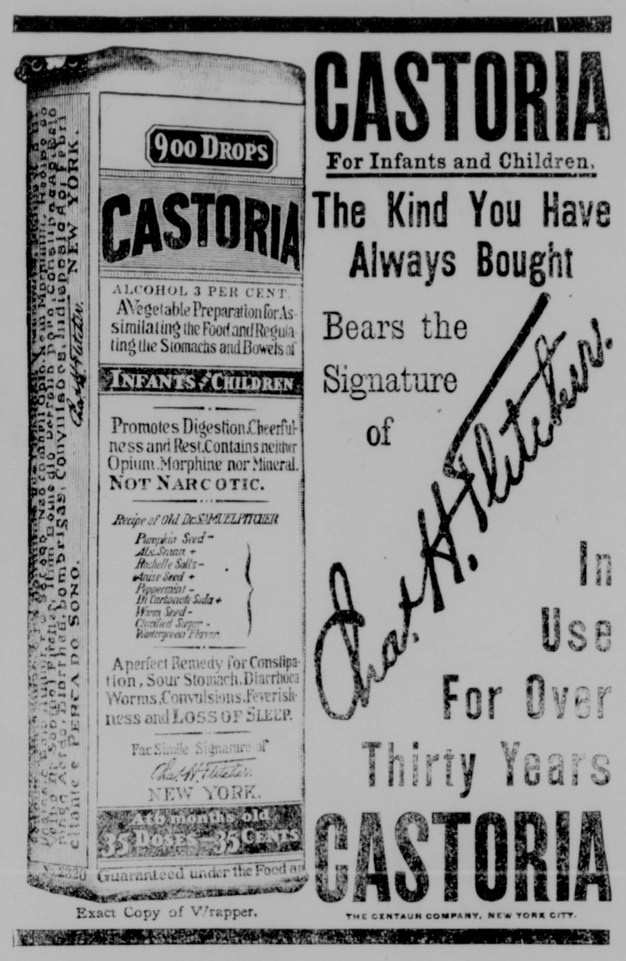
"Whose humor, as gay as the fire-fly lights,
Play'd over every subject, and shone as it play'ed;
Whose wit, in the combat, as gentle as bright,
Ne'er carried a heart-stain away on its blade."

Virginia esteemed him an honor to every gift possible from her hands, and for more than two decades kept him without a rival in the Senate of the United States, and he died a member of that body, a poor man. In this day of "itching palms" for money however obtained and in which officials in high places wear the semblance of honor so flippantly upon the sleeve, it is delightful to see a student like this of the "old school" pass out of life as spotless as when he entered it direct from the potters hand.

But a short while before death, it is stated, he told a friend he had just sent his last check of $5,000 in final payment of a debt of $100,000 left by his father, Judge Daniel; and that in all his life he never signed a check with so much pleasure as this one liquidating this debt of the dead father. When such a man was with us yesterday and today is gone, we are taught as only that can teach—

"That while the years, and endless host,
Come pressing swiftly on,
The brightest names that earth can boast,
Just glisten—and are gone."

RELLIM.



CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Church Services.

ST PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

ST. MARK'S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E.

Service every Sunday at 11 a. m.
Sunday School at 2:30 p. m.

W. H. SHEARER

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Ferndale—Preaching at 3 p. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Rev. Hugh L. Brookes, of Poonamallee, India, will preach at all three services.
Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO., OAKLAND, MD., July 28, 1910.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Monday, August 15, 1910,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

PROPOSALS for Building Two Wrought Iron Bridges.

OFFICE OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO., OAKLAND, MD., July 28, 1910.

Notice is hereby given that the County Commissioners of Garrett county, Maryland, will receive sealed proposals until Monday, the 15th day of August, 1910, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the building of two low truss wrought iron bridges; the superstructures to consist of one span each in length, with roadways 12 feet in width. The substructure to be reinforced concrete. Bridge No. 1, to be built over the Potomac river at Wilson, and Bridge No. 2, over the same river at Dobbin, West Virginia.

All bids submitted must be in lump sum for superstructure, substructure and fills for each bridge complete as per plans and specifications on file, accompanied by a certified check for $300.00 payable to A. G. Ross, Clerk.

The County Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

DR. W. W. GRANT,
DENTIST.
Office, McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Bridge and Crown Work a Specialty.
Gold and Silver Fillings. 21-09-ly.

TRUSTEE'S SALE

OF

Valuable Coal

AND

OTHER PROPERTY

Situate in Garrett County, Md., Known as the Gillespie Property.

By virtue of the authority vested in the undersigned Trustee, by decree entered on the 20th day of May, 1910, in the matter of C. D. Gillespie, bankrupt, pending in the District Court of the United State for the Northern District of West Virginia, the undersigned Trustee will, on the 23rd Day of July, 1910,

SATURDAY,

at Eleven O'clock A. M.,

at the front door of the Court House, in the town of Oakland, Garrett county, Maryland, offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, owned by C. D. Gillespie.

I

All the coal and the right to mine and remove the same, underlying

315 Acres of Land.

being part of a tract known as "Elk Garden," situate in Garrett county, Maryland, together with 100 acres of the surface of said 315 acres and all the rights and privileges granted to the said C. D. Gillespie in connection with said coal property. Two-thirds of said property was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Ada A. V. Halterman, by deed dated the 6th day of June, 1901, of record in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 45, folio 152, and the remaining one-third was conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Austin Brown, Sheriff, by deed bearing date December 1, 1906, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 59, folio 435, to which deeds reference is now here had for a more particular description of said property.

This property is situated very near the Western Maryland Railroad, near the station of Henry on said railroad and adjacent to the coal property now being operated by the Davis Coal & Coke Company at its mines at Henry. The coal underlying this property which is to be sold is very valuable.

II

All of the coal underlying a tract of land containing

68 1-2 Acres,

situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being known as a part of the "Elk Garden" tract and being the same coal conveyed to the said C. D. Gillespie by Peter F. Snyder and wife, by deed bearing date October 27, 1905, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 59, folio 364, to which deed reference is here had for a particular description of said 68½ acres, together with all the rights and privileges as to mining rights, surface and rights of way, as were vested in said Gillespie by said deed.

This 68½ acres of coal is considered very valuable. It is located a distance of about three or four miles from the railroad.

III

An undivided one half interest in ten acres of land, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, being also a part of what is known as the "Elk Garden" tract, said undivided one-half interest having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry F. Marshall and wife, by deed dated the 11th day of August 1902, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 42, folio 300, to which deed reference is had for a particular description of said property.

IV

A tract or parcel of land containing one acre, more or less, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, on the Western Maryland Railroad, near Gorman, having been conveyed to the said Gillespie by Henry C. Stemple and wife, by deed dated the 30th day of April, 1905, recorded in the Clerk's office of Garrett county, Maryland, in Liber No. 54, folio 453. There are situated, on this property, several buildings, one of which can be used for a combination dwelling house and store building.

All of the above described property will be sold free and acquit from all liens and incumbrances. The title to all of said property is considered good.

TERMS OF SALE.—One-third cash in hand on day of sale and the residue upon a credit of six and twelve months, the purchaser to give interest bearing notes, with good personal security, for the deferred purchase money and the legal title to the property to be retained as additional security, until said deferred purchase money has been paid.

C. W. MAXWELL, Trustee.

The above sale is continued until Saturday, August 20th, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the same place.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

In Garrett County, Maryland

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Thomas J. Roy and Rebecca F. Roy, his wife, to Katharine B. Stille, dated the 5th day of July, 1905, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 51, folio 59, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett County, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorney named therein, hereby gives notice that on

Friday, August 5th, 1910,

at the hour of 10:30 o'clock a. m., in front of the First National Bank Building in the town of Oakland, Maryland, he will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all the following described real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland; about three and one-half miles northwest of Oakland, the same being a part of Lot No. 6 of the subdivisions of a tract of land called "William and Mary," and adjoins the farms of William H. Hardesty and Owen Mackin, and beginning for the same at an ancientiy planted stone standing at the end of 25¾ perches on the 2nd line of the whole tract called "William and Mary," which is also at the end of the 1st line of said Lot No. 6 and running thence with the 2nd line thereof, North 3 degrees West, 80 perches to a planted stone marked No. 2, standing at the end of the 2nd line of William H. Hardesty's land, and reversing it West, 89 4-5 perches to the end of the 1st line of said Hardesty's land to a planted stone marked No. 1, thence South 1 degree East, 65 perches to the 1st line of said Lot No. 6, thence with it South 77 degrees East, 91 perches to the beginning, containing 38½ Acres, More or Less.

The improvements consist of a comfortable dwelling, stable and other outbuildings, a young orchard, and about one half of said land is cleared and under cultivation.

Terms of Sale, as prescribed in said mortgage—Cash on day of sale.

D. JAMES BLACKISTON,
Attorney for Mortgagee named in said Mortgage.

For further information apply to E. H. Sincell, Oakland, Maryland.

ORDER NISI.

Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphia vs. The Stoyer Run Coal Company of Garrett County.

No. 1553 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland

Ordered this 27th day of June, in the year nineteen hundred and ten, by the Circuit Court for Garrett county, sitting in equity, that the sale of the real estate and personal property, franchises, rights and privileges made by the Land Title and Trust Company of Philadelphi, Trustee and Mortgagee, be ratified and confirmed, unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 30th day of July, 1910; provided a copy of this order be published in some newspaper published in Garrett county, once a week for three successive weeks before the 23rd day of July, 1910.

The report states the amount of sale to be $1.00.

E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

True Copy—Test:
E. Z. TOWER, Clerk.

ORDER NISI.

In the Orphans' Court for Garrett County.
In the matter of the estate of Henry A. Reichelt, deceased.

Ordered by the Orphans' Court for Garrett County, this 12th day of July A. D. 1910, that the sale of the property mentioned in these proceedings, made and reported by Rosie Reichelt Guenther, Executrix of the last will and testament of Henry A. Reichelt, deceased, to Peter Reichenbecher and Otilda Reichenbecher his wife, be qualified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary thereof be shown on or before the 9th day of August, 1910; provided a copy of this order be inserted in some newspaper published in Garrett county once in each of three successive weeks before the 5th day of August, 1910.

The report states the amount of the sale to be $885.00.

W. J. BARNARD.
HENRY KAMP.
J. THOMAS MOON.
Judges of the Orphans' Court.

True copy. Test: E. E. FRIEND, Register.

CHOICE REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

At Loch Lynn Heights

No. 1.—4 lots and 19 room house; suitable for boarding house; house is well built; good water. Price $3,000.

No. 8.—At a bargain, 6 lots, large Livery Stable, Office and Harness room; near Loch Lynn Hotel. Price $800.

At Mountain Lake Park

No. 3.—At a bargain two good, well patronized boarding houses; 10 rooms each; all well furnished; sanitary plumbing; will be sold together with contents for $3,100.

No. 10—Gentleman's country estate. Farm of 108 acres, best in Garrett county; practically all under cultivation; everything modern and up-to-date; large barn and house brand new with city improvements; excellent running water. Price $12,000.

No. 5.—Two lots and 6 room cottage; good well water; stable; good garden. Only $750.

Farms Cheap. Great Bargains.

No. 6. 50 Acres $4,000.

7 acres wood, balance in cultivation; good new 6 room house; small barn and all other necessary outbuilding; good water handy; fine young orchard of about 120 trees; ½ mile to church and school; 2 miles from Mt. Lake Park. Worth investigating.

No. 7. 100 Acres $3,500.

50 acres in cultivation; 50 acres timber; buildings old; good spring; good young orchard; 1 mile to school and church; 1 mile to Mt. Lake Park.

Other properties listed are not advertised here. For particulars address

M. M. SCHROCK, Agent,
Mt. Lake Park, Md.

OPERA HOUSE

School of Music

First Door Upstairs to Right.

Teaching hours all day and all evening, to suit the convenience of our pupils. Music students: try the quick original methods of an old, long time teacher of music, who can show rapid, careful results.

Terms arranged on application.

MRS. K. R. RASCHE,
Opera House. OAKLAND, MD

Oakland Pharmacy

JOS. E. HARNED, Proprietor.

Drugs, Chemicals, Stationery, Cigars
Cameras and Photo Supplies

DR. LOUIS I. PREVOST,
VETERINARY SURGEON,
MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, MD.
Office Hours in Oakland from 2 to 5 o'clock p. m

GEORGE W. LEGGE, JR.,
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Practice in the Courts of Garrett and adjoining counties, and in the Maryland Court of Appeals. Associated with Thomas J. Peddicord, First National Bank Building.

DR. J. G ROBINSON, DENTIST,
OAKLAND MD.
Office at residence on Liberty street.
GAS ADMINISTERED.

DR. J. E. LEGGE,
PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON,
Offers his Services to the citizens of Oakland and vicinity.
Office in Garrett National Bank Building

DR. R. F. BARTLETT,
DENTIST.
Office in McComas Building, Second street, Oakland, Md.
Special attention given to bridge and crown work

GILMOR S. HAMILL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
AND SOLICITOR IN CHANCERY.
Office in Ravenscroft Building, Second St.
Particular attention given to Conveyancing Investigation of land titles and collection of claims. Loans negotiated.

EDWARD H. SINCELL,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.
Will practice in the Courts of Garrett and Allegany counties, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and the adjoining counties of West Virginia.

Subscribe for THE REPUBLICAN

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 34. OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1910. NUMBER 23

MEANS FIGHT IN SIXTH DISTRICT

Warner's action Stops Peace Negotiations and Hope of Compromise Abandoned.

It is now a fight to the finish in the Sixth Congressional district. Republicans throughout the state had hoped that a bitter primary contest might be avoided and the party agree upon a candidate who is acceptable to all elements, but Mr. Brainard H. Warner, Jr., one of the aspirants, has blocked this program by filing his nomination papers. His determination to remain in the fight renders useless any effort to adjust matters, as all the other candidates may now be expected to remain in the field.

State leaders, while deploring the failure of the party to get together, take the comfort from the statement made by Mr. Warner that he would do his part to elect the nominee, whoever he might be. A similar declaration, they say, should be forth coming from all of the others and the promise adhered to. The primaries, they say, should be free from all personalties, the claims of the respective candidates being based on personal fitness. The successful candidatewould then have nothing to retract andthose who failed have no grievance tocomplain of.

"If there must be a primary fight, let it be clean," said one of the leaders yesterday, "and then, no matter who wins, the Republicans in the district should rally about the nominee and elect him. The majority is there and it needs only concerted efforts to poll the full vote. It is more important that the party than any particular candidate should win. So let nothing be said that might jeopardized the success of the nominee. No one can dispute the right of any citizen who is eligible to seek the nomination, and since the state itself guarantees to all a square deal, they should accept and result in the proper spirit."

The gentlemen who had undertaken to bring about a concentration on a compromise candidate have abandoned the attempt, and all of the four aspirants who have announced themselves will probably enter. They are Col. George A. Pearre, the incumbent; Brainard H. Warner, Jr., Gist Blair and Alexander Hagner. Now that Mr. Warner has filed his papers, the others are expected to follow suit in the very near future. They have until August 13.

Children's Day Service.

The children of St. Mark's Ev. Lutheran church will observe Children's Day on Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock when a program of music, recitations, etc., will be presented. Those to take part in the program have been drilled by Miss Anna Manges and they are quite proficient. All are invited to be present.

A full line of Gas Ranges, Heaters, Hot Plates, Inverted and Upright Lights. Call and see us. S. Lawtont & Sons.

BARONESS FULL OF FIGHT

Cannot See Percy Proctor, but Will Sue Him for $40,000.

A telegram from Cincinnati, August 1, says: "My husband's attorney, so I am informed, refused to have me meet my husband. The court ordered us to meet Monday and settle the case. I was ready to meet my husband, but after waiting for hours am informed that there would be no meeting. There is now nothing lett, it seems, but to sue for recovery of the $40,000, which my husband promised me as a marrage dowry."

This statement came from Mrs. Percy Procter after she had waited several hours for a conferenc. with her husband. She had planned this conference in accordance with a decision by Judge Woodmansee, of the Common Pleas Court, Saturday which virtually ended an injunction suit instituted by Mr. Procter to prevent the transfer of $40,000 worth of stock which he claimed to have deposited as a collateral for a note, given as the consideration for an ante-nuptial contract in Berlin last October. The court held that title to the stock rested between the husband and wife and recommended that they settle their differences out of court, ordering also that a temporary injunction against transfer of the stock be continued.

Mrs. Procter, who was formerly Baroness Von Klifuss, of St. Petersburg, said she intended to start for Europe immediately.

Public Sale of Valuable Farm.

Saturday, August 13th, 1910, at 1 o'clock p. m., Lieutenant West will offer for sale to the highest bidder the valuable little farm of Mr. J. T. Weimer, located near Thayerville, on the new State Road. Practically level farm of 54 acres, most of which is cleared and in a high state of cultivation; buildings are new; eight-room house 26x30 feet, stone basement; barn 36x54; basement for stock; ice house and other necessary outbuildings; fine orchard; near church and store; schoolhouse two hundred yards from dwelling; limekilns 1½ miles and two coal banks ½ mile from farm. Good crops of hay, oats, wheat, potatoes, etc., will go with farm, together with all the buildings and improvements except the apple butter factory. Place is well watered; excellent spring at the house; hydraulic ram forces flowing water through the kitchen and basement.

Will also offer for sale at this time 50 acres good hill land near the home farm, all underlaid with coal. Sale will take place on the farm and prospective bidders are requested to be on hand at 11 o'clock a. m. to look at farm and buildings.

Terms of sale, $100.00 to be paid cash in hand at time of sale, balance to be paid in cash or negotiable paper upon delivery of deed within five days from date of sale. Property is free from debt. For further particulars call on or address E. S. West, Oakland, Md. 2t

LOST—On the road between Abel DeWitt's and Henry Casteel's on Saturday, June 25th, a horse contract book. Finder please leave at First National Bank and receive reward. D. J. Swartzentruber.

DIXON & KELSO

Dixon & Kelso o&ers the following exceptionally low Prices on Felt and Rubber Roofing:

2 Ply Amazon Rubber Roofing, per roll $1.75
3 Ply Felt Roofing, roll 90 cents
2 Ply Felt Roofing, roll 75 cents
Nails and Caps, - 5 cents

We can use 2000 or 3000 second handed Burlap Bags.

Yours to Please. DIXON & KELSO.

ONE OF MONTGOMERY'S CONGRESSIONAL ASPIRANTS.

MR. BRAINARD H. WARNER, JR.

Mr. B. H. Warner, Jr., of Montgomery county, who is seeking the nomination for Congress on the Republican ticket, has been in Garrett county for several days recently and has been active in his canvass for votes at the primary.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The Bible Conference closed Sunday, after a ten day meeting of great power and much help to those privileged to attend. The preaching was of a high order and the addresses by rescue workers were very interesting and thrilling. The attendance was much larger than expected, even equaling that of the campmeeting. The sermons by Bishop Lewis and Drs. Ostrom and Mahood were especially strong. All the money needed for the expenses of the Conference, and even a surplus, was easily obtained. This Conference will be one of great features of future programs at the Park. Many of our people pronounce it the greatest meeting ever held on the grounds. The great chorus, under the direction of Prof. John P. Hillis, was a very attractive feature.

Tuesday evening was the opening session of the Chautauqua, with an unusually large first night attendance, and a sale of season, one and two week tickets in excess of last year, which largely exceeded the sale two years ago. The management is encouraged with the outlook for this season.

The Ladies' Civic Club will hold their annual lawn fete in Chautauqua Park tomorrow (Friday) afternoon. This will doubtless be a very enjoyable occasion, as in past years.

The mountain excursion announced for last Monday has been postponed until next Monday afternoon. The trips will be to Boiling Spring or Truesdel Farm and will be for the benefit of the M. E. parsonage. Hay wagons will be provided at a reduced fare.

Bishop Lewis addressed the M. E. Sunday school Sunday afternoon and shook hands with all present.

There is a great crowd here now and it will doubtless be increased from day to day until the close of the Chautauqua.

Dr. Thistle and part of his family, of Washington, Pa., are in the Thistle cottage for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Frederick and little daughter, of Uniontown, Pa., are at Mt. Lake Hotel. They came over in Mr. Frederick's automobile.

Mr. Carl Eckles, a former Mountain Lake boy, and son of Mr. Howard Eckles, once a merchant here but now of Fairmont, W. Va., is here with the High School Band of Fairmont, which will give open air concerts during the Chautauqua season.

Mrs. J. A Hayden returned from Morgantown, W. Va., Tuesday morning where she attended a reunion Monday, the occasion being the celebration of the eighty-third birth day of her aunt, Mrs. Belle Welch. She was accompanied by her guest, Miss Maria Z. Dauhon, a deaconess, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a native of Sweden.

The first excursion to the Park, "Chileren's Day," will be next Tuesday, Aug. 9th, when excursion trains will be run from Cumberland and Grafton, and a special program will be presented. Among the attractions will be Edward P. Elliott in monologue reading, "The Man From Home," Rosani, the juggler, afternoon and evening and the Weber Male Quartette all day.

The tennis court, nearing completion, near the bowling alley, will be one of the best in this neighborhood. After leveling the ground six inches of broken rock was put on and thoroughly rolled, then a car load of crushed rock and then surfaced with clay and again rolled. Mr. T. P. Lipscomb superintended the work and did it well. The court will cost over one hundred dollars, provided by the Ladies' Civic Club.

The Tunnelton campmeeting will commence August 12th and close on the 21st and will be under the management of Superintendent Reed, assisted by ministers of Oakland District.

Mrs. H. B. Carroll, of Piedmont, is at the Park superintending improvements and instaling natural gas in her cottage.

Mr. M. M. Green, of New York is here improving his cottage (Beacham) and will add a bathroom.

Services in the M. E. church Sunday as follows: 10.00 a. m., class meeting; 2.30 p. m., Chautauqua Sunday School; 8.15 p. m. preaching. All cordially invited.

Miss Blanche Chance returned to her home here from the hospital at Wheeling where she was operated on for throat trouble some time since. She has almost fully recovered.

Rev. and Mrs. Howard and little son, of Fairmont, W. Va., are here for a short vacation.

Dr. Hugh Carr, of Fairmont, W. Va., is visiting relatives here.

DEER PARK.

Dr. and Mrs. John K. Mitchell and children, of Philadelphia, are now at their Deer Park cottage, Four Winds, for the summer. This completes the occupancy of all the summer cottages, and the month of August promises to be a gay one.

The Deer Park Hotel is fortunate this season in having a full complement of young gentlemen among its guests, and there is nothing like the usual dearth of dancing men in the ballroom each evening.

The fad now is pedestrian parties. Walking parties start out to Boiling Spring and to distant Eagle Rock, located on the very top of the Great Backbone Mountain. The roads are free from dust, considering present conditions, and groups of pedestrians from among the hotel guests start for these several points quite early in the day. The view from Eagle Rock is beyond description, and nearly everybody is going there. The road leading to it was constructed by army engineers, and the grade is so imperceptible that mountain climbing is devoid of fatigue or hardship.

The Watsons, from Fairmont, W. Va., came up a few days since, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Watson, Miss Lucy Haymond, Mr. Edward Holbert and A. S. Fleming being in the party. The Watsons and the Flemings are frequent visitors to this resort, and heretofore have always occupied cottages.

AUTOMOBIE AXLE BREAKS

Morgantown People in Car at Time of Accident.

A party of Morgantown and Grafton people were motoring Saturday at Mountain Lake Park when the axle of the car broke, throwing the occupants to the ground. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pickenpaugh of Morgantown, John T. McGraw and some of his friends were riding in in the Pickenpaugh car when the accident happened. The occupants escaped uninjured.

THE DEATH RECORD.

WALTER S. RAVENSCROFT.

Walter Sargeant Ravenscroft died at his home No. 125 East street, at eight o'clock Monday night, aged fifty-one years. His death was caused by central apoplexy from which he had been suffering for the last ten days, although he complained of being in ill health for some time previous.

Mr. Ravenscroft was born at Portland, Virginia, May 12, 1858, and during his early life lived in Virginia and Maryland. He attended the Pennsylvania Military College at Chester, Pa., for two or three years and afterward graduated at the University of West Virginia, at Morgantown, W. Va., where he was a classmate of his cousin, Senator J. P. Dolliver, of Iowa, and shortly after that studied law in Cumberland, Md. He practiced his profession for a number of years at Parkersburg, W. Va. He gave up his law practice, however, and became interested in the fire brick business, and came to Ridgway in 1891, and had made his home here ever since. Shortly after coming to Ridgway he was one of the promoters of the Shawmut Brick Co., at Shawmut, this county, and later on he and others organized the Ridgway Brick Co., and a few years ago he also helped to organize the Elk Fire Brick Co.

During late years he had been in the oil business and had extensive interests in southeastern Missouri

Mr. Ravenscroft is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Hoblitzell Ravenscroft, and one daughter, Mrs. Harry Horton Smith, of West Hickory, Pa., and also his parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscroft, of Oakland, Md., and one brother, W. H. Ravenscroft, president of the Federal Bank, at Denver, Colorado.

He was a member of the Congregational church, and later of the Ridgway Presbyterian church. Funeral services will be conducted at the late residence at 7:30 this evening, by the Rev. E. L. McIlvaine, and the funeral party will leave on the B., R. & P. flyer tonight for Frostburg, Md., where interment will take place Wednesday evening.

Mr. Ravenscroft was a polished gentleman and his affable manner aided him greatly in his work of promoting new industries. He was an expert in the qualities and value of clays for brick work, and Elk county, and particularly Ridgway, is indebted to him for building our brick manufacturing plants. But for his coming to Elk county and developing our clays we should be short of three or four fine industrial plants of which we are now reaping benefits.—Ridgway Daily Record of July 26th.

[Kingwood papers please copy.]

CAN'T GET PROCTER'S $40.000

Permanent Injunction Against the Transfer to Former Baroness.

The temporary injunction by which Percy Procter sought to enjoin the transfer of stock given to his wife in furtherance of a marriage contract was made permanent Saturday night by Judge Woodmansee, at Cincinnati.

There is not the slightest chance of a reconciliation between Procter and his wife, formerly the Baroness Nadine von Klifuss, according to Lawrence Maxwell, attorney for Mr. Procter, when questioned on this point before the resumption of the hearing of the suit for possession of the $40,000 stock Saturday.

Mrs. Procter, attired in the most striking costume she has yet worn, seemed ill at ease because of the attention she attracted and retired to an anteroom until the trial was resumed.

BITTINGER.

Scarcely will the farmers in this neighborhood have their hay and wheat crop gathered into their barns before the oats will be ready for the reaper.

County Treasurer Robert L. Fries, accompanied by his little son, spent the first two days of this week in this village gathering taxes.

Mr. Bradley, of Lonaconing, agent for the New York Life Insurance Company, was in this section last week looking up business in his line.

Mr. Deiffenbaugh and family, of Grantsville, were guests at C. E. Ellithorp's last Sunday.

Messrs. Noah and Leonard Stark, of Chaffee, W. Va., spent last Sunday with their parents at this place.

Prof. J. C. Beahm went from his home at this place to Meyersdale, Pa., last Saturday, where he will give some instructions in vocal music and will go westward from that place and visit for a week or two in Iowa and other western states.

C. H. Jennings shipped three car loads of cattle from Pennsylvania to his large farm at this place, thus increasing his herd to one hundred and thirty head.

Rev. Stoufer, pastor of the Reformed church at St. Paul, Pa., came to this village last Saturday evening and held an open air service in Ellithorp's grove, after which he was the guest of Jonas Bittinger until Sunday morning.

Rev. George Royer, of Loysville, Pa., a former pastor of this charge, preached a very interesting sermon from the Lutheran pulpit in this village last Sunday afternoon to a large and appreciative audience.

Try the Rock Island Battery for your automobile and telephone. Will outlast any two ordinary ones. A. D. NAYLOR & Co.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

Copyrighted.

TEDDY-TAFTY

Teddy-Tafty Sundae

The Latest in Ice Cream.

Healthful
Delightful
Refreshing

Oakland Steam Bakery

Manufacturers of Ice Cream complying absolutely with the Pure Food Laws of the United States.

We Freeze our Reputation into our Ice Cream.

TEDDY-TAFTY.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART
ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTER
COPYRIGHT 1908 BY BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. Amidst numerous difficulties the servants deserted. As Miss Innes locked up for the night, she was startled by a dark figure on the veranda. She passed a terrible night, which was filled with unseemly noises. In the morning Miss Innes found a strange link cuff button in a clothes hamper. Gertrude and Halsey arrived with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot. A strange man was found shot to death, in the hall. It proved to be the body of Arnold Armstrong, whose banker father owned the country house. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. The link cuff button mysteriously disappeared. Detective Jamieson and the coroner arrived. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she had talked in the billiard room a few moments before the murder. Jamieson told Miss Innes that she was hiding evidence from him. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped down a laundry chute. It developed that the intruder was probably a woman. Gertrude was suspected, for the intruder left a print of a bare foot. Gertrude returned home with her right ankle sprained. A negro found the other half of what proved to be Jack Bailey's cuff button. Halsey suddenly reappeared. He said he and Bailey had left because they had received a telegram. Gertrude said that she had given Bailey an unloaded revolver, fearing to give him Halsey's loaded weapon. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested, charged with embezzlement.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

"In cash?"

"In cash."

"But the man who did it—he would be known?"

"Yes, I tell you both, as sure as I stand here, I believe that Paul Armstrong looted his own bank. I believe he has a million at least, as the result, and that he will never come back. I'm worse than a pauper now. I can't ask Louise to share nothing a year with me, and when I think of this disgrace for her, I'm crazy."

The most ordinary events of life seemed pregnant with possiblities that day, and when Halsey was called to the telephone, I ceased all pretense at eating. When he came back from the telephone his face showed that something had occurred. He waited however, until Thomas left the dining room; then he told us.

"Paul Armstrong is dead," he announced gravely. "He died this morning in California. Whatever he did, he is beyond the law now."

Gertrude turned pale.

"And the only man who could have cleared Jack can never do it!" she said despairingly.

"Also," I replied coldly, "Mr. Armstrong is for ever beyond the power of defending himself. When your Jack comes to me, with some $200,000 in his hands, which is about what you have lost, I shall believe him innocent."

CHAPTER XI.

Halsey Makes a Capture.

It was about half-past eight when we left the dining room, and still engrossed with one subject, the failure of the bank and its attendant evils, Halsey and I went out into the grounds for a stroll. Gertrude followed us shortly. "The light was thickening," to appropriate Shakespeare's description of twilight, and once again the tree-toads and the crickets were making night throb with their tiny life. It was almost oppressively lonely, in spite of its beauty, and I felt a sickening pang of homesickness for my city at night—for the clatter of horses' feet on cemented paving, for the lights, the voices, the sound of children playing. The country after dark oppresses me. The stars, quite eclipsed in the city by the electric lights, here become insistent, assertive. Whether I want to or not, I find myself looking for the few I know by name, and feeling ridiculously new and small by contrast—always an unpleasant sensation.

After Gertrude joined us, we avoided any further mention of the murder. To Halsey, as to me, there was ever present, I am sure, the thought of our conversation of the night before. As we strolled back and forth along the drive, Mr. Jamieson emerged from the shadow of the trees.

"Good evening," he said, managing to include Gertrude in his bow. Gertrude had never been even ordinarily courteous to him, and she nodded coldly. Halsey, however, was more cordial, although we were all constrained enough. He and Gertrude went on together, leaving the detective to walk with me. As soon as they were out of earshot, he turned to me.

"Do you know, Miss Innes," he said, "the deeper I go into this thing, the more strange it seems to me. I am very sorry for Miss Gertrude. It looks as if Bailey, whom she has tried so hard to save, is worse than a rascal; and after her plucky fight for him, it seems hard."

I looked through the dusk to where Gertrude's light dinner dress gleamed among the trees. She had made a plucky fight, poor child. Whatever she might have been driven to do, I could find nothing but a deep sympathy for her. If she had only come to me with the whole truth then!

"Miss Innes," Mr. Jamieson was saying, "in the last three days, have you seen a—any suspicious figures around the grounds? Any—woman?"

"No," I replied. "I have a houseful of maids that will bear watching, one and all. But there has been no strange woman near the house or Liddy would have seen her, you may be sure. She has a telescopic eye."

Mr. Jamieson looked thoughtful.

"It may not amount to anything," he said slowly. "It is difficult to get any perspective on things around here, because every one down in the village is sure he saw the murderer, either before or since the crime. And half of them will stretch a point or two as to facts, to be obliging. But the man who drives the hack down there tells a story that may possibly prove to be important."

"I have heard it, I think. Was it the one the parlor maid brought up yesterday, about a ghost wringing its hands on the roof? Oh perhaps it's the one the milk-boy heard; a tramp washing a dirty shirt, presumably bloody, in the creek below the bridge?"

I could see the gleam of Mr. Jamieson's teeth as he smiled.

"Neither," he said. "But Matthew Geist, which is our friend's name, claims that on Saturday night, at 9:30, a veiled lady—"

"I knew it would be a veiled lady," I broke in.

"A veiled lady," he persisted, "who was apparently young and beautiful, engaged his hack and asked to be driven to Sunnyside. Near the gate, however, she made him stop, in spite of his remonstrances, saying she preferred to walk to the house. She paid him, and he left her there. Now, Miss Innes, you had no such visitor, I believe?"

"None," I said decidedly.

"Geist thought it might be a maid, as you had got a supply that day. But he said her getting out near the gate puzzled him. Anyhow, we have now one veiled lady, who, with the ghostly intruder of Friday night, makes two assets that I hardly know what to do with."

"It is mystifying," I admitted, "although I can think of one possible explanation. The path from the Greenwood club to the village enters the road near the lodge gate. A woman who wished to reach the Country club, unperceived, might choose such a method. There are plenty of women there."

I think this gave him something to ponder, for in a short time he said good night and left. But I myself was far from satisfied. I was determined, however, on one thing. If my suspicions—for I had suspicions—were true, I would make my own investigations, and Mr. Jamieson should learn only what was good for him to know.

We went back to the house, and Gertrude, who was more like herself since her talk with Halsey, sat down at the mahogany desk in the living room to write a letter. Halsey prowled up and down the entire east wing, now in the cardroom, now in the billiard room, and now and then blowing his clouds of tobacco smoke among the pink and gold hangings of the drawing room. After a little I joined him in the billiard room, and together we went over the details of the discovery of the body.

The cardroom was quite dark. Where we sat, in the billiard room, only one of the side brackets was lighted, and we spoke in subdued tones, as the hour and the subject seemed to demand. When I spoke of the figure Liddy and I had seen on the porch through the cardroom window Friday night, Halsey sauntered into the darkened room, and together we stood there, much as Liddy and I had done that other night.

The window was the same grayish rectangle in the blackness as before. A few feet away in the hall was the spot where the body of Arnold Armstrong had been found. I was a bit nervous, and I put my hand on Halsey's sleeve. Suddenly, from the top of the staircase above us came the sound of a cautious footstep. At first I was not sure, but Halsey's attitude told me he had heard and was listening. The step, slow, measured, infinitely cautious, was nearer now. Halsey tried to loosen my fingers, but I was in a paralysis of fright.

The swish of a body against the curving rail, as if for guidance, was plain enough, and now whoever it was had reached the foot of the staircase and had caught a glimpse of our rigid silhouettes against the billiard room doorway. Halsey threw me off then and strode forward.

"Who is it?" he called imperiously, and took a half dozen rapid strides toward the foot of the staircase. Then I heard him mutter something; there was the crash of a falling body, the slam of the outer door, and, for an instant, quiet. I screamed, I think. Then I remember turning on the lights and finding Halsey, white with fury, trying to untangle himself from something warm and fleecy. He had cut his forehead a little on the lowest step of the stairs, and he was rather a ghastly sight. He flung the white object at me, and, jerking open the outer door, raced into the darkness.

Gertrude had come on hearing the noise, and now we stood, staring at each other over—of all things on earth—a white silk and wool blanket, exquisitely fine! It was the most unghostly thing in the world, with its lavender border and its faint scent. Gertrude was the first to speak.

"Somebody—had it?" she asked.

"Yes. Halsey tried to stop whoever it was and fell. Gertrude, that blanket is not mine. I have never seen it before."

She held it up and looked at it; then she went to the door on to the veranda and threw it open. Perhaps 100 feet from the house were two figures, that moved slowly toward us as we looked. When they came within range of the light, I recognized Halsey, and with him Mrs. Watson, the housekeeper.

The Step, Slow, Measured, Infinitely Cautious, Was Nearer Now.

CHAPTER XII.

One Mystery for Another.

The most commonplace incident takes on a new appearance if the attendant circumstances are unusual. There was no reason on earth why Mrs. Watson should not have carried a blanket down the east wing staircase, if she so desired. But to take a blanket down at 11 o'clock at night, with every precaution as to noise, and, when discovered, to fling it at Halsey and bolt—Halsey's word, and a good one—into the grounds—this made the incident more than significant.

They moved slowly across the lawn and up the steps. Halsey was talking quietly, and Mrs. Watson was looking down and listening. She was a woman of a certain amount of dignity, most efficient, so far as I could see, although Liddy would have found fault if she dared. But just now Mrs. Watson's face was an enigma. She was defiant, I think, under her mask of submission, and she still showed the effect of nervous shock.

"Mrs. Watson," I said severely, "will you be so good as to explain this rather unusual occurrence?"

"I don't think it so unusual, Miss Innes." Her voice was deep and very clear; but it was somewhat tremulous. "I was taking a blanket down to Thomas, who is—not well to-night, and I used this staircase, as being nearer the path to the lodge. When vested, and through an ugly stroy—Mr. Innes called and then rushed at me, I—I was alarmed, and flung the blanket at him."

Halsey was examining the cut on his forehead in a small mirror on the wall. It was not much of an injury, but it had bled freely, and his appearance was rather terrifying.

"Thomas ill?" he said, over his shoulder. "Why, I thought I saw Thomas out there as you made that cyclonic break out of the door and over the porch."

I could see that under pretense of examining his injury he was watching her through the mirror.

"Is this one of the servants' blankets, Mrs. Watson?" I asked, holding up its luxurious folds to the light.

"Everything else is locked away," she replied. Which was true enough, no doubt. I had rented the house without bed furnishings.

"If Thomas is ill," Halsey said, "some member of the family ought to go down to see him. You needn't bother, Mrs. Watson. I will take the blanket."

She drew herself up quickly, as if in protest, but she found nothing to say. She stood smoothing the folds of her dead black dress, her face as white as chalk above it. Then she seemed to make up her mind.

"Very well, Mr. Innes," she said. "Perhaps you would better go. I have done all I could."

And then she turned and went up the circular staircase, moving slowly and with a certain dignity. Below, the three of us stared at one another across the intervening white blanket.

"Upon my word," Halsey broke out, "this place is a walking nightmare. I have the feeling that we three outsiders who have paid our money for the privilege of staying in this spook-factory, are living on the very top of things. We're on the lid, so to speak. Now and then we get a sight of the things inside, but we are not a part of them."

"Do you suppose," Gertrude asked doubtfully, "that she really meant that blanket for Thomas?"

"Thomas was standing beside that magnolia tree," Halsey replied, "when I ran after Mrs. Watson. It's down to this, Aunt Ray. Rosie's basket and Mrs. Watson's blanket can only mean one thing: There is somebody hiding or being hidden in the lodge. It wouldn't surprise me if we hold the key to the whole situation now. Anyhow, I'm going to the lodge to investigate."

Gertrude wanted to go, too, but she looked so shaken that I insisted she should not. I sent for Liddy to help her to bed, and then Halsey and I started for the lodge. The grass was heavy with dew, and, man-like, Halsey chose the shortest way across the lawn. Half way, however, he stopped.

"We'd better go by the drive," he said. "This isn't a lawn; it's a field. Where's the gardener these days?"

"There isn't any," I said meekly. "We have been thankful enough, so far, to have our meals prepared and served and the beds aired. The gardener who belongs here is working at the club."

"Remind me to-morrow to send out a man from town," he said. "I know the very fellow."

I record this scrap of conversation, just as I have tried to put down anything and everything that had a bearing on what followed, because the gardener Halsey sent the next day played an important part in the events of the next few weeks—events that culminated as you know, by stirring the country profoundly. At that time, however, I was busy trying to keep my skirts dry, and paid little or no attention to what seemed then a most trivial remark.

At the lodge everything was quiet. There was a light in the sitting room downstairs, and a faint gleam, as if from a shaded lamp, in one of the upper rooms. Halsey stopped and examined the lodge with calculating eyes.

"I don't know, Aunt Ray," he said dubiously; "this is hardly a woman's affair. If there's a scrap of any kind, you hike for the timber." Which was Halsey's solicitous care for me, put into vernacular.

"I'll stay right here," I said, and crossing the small veranda, now shaded and fragrant with honeysuckle, I hammered the knocker on the door.

Thomas opened the door himself—Thomas, fully dressed and in his customary health. I had the blanket over my arm.

"I brought the blanket, Thomas," I said; "I am sorry you are so ill."

The old man stood staring at me and then at the blanket. His confusion under other circumstances would have been ludicrous.

"What! Not ill?" Halsey said from the step. "Thomas, I'm afraid you've been malingering."

Thomas seemed to have been debating something with himself. Now he stepped out on the porch and closed the door gently behind him.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Were Not Needed.

"Scientists say that whisky is not a cure for snake bites."

"Then that must be the reason snakes were driven out of Ireland."

Armour's Fertilizers

Increase the yield—Improve the quality—Enrich the soil. Every harvest proves it. Can you afford to risk your wheat? Be safe.

Armour's Fertilizers

grow the biggest crops. Ask your dealer.

Armour Fertilizer Works
Chicago

(70)

YOU CAN STOP YOUR HUSBAND, SON OR FRIEND FROM DRINKING

Write me, and I will tell you the only proven method that will actually stop a man from drinking; either with or without his consent, and without danger to him, or loss of his time. It will cost you nothing to try. I have given my advice to hundreds upon hundreds, and never heard of a case where it failed. Address E. PORTIN, Room 816, Chicago, Illinois, 40 Dearborn Street. Absolute secrecy promised.

TOUGH LUCK.

"Why, what's the matter, my lad?"

"Boo hoo! Ma sez I got to president when I grows up, an' I'd set my heart on bein' a prize fighter. Boo hoo!"

WEAK KIDNEYS WEAKEN THE WHOLE BODY.

No chain is stronger than its weakest link. No man is stronger than his kidneys. Overwork, colds, strains, etc., weaken the kidneys and the whole body suffers. Don't neglect the slightest kidney ailment. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills at once. They are especially for sick kidneys.

Ted Hiatt, Oswego, Kans., says: "For many years I suffered from kidney disorders. I was treated by specialists in Kansas City and Chicago, was told I had an abscess of the kidneys and an operation was advised. I thereupon began the use of Doan's Kidney Pills and gradually improved. Soon an operation was unnecessary as my kidneys were well."

Remember the name—Doan's.

For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Didn't Care for Expenses.

They were seated at the breakfast table.

"John, dear," said the young wife, "this is my birthday."

"I'm glad you mentioned it, darling," rejoined her husband. "I'll buy you a present the first thing when I get downtown."

"Well," she said, "I hope you won't get any cheap 98-cent affair."

"Of course I won't," he replied. "Why, I would be ashamed to present you with anything that cost less than a dollar."

Simple Truth.

You can only do clean washing with clean soap. You know that cocoanut oil, borax and naphtha are natural cleansers and sterilizers and that they can't harm fabrics. Easy Task soap is the only one that combines these scientifically, and for that reason it cuts washday work in two and does the work better than it ever has been done. Ten cents to test it; money back quickly if it isn't what is claimed for it.

Confused Impressions.

"Of course, you know the story of William Tell," said the serious citizen.

"To tell you the truth," replied Mr. Cumrox, "I'm not clear about him. I can't exactly remember whether he was a great marksman or a famous opera singer."

Women in Love.

"Women in love are generally troublesome and persecuting." Such is the reported opinion of M. Emile Faguet. And if a French critic does not understand the subject, of whom shall we seek understanding?"

His Big Bill.

Guest—How long is this lease of your hotel to run?

Hotel Clerk—What lease?

Guest—The one I just gave you the money for.

It Would Depend.

"Would you marry a man who wore side whiskers?"

"I might if I thought it would be worth while to reform him."

A Mean Man.

"Is your wife going to Europe this summer?"

"No. I've bribed a fortune teller to warn her to watch for a slim blonde woman who is coming into my life."

We live truly in proportion as we go out of ourselves and enter into the fulness of the experience of those whom we serve, and by whom in turn we are served.—Westcott.

Poor Digestion?

This is one of the first signs of stomach weakness. Distress after eating, sour eructations, sick headache, bilious conditions are all indicative that it is the stomach that needs assistance. Help it to regain health and strength by taking for they are a stomach remedy that never disappoints. They act quickly and gently upon the digestive organs, sweeten the contents of the stomach, carry off the disturbing elements, and establish healthy conditions of the liver and bile.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

The wonderful tonic and strengthening effects from Beecham's Pills, make them a safe remedy—they

Help Weak Stomachs

In Boxes with full Directions, 10c. and 25c.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists

Awfully Busy.

Jim—A stitch in time saves nine.

Tom—Who said that?

Jim—Gee! Ain't you read your Bible?

Tom—Nope; I ain't even had time to read the sporting page this morning yet.—Cleveland Leader.

How She Conciliated Them.

Filmer—How did it happen that these five men who were so angry with the woman in the nickelodeon for not taking off her hat became so friendly with her afterward?

Screeners—It was raining like fury when the show was over and she invited them to take shelter with her under her hat.

Autoing and Optics.

"Is not auto driving terribly hard on the eyes?" we asked.

"Well, I guess not," replied the chauffeur, withering us with scorn. "Why, before I got to runnin' a car I was thinkin' o' gettin' specks, my eyesight was that poor I couldn't see the contribution box in church until it was so near past me it was too late to dig for any money. But I hadn't been runnin' that wagon two days till I could see a policeman's little finger stickin' out from behind a tree four miles away. I could even see which way a copper's eyeballs were turned if he was standin' in the shade three miles off. Hard on the eyes! Well, not much! It's the best medicine for weak eyes that was ever invented, don't you forget it."

A Dream of Ease—

Post Toasties

NO COOKING!

An economical hot weather luxury—food that pleases and satisfies at any meal. So good you'll want more.

Served right from the package with cream or milk. Especially pleasing with fresh berries,

"The Memory Lingers"

Pkgs. 10c and 15c
Sold by Grocers

Postum Cereal Co., Limited
Battle Creek, Mich.

Millinery for All

SO MANY girls are trying their hands upon hat making at home that a few examples of those hats which are likely to be most successful in the hands of the amateur, are interesting just now. These are the hats made of embroidery or lace or Swiss and batiste which have come to be a staple for midsummer, and are known as "lingerie" hats. New models this year show many fabrics which have not been used heretofore. Fine dimities, lawns and mills, in fact any sheer, pretty midsummer material, such as are used for midsummer gowns, is considered available for the lingerie hat. The prettiest models show combinations of all-over embroidery and the materials I have mentioned.

The safest designs for the amateur are those made of edgings of lace or embroidery, either wide or narrow. All the hats are made over wire frames which are first covered with very sheer mull or with chiffon. This first covering is either shirred over the frame or made into a fitted casing for the brim and laid smoothly over the crown. A scant ruffle of wide edging is laid about the brim falling over the edge about the depth of the scallop. In such a hat the crown is made by sewing two rows of edging together and making a small puffed crown of them. A band and bow of wide ribbon and a cluster of familiar garden flowers finishes the hat, which is quite as satisfactory when made at home as when made elsewhere.

If narrow edging, of lace or embroidery, is used it is sewed row on row and quite often the under brim is faced with scant ruffles sewed in the same way. Very sheer batiste or other embroidery is often laid in a full double ruffle over the brim, for girlish wearers.

The lingerie hat, by the way, is worn by maid and matron alike. It has been called the "baby" hat because it was first made for little girls when they graduated out of bonnets and took on the dignity of hats built on a frame. It is durable and beautiful and may be taken apart and the materials laundered. Study the lingerie hat for, like the lingerie waist, it has come to stay.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

PRETTY IDEA FOR DRESS

All-over piece embroidery and deep flouncing are used for this; the piece embroidery is used for the princess upper part, the seams outlined by insertion; the deep flounce is gathered to a strip of insertion that is sewn to lower edge of princess part. The collar and sleeve bands are of plain cambric. The plaited frills of cambric that finish the puffed sleeves are divided by ribbon.

Hat of white straw, the brim slightly turned up in front, a wreath of May blossom forms the trimming.

Materials required: about 7 yards embroidery 18 inches wide, 3 yards flouncing, about 6 yards insertion, 1½ yard ribbon, 1¼ yard lace for edging collar.

WEAR HAT IN HOT WEATHER

Important for the Girl Who Has a Dislike for Hair of Different Shades.

Do you want streaked hair of 17 different shades when next autumn comes around?

If you do not you must make up your mind to wear a hat during the summer.

A bother, you say? Of course. Did you ever know anything connected with keeping fresh that wasn't a bother?

And it is not half as hard as spending time and money later getting over the effects of sunburnt hair.

Too strong a dose of sun acts on the hair by drying natural oils in the scalp and then burning just as a hot flatiron scorches linen.

If it is impossible for you to wear a hat, oil must be rubbed regularly into the scalp to counteract this drying effect.

Remember that the most beautiful hair in the world comes from the peasant women of Britany, who keep their heads covered with their little white caps.

Irish Lace Collars.

With the return of warm weather the fashion has swerved back to Irish lace collars. We will wear more of them this summer than for years. The girl in her new suit has mostly Irish lace around the neck. For this reason she wears a four-inch Irish lace collar around her coat and a four or six inch one around her blouse, which is collarless. This collar dips down for an inch in front and is finished with a plaited jabot of Irish lace and linen

Isbell Claiming the Pennant.

Frank Isbell says he is going to capture the pennant in the western league this fall. He has two or three men on his team that will be ripe for the big league next fall and he wants to get the flag while they are still with the team.

Ray Looks Like a Star.

Guess that new pitcher for the St. Louis Browns must be a little Ray of sunshine. Any lad fresh from the bush who can stack against the Tigers and beat them twice in one series does not need to work very hard the rest of the year. Took a barrel of nerve and lots of the real goods to turn the trick against the demons, Cobb, Crawford & Co. (Limited).

Ousted for First Time.

When Josh Devore was banished for his part in the chastising of the gallant Brooklyn rooters who abused Devlin some days ago, it was the first time in his career he was put out of a game.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THROUGH ENVY, through malice, through hating,
Against the world, early and late,
No jot of our courage abating,
Our part is to work and to wait."
—Alice Cary.

Early Rising.

The early risers are the ones who accomplish things in the world. To be up in the quiet, two hours before the stir and bustle of the day, gives one time to get well started for the day's work. For those who love nature, this season of the year is the time of all to get out and enjoy the trees and hills if one has them, or the sunrise and clouds, for those are the possession of us all.

We cannot all be as ambitious as the early rising Bridget who was up so early that she had all the work done and the beds made before the family were up; but with even a few minutes a day in the quiet of the uninterrupted morning when one's mind is fresh and rested from sleep problems are easier to work out.

It is said of Victor Hugo that his greatest novels were written in just a few minutes each day before breakfast.

It is amazing the amount of work that may be accomplished in a few moments of concentrated thought. If we wish to do anything very much we will find time to do it. The piece of sewing, the letters that should be written and many things about the house can be done without disturbing the other members who have not yet risen.

There are many things about cooking and baking that take much time that may be prepared before hand. Pastry is much better to be made and chilled before baking. One may prepare the flour, butter and lard with the salt, put into the ice chest and take enough for a crust, adding the water; this will keep indefinitely if kept cold.

Such step savers take time to get ready, but save time when it is often very pressing. Fruit may be prepared for the day, vegetables got ready, the cold dessert made and many things which may lighten the day's labor and thus make a smooth running, unhurried home.

Put in the hook, sew on that button, hem that frayed skirt before putting the clothes away, then they will be ready to put on. One is apt to put a garment away without attending to the bit of mending and forget it until it is wanted to wear. Constant vigilance is the price of being always neat and in order, but it is a price worth paying.

HAVE EASE, have health,
And spirits light as air,
And more than wisdom,
more than wealth,
A merry heart that laughs at care."

Reminders for the Housekeeper.

Fish may be scalded much easier by first dipping them in boiling water.

A tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with the clothes will add greatly to the whitening process.

A good agency for keeping the air of the cellar sweet and wholesome is white wash made of good lime and water. Adding glue to it is only a damage, as it furnishes an organic matter which putrifies and is most unpleasant.

Charcoal is recommended as an absorber of gases in the milk room or refrigerator. Keep it there continually in a powdered state, renewing occasionally, especially in hot weather when unwholesome odors are likely to affect milk and butter.

Clear boiling water poured through tea stains will remove them.

Some Uses for Salt.

Salt water is a splendid gargle for sore throat. Salt water snuffed into the nose is a great relief for cold, catarrh and often for a headache.

Dry salt or salt water rubbed into the roots of the hair three times a week will stop falling hair.

If the chimney is burning out on a windy day throw in a handful of salt.

Salt sprinkled on carpets brighten them and keep down the dust when sweeping.

Nellie Maxwell

Hominy Muffins.

Mix a cupful of warm boiled hominy cooked to the proper consistency for the breakfast table with one tablespoonful of melted butter, a saltspoonful of salt and one cupful of milk. Add this mixture gradually to a cupful and a half of flour in which has been sifted two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Lastly add two well-beaten eggs and bake in hot buttered muffin pans.

To Remove Stains.

For certain kinds of obstinate spots, such as coffee and chocolate, for instance, there is no better deterent than glycerin, especially for fabrics with delicate colors. Apply the glycerin to the spot with a sponge or otherwise, let stand a minute or so, then wash off with water or alcohol. Hot glycerin is even more effective than cold

JERUSALEM

By Pastor Russell
Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her iniquity is pardoned; for she hath received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins."—Isa. 11:1, 2.

Christendom, with united voice, admits that all of the divine revelation came to and through the Hebrew people. Listen to the argument of the Apostle Paul. "What advantage then hath the Jew? Or what profit is there of circumcision? Much every way; chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God"—the Divine message respecting the Divine purposes, present and to come. The Apostle again informs us that the entire Gospel message was briefly comprehended in the Creator's promise to Abraham. "In thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Galatians iii, 8).

It was the most natural thing imaginable for the Jewish nation to suppose that the giving to them of the law at Mount Sinai, through the mediatorship of Moses, was the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham. Nevertheless they were mistaken.

Israel's mediator, and the sacrificing priests, and the sacrifices they offered and their Tabernacle, with its holy and most holy, and the temple, and all the features of the law Covenant were types or foreshadows of the "better sacrifices," higher priesthood, better mediator, and glorious blessings of eternal forgiveness and reconciliation yet to be accomplished. Nevertheless the period of Israel's types was not wasted. Not only were the types there given, but at the same time a special class of agents were selected: Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and all the prophets and worthy ones of that age, holy, consecrated to God, and accepted as agents qualified for the kingdom conditions. Of these the scriptures declare, "They fell asleep." They are still asleep in the dust of the earth, awaiting the glorious resurrection morning, and a grand share then with Messiah in the work then to be accomplished. In their lifetime, they were styled the fathers, because Messiah was fortold to be of the posterity of Abraham, and also "David's Son."

But other scriptures without contradicting these statements, show us distinctly that "David's Son" and "Abraham's Seed" is to be lord and father of both David and Abraham. Thus we read. "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth" (Psalm xlv, 16). David's son, Messiah, will be David's father, or life-giver, when he will raise David from the dead. Similarly he will be the father of all of those ancient worthies; and as David's Lord, and "Lord of lords," it will be his pleasure to appoint the Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all of the ancient worthies, and prophets, and faithful ones a glorious share with himself in the great Messianic kingdom, which he is about to set up for the ruling and blessing of Israel and all the nations of the earth.

Glance with me at three different statements by the lord through the prophets of Israel respecting Israel's "double" of experience: The first, an experience of God's favor; the second, an experience of equal length without divine favor.

Turn now to Zechariah's prophecy, and note that prophetically he takes his standpoint at the very time when the second part of the "double" began. His words are, "Even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee (Zechariah ix, 12).

Come next to our text, and note that the prophet Isaiah stands with us, and views the matter from the standpoint that the "double" of experience has been fulfilled: "Speak comfortably unto Jerusalem, cry unto her that her appointed time is accomplished, because she hath received at the lord's hands double (two equal parts) for her sins." It is our understanding that this "double" reached fulfillment in the year 1878 A. D., and since that date we have been declaring to the best of our ability, as the lord granted opportunity, these comforting words to Israel, assuring God's chosen people that their period of disfavor has ended, and that they are gradually returning to prosperity, that divine favor began with them in 1878. Yea, more than this, our sermons which to some extent reflect this feature of the divine program relating to Israel's restoration to divine favor, are being read to a considerable extent by Hebrews as well as by Christians; their eyes are gradually opening, as the scriptures foretell they shall do.

Israel's history as a nation began with the death of Jacob, when he gave his blessing to the 12 tribes. The period from that time to the death of Jesus, according to the scriptures, was 1845 years; and a like period of disfavor, measuring from the day of Jesus' rejection marks the year 1878, as the end of Israel's disfavor—the time when the message of comfort should go forth. However, divine favor was only gradually taken from Israel, and altogether a period of 36 years intervene between the death of Jesus and the utter destruction of Jerusalem. Similarly we should expect that the return of favor would be gradual, a like period of 36 years; and this would bring us to the year 1914, as the time when God's favor for his people will be publicly and openly manifested.

HE'D GET THE APPLE.

Eddie—Say, mom, give Jessie an apple.

Mamma—Then you'll want one, too.

Eddie—No. Just give it to Jessie. We are going to play Adam and Eve, and she is going to tempt me.

Casey at the Bat.

This famous poem is contained in the Coca-Cola Baseball Record Book for 1910, together with records, schedules for both leagues and other valuable baseball information compiled by authorities. This interesting book sent by the Coca-Cola Co., of Atlanta, Ga., on receipt of 2c stamp for postage. Also copy of their booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" which tells all about this delicious beverage and why it is so pure, wholesome and refreshing. Are you ever hot—tired—thirsty? Drink Coca-Cola—it is cooling, relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. At soda fountains and carbonated in bottles—5c everywhere.

Old Advice.

Manager—You never get this scene right. Your business with the sweet peas is all wrong and you forget when you are to speak—you get your lines all mixed up.

Actress—All right, sir, I'll be more attentive and fix the sweet peas and try to get my lines in the right place.

Manager—Your course is very simple. Just mind your peas and cues.—Baltimore America.

Is Dirt Good for Boys?

Some folks say: "Oh, let the boy play in the dirt. It is good for him. I wouldn't give a cent for a boy that keeps his clothes clean." That may be all right, but what about the boy's mother? Getting the dirt out of clothes by the use of old-fashioned yellow soap and a slow washday method is hard labor. If the boy's mother uses Easy Task laundry soap, which does half the work for her itself, and which reduces washday labor by fifty per cent, it is different. Easy Task is five cents a cake and is the greatest nickel's worth of soap ever sold.

And many a coming man neglects to arrive.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
For children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures wind colic. 25c a bottle.

Mortgage the ship for all it's worth before giving it up.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Oronogo, Mo.—"I was simply a nervous wreck. I could not walk across the floor without my heart fluttering and I could not even receive a letter. Every month I had such a bearing down sensation, as if the lower parts would fall out. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done my nerves a great deal of good and has also relieved the bearing down. I recommended it to some friends and two of them have been greatly benefited by it."—Mrs. MAE MCKNIGHT, Oronogo, Mo.

Another Grateful Woman.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered terribly with a female weakness and had backache, bearing down pains and pains in lower parts. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly and used the Sanative Wash and now I have no more troubles that way."—Mrs. AL. HERZOG, 5722 Prescott Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

The Wretchedness of Constipation

Can quickly be overcome by

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

Purely vegetable—act surely and gently on the liver. Cure Biliousness, Headache, Dizziness, and Indigestion. They do their duty.

Small Pill, Small Dose, Small Price.

Genuine must bear Signature

Beat Good

CANCER!

Can be cured without the use of the knife by my SPECIAL BLOODLESS METHOD. At an expense of one cent to you (postal card) I will explain particulars in full.

DR. W. H. HINKLIN MARION, OHIO

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

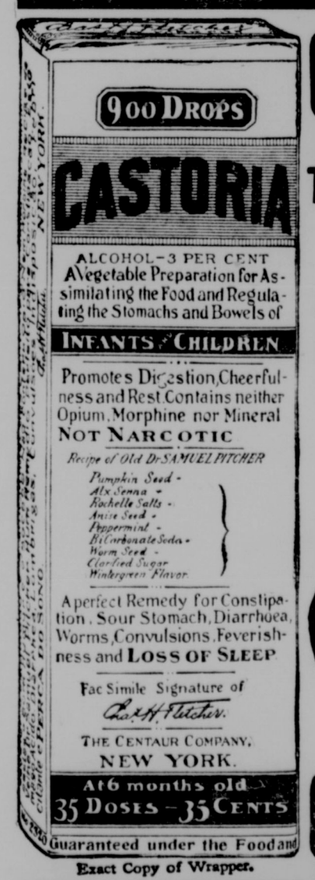
The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

NETTLE RASH ERYSIPELAS POISON IVY ITCHING ECZEMA SCALDS

RESINOL

RING WORM ERUPTIONS ABRASIONS CHAFING HERPES BURNS

used in time will cure nearly every form of skin disease. It is a wo[illegible]r. A recognized specific for itching and inflamed piles.

RESINOL CHEMICAL COMPANY, BALTIMORE, MD.

Resinol Ointment, Resinol Toilet Soap, Resinol Medicated Shaving Stick are sold at Drug Stores.

W. N. U., CLEVELAND, NO. 30–1910.

THE REPUBLICAN

BENJ. H. SINCELL, EDITOR.

Entered at the Postoffice in Oakland, Md., as Second-class matter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION:

The Republican is published every Thursday morning at the following rates:

One copy one year.....$1.25
One copy six months ..... .75
One copy three months ..... .40

Advertising Rates made known upon Application.

Remittances may be made by Money Order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft and addressed to

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1910.

FOR CONGRESS.

To the voters of the 5th Congressional District:

I desire to announce my candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congress at the forthcoming primaries, which will be held on August 30th. I will appreciate the active support of all Republicans.

BRAINARD H. WARNER, JR.,
Kensington, Md.

PROTECTION AND IMPROVEMENT OF THE NEW STATE ROADS.

The State Road Commission is already receiving information, it is reported, of needless damage to the State highways that have been built. The principal trouble is expected to come from the heavy traction engines that are hauling threshing machines to and fro at this season of the year. The wheels of these ponderous machines are equipped with "lugs," which sink into the smooth surface of a fine road and effectually destroy it. These wheels are made with the lugs so that they can "grip" the road and will not slip. They are as injurious to a hard, smooth surface almost as the spikes that are put on road rollers to tear up old turnpikes. The Road Commission believes that the law gives it the authority to prohibit vehicles with such wheels from using the State roads, and it intends to enforce the law not only against injury to the roads by traction engines but by any other vehicle or in any other manner which is preventable. The law charges the commission with the duty of keeping the roads in good condition as well as constructing them.

It would be of much advantage to the State as well as to property owners along the State highways if they would cooperate with the commission in making the roads beautiful and attractive. After the roads have been made perhaps the commission will decide to plant avenues of trees along them. In the meantime the abutting land owners would do a good work by keeping the roadsides through or along their respective properties clean and neat. The fences should be well kept and sightly and not encumbered with briars and undergrowth, and weeds should be kept down by regular mowing. The roadside in Maryland has always been the nursery for weeds from which seed has been scattered over the adjacent country. It is unsightly and injurious. A neat and well-kept roadside makes a good impression on strangers and tends to advance the market value of property in the neighborhood.

Attention is directed to the announcement of B. H. Warner, Jr., of Kensington, which appears at the head of this columntoday. Mr. Warner is making an active campaign throughout the District, spending several days in Garrett county this week, where he met a number of people.

OUR HORDES OF DISCONTENT

There have come to this country from foreign shores within the last seven years nearly seven million people. These have not come from Great Britain, Germany and those countries to whose immigrants we have in the past owed so much. They have come largely from Eastern and Southern Europe and Western Asia. They are Italians, Hungarians, Slavs, Turks, Syrians. This vast horde now crowding here contains many who will become prosperous and exemplary citizens, but it contains thousands who will not. They neither speak nor understand our language and have little sympathy with our institutions. The aggregate for only seven years is more than the entire population of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Colorado, Montana and Oregon by the census of 1900. The majority remain in our cities. They print their own newspapers in their own languages and do not acquire ours. There are more newspapers printed in New York today in foreign languages than in ours. They came here because they were dissatisfied at home. Many leave their own country with a grievance and land here with their state of mind unchanged. They find, when they arrive, the air filled with charges of oppression, of the unjust power of money, of the partnership between government and wealth, of laws that punish the poor and shield the rich. These are the wrongs they claim to have fled at home and their reception here deepens the discontent their past experience has engendered. The result which follows is the only natural one and one which even the commonest wisdom should foresee.

NEXT LAND DISTRIBUTION.

According to the reports of the General Land Office, given out on the 1st of July, 1910, there were at that time public lands in the possession of the government, vacant and subject to entry and settlement, aggregating 731,354,081 acres, of which 212,727,783 acres had been surveyed and 518,626,298 were yet unsurveyed. On the face this statement would seem to indicate that a vast landed area is yet to be distributed. As a matter of fact, however, the larger proportion of these lands are of very low value and there is no demand for them.

There will be open to distribution among actual settlers next year, however, certain areas in Montana, Washington, North Dakota and South Dakota that will possess real agricultural value, and it is likely that there will be another grand rush westward of those seeking free homesteads. In several of these reservation the Indians will obtain the first apportionment and, being allowed to choose, will naturally select the best lands. But finally there will be available for white settlers something over 3,000,000 acres of lands, which will divide up into 37,500 80-acre homestead tracts, and which will sustain considerably over 150,000 population.

The government's policy toward the Indians, during the past quarter of a century at least, has been not only in the direction of helpfulness, but of preferential treatment. Many of the Indians of the Northwest are good farmers, and they know how to pick the best when it comes their turn to choose. The chairman of one of the appraising commissions for land that will be distributed next year declared in a recent report concerning the Yakima Reservation: "After the allotments shall have been made to the Indians there will not be a quarter section in the reservation open to settlement upon which a person can make a living." But [illegible] the reservations the Indians will not be able to absorb all of the good lands. There is likely to be some rapid scrambling when these reservations are thrown open, and following the land handout there will soon be a scattering of new towns on the map.

McHENRY.

Quite a large crowd attended church at McHenry Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Glotfelty spent Sunday at Mr. Josephus Ferguson's.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Glotfelty spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Nimrod Glotfelty.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinebaugh and son Edward spent Sunday afternoon at Mr. Brison Glotfelty's.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Brenneman and family and Mr. Mahlon Brenneman took their guests, Miss Sadie Glotfelty, Miss Agnes Merchant, the Misses DeLawder and Master Lurman DeLawder, to church Sunday on a hayride, afterwards going to Mr. Jonas Glotfelty's for the day.

Mr. Asa Glotfelty has returned from Alexander, W. Va., where he has been working for the past month.

The Misses Hinebaugh will entertain at dinner on Thursday.

Miss Mabel Cuppett, of Mt. Lake Park, has been spending the past few days at Mrs. Howard Brenneman's.

Miss Georgia Lowdermilk has returned to her home in Uniontown, Pa.

Mr. Roy Keller, who has been working for Mr. Jonas Glotfelty, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Dolph Enlow, of Elder Hill, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. Brison Glotfelty.

Miss Grace Fox and the Misses Stark were guests of Mrs. Will McLean Sunday.

Misses Ruth and Jane Robinson, of Oakland, spent a few days at the home of Mr. Thaddeus Hinebaugh.

Mrs. Jonas Glotfelty and Mrs. George Glotfelty spent one day last week at Friendsville. TWINS.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

It seems usless to mention the weather as every one knows we need rain. No use complaining.

Mahlon's hay wagon from Nelson's Valley made a flying trip to McHenry last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jonas Glotfelty spent last Sunday with Mr. Glotfelty's brother near Cherry Tree Meadow.

Mrs. Lizzie Ferguson is on the sick list at this writing.

Miss Georgia Lowdermilk has returned to her home in Uniontown after spending the past month with her sisters.

Misses Grace Fox, Sarah Savage and Edith Durst and Messrs. Walter and Asa Glotfelty spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William McLean.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Glotfelty spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson.

Mrs. Jonas Glotfelty and Mrs. Geo. Glotfelty made a flying trip to Friendsville one day last week.

Make me an offer on all or part of the tract of land known as Factories, containing 1017 acres, located near Swanton. Reasonable terms given. Apply to E. S. West, Oakland, Md.

HOYES.

(Delayed.)

We are having fine weather for harvesting and our farmers are taking advantage of it. The wheat in this section is about all gathered and a fair yield is expected. The hay crop will be an abundant one.

Hon. James V. Long, consul to Greece, is a guest at M. Mattingly's at this time. This gentleman has spent a number of summers with us and is always a welcome guest.

The civil engineers who have been with us for the past two weeks have completed their survey for the new road and the people are anxiously waiting for the decision on its route.

Percy Lowdermilk, of Monongahela, Pa., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lowdermilk.

Miss Mae Atkinson, of Lonaconing, returned to her home last Monday after spending two weeks with W. A. Smith and family.

Arthur Custer has quite a number of guests at his home among them being H. A. Yesterand family, of McKeesport, Pa., who have enjoyed the hospitality of his home for a number of years.

Mrs. John Cuppett, of Clarksburg, W. Va., but formerly of Friendsville, was calling on friends in Hoyes for a few hours last Saturday while on her way to Friendsville.

Mrs. Alice Chase, who recently moved into her home at this place, left here Saturday morning for Connellsville, Pa., where she will visit relatives for a week or more.

Miss Clara Harrison, of Kensington, Md., arrived in Hoyes last week and is a guest at the Mattingly home.

Miss Bertha Dewitt and Mr. Charles Callis were elected delegates to the Epworth League convention which was held at Kingwood.

Miss Bertha Custer returned to her home last week from an extended visit to relatives at Grafton and other points. She was accompanied home by her aunt.

P. R. Savage, of Sang Run, spent a few hours in Hoyes last Sunday.

Mrs. D. O. Dewitt, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, is able to be out again. We hope for her entire recovery.

Miss Blanche Callis took dinner and spent the afternoon with Miss Freda Dewitt last Sunday.

Mrs. Ray Friend and two little daughters, of Richwood, W. Va., are making an extended visit to Rev. H. E. Friend and family. Mrs. Friend will be joined by her husband in a short time to accompany them back to their home.

A number of persons, about fifteen in all, from this place went on an exploring expedition to Sang Run Cave quite recently. We think all enjoyed this trip notwithstanding the plentifulness of the mud they came in contact with.

Little Misses Katheryn and Elizabeth Yester and Mr. Beatty entertained M. Mattingly and family for several hours with some delightful music, the little ladies with violins accompanied on the piano by Mr. Beatty.

We will again send a short letter from Hoyes, and hope its destination will not be the waste basket, but perhaps our last week's letter was received too late for publication.

Mrs. Carrie Dewitt, of Armstead, and sister Vernie, of Pittsburg, were visiting relatives and friends in this place several days the past week.

Prof. A. W. Dewitt arrived in Hoyes Tuesday and is the guest of his brother, D.O. Dewitt.

M. Mattingly has a number of guests at his home at this time, among them being Mr. Will Yester, of McKeesport, Pa.

Miss Collier Thayer, of Crellin, is visiting her uncles, D. O. and C. W. Dewitt, this week.

Mrs. Emma Smith and Mrs. Vernie Ravenscroft were calling on friends at Sang Run for a short time Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewitt spent Sunday afternoon with their daughter, Mrs. R. B. Friend, at Elder.

Memorial Work.

The J. B. Williams Co., low price marble and granite dealers, Frostburg and Cumberland, are having a reduction sale to last for the next sixty days in order to dispose of their large stock of handsome Monuments, Headstones, etc. An invitation is extended to visit their yard at No. 99 North Centre St., Cumberland, and No. 60 Main St., Frostburg, and look over their line of work. Orders given to their agents or sent in by mail will receive best attention. The recent work erected in the county by this firm is the Thomas Little monument and the Clarence M. Rathbun monument at Oakland, the Norman Durst monument at Blocher's cemetery and the James Ravenscroft monument at Mt. Zion church yard. All of these monuments are made in a high grade granite and are among the finest monuments in the county.

Oriental Goods.

Taufik Aboosh, importer of all kinds of Oriental goods, Irish crochet lace and short waist French embroidery dresses and silk kimonos, will offer his stock of goods at half price in order that he may return to school. Store in basement of Chautauqua Hotel, Mountain Lake Park.

The Jacob Doll Pianos have been the standard for 40 years and have proven the best Call on L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park. 13

Off on a Month's Visit.

Rev. and Mrs. John A. McClelland, little son Donald and Mrs. McClelland's mother, Mrs. Rose Ann Randall, departed Tuesday night for a month's visit to points in Massachusetts and Vermont. Mrs. Randall, Mrs. McClelland and little son will visit their old home at Ryegate, Vermont, where Rev. McClelland, after spending two weeks at Northfield Biblical schools, will join them, to spend some time there. On their way home, they expect to visit relatives and friends at St. Johnsburg and Bellows Falls, Vermont, arriving here the latter part of August.—Grafton Leader.

Plan to Test New Auto Law.

Automobilists in Washington have planned at attack in the courts upon the new Maryland automobile law on the ground that it is unconstitutional. Washington autoists declare that since the law went into effect last July 1 they have already paid into the Maryland treasury between $8,000 and $10,000, and that as the tax is an annual one the burden will be felt every year.

The Maryland law is attacked as unconstitutional an the ground that it is unlawful interference on the part of a state with persons and instrumentalities engaged in commerce and intercourse between the states of the Union, which cannot be sustained on the theory that it is a reasonable and warrantable exercise of the police power of the state of Maryland.

It is further considered untenable on the ground that it is the right of every citizen of the United States to pass through or into any state without being subjected to any tax or burden for the privileges of doing so. Finally, it is considered unconstitutional on the ground that it discriminates between residents of the district and residents of the states and other federal districts in favor of the latter in denying absolutely the right on the part of the residents of the District to motor even for a moment within the state limits without paying a heavy license and registration fee, whereas it purports to other citizens the privilege of doing so for two periods during the year without exacting such fees.

Jacob Doll & Sons build 15,000 pianos per year. Every instrument fully guaranteed with an unlimited warranty. Factory located in New York city. For terms and prices call on or address L. F. King, Mt. Lake Park, Md. 13

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
The Kind You Have Always Bought
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Call for Your Letters.

Eston Redman, Miss A. L. Grines, Sarah F. Galooly, Mrs. Walter Wisner, Anna Nair, Grace Murphy, Margaret McCarney, Mrs. David Collins, William H. Callis, J. W. Briscoe.

OSTEOPATHIST.

Dr. Isabel Garrison Eiler, a graduate of the full three years course as required by the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, will be at the Roslyn Cottage, Mountain Lake Park, for the summer. 4t

EXAMINERS' NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the following county road is to be re-located. The road to be re-located is known as the Mansfield Road, in the North end portion between Fahey and Hughes and Fahey and Mansfield, so as to give said road a more gradual and better grade, and examine whether the said re-location should be made will meet on the 13th day of August, A. D. 1910, for such purpose and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said re-location and if so to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

GEORGE GEISSMAN,
JONAS YUTZY,
W. H. SMOUSE,
Examiners.

Commissioners' Meeting.

OFFICE OF THE
COUNTY COMMISSIONERS FOR GARRETT CO.,
OAKLAND, MD., July 28, 1910.

The County Commissioners for Garrett county will meet at their office in Oakland on

Monday, August 15, 1910,

for the purpose of transacting all routine business.

By order of the Board,
A. G. ROSS, Clerk.

Notice To Tax-Payers.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, either in person or by deputy, will be in each of the Election Districts in Garrett county, Maryland, to collect and receive taxes at the time and places following:

Aug. 4—Swanton—W. H. Lohr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 5—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 6—Red House, 9 to 3.
Aug. 8—Deer Park—Specht's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 9—Bloomington—Post Office, 9 to 3.
Aug. 10—Kitzmiller—Bank Building, 9 to 3.
Aug. 11—Kitzmiller—Wilson's Store, 9 to 3.
Aug. 12—Gorman—J. P. Parr's, 9 to 3.
Aug. 13—Bloomington—Moody's Store, 10 to 4.
Aug. 15—Hoyes—W. A. Smith's Store, 9 to 12.
Aug. 15—McHenry, 2 to 5

By an Act of the General Assembly of Maryland, passed at the January Session, 1890, being Chapter 556, Section 45, it is provided that all county taxes shall be due and payable on the first day of September next succeeding the date of levy thereof; and all taxes paid on or before the first day of September a discount of three per cent. shall be allowed; and after the first day of January all taxes shall bear interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum until paid. The Treasurer shall take the discount from and charge interest on the bills for county purposes regularly in the manner aforesaid and shall note the same upon his books and upon the receipt for taxes so paid, but the discount allowed on the county taxes by this section shall not be made to any person or corporate institution unless the whole amount of state and county taxes due by such person or corporate institution for the current year be paid when the same is made.

ROBERT L. FRIES,
Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.

The Lonaconing Savings Bank
Of Allegany County.

Stands First among the State Banks of Maryland

Capital Stock . $20,000
Surplus and Undivided Profits . $60,000
Deposits . . $625,000

3 PER CENT. Interest Paid Upon all Savings Accounts.

GIVE THEM A START

This would be a good time for you to start your young folks on the road to Success.

Early training in the practice of self-denial; instruction as to the use and value of money; opportunities for earning and saving money; all these tend to fix and fasten the children in the ways of thrift and prosperity.

We most gladly assist the young people in getting started.

One Dollar opens an account and entitles the depositor to one of our Savings Banks.

We shall be pleased to have our Garrett County friends call and open an account with us.

JAMES M. SLOAN, President. DUNCAN R. SLOAN, Treasurer.

Capital - $50,000
DEPOSITS, - $175,000

The First National Bank
Friendsville Md.

Surplus Fund, . $26,000
Undivided Profits 6,000

OFFICERS:

L. E. FRIEND, President,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Vice-Pres't
R. C. McCANDLISH, Vice-Pres't
ORVAL A. WELCH, Cashier

DIRECTORS:

L. E. FRIEND, Merchant,
J. W. McCULLOUGH, Lumber and Coal
W. W. SAVAGE, Merchant,
D. S. CUSTER, Merchant,
H. M. RUMBAUGH, Farmer,
W. H. H. FRIEND, Pension Agent and Surveyor,
HORACE R. DEWITT, Treasurer of Garrett County, Md.
R. C. McCANDLISH,
JOHN T. GEARY.

THREE GOOD THINGS TO KEEP: Your Temper, Your Secrets, Your Money

Your money kept with us will earn you 4 Per Cent. Interest compounded semi-annually. Keep it here and after while it will keep you.

SAFETY DEPOSIT BOXES FOR RENT

CAPITAL $25,000.00

The First National Bank
Of Grantsville, Md.

Safe deposit vault boxes for rent.

SURPLUS $12,500.00

The Savings Department takes care of your money when waiting other investment. The money earns interest from the day it is deposited. It can be withdrawn at any time.

Its Advantages

Any amount from One Dollar up can be deposited, and interest added to principal twice a year. Pass books are issued to every depositor.

We Pay 3 Per Cent. Interest.
Open Daily except Sundays and Holidays, 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

OFFICERS.
C. H. JENNINGS, - - President
U. M. STANTON, - Vice-President
J. O. GETTY, - - - Cashier
DIRECTORS.
C. H. Jennings, J. M. Stanton,
G. C. Keller, Eli Stanton,
W. A. Hitchins, Frank Watts,
J. O. Getty.

S. LAWTON ARTHUR LAWTON WM. LAWTON

S. LAWTON & SONS

You are invited to call and see our line of

Bathroom Outfits and Gas Goods.

We handle everything in the Plumbing, Heating, Gas and Electrical line. If you are contemplating installing and Plumbing or Gas fitting do not fail to see us. All work guaranteed. Estimates cheerfully given.

S. LAWTON & SONS,

Members of the Association of Master Plumbers of the State Maryland.

Associate Members of American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

OPTICIANS

EYES EXAMINED, GLASSES PRESCRIBED AND FURNISHED. CROSS EYES STRAIGHTENED

SNYDER & L'MASTERS
REGISTERED OPTOMETRISTS.

75 per cent. of all Nervous Troubles, such as Headache, Neuralgia and Stomach Trouble are caused by reflex from eye strain. We make glasses to correct all such conditions.

Room No. 6, Traders Annex, CLARKSBURG, WEST VA.

LeMasters will be at Chautauqua Hotel, Mountain Lake Park, July 27 to August 8; at Johnson Cottage, Oakland, Aug. 8 to 13.

Two Bridges for Garrett.

The Garrett county commissioners have decided to erect two new wrought iron bridges, both to span the north branch of the Potomac river, one at Dobbin and the other at Wilson in the eastern end of the county.

Cashier of Bank.

Mr. James Winters, who for the past five years has been principal of the Frostburg school, has been elected cashier of the First National Bank of Grantsville and entered upon his duties August 1st.

THE OLD RELIABLE

Garrett National Bank

OF OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

Commenced business November 14, 1888.

CAPITAL, ...	$ 50,000
SURPLUS AND PROFITS, .	45,000

OFFICERS:

D. E. OFFUTT, President.
G. S. HAMILL, Vice President.
S. T. JONES, Cashier.
G. A. FRALEY, Assistant Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Daniel E. Offutt	Gilmor S. Hamill
John M. Davis	George W. Legge
John T. Mitchell	William R. Stull

Scott T. Jones

Interest at the rate of 3% per annum paid on Time Certificates of Deposits and Savings Accounts.

Safe Deposit Boxes for rent at reasonable rates.

Mrs. George Brown and daughter Miss Mabel, of Morgantown, are guests at the Bosley Hotel.

FOR RENT—Four rooms corner Wilson and Pennington streets. Apply to J. W. Leathers.

Mrs. E. H. Ravenscraft, of Ridgway, Pa., is here on a visit to Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscraft.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilson Humoird of Cumberland, are visiting their daughter, Mrs. W. R. Offutt, in Oakland.

Messrs. T. L. and C. L. Beckwith, of Johnstown, Pa., are visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Beckwith.

Mr. O. Heyward and daughter, of Bond, spent yesterday evening in Oakland, returning to Bond this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Sincell, of Keyser, after spending a week with Oakland relatives returned home yesterday.

Miss Margaret A. Healy, of New York City, is visiting her cousins, Messrs. James P. and Owen Treacy, in Oakland.

Prof. Perdew, or Cumperland, was visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Harned for several days last and this week, returning home on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pickenpaugh, of Morgantown, West Va., have been the guests of Col. and Mrs. A. G. Sturgiss for several days recently.

Mrs. G. A. Bolden and two sons, of Charleston, W. Va., are spending several weeks in Oakland as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Shirer.

Rev. and Mrs. E. Manges returned to Oakland yesterday from a week's visit to relatives and friends at Johnstown and other points in Pennsylvania.

Dr. R. A. Pavenscroft, who spent several days in Baltimore this week, returned to Oakland last night and will go from here to his home at Accident this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Sanner are visiting their son, H. J. Sanner, on Water street extended. Mr. R. R. Sanner was for many years prominent in business and school affairs in this county.—Cumb. News.

Judge Robert R. Henderson toured Tuesday afternoon to Deer Park in his Stevens-Duryea car, having as his guests his niece, Mrs John E. Edwards and Miss Elizabeth L. Lowndes.—Cumb. News.

Dr. J. W. Laughlin, of Deer Park, Md., after visiting his son, Mr. H. R. Laughlin, here for several days, went to Pennsboro Saturday to be the guest of his son, Mr. Ad. Laughlin.—Grafton Leader.

Mrs. Martha Brown and daughter, Miss Emma, of Kingwood, who were visiting Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Ravenscraft for several days recently, have returned to their home, being accompanied by Miss Julia Byrne, who will visit friends in Kingwood for a short time.

A double wedding took place at Bond last Wednesday evening when Amos Broadwater, of Merrill, and Miss Irene Skelly, of the same place, and Edgar Rounds and Miss Stella Wilt, of Merrill, were married by the Rev. John Green. The newly wed quartet left immediately for Chicago on a honeymoon trip.

Mr. John W. Stanton and son, of Chicago, arrived in Oakland Monday morning to spend a week or two with relatives here and at other points in Maryland. Mr. Stanton left yesterday for Emmittsburg and Baltimore where he will visit his brother and sister, expecting to return to Oakland the latter part of the week.

A National Bank is an absolutely safe place to put your money, because the United States Government examines regularly all National Banks.

Ask our patrons how we treat THEM.

Make OUR Bank YOUR Bank.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
OAKLAND, MD.

Automobile Fever High.

The automobile fever has been fatal to several Oakland residents this week. Dr. Webb Ravenscroft purchasad a Maxwell; J. C. Renninger has possessed himself of an E. M. F; H. C. Sincell drove an Oakland from Pittsburg yesterday and Messrs. Semmes and Stuart Hamill are on the way home from Baltimore with a Pullman.

Church Services.

ST PAUL'S M. E.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Preaching 10:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.
Epworth League Monday 8 p. m.
Prayermeeting Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody cordially invited to attend these services.

G. R. WILLIAMSON, Pastor.

ST. MARK S LUTHERAN.

Services next Sabbath as follows:
Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.
Children's Day services at 10.30 a. m.
Deer Park—Preaching at 8:00 p. m.
Luther League Wednesday 8 p. m.
Everybody welcome.

E. MANGES, Pastor.

ST. MATTHEW'S P. E.

Service every Sunday at 11 a. m.
Sunday School at 2:30 p. m.

W. H. SHEARER

BAPTIST.

Services next Sunday as follows:
Ferndale—Preaching at 11 a. m.
Loch Lynn—Preaching at 8 p. m.
Everybody invited.

C. W. HUDSON, Pastor.

On August 13th, the Broadwaters of Garrett county will have a reunion in a grove one-halt mile west of Merrill post-office. The Wilhelm and Broadwater orchestra will be there. Rev. John Green will be the orator of the occasion. The farmers' wives will cook and serve the dinner and there will be all kinds of sports.

Master James Martin arrived on the noon train Wednesday from Oakland, Md., to visit his father, Attorney Fred T. Martin, for a few days. They were up the river fishing Thursday and James reports quite a large catch of the finny species. James made our sanctum a most pleasant call during his stay in the city.—Grafton Leader.

Messrs. W. McCulloh Brown, J. K. Monroe and S. S. Gannet, boundary line commissioners who have in charge the survey of the State line between Maryland and West Virginia, are in Oakland today in conference with Messrs. Geo. E. Price, of Charleston, and E. H. Sincell, of Oakland, counsel for the two States, relative to matters pertinent to the survey.

On Tuesday U. G. Palmer, Jr., received a letter from the Curtis Publishing Company stating that he is the champion Post boy for Maryland, and entitled to a $55 Columbia bicycle, which will bear the inscription. "Presented to U. G. Palmer, Jr., by Cyrus Curtis, President, The Curtis Publiihing Company, for unusual services rendered the Saturday Evening Post."

The Kendall Brothers lumber road from Crellin into West Virginia now reaches within four miles of William station on the Western Maryland Railroad, and the lumber road from Ebenwood in the Dry Fork region is only five miles distant from Bowden station on the Coal and Iron Railroad. In fact it is a net work of lumber roads all through Tucker and Randolph counties.

Dr. Edwaad E. Sollars, who recently graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in Baltimore, has located at Deer Park for the practice of his profession where he has a well equipped office which is centrally located. Dr. Sollars was one of the prize men of his class, which position he attained by application to his studies and a determination to win. He is meeting with great success at Deer Park.

Messrs. Bolden, Brown & Weimer, the new merchants of Oakland, announce their grand opening for tomorrow night by advertisement printed elsewhere in this paper today. The new firm will carry a line of general merchandise, flour, feed, grain, etc., as well as a complete line of furniture and house furnishing goods. Mr. Bolden will devote his time to the undertaking and furniture end of the business. The store is well equipped, nicely arranged and the stock of goods is new and fresh. All should avail themselves of the invitation to attend the opening on Friday night.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company have 1,000 men at work laying the third track between Bloomington and Altamont. This improvement when completed will obviate the necessity of many delays in the prompt movement of both passenger and freight trains. This is the part of the road known generally as the "17 mile grade" and is also known as the most picturesque scenery along the line of the B. & O. During this improvement not a single accident has occurred and the trains have been moved with very little delay. This part of the road is under charge of Supervisor of Road Parks, and a more competent official could not be duplicated. It is through his courtesy that your correspondent was taken over the work of betterment and he is familiar with every detail. Many dangerous curves have been eliminated, and the roadbed is up to date in every particular and the passenger glides along the mountains like steaming on water without any "joits" to mar his comfort.—Cumberland News.

Examiners' Notice

Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned, appointed by the County Commissioners of Garrett county, to view the lands through which the proposed new county road is to be located, said road to begin at a point on the Gorman road leading from Mountain Lake Park, at a lane between the lands of J.B. Shockey and W.G.Riley and running thence through the lands of W.G. Riley, Josiah T. Beckman and Sarah and Rebecca Davis and intersect the Deer Park and Schell road near the bridge over Laurel Run, and examine whether the said new road should be located will meet on the 25th day of August, 1910, for such purpose, and to determine whether the public convenience requires the said location of said new county road, and if so, to locate the same and perform their duty in the premises.

E. W. KELSO
J. THOMAS MOON } Examiners
JAMES E. LISH

The Maryland Agricultural College

COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND.

Maryland's School of Technology

Fifty-fourth year begins Sept. 15.

Entrance examinations 13, 14.

Eight courses of Instruction leading to professional degree of B. S. Agricultural, Horticural, General, Mechanical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Biological and Chemical.

The College has a close association with the Department of Agriculture in Washington. College students are permitted to visit the Experiment Farms at Arlington and Beltsville and thus secure an additional equipment for their professional career.

The demand of the age is for men for life's activities. Positions assured to those who have worked with a will.

Each department supplied with the most modern and approved apparatus. Practical work emphasized in all departments. Graduates qualified to enter at once upon life's work. Boarding department supplied with all modern improvements. Bath room, steam heat, electric lights. Location unsurpassed for health.

Tuition, books, heat, light, laundry, board, medical attention, annual deposit, chemical and athletic fees all included in the annual charge of $60.00 per quarter, payable in advance.

Sanitorium for issolation of contagious disease, resident physician and trained nurse in attendance.

Catalog giving full particulars on application. Attention is called to the Two Years Courses in Agriculture and Horticulture. Failure to report promptly means loss of opportunity to student.

Early application necessary for admittance. Write for particulars.

R. W. SYLVESTER, President.

TRUSTEES' SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real Estate

In Garrett County, Maryland

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court of Garrett County, passed on the 11th day of July, 1910, in a cause wherein Annie Weir et al. are plaintiffs and James McMillan et al. are defendants, the same being No. 1651 Equity in said court, the undersigned Trustees will on

Saturday, August 6th, 1910,

at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m. in front of the Court House in the town of Oakland, Md., offer at public auction to the highest bidder the following real estate, situate in Garrett county, Maryland, and described as follows, to wit: Being a part of Military Lot No. 1088, containing

3 Acres, More or Less,

and particularly described in a deed from Franklin P. Green and wife to Margaret S. McMillan, dated 31st day of March, 1884, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 34, folio 159 etc., one of the land records of Garrett county, Md.

Said land is improved by a two story dwelling house, stable and outbuildings.

TERMS OF SALE. One-third cash, one-third in six months and one-third in twelve months, or all cash at the option of the purchaser, the credit payments to bear interest from the date of sale, and to be secured by the notes of the purchaser, endorsed to the satisfaction of the trustees.

JULIUS C. RENNINGER,
WILLIAM R. OFFUTT,
Trustees.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

OF VALUABLE

Real EState

In Garrett County, Maryland

Under and by virtue of a power of sale contained in a mortgage from Allen Garlitz and wife to Mary L. Sloan, dated the 31st day of March, 1903, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T. No. 43, folio 354, etc., one of the Mortgage Records of Garrett county, Maryland, default having occurred under the covenants contained in said mortgage, the undersigned attorneys named therein, hereby give notice, that on

Friday, August 5th, 1910,

at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m. in front of The First National Bank Building, in the town of Oakland, Maryland, they will offer at public auction and sell to the highest bidder, all that tract or parcel of land situate in Garrett county, Maryland, about two miles west of Swanton, described as follows:

Beginning for the same at a stake and stoneplie standing about 1 perch southwest of a black pine tree marked as a pointer and standing also at the beginning of the last line of a tract conveyed by J. R. Anderson to John A. Wagner, and running thence with the 10th line of said conveyed tract reversed, South 65° West, 74½ perches to a stake and stoneplie in the 3rd line of a tract conveyed by C. M. Miller and wife to John E. Steilding, and with the 3rd and 2nd lines thereof reversed, with an allowance of 3½ for magnetic variation, North 26° East, 122 perches to a double pine tree, West, 65½ perches to a stake in a corner of field, North, 72 perches to the end of the last line of Military Lot No. 1261, and with said line reversed, East, 89½ perches to a stake and stoneplie, South 23° East, 84 perches to a stake and stoneplie at the beginning of the 3rd line of a tract of land conveyed by J. R. Anderson to Mrs. Lincy McHoble, and with said 3rd line South 41° East 99 perches to a stake and stoneplie, South 5° West, 94 perches in the last line of said conveyed tract to John A. Wagner, and with said line reversed to its beginning, North 25° West, 56 perches to the beginning, containing,

105¼ Acres, More or Less.

Terms of sale as prescribed in said mortgage, cash on day of sale.

D. LINDLEY SLOAN,
EDWARD H. SINCELL,
Attorneys for said mortgagee named in mortgage.

Real Estate for Sale.

I will sell at private sale 80 acres, more or less, one-fourth of a mile from Altamont station. Twenty-five acres cleared land. All nice laying land, well watered, all smooth land, and there is about one hundred thousand feet of good saw timber on it, or I will sell said saw timber and keep the land.

I will also sell Military Lot No. 1164 near Fairfax Stone, in this county, all covered with timber. Said land is principally level. Apply to

Z. G. GIBSON,
2-tf Mt. Lake Park, Md.

ESTABLISHED 1884.

Will you allow us to talk "ROOFING" to you. We have a variety of kinds and at any price.

TARRED ROOFINGS—
1, 2 and 3 ply.

RUBBER ROOFINGS—
2 and 3 ply, double and single rolls.

AMETITE—
The superior of all Gravel Roofings.

CAREY'S ROOFING, (Best of All)—
Contains a heavy flexible body, a strong Calcutta burlap, woolen felt and other durable materials, all united into an indivisible weather and water proof sheet that lasts the life of the building.

SHEETING PAPER, NAILS AND CAPS.

Yours to please,

A. D. NAYLOR & CO.

PRICES RIGHT. BOTH PHONES.

GO TO CREUTZBURG'S
FOR
Dry Goods, Notions, Queensware.
MEN AND BOYS' CLOTHING.
Buster Brown Shoes for Men, Boys, Ladies and Children.
LACE CURTAINS 50c. UP
FRESH MEAT MARKET ATTACHED.
Opposite Postoffice. Oakland, Md.

INVITATION.

We cordially invite the public generally to visit our store on Friday evening from 7.30 to 10.00. Refreshments will be served free. No goods sold on Friday evening. Will be open for business Saturday, August 6th.

BOLDEN, BROWN & WEIMER,
Second St., Oakland, Md.

The Republican.

BENJ. H. SINCELL, Pubr.

OAKLAND, - - - MD.

Behold the ice man in all his glory.

How many flies have you killed?

That Louisiana calf with two heads and two tails came near being twins.

It may be bromidic to talk about the weather, but how can you help it?

Along with other cooling drinks, take this bromide: "Is it hot enough for you?"

Never mind, there will soon be flies enough to give every man a chance to do his duty.

What makes the kaiser's 50 castles so expensive is that none of them is a castle in the air.

Now that an ion of electricity has been found, the mystery of the force is simply increased.

The fibbing as to age, girls, can go on, for the census man and his records have disappeared.

If there is one thing upon which thrifty men agree it is that they prefer a street car to a taxi.

The middleman is not needed, but the world will continue to need the farmer and the consumer.

One can hardly blame the aviators for wanting to use their wings in the general direction of the wind.

In London a safe has been made to hold $5,000,000,000 worth of radium. The problem now is to get the radium.

A Seattle man cured a stomach trouble by fasting 39 days. They buried him on the fortieth day.

Considering that it is an amusement of the rich we ought to hear that smuggling is a matter of temperament.

Dancing masters wish their art to be highly diffedentiated from wrestling contests and one cannot blame them.

These long-distance weather predictions give one a chance to worry for a week about weather that never comes.

A judge advised a speed maniac to see a doctor. A good, reliable prison doctor would be particularly likely to afford him relief.

To atone partially for the poor display made by the comet there will be another total eclipse of the moon on November 16. Wait for it.

Russia has not figured extensively as a cotton-producing country. But it seems to have ambitions in that direction. Reports from Tiflis are to the effect that the area sown to cotton this year is double that of 1909. In one district 400 acres are devoted to the staple. That is a tiny fraction of the total in the United States, but high prices have stimulated cotton growing wherever practicable, and the aggregate result may be a substantial gain in the foreign output.

The latest government report is additionally favorable to a big wheat crop. The returns, as interpreted by the skilled statistician of the New York produce exchange, indicate a total harvest of 702,404,000 bushels, against an indication for the same time last year of 652,351,000 bushels. The estimate for 1909 fell below the actual result, for the total yield last year was 737,159,000 bushels. Should there be similar excess this year there will be a good chance for a record breaking output.

It is stated that the recent missile test against the ram Katahdin has demonstrated that the theory as to the piercing power of big projectiles fired a modern battleships' range is wrong—that the missile really drops from the trajectory at so sharp an angle that it delivers a glancing blow and therefore does not penetrate armor plate of only moderate thickness. If this is true, the fighting will have to be at closer range, and the guns of smaller caliber than the big 13-inch rifles will come into greater favor.

The peril of the four young men who put out upon Lake Michigan in a gasoline launch with a supply of fuel close to exhaustion should remind motor yachtsmen that a small boat without power is helpless in comparison with a sailing yacht. The latter can be handled so that she will be safe in the roughest of weather, while the powerless motor boat must wallow and take what comes, unless those in charge of her have seamanship enough to rig a sea anchor and ride behind it while awaiting succor.

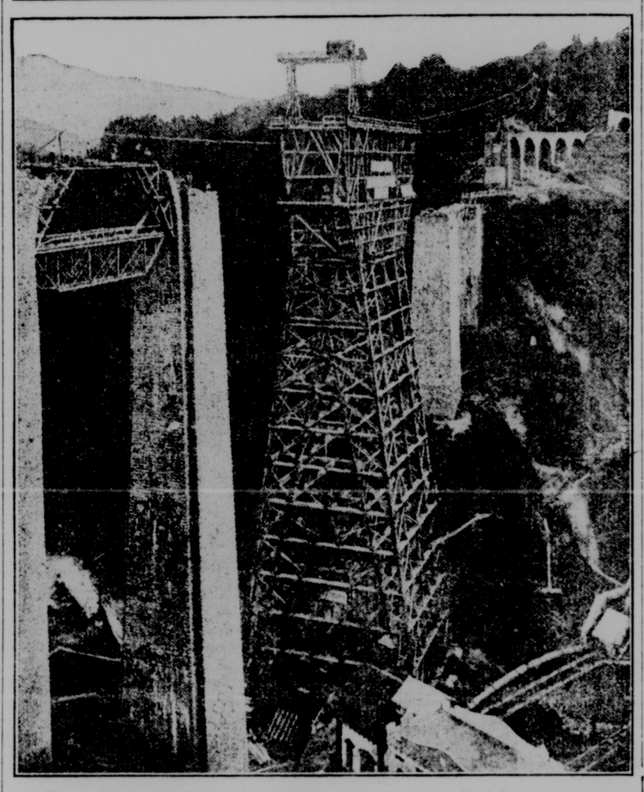
Cheer up, astronomers! Mars isn't going to run away, anyhow.

The ice cold geyser discovered in Yellowstone park not only upsets the accepted theory as to the origin of periodical natural fountains, but adds a feature of economic value to the scene of natural wonders. Heretofore tourists have been able to catch fish and swing them from the river into a geyser basin of hot water, to be cooked while still upon the hook. Now they will be able to catch the fish and swing them into cold storage.

MARVELS of THE EARTH

CURIOUS, ODD AND INTERESTING OBJECTS AND PLACES

Triumph of Engineering



This bridge, which is being constructed across the Weisbach on the new Swiss railway line connecting Toggenburg with the Lake of Constance, is over 200 feet in height and 1,000 feet in length, and is considered one of the most wonderful works of the kind in Switzerland. Tremendous obstacles have had to be overcome in building the railway, and although the whole line is only twenty miles long, eight other viaducts, totaling a mile in length, have had to be constructed, besides several long tunnels driven through the solid rock.

PAGODA BUILT ON BOULDER

The pagoda seen in the illustration stands on the edge of a hill about 3,500 feet in height near the town of Kyaikto, Lower Burma, and is built on a large boulder which itself rests loosely on the edge of a projecting rock. Looking at the boulder from behind, one wonders how it remains in its position at all, for it appears to be in the act of slipping off into the chasm below. The movement is rendered perceptible by fixing a bent stick under the rock, when the stick can be seen to bend and straighten slightly as the boulder is shaken by the wind. It is said by the Burmese that the boulder is only kept in its place by the hair of Buddha buried under the shrine.

People from all parts of the country come annually in the month of March to worship at this pagoda. The journey necessitates a tramp of 20 miles at least, of which ten miles is a very stiff climb, the path sometimes traversing narrow ledges of rock with steep precipices down each side, but the journey does not seem to deter numbers of both sexes and all ages from undertaking the pilgrimage. It is the custom of the Burmese to remain on top of the hill for three days, where they are accommodated in enormous flat-roofed grass huts covering every available spot on the hilltop. Every devotee purchases a small piece of gold leaf which he pastes on the boulder or the pagoda, and either by this means or by some general scheme the whole of the boulder and of the pagoda have been covered with gold leaf.

On the little platform by the pagoda is a row of large bells, near each of which is hung a horn. The ground must be first hit with the horn so as to summon the spirits of the earth, and the bell is then struck in order to summon the spirits of the air. The spirits of the earth and of the air are then supposed to have had their attention drawn to the words about to be uttered by the worshiper.

SNAKE HELPS HATCH EGGS

Three little chicks belonging to W. B. McCracken of Long Beach, Cal., have pecked their way into the world after an unusual experience. For thirteen days the mother hen had been busily attending to her setting duties when a hungry snake drove her from the nest and gorged itself with three eggs. The snake lingered about the premises and McCracken shot it. Wondering at its odd proportions, he performed an operation and found the eggs. They were placed back under the hen and at the end of the regulation time were hatched.

WORKED TILL HE WAS 105

Gottlieb Graul, a former resident of Orange, N. J., is dead in Cincinnati, at the age of one hundred and eight. He was in the employ of the family of Congressman Longworth up to the age of one hundred and five. He was for many years head gardener and laid out the grounds of the Longworth homestead at East Walnut Hills. Mr. Graul was a native of Northausen, Germany, and came to America at the age of eighteen. His father, a farmer near this city, was a friend of Nicholas Longworth of Newark, the grandfather of the congressman. In that way Mr. Graul became caretaker of the vineyard of the Longworth family in Orange.

ADDER IN HER MILK PAIL

George C. Densmore of Mount Tobe, Conn., sent the six-year-old daughter of a New York butcher, George Holden, to the barnyard for a milk pail. The child got the pail, and running to Densmore said: "See the big worm I caught."

In the pail was a red adder, the deadliest serpent of New England. It had struck the girl on the arm, but a bracelet stopped the blow. Densmore killed the reptile. Not twenty feet away he came upon the mate, rushing to the rescue, and killed it also. Densmore says: "It will soon get to where we Tobe folks must choose between adders and summer boarders. We shall certainly not be able to keep both happily."

ELEPHANT STEALS A RING

Alice, the well-known elephant of the Bronx Zoo at New York, got into trouble the other day; but whether she will be arrested like any other common malefactor remains to be seen. While a visitor named Miss Elizabeth Morrell was surreptitiously feeding Alice, the animal's eager trunk detached the diamond ring from her finger.

A search did not discover the ring and it is presumed that Alice swallowed it under the impression it was a particularly hard shelled peanut. Alice is esteemed to be worth more than the ring, so that it is unlikely there will be any interesting surgical operation.

SURPRISE FOR PICKPOCKET

A pickpocket had an unpleasant surprise in Paris the other day when he opened a reticule which he had snatched from a lady.

He pulled out a pair of handcuffs, and at the same time a heavy hand was laid on his collar and he was arrested.

The reticule was the property of the wife of a detective. She had been acting as a decoy for her husband, who was close behind her waiting to pounce on the unlucky thief.

SEA-EAGLE FAR FROM LAND

Passengers on the British ocean liner Caronia were must astonished recently, when the vessel was about 420 miles west of Fastnet, to see a sea, or white, eagle perch on one of the boat davits. The bird seemed exhausted and remained on the davit for half an hour. It is most uncommon for one of these eagles to be seen so far from land.

Part of Old Westminster

Visitors to England are now given the privilege of seeing the Norman Undercroft of Westminster Abbey, just opened to the public. The Undercroft forms the substructure of the old dormitory of the monks, and is the only complete portion now remaining of Edward the Confessor's building. Various relics have been placed in it, including the famous old effigies of kings and queens.

BISHOP BURGESS ON LIQUOR

Saloon Is Greatest Enemy of Home and Cause of Much of Our Domestic Infelicity.

In a recent address before the annual Episcopal convention of the diocese of Long Island, held at Garden City, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Frederick Burgess said:

"If the church condemns the saloon it is not because the church hates the workingman, or his wife, or his family, but because the saloon is the greatest enemy of the home, because it more than anything else, accounts for the fearful congestion of our cities, where human beings have to herd at night like beasts; because it sends the man home at night with no money in his pockets and with no sense of shame, with curses in his mouth and murder even in his heart. Make the blessing from the saloon as great as you can and it will still remain that it is more responsible than anything else for domestic infelicity and that its influence is against that loveliest of human traits which Saint Paul taught and which the King James translators, consciously or unconsciously, rendered into the noble rhythm: 'Husbands, love your wives and be not bitter against them.'

"I believe that Christian people stand reasonably on the law. A prominent judge on the Supreme court bench of New York said to me not long ago: 'You cannot galvanize these old Sunday laws and put life into them.' That is true if they are really dead. A law dies the moment it ceases to accord with a strong minority of the people. It is of no use keeping it on the statute books, for all it does is to become one of the richest sources of unholy revenue to unscrupulous police and officials. If the popular sentiment favors the open Sunday, then by all means let us wipe out the law against it so that it may no longer confuse the mind of the public.

"I think the attitude of Christian people in New York has greatly changed toward the Sunday, and that our Sunday laws need restatement. We no longer look at exercise or recreation as wrong upon Sunday, nor do we constantly talk about the Sabbath. we realize it is not an unholy sight to see a lot of young men playing ball on Sunday afternoon or riding or strolling in the parks. The day Christ rose from the dead is the happiest day in the week, and we clergy must know that we shall not secure a larger attendance at church because we try to take from the day all its joys and brightness. But none the less I believe that while the church may well approve of the opening of museums, libraries and the increased facilities for travel on the Lord's day, yet it will not approve of the opening of the theaters or the exhibition ball games or the saloons.

"The local option question, on the other hand, is in my opinion a mistake. There should be one temperance law for the whole state, with perhaps exceptions made for the great cities. The introduction of one of the most contentious subjects into local politics is mischievous in the extreme. It arouses wrangling and leads oftentimes to hard feelings which would have been avoided had the outlook been wider. It brings each village clergyman into undue prominence, and men find themselves forced to explain to the public their own private views of habits; or else be stamped in an unfavorable way by their fellow citizens."

EMPLOYERS' RULE ON DRINK

British Corporation Issues Restriction to Employees During Spare Time and at Lunch.

It is becoming more and more evident that employers of labor are everywhere coming into line in the matter of demanding sobriety among their workmen and prohibiting their drinking while engaged in the company's business. Reports state that instructions have recently been issued to the employees of a great Gas, Light and Coke company operating in the Metropolis of Great Britain that they must not, except on the company's business, enter any public house. About 800 men are affected. The heads of the departments are called upon to see that the injunction is scrupulously observed. It is pointed out that it was issued in the best interests of the men as well as with a view to maintaining the company's credit. The order applies to the spare time and the dinner hour of the men, many of whom were accustomed to resort to the public houses in the vicinity during such time.

Russians Banish Vodka.

The rations of the Russian soldiers have hitherto included a certain quantity of vodka distributed after manoeuvres, parades, regimental celebrations, and other special occasions. Dispatches state that the Military council has now decided to replace the vodka allowance by light wine, beer, or an improved quality of food, according to climatic and other conditions. The sale of vodka and other spirituous liquors will be prohibited at the canteens; and in general, whether in time of peace or war, the soldiers will only be given spirits for medicinal purposes.

IT WAS ONCE HIS.

"You don't remember me, do you?"

"No; but that umbrella has a familiar look."

SOFT, WHITE HANDS

May Be Obtained in One Night.

For preserving the hands as well as for preventing redness, roughness, and chapping, and imparting that velvety softness and whiteness much desired by women Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, is believed to be superior to all other skin soaps. For those who work in corrosive liquids, or at occupations which tend to injure the hands, it is invaluable.

Treatment—Bathe and soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of Cuticura Soap. Dry and anoint freely with Cuticura Ointment, and in severe cases spread the Cuticura Ointment on thin pieces of old linen or cotton. Wear during the night old, loose gloves, or a light bandage of old cotton or linen to protect the clothing from stain. For red, rough, and chapped hands, dry, fissured, itching, feverish palms, and shapeless nails with painful finger ends, this treatment is most effective. Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Their Object.

Banks—The women of my town have formed a secret society.

Rivers—A secret society? Surely, that's a misnomer; women don't know how to keep secrets.

Banks—But they know how to tell them, and that's why they formed the society.

Protected.

Stella—Are you afraid of cows?

Bella—Not with my hatpins.—New York Sun.

The satirist can talk about the "average man" with impunity, because every man considers himself above the average.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

FOR ALL KIDNEY DISEASES

FOR RHEUMATISM BRIGHT'S DISEASE BACKACHE DIABETES.

NUMBER 375 "Guaranteed"

If afflicted with sore eyes, use Thompson's Eye Water

PATENTS Watson E. Coleman, Washington, D.C. Books free. Highest references. Best results.

For Sale More than one hundred Greene County, Indiana, Improved farms. Some special bargains. Write for my new catalogue. ALBERT H. LOVE, Worthington, Ind.

Your Salary Guaranteed Here is an exceptional opportunity for you to earn a liberal weekly income. Furthermore, you can establish a permanent, profitable business, or a well-paying "side-line" by working on our special plan. Our work is simple and remunerative, and requires no capital or previous experience. Remember, your salary is guaranteed—and is entirely apart from the liberal cash commissions and other bonuses. Some of our representatives have incomes ranging from $1,500.00 to $10,000.00 yearly. We need a representative in your town at once. Then insure yourself the big returns you can secure from this great unworked field by mailing this ad—NOW—to COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE, Room 3, 1789 Broadway, New York City

STOCKERS & FEEDERS

Choice quality; reds and roans, white faces or angus bought on orders. Tens of Thousands to select from. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Correspondence Invited. Come and see for yourself.

National Live Stock Com. Co.

At either

Kansas City, Mo., St. Joseph, Mo., S. Omaha, Neb.

Gillette Blades Are Fine

NO STROPPING NO HONING

Gillette

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

DAISY FLY KILLER placed anywhere, attracts & kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts All Season. Made of metal, can't spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.

HAROLD SOMERS 150 DeKalb Ave. Brooklyn, New York

Sickly Smile

Wipe it off your otherwise good looking face—put on that good health smile that CASCARETS will give you—as a result from the cure of Constipation—or a torpid liver. It's so easy—do it—you'll see.

CASCARETS 10c a box for a week's treatment, all druggists. Biggest seller in the world. Million boxes a month. 915

The SPIRIT of the WEST

Wonderful Development Since Dawn of Irrigation

By C. J. BLANCHARD
U. S. Reclamation Service

ALFALFA IS THE FARMER'S BANK ACCOUNT IN THE ARID COUNTRY

THE spirit of the west is optimism and progress. It is the spirit that fired the hearts of our forefathers who erected in the primeval forests of New England the superstructure of the greatest nation on earth. It is the optimism and faith which imbued their descendants who carved an agricultural empire of unparalleled richness from the Mississippi valley.

Once a wilderness so unpromising that it evoked derision in the halls of congress, the west has become today the land of fortune and opportunity. In this land of boundless distances the altitude is stimulating, the air is a tonic, giving health to the infirm and courage to those who have failed elsewhere. Its constant sunshine encourages optimism and cheerfulness. The glories of its opal-tinted dawns, the indescribable beauty of its sunsets and the nameless witchery of its twilight softly melting into night are the work of a divine painter.

There is a mental and spiritual uplift in its mountains, whose summits are in regions of perpetual snow. Its sapphire lakes, excelling in beauty those of Switzerland, open up a wondrous field of interest and pleasure to the sightseer and those in search of rest and recreation. The monarchs of its forests cast their shadows on the earth before the coming of the gentle Nazarene.

Its canons, sculptured during uncounted centuries by wind and wave, are unrivaled in their wonderful and varied coloring and in their awe-inspiring depths. Its deserts, in vastness of area, in potential wealth of soil and climate, and in rivers of constant supply, are sleeping empires awaiting exploitation and development. Here nature offers to every man his birthright—a wide sky, the sunshine, the wind, and a sure reward for intelligent effort. Here things are writ in characters too vast for human pen.

The late Gov. John A. Johnson well said the west symbolizes "home for the homeless, food for the hungry, work for the unemployed, land for the landless, gold for the penniless, freedom for the enslaved, adventure for the restless, dangers for the brave, an unknown world to conquer, and room for all."

Irrigation has wrought its miracle and 13,000,000 acres reclaimed are annually producing harvests valued at more than $250,000,000 and supporting in homes of their own more than 300,000 families. The wealth of that portion of the country which great statesmen in Webster's day were went to declare worthless is greater now than that of the entire nation in 1860.

In the swift march of national events during the past decade, the development of the west has focused the attention of the world. It furnishes one of the most inspiring pages in the annals of our commonwealth. It is a story of progress and human achievement—a battle with nature in her sternest and most forbidding aspect.

Future writers will record the irrigation movement as an epoch in our history the far-reaching influence of which overshadowed in importance any other progressive movement since the opening to settlement of the Mississippi valley. The reclamation of vast areas of our arid and semi-arid regions, which is being promoted by the federal government and by large corporations working in conjunction with several states, is of profound economic importance to the nation.

The additional opportunities thus created for home makers are already serving to check the undesirable efflux of the country people to the city. Millions of acres of desert, unleached by rain and storing in its bosom the fertility gathered there by centuries of washings from hills and mountains, are being quickened by life-giving water.

Cities, populous and great, have sprung up; rural communities, attractive and prosperous, broad vistas of fertile fields and blossoming orchards whose yields are prolific beyond comparison, replace the wastes of sand and sage brush.

Economic forces are at work today in the country, and particularly in the arid west, which are gradually but surely shaping our agricultural development along new lines. In many parts of the irrigated country agriculture now occupies a position of greater dignity among the vocations than ever before. Its place among the scientific professions is now recognized and it is calling more strongly every day for the best talent and brains the nation affords.

GREATEST PROJECT OF THE RECLAMATION SERVICE, RIO GRANDE VALLEY, NEW MEXICO

A FAMILIAR TYPE: THE OPTIMISTIC PROSPECTOR.

LOOKING DOWN INTO TIETON CANYON, YAKIMA PROJECT, WASHINGTON

The reclamation service began its work in 1902 on the passage of the reclamation act. The first contract was let in September of the next year and, on June 17, 1905, an important project in Nevada was formally opened.

Progress has been rapid and the activities of the bureau have been extended to 26 or more projects, which to date have involved the expenditure of $60,000,000. In the seven and one-half years of its work the service has built 4,215 miles of canal. Placed end to end, these canals would reach from Washington to San Francisco and back to New Orleans. Several of these canals carry whole rivers.

It has excavated 17 miles of tunnels.

Before the end of the year it will have completed four of the highest dams in the world. Its excavations of rock and earth amount to the enormous total of 60,000,000 cubic yards.

Its roads have a total length of 417 miles; telephones, 1,127 miles; levees, 70 miles.

It has purchased 915,751 barrels of cement and has manufactured in its own mill 340,000 barrels. As a result of its work water is available for 750,000 acres on 13,000 farms.

The gross value of crops produced on the lands irrigated by the government projects in 1910 was $14,038,000. As a result of the work of the government it is estimated that land values have increased more than $105,800,000.

The reclamation service is entering 1910 with money and plans for completing most of its larger and unfinished masonry structures and with about three-quarters of a million of acres of arid land under irrigation.

It will finish this year the great Roosevelt dam in Arizona, one of the most massive in the world. It has completed the Shoshone dam, in northern Wyoming, the highest structure of its kind ever built; the Pathfinder dam, in southern Wyoming, and the Laguna dam, in Arizona. It will for the first time utilize the Gunnison tunnel, whose completion was celebrated by President Taft last summer.

The funds available for construction are somewhat less than in previous years, and the organization, which is very elastic, has been cut down to fit reduced expenditures. About fifty skilled men—engineers, experts and technical assistants—have either sought private employment, have been transferred to other bureaus of the government or put on furlough, in order to keep the overhead charges consistent with the expenditures.

